Mr. Hanford: I want to interpose the same objection and the further objection to the witness testifying in narrative form until—on the further ground that matters to which the witness is testifying are in no way related to the questions in issue, or to the parties to the suit and are wholly incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

Q. You referred to Dennis Jones as the lawyer. Is he a white or colored lawyer? A. A colored lawyer.

Q. How long had he lived at Leavenworth, so far as you know about?

A. Since '76, when we came there, he was there; Jones was at Leavenworth then, 1876.

Q. You spoke of meeting Rube Smith? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is he a white or colored man? A. A colored man.

Q. Where did he live? A. He lived in Leavenworth.

Q. What town? A. Live in Leavenworth.

Q. Had he been living there very long at that time?

A. Yes, sir, he was there when we came to Leavenworth.

Q. When did you come to Leavenworth? A. 1876.

Q. Now, tell what was said by you, Bettie, or Rube, at the sporting house on the occasion that you have just mentioned, with reference to Minnie or Thomas Atkins.

Mr. Hanford: We object on the ground that it is incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and hearsay.

Mr. Blakeney: We object for the same reason as incompetent, hearsay, irrelevant, and immaterial, and is not an effort to ilicit a conversation with any of the parties to this action or in the presence of any of the parties.

Mr. Stuart: Or any person representing any of the parties.

Mr. Blakeney: Or any person representing any of the parties.

Mr. Hanford: I want my objection to be based upon the same ground as stated by both of counsel.

A. You asked me what we said?

Q. About Minnie or Thomas Atkins.

A. I introduced Bettie to Rube Smith, and told her he was a partner of Dennis*'s*, and was equally as str*i*ng as Dennis Jones in fixing the things we wanted.

Q. Do you mean a partner in the law practice?

A. Yes, sir, they do at times; they run together, ever since I have known them.

Q. Work together? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Hanford: I object on the ground that it is leading and move to strike the answer.

Q. Go ahead and tell the rest of the conversation if there was any more.

A. She asked him after I introduced him, if he knew Minnie Atkins, an*d* Indian girl who used to work for banker Hyde.

Mr. Blakeney: Mr. German, you asked her to go ahead. You are not asking a new question.

Mr. German: No, sir.

Mr. Blakeney: The old question?

A. He told her no, that he knew banker Hyde though, but he didn't know Minnie; so, at that time, the woman of the house, she came down stairs and we stopped talking on that subject, and started for the car line. I told Rube Smith to meet me and Dennis at six o'clock that evening; I said I have just come from there and I will be up there. He said he would.

Q. Now, is that all the conversation on that occasion with reference to Tommy, or Minnie Atkins?

A. With Bettie, yes, sir—until six o'clock that evening

Q. Until six o'clock? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What became of Sadie then?

A. She caught the car and started back to Kansas City.

Q. Did you learn who Jim Swift—what is that other boy's name? A. Ben Porter.

Q. W-ere?

A. I knew them—had always known then in Oklahoma.

Q. They didn't live in Leavenworth?

A. No, sir, they lived in Oklahoma.

Q. Well, did you have a talk with any of these parties before six o'clock that evening. A. Not before six.

Q. Or anybody else?

A. No before six. I had taken Bettie—another trip but not this time.

Q. Did you fill the six o'clock engagement? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where? A. Down to Dennis Jones' office.

Q. Was Rube there?

A. He and Rube were there, yes, sir, when I got there.

Q. What, if anything, was said on that occasion by either one of you three with reference to Thomas or Minnie Atkins?

> Mr. Blakeney: We object as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial; seeking to illicit conversation not had in the presence of any of the parties, or their agents, or by any of the parties or their agents, to this controversy.
>
> Mr. Hanford: The same objection and the further ground that it is incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and not pertinent to any of the issues in this controversy.

A. Well, Dennis [ ] me was Bettie alright, and I told him yes; and I said, I will show you just how strong she is. I said she is a land grafter and she has got a term of seven years—is now on bond—and she is still working on cases and you know she is strong, and everything you do with her will be alright, and I explained to them about how Minnie Atkins looked. They didn't know how she looked. I told then when she came there and all, and they said that night—Dennis said—well, we will say the baby was born in Granny Letcher's house in 1885, and Rube Smith was to be the father, and we suggested about who we would get for a mid-wife, and Dennis said we couldn't get no colored woman there in town because they were all too afraid of getting arrested. We suggested then——

Q. Sadie? A. Yes, sir.

Q. I wish you would tell who said these different things and what they said, as nearly as you can remember.

A. It was Dennis talking now.

Q. Well, commence over again and tell who said what they did, and as near as they said as you can, and if you don't remember their words, state the substance of it. A. Yes, sir.

> Mr. Blakeney: We object. She said every time, Dennis said so-and-so; then Rube said——

Mr. German: Judge Stuart's objection to the narrative statement is what I am calling for it for.

Q. Well, who first mentioned the matter? A. Dennis.

Q. You have already told what he said and what you said about Bettie Mann? A. Yes.

Q. As to who Bettie was? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, tell what each one of you said, with reference to Thomas, or Minnie Atkins? A. Tell it over again?

Q. Yes.

A. Dennis said, er will say the baby was born at Granny Letcher's in 1885, and Rube said he would be the father, and Dennis said—we suggested then, we would get a mid-wife and Dennis said, we can't get any colored woman there because they were all too afraid of getting arrested, and we thought we would get Mary Smith, a white woman; and Rube said he could get her to swear that she saw the baby when it was two days old, and I said what about a doctor? We will have to have a doctor. We first suggested about Dr. Moaks, and when Dennis thought it over he said that was before Dr. Moaks came there and we would not say anything about it. Rube said, we will lay it on Dr. McCormick, because he is dead. I told him when I went down the next day, tomorrow to meet this white man, and I had never seen Mr. Bartlett—the man I was to meet the next day; and I said, now when I get down to see him and get in the job and get this boy worked up like we want it, we will switch it over on the Gypsy because I don't think this man has got as much money as the Gypsy.

Q. What is the Gypsy? A. The Gypsy Oil Company.

Q. Oh, yes.

A. They had a lease at that time. We separated that evening and I was to meet them the next day after I came from Kansas City.

Q. Now, is that all you now recall as to the conversation?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you next see either of these parties whose names you have been calling? A. Bettie?

Q. Yes; Bettie, or any of them.

A. I came to Kansas City the next morning. She had wired to Mr. Bartlett that night to come to Kansas City—she had found some one who knew all about it. I got down——

Mr. Blakeney: I object to any wiring as not the best evidence, irrelevant, incompetent, and immaterial.

Q. Did you see the telegram?

A. No, sir, I didn't see the telegram.

Mr. Hanford: I restate my prior objections to this line of testimony.

Q. You say you saw Bettie the next day in Kansas City?

A. Yes, sir, I came down on the car to the Stafford hotel the next day.

Q. Was Mr. Bartlett there? A. Yes, sir, he was there.

Q. Did you have any conversation with either of them on that occasion?

A. Yes, sir, she introduced Mr. Bartlett to me.

Q. State the conversation, will you?

Mr. Blakeney: We object as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

Mr. German: Let me complete the question.

Q. State the conversation so far as it relates to your employment by Mr. Bartlett or with reference to Indian Minnie, or Thomas.

Mr. Blakeney: We object now, as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial; seeking to illicit conversation with parties not parties to this controversy, and not asserting any claim to the property in controversy, and hearsay.

Mr. Hanford: I make the same objection and on the further ground that it does not relate to any of the matters and issues in this controversy.

Q. Alright Sadie, tell what was said.

Q. She introduced Mr. Bartlett to me, and he said you know Minnie, do you; and I told him yes, sir, and he asked me hoe long I had been knowing her; and I told him I had been knowing her since '84 when she first came, and he said, did you know the child that she had by the name of Tommy Atkins? I told him a lie—I said yes.

Mr. Blakeney: I move to strike out that I told him a lie.

Mr. German: We object to argument on the part of counsel.

Mr. Hanford: We object on the ground that it state a conclusion of the witness.

Mr. Stuart: We object to it because the witness has already admitted in the beginning of her conversation that she was trying to put up a job.

Q. Go ahead, Sadie.

A. Tell what I said to Mr. Bartlett? Repeat it?

Q. No, don't tell it over; go on and finish the conversation.

A. He said how big was the child when you last saw it; I said about five years old; he said do you know who raised it, and I told him, yes, sir—told him Granny Letcher; he said, well, I have got two detectives here—Mr. Harrison and Mr. Kelsey—I have got hired here in Kansas City working with Bettie and all the evidence you get, you give it to them and Bettie—to these detectives and Bettie; he asked me when had I heard the last of Thomas, and I told him I would have to go [] Omaha, that I knew some people there and find out where he was—and I told him I would have to have some expense money. He asked me how much I needed and I told him fifty dollars and I got it.

Q. Did you make any agreement with him with reference to working for him?

> Mr. Blakeney: We object as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial; asking for hearsay evidence, and seeking to illicit an agreement or conversation between the parties not interested in this controversy, and also seeking a conclusion of the witness.
>
> Mr. Hanford: The same objection and the further ground that it is not relating to any matters in issue.
>
> Mr. Stuart: Page makes the same objection as heretofore.

Q. Go ahead, Sadie.

A. Not at that time; no, sir, not any agreement at that time.

Q. Was there anything else that you recall said on that occasion that you have not told?

A. No, sir, he said that he was going away that night; that if anything occurred and we needed him, to wire him. I caught the car and came back to Leavenworth, and went up to Dennis and Rube's office and told them about my meeting.

Q. Wait a minute now; is Leavenworth and Kansas City connected by interurban car? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And was at that time in 1914? A. Yes, sir.

Q. About how far is it?

A. Leavenworth is about 26, or 27 miles, I guess, I don't know about that—you can go over every hour on the car.

Q. When you got back to Leavenworth—— A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see Dennis Jones and Rube Smith?

A. I did; I went right to their office.

Q. When—that same day?

A. That same day; they were looking for me to come back up there.

Q. And you found them in his office?

A. Found them in his office, yes, sir.

Q. Did you have any conversation with them in reference to this matter then? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Tell what was said.

Mr. Hanford: I object on the ground that it is incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

Mr. Blakeney: We object.

Mr. Hanford: And on the further ground that it has been previously stated.

Mr. Blakeney: We object as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and hearsay, and seeking to illicit a conversation had between parties not interested in the controversy in the case.

Mr. Hanford: And not in the presence of any——

Mr. Blakeney: And not in the presence of such parties, or the agents, or representatives.

Q. Go ahead.

A. I told him I had met the white man and I said he has got plenty of money, and I got a job, and all you have got to do now is to start working; Dennis said, we will hunt a boy of Indian color and bring him to Leavenworth, Kansas, and show him around, and get witnesses to swear that they remember when he was born to this Indian woman, and we will switch him over on these people that you are speaking of—the Gypsy; at that time, I said, well, I will go home and you all start to getting people up to testify to that. In about four days from that——

Q. Now, were you living in Leavenworth at that time?

A. Yes, sir, at 2nd and Cherokee, Leavenworth, Kansas. I had been there three or four months.

Q. Where had you lived just before that?

A. Tulsa, in my home.

Q. How long had you lived at Tulsa at that time?

A. Oh, about five or six years, I guess—about five years, I guess, since 1908—1907 or '08 when I came to Tulsa.

Q. Did you do anything with reference to this Thomas Atkins after you left Dennis and Rube, on the occasion that you have just referred to? A. No, sir.

Mr. Hanford: Object on the ground—move to strike the answer.

Mr. German: She said no.

Q. Who did you next see to talk with about this matter?

A. In about four days, Dennis—I met Dennis on the street.

Q. There in Leavenworth?

A. Yes, in Leavenworth, Kansas.

Q. Did you have any conversation with him about this matter? A. He was looking for me—going to my house.

Q. Did you have any conversation about this matter?

A. It was a message that he had for me.

Q. He had a message for you? A. Yes, sir, for me.

Q. With reference to this matter? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he deliver the message? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was it?

Mr. Hanford: We object on the ground that it is incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and not the best evidence.

Mr. Blakeney: And not the best evidence.

Q. What did he say?

Mr. Blakeney: The other question is withdrawn?

Mr. German: I substitute this for the other one.

[Mr.] Blakeney: I object to it as hearsay, incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

Q. Was it oral, or written—the message?

A. Speaking of what someone called him up to tell him.

Q. What was the message? Tell what he said.

Mr. Blakeney: We object as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and hearsay.

Mr. Hanford: The same objection.

Mr. Stuart: The same objection.

Q. Go on and tell what the message was.

A. He said that Mrs. Mann had called him up and told him to tell me to come down to Kansas City as soon as I could—Bettie Mann. I went home and fixed myself——

Q. What did you do then, after receiving that message?

Mr. Blakeney: We object as immaterial.

Mr. Hanford: We object as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

Q. Go ahead.

A. I went home and got myself ready to go to 3rd and Delaware, and caught the car.

Q. And where did you go?

A. Came down to the Stratford hotel.

Q. In Kansas City?

A. Here in Kansas City, Mo., yes, sir.

Q. Who did you see?

A. Well, I got there, I met a boy that called himself Tommy Atkins.

Q. Who was with him?

A. Bettie Mann and two detectives.

Q. Describe that boy.

A. This boy—I don't know as I could describe this boy they had there.

Q. White or colored?

A. He looked like a white boy; had no Indian blood, or colored, either. A dirty looking white boy, about 35 years old.

Q. Who were the two detectives, if you know?

A. Mr. Kelsey, and Mr. Harrison, here in Kansas City; white detectives.

Q. Now, what was said in reference to this boy by Bettie, or either of the two detectives, or by the boy?

> Mr. Hanford: We object as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.
>
> Mr. Blakeney: I have got to be excused—let Mr. Hanford make objections for me.
>
> Mr. Hanford: The same objection for Mr. Blakeney.
>
> Mr. Stuart: My objections go to all this testimony as heretofore presented.

A. Bettie said, Sadie, these detectives have found this boy; he is an orphan boy and he don't know who his parents are, and I believe we could work him alright. That was in the hall—she was talking with me. The boy and the two detectives were setting in the parlor, and she said, come on in and meet him. I went in and met him and asked him where he was born at and he said he was born in Kansas, he didn't know where about; he said when he was about 4 years old, some people had taken him and kept him until he was about 9, and that one day, he heard them phoning the woman and her husband, and he heard the man say that this boy can't stay here any longer. So after this man went out—this woman's husband—he thought they were his parents at first, he said he went to the woman—his mother—and she was crying, and he asked her what was the matter, although he had heard the conversation himself. She told him he would have to leave; and she said, I am not your mother; and said, she gave him a note that had Mae Atkins on it. I said you are not no son of Minnie's because you are too old, and because if she [] any son at all, she had him after she left Leavenworth, Kansas, and she didn't leave there until about '88, and you are 35 years old. Mr. Kelsey—he got mad—that was one of the detectives—and told me he had wired for Mr. Bartlett any how, and when Mr. Bartlett came, he was going to tell him that it was Thomas Atkins, the son of Minnie—the lost boy—because they knew what they were doing, and I told him alright. Well, they had wired for Mr. Bartlett before I got down there.

Q. How do you know?

> Mr. Hanford: We object on the ground that it is incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, hearsay, and stated a conclusion of the witness.

Q. Did they say anything about having wired?

> Mr. Blakeney: We object now, as incompetent, hearsay, irrelevant, and immaterial.

A. They had wired to him, they said.

Q. Did they say that?

A. Yes, sir, and that he would be there—they were looking for him then; and I said, well, I will stay until he comes. Mr. Bartlett came that same evening.

Q. Came that same evening?

A. The same evening, yes, sir.

Q. Have you found out, or did you then learn, the name of that boy they had there?

A. He claimed his name was Tommy Atkins.

Q. Have you ever found out? A. No, sir.

Q. Any other name that he bore?

A. No, sir, I did not—not that one.

Q. Well, when Mr. Bartlett came, what occurred?

A. The two detectives had taken Mr. Bartlett and introduced him to Tommy—this boy—and of course Mr. Bartlett thought it was Tommy Atkins.

> Mr. Blakeney: I want to object to this as hearsay, incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

> Mr. Hanford: I want to restate my objection made to this testimony, and move to strike as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

A. Bartlett was glad to meet him and told him—and thought it was Minnie's son—and he said, well—he told these detectives—you get this boy ready in the morning and take him to Muskogee, and take him before the Dawes Commission. He said, Sadie, we want you to go, too; I told him that I couldn't go the next day so he suggested that we go that night. So, we suggested that we would go that night. I told Mr. Bartlett that I would have to go back up to Leavenworth, Kansas, first, and tell my people—my husband and daughter were there—that I were going to be gone for a few days, and that I would come back to Kansas City that night and catch a train and meet them in Muskogee. He gave me fifteen dollars and I went home, and I came back to Kansas City that same night on the interurban car and taken the train and went to Tulsa, instead of Oklahoma. They had taken this boy to Muskogee, I suppose.

Q. Did you go to Muskogee?
A. No, sir, I didn't; I knew better than to go.
Q. You didn't know what they were doing then?
A. No, sir.

Mr. Hanford: I move to strike as not responsive to any question.

A. When they got through at Muskogee, I called up to Sapulpa——

Q. Who called up?
A. I did; called up Mr. Bartlett, at Sapulpa.
Q. At Sapulpa?
A. At Sapulpa. I was in Tulsa at my home.
Q. When was this?
A. That was about a couple of days after they came down here.
Q. What was said? A. I told him to come to my house.
Q. Where? A. In Tulsa; he was in Sapulpa.
Q. Did you have a house in Tulsa?
A. Yes, sir, that is where I live at now. I can't stay there——

Mr. Blakeney: I want to move to strike out "that is where I live now but can't stay there" as responsive to no question; impertinent, incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

Q. I thought you testified that at that time you were living in Leavenworth?
A. I went up there for a short stay, yes, sir.
Q. But you were temporarily in Leavenworth?
A. Temporarily, for a business matter, yes, sir; my house and furniture is in Tulsa.
Q. Is yet? A. Is yet, yes, sir.
Q. Alright. Did Mr. Bartlett come to Tulsa?
A. He came to Tulsa, yes, sir, on that—let me see—that is in the fore-noon I called him over the 'phone, and he came, I think that train gets in there, I think at thirty—twenty-five, of two-twenty-five—or something. That has been a couple of years ago. He came.
Q. Did you see him? A. Yes, sir, he came to my house.

Q. Did you have any conversation with him? A. Yes, sir.
Q. About this boy? A. Yes, sir, about this boy.
Q. What was said?
A. I said, Mr. Bartlett——

Mr. Blakeney: We object to the conversation as hearsay, incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial; not in the presence of any of the parties, or the representatives, or with any parties, or their representatives, in this suit.

Mr. Hanford: The same objection.

Q. Go ahead.
A. I said, Mr. Bartlett, I would rather you would let Bettie and those two detectives prove up on this Thomas Atkins, and let me find Winnie. He said, Sadie, Bettie found out in Kansas City that Winnie had been dead 12 years; she died in the City Hospital there and it looks like foolishness for you to hunt for someone that is dead. I said, Mr. Bartlett, if you will furnish the money, I would go and if Winnie Atkins is dead I will find her body and if she is alive, why, I will find her, for I don't believe from things that I know that she is dead.
Q. What did he say? A. He said——

Mr. Blakeney: We object for the same reason.

Mr. Hanford: I restate my former objection.

Q. Alright?
A. He said alright. I said, now, I don't want you to tell Bettie——

Mr. Blakeney: We now object at her giving this statement as not responsive to any question.

Q. What else, if anything, did he say, in reference to this matter? A. This Tommy?
Q. Yes.

Mr. Blakeney: We object as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and hearsay.

Mr. Hanford: The same objection.

A. He said, well, how much money will you want, Sadie, and I told him I wanted fifty dollars. I told him every town I got to——

Mr. Blakeney: I move to strike out what she said as not responsive to the question.

Q. What did you say when he asked you how much you wanted? A. Told him fifty dollars.

Mr. Blakeney: Object as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and hearsay.

Q. Go ahead. Tell all the rest of the conversation that you had on that subject.

Mr. Blakeney: We object as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, and hearsay; seeking to draw out conversations had among other parties not interested in this suit—not in their presence, or in the presence of their representatives.

Mr. Hanford: I make the same objections stated by Mr. Blakeney.

Q. I mean in reference to Thomas or Minnie Atkins.

Mr. Stuart: You understand, Mr. German, that the Page objection runs to this whole narrative?

Mr. German: Yes, sir.

A. I had quit hunting Tommy then, and was going to start hunting Minnie.

Q. I asked the rest of the conversation.

A. I told him I wanted fifty dollars and he wrote me out a check for it, and I told him every town I would go to, and hear any news, I would send him a night letter, but for him not to let Bettie know what I was doing, and he said, alright.

Q. Well, what did you do then, in reference to that matter?

A. That night I caught the 8:10 on the Santa Fe, and come back to Kansas City and caught the interurban car to Leavenworth, Kansas. Went home and the next day, I went up to Dennis's office.

Q. Dennis Jones? A. To Dennis Jones' office, yes, sir.

Q. Did you have any conversation with him on that occasion with reference to this matter? A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. What was said by each of you?

Mr. Blakeney: Object as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, and hearsay; seeking to illicit a conversation not in the presence of parties or their representatives.

Mr. Hanford: The same objection.

A. I told him I had been down to Kansas City; about finding the boy—these detectives had the boy down there—told him how the boy looked and about them carrying him to Muskogee, and meeting Mr. Bartlett, and telling them that I was going to find Minnie. Dennis said, I thought that Mann woman—talking about Bettie—said, Minnie was dead. And I told him, well, I don't believe she is dead; and I said, in the meantime, you and Rube keep working with the people here, starting up this talk about this baby.

Q. What did Dennis say to that? A. Said, alright.

Mr. Blakeney: We move to strike out the answer to the last question which was given before we could object for the reason that question seeks to illicit incompetent, hearsay, irrelevant, and immaterial evidence.

Q. You say you had a conversation with Dennis Jones at his office—was that in his office?
A. That was in his office, yes, sir.
Q. There in Leavenworth? A. Leavenworth.
Q. In reference to the matter of—talking of the birth of this Thomas Atkins at Granny Letcher's? A. Yes, sir.
Q. What was it he said to you, and you said to him, with reference to that?

Mr. Blakeney: We object to that as repetition.

Mr. German: I am afraid your last objection will be sustained; that is the reason I am asking.

Mr. Blakeney: Incompetent, irrelevant, immaterial; not in the presence of the parties or either of their representatives.

Mr. Hanford: Let the record show my objection on the same ground—the same objection.

Q. Now go ahead, Sadie.

Mr. Blakeney: And leading.

A. The next day I went to St. Joe——
Q. Wait. That is not responsive to my question.

Mr. Blakeney: I move to strike out that answer.

Q. I asked you to state what——

Mr. Blakeney: Wait a minute. Read the question to her.

Mr. German: I will ask the question. I don't care to have it repeated.

Mr. Blakeney: Well, I will have to repeat the same objection.

Mr. German: I am willing for the record to show that you make the same objection.

Mr. Hanford: And I, also.

Mr. German: Yes, sir.

Q. When you returned from Tulsa on the occasion that you just testified about, you say you saw Dennis Jones?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What, if any conversation, did you have with him with reference to matter of proving the birth of a Thomas Atkins at Granny Letcher's?

Mr. Hanford: We object on the further ground that it is leading.

Mr. Blakeney: We object as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and hearsay; leading; and the question seeks to illicit a conversation among the parties in the absence of any of the parties to the suit, or their representatives.

A. We didn't talk about nothing but that boy when we got back. I described him to Dennis; not Rube.

Mr. Blakeney: We move to strike out all after the word no, as not responsive to any question.

A. Dennis said that they had started the talk.

Mr. Blakeney: We object as not responsive now to. any question.

Q. Go on.
Q. About Tommy Atkins and this Indian woman among—

Mr. Blakeney: We object also.

Mr. German: I object to counsel objecting before the witness answers.

Mr. Blakeney: I want to object to her making a statement here in answer to no question.

Mr. German: I mean, before the witness completes the answer that she started.

Mr. Blakeney: I will get my objection as hearsay, incompetent, and not responsive to the entire question.

A. Said they had got the talk started about the Thomas Atkins and this Indian woman among several people that they knew was alright. I told him I was going on the hunt [ ] Minnie.

Mr. Blakeney: I move now to strike out all this part of the answer, subsequent to my objection as responsive to no question, incompetent, hearsay, irrelevant and immaterial.

Q. Did Dennis on that occasion make any statement with reference to evidence bearing upon the subject of the birth of Thomas Atkins in Leavenworth?

[?]: We object on the ground that it is incompetent, irrelevant, immaterial, and leading.

Mr. Blakeney: We object on the same ground as stated by Mr. Hanford.

A. He said that he had got the talk started about Tommy Atkins and this Indian woman among several that he knew were alright; he didn't tell me who they were—who the people were.

Q. Did you leave there after that conversation?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did you go to? A. I went to my home.

Q. What did you next do with reference to Minnie Atkins, or Thomas Atkins?

Mr. Hanford: We object on the ground that it is incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and leading.

A. I went to Omaha.

Q. Did you find Minnie or Thomas? A. No, sir.

Q. You were searching for Minnie then?

A. I was searching for Minnie but was not hunting Thomas.

Q. Did you get any line on her? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Blakeney: I object as asking for a conclusion.

Q. Was anybody there that knew her?

A. Yes, sir, who knew her in Leavenworth; a woman that used to know her in Leavenworth, a white woman.

Q. What was her name? A. Her name was Bertha Black.

Q. Did you find out anything from her as to where Minnie was?

A. No; she told me Minnie was in the West—said Minnie had never been around up here—you want to go to the West. When the soldiers left, they all went West.

Q. Where did you next go? A. Came back to St. Joe.

Q. Did you find anybody there that had known Minnie?

A. No, sir; and went on home.

Q. And where did you go next?

A. Came on back home.

Q. Did you have any conversation on that occasion with Dennis or Rube?

Mr. Blakeney: We object. I don't care for that question.

Mr. Hanford: We object on the ground that it is incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and not pertinent to the issue.

Q. Did you answer yes or no? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which one of them? A. Both.

Q. Both? Where?

A. In his office; they were there together nearly all the time.

Q. In Dennis' office? [A.] Yes, sir.

Q. What was said by each of you in reference to Thomas or Minnie Atkins?

> Mr. Hanford: We object on the ground that it is incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial; relating to a conversation between parties not involved in the suit, and relates to a conversation not in the presence of any of the parties in the suit, or their representatives, and the further ground that it is hearsay.
>
> Mr. Blakeney: We join in the objection.

A. Dennis said that he had Nat Burns for one witness—Nat Burns who lives in Leavenworth, Kansas.

Q. As one witness?

A. Yes, as one witness. And that Mary Smith, the white woman on 7th Street, she was willing to work and oh, aunt Katie Logan. I said, do you think you can get aunt Kate Logan, and he said, yes, I have already got her; and I said, what is she going to swear to, and he said, she is going to swear that she saw the baby when it was a week old.

Q. Go ahead. Was Kate Logan a white woman?

A. No, sir, a colored woman.

Q. Where did she live?

A. She lived on 7th street, near the corner of Shawnee, back of a Jew place there—Jew pawn shop.

Q. Leavenworth? A. Leavenworth, Kansas, yes, sir.

Q. What else was said in that conversation? State the substance of it.

A. I told them that I was going to take a trip; that this man was going to furnish me the money and I was not going to stop until I found Minnie, and for them to keep working, and on my trip I would also hunt for a boy that was born in Kansas, and if I found one that would do, I would bring him to Leavenworth, Kansas, and he and Rube could take him and show him to the people, and he said, alright.

Q. When was this conversation as best you remember?

A. That conversation—I guess I had been in the case about a month or more—yes, I had been in the case a good month.

Q. Then that must have been in April?

A. Yes, that must have been in April, I guess.

Q. 1914? A. 1914, yes, sir.

> Mr. Hanford: We move to strike the answer made before the objection could be stated. We object to the question on the ground that it is leading.

Q. Have you stated all of the conversation on that occasion? A. On that occasion, yes, sir.

Q. What did you next do with reference to the matter of finding Minnie, or with reference to Tommy?

Mr. Hanford: We object on the ground that it is incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

A. I went to Denver.
Q. How? A. I went to Denver.
Q. Did you see anybody there that had known Minnie?
A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Blakeney: We object as immaterial as to what this witness did. She didn't represent anybody in this action.

Mr. Hanford: The same objection.

Q. Did anybody go with you on that occasion?
A. Not a soul.
Q. Who did you find there who had known Minnie?
A. I went to Fort Lawton and found——
Q. What? A. I mean Fort Logan.
Q. Where is that from Denver?
A. About 12 miles from Denver.
Q. Alright. A. I saw James O'Connor.
Q. And who else? A. Mary Jenson.
Q. Who else?
A. Frank Barron, and Mrs. Watkins, the Postmistress, Mrs. Lamb.
Q. Did you or not see Mrs. Hamilton? A. Well——
Q. On that occasion?
A. Yes, sir, on that occasion—I was at the Fort now.
Q. You were out at the Fort then?
A. Yes, sir; I hadn't found Mrs. Hamilton then.
Q. You hadn't found her then? A. Mrs. Lamb——
Q. Well I don't care for you to name all of those.
A. Alright.
Q. Did you find Mrs. Hamilton? A. Yes, sir.
Q. Where was she? A. I found her in town.
Q. In Denver? A. In Denver, yes, sir.
Q. Did you have a talk with her about where Minnie was?
A. I did. She said she didn't know. I said, well, Mrs. Hamilton's haven't you got a picture of Minnie's——

Mr. Blakeney: We object to what the witness now stated to Mrs. Hamilton as hearsay, incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, or what Mrs. Hamilton said to her for the same reason.

Mr. Hanford: I make the same objection.

Mr. German: You don't object on the ground that it is not responsive?

Mr. Blakeney: I have been engaged here, and I suppose it was.

Mr. German: I will make it so.

Q. What if anything, did Mrs. Hamilton, say, with reference to Minnie Atkins, and what did you say to her? Give the conversation.

Mr. Blakeney: You will allow the part of the answer given to be striken?

Mr. German: Yes, I abandon it.

Mr. Blakeney: We object as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and hearsay, and seeking to illicit a conversation between parties not interested in this litigation.

Mr. Hanford: The same objection.

A. I asked her if she knew where Minnie was and she said no; Minnie left there in 1898.

Q. Had left where? A. Had left Fort Logan.

Q. Alright.

A. I said to her. I am a Government officer and I am hunting some children of Minnie that she——

Mr. Blakeney: I want especially to object to the conversation with Mrs. Hamilton and this witness—it is so obviously hearsay, it must be for the purpose only of encumbering the record.

Q. Go ahead.

A. I was hunting for some children of Minnie's that she drew money for and I couldn't find them; I said, she had a son born in Leavenworth, Kansas—born at some colored people's house. Mrs. Hamilton said, why when, and where, could Minnie have ever had a baby born in Leavenworth, Kansas, and lived to any age without me knowing it? I said, she had it at a colored woman's house named Granny Letcher. She said, well, she said, she has got one here that is dead. And I said, well, she brought two, I said, in '95 to Kansas City, and they are down in Oklahoma, and they were grown; and I said, do you know where they were born? And she said, yes, they were born here—out here at Fort Logan; she said, I could tell you who could give you some information—Mrs. Roach—she gave me Mrs. Roach's address—1622, or 1722, something, Washington street, I think it is—I am not positive now, the number of the street—but I found Mrs. Roach and asked her did she know Minnie. She said, yes. Well, that time, her husband and another man by the name of Captain White walked up and she said, they can tell you more than I can about Minnie. Captain White said, did you mean Indian Minnie?

Q. Are you telling what Captain White said?

Mr. Blakeney: I would like to have the witness always give name of each party she is talking about.

Mr. German: I think the witness is.

Q. I asked him when was the last time he saw——

Q. Who was that? A. Captain White.

Q. Did you finish the conversation with Mrs. Hamilton?

A. No, sir.

Q. Go ahead.

Mr. Stuart: She has gone to Mrs. Roach now, and found White and Roach there.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was Mrs. Hamilton with you? A. No, sir.

Q. You had a conversation then, with Mrs. Roach?

A. Mrs. Roach, Mr. Roach and Mr. White—Captain White.

Q. All at her house?

A. At Mrs. Roach's house, on the porch.

Mr. Hanford: We move to strike the testimony relating to the conversation with Mrs. Roach as not responsive to any question, and on the further ground that it is incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and hearsay.

Q. Tell the conversation that you had with Mrs. Roach concerning Minnie Atkins.

Mr. Stuart: She has already stated that—we object to it.

Mr. German: You objected on the ground that it was not responsive and your objection is well taken.

Mr. Stuart: Mr. German, you didn't catch it—she already stated.

Mr. German: He objected because it was not responsive, and that objection was well taken.

Mr. Hanford: I move to strike.

Mr. Blakeney: My objection was merely that she name the party who she talked to.

Mr. Hanford: I withdraw my motion to strike then.

Mr. Blakeney: So far as it not being responsive, you mean?

Mr. German: Yes.

Mr. Hanford: Yes, but my objection as to its being incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, stands.

Q. Now, did you finish the conversation that you had with Mrs. White? A. No, sir.
Q. Go ahead and tell that now.

Mr. Blakeney: We object as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and hearsay.

Mr. Hanford: The same objection.

Q. Well, I will ask you this question. Did you find out anything from any of them as to where Minnie was?
Q. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you find out there at Fort Logan or at Denver the names of the children that Minnie had there? A. I did.
Q. Give the names of the children that you learned she had had there?

By Mr. Hanford: We object on the ground that it is irrelevant, incompetent, and immaterial.

By Mr. Blakeney: Yes, and as asking for a conclusion and the same grounds.

A. Harvey and Charlie Harrison, and Mabel Peterkin was dead—Mabel was dead there.
Q. Did you learn whether she was living or dead?
A. Dead.
Q. Did you learn at what age she had died? A. No.

By Mr. Blakeney: We object as being immaterial and hearsay.

Q. Go ahead.
A. Mr. Roach said she was about a year or two years old, I think, I am not exactly positive of the age, I don't think.
Q. Well, did you have any further conversation with Mrs. Hamilton on that occasion?
A. Not that day. I staid there two or three days—No, sir.
Q. Did you the next day?
A. Yes, sir, but I hadn't finished telling about Mr. White yet.
Q. Well, I don't care for the rest of the conversation with Mr. White. What was the conversation you had with Mrs. Hamilton the next day? A. The next day?
Q. Yes?

By Mr. Blakeney: We object as irrelevant, incompetent, and immaterial, and hearsay, speaking again to elicit conversation she had with the witness and a party not interested and not in the presence of the parties of our representatives.

By Mr. German: She was representing Mr. Bartlett.

By Mr. Hanford: The same objection. We object to counsel stating argument in the record, and move to strike the statement of counsel.

By Mr. Blakeney: We are not claiming under Bartlett or any of this interest Bartlett has, so it wouldn't bind us if it binds him.

Q. Go ahead?

A. I went out there to Mrs. Hamilton's the next day. Speaking of Minnie's children she said: "Well, Mrs. James, I can't see when Minnie had those children, the ones that you are looking for". I said: "Her girl Alice is in Leavenworth now".

Q. Her girl who? A. Alice.

Q. You said that?

A. Yes, I said that, is in Leavenworth now, and I said: "The reason that Minnie never did tell you all about Thomas was because his father was a colored man and she was trying to shield it", and she said: "Well, when you find Minnie, you send for me, because I am a good friend of Minnie's and I will beg her to tell where this son is if she knows, and not to be ashamed of him". Well, I staid in Denver several days and wired Mr. Bartlett and told him that I was getting good news and that I was on the trail of Minnie, and that I would soon be home—be down there rather, in two or three days. I did go, I called Mr. Bartlett——

Q. Wait a minute, I want to go back to Denver again. Did Mrs. Roach claim to know anything about Minnie's living in Leavenworth?

A. Not in Leavenworth, nobody but Mrs. Hamilton.

Q. Mr. Hamilton? A. Mrs. Hamilton and Claude Hamilton was the only ones.

By Mr. Hanford: We object and move to strike the answer on the ground that the question is leading and the answer is hearsay and incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

Q. Do you know--Did you know Mrs. Hamilton to have ever lived in Leavenworth, did you know that she ever lived there? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You had seen her when she lived there?

A. I didn't know her so well, I knew when she lived there, knew right where she lived.

Q. Did you know whether she lived there at the time Minnie had lived there? A. When she lived in Leavenworth?

Q. Yes? A. Yes, sir, she was there when Minnie come.

Q. Now, you say you came back to Tulsa from Denver?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you see Mr. Bartlett?

A. Yes, sir, called him up and he came.

Q. Did you have any conversation with him about Minnie or Thomas?

A. Yes, sir, told him I had found her.

Q. Tell what was said.

By Mr. Blakeney: We object as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and hearsay.

By Mr. Hanford: We object on the ground that it is incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and hearsay, and not a conversation between parties to this controversy, or in the presence of any of those parties; and not relative to matters involved in the controversy.

A. I told him about what I had found out in Denver, and I had got on the trail of Minnie.

By Mr. Hanford: I move to strike the answer as stating a conclusion of the witness.

By Mr. Blakeney: We move to strike it as stating a conclusion and as incompetent.

By Mr. German: I don't think the witness has finished the answer.

By Mr. Blakeney: So far as stating it is a conclusion.

Q. Had you finished answering?

A. What is the question?

Q. Finished the conversation with Mr. Bartlett?

A. No, sir.

Q. Go ahead and tell the rest of it?

A. I told him what I had found out in Denver as to Minnie, and that I had got the whereabouts of her, where she was last seen twelve years before that.

Q. That is that she had been seen at Fort Logan?

A. No, sir.

Q. Where?

A. I was going to tell where, how come me to go out——

By Mr. Blakeney: Answer the question. Tell what the conversation was. That is what we are objecting to.

Q. I want to ask you another question first and then we will go back to the Bartlett conversation. Did any one in Denver put you on the track of where Minnie was?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who? A. Captain White and Mr. Roach.

Q. And Mr. Roach? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did they tell you you might find her?

A. Told me they left Minnie in Van Couver in 1902, and I told him I heard she was dead.

Q. Who? A. Captain White.

By Mr. Blakeney: We object now, that is not responsive to the question, what she said, and is hearsay.

Q. Well, did Mr. White tell you anything else as to where Minnie may be?

By Mr. Blakeney: We object as incompetent, hearsay and immaterial.

A. Mr. White told me he left her in Van Couver in 1902, and I said I heard she was dead, and he said no, he said: "Oh, no as stou*d* as Minnie looked when I saw her, she is living yet, and if you will go to Van Couver Barracks, you will find out from somebody if she is there, if she aint there herself, where she is gone.

Q. Now, was that the extent of the information you obtained in Denver as to where Minnie may be or where she was last seen? A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Hanford: We object on the ground that it calls for a conclusion of the witness, and move to strike the answer as made prior to the objection and before the objection could be interposed.

By Mr. Blakeney: We join in the objection.

By Mr. Stuart: We object to this testimony with reference to the excursion for the lost Minnie because it was not authorized by any party to this suit, and because it is incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial and hearsay.

By Mr. Hanford: The same objection.

Q. At the time of the occurrence of all the things that you have been relating while you were on these trips, you were in the employ*ee* of Mr. Bartlett?

By Mr. Blakeney: Now, we object as asking for a conclusion of the witness, incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

By Mr. Stuart: And because it is leading and suggestive.

Q. For whom were you working at all the times that you have told about since your meeting with Mr. Bartlett in Kansas City, the first time? A. Up until——

By Mr. Blakeney: We still insist that it is a conclusion.

Q. Yes, up until the time you have just testified about? A. Mr. Bartlett.

And thereupon, an adjournment is taken until nine o'clock A. M.

And thereafter, and on February 3, 1916, at nine o'clock, A. M., further proceedings and testimony herein were as follows:

SADIE JAMES, being recalled further testified as follows:

By Mr. Allen: Might let the record show that in the absence of Mr. Blakeney: It is agreed that the objections made by Mr. Hanford as requested by Mr. Blakeney may be adopted by the defendants he represents.

By Mr. Stuart: Now, Mr. German, in order to save time, your interrogatories will be directed until you strike the Page part of it to the conduct of this woman under Bartlett's employment? That is true isn't it?

By Mr. German: Yes, and the conduct of others of whom she claims to know.

By Mr. Stuart: I understand? Under Bartlett's employment?

By Mr. German: Some of them are not.

By Mr. Stuart: What I want to do is to make an objection for Page to all of this testimony relating to her search for Mrs. Atkins—Minnie Atkins, and everything that was said and done with reference to that under and by virtue of her employment by Bartlett. It saves me making an objection every time you ask a question.

By Mr. German: I am willing for that to be understood.

By Mr. Stuart: That an objection is made so far as Page is concerned to everything that she says with reference to this portion of the case just now being investigated prior to any claim of conversation and employment between her and any Page interest.

By Mr. German: Yes.

By Mr. Hanford: I will state the same general objection, and ask if it is agreeable to Mr. German that at the hearing when the deposition is read, if I can point out specific objections that will save these interruptions.

By Mr. German: I will—I am willing that you may, except objections which go to the form of the question.

By Mr. Stuart: Whether leading that is?

By Mr. German: Yes, as to things like that.

By Mr. Hanford: But as to the relevancy and materiality of the testimony, my general objections may go. I want to cut out objections so as to allow more continuity.

By Mr. German: That is a good thing to do.

By Mr. Stuart: Good thing for both of us.

Redirect Examination by Mr. German.

Q. Sadie, on the occasion that you were testifying about before we adjourned yesterday afternoon, when you were talking with Mrs. Hamilton at Denver, or rather when you were in Denver, you saw Mrs. Hamilton two or three times I believe you said? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you told all that was said by you or her with reference to what was said by you or her with reference to Thomas Atkins, and all that was done? A. No, sir.

Q. I wish you would now tell everything that was said by either of you, and everything that was done by either of you on the occasion of that trip of yourself to Denver with reference to Minnie or Thomas Atkins?

A. Do you mean the first trip?

Q. Yes?

By Mr. Hanford: I want to make an objection there that it is leading.

A. You mean the first trip to Denver?

Q. Yes?

A. When I went to Denver the first trip and got to Mrs. Hamilton's, I asked her if she didn't have a picture of Minnie's, and she said yes, and I told her the one that Minnie had given me I had lost it.

Q. Let me interrupt you, you say the first trip?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So far as your testimony now shows you had not taken but one trip to Denver?

A. I went there after that, that is my first trip.

Q. So you are referring to the trip that you referred to yesterday evening?

A. Yes, my first trip. She said she did and I asked her to let me see it, and when she showed it to me it was just like the one Minnie gave me when she first came from Colorado. I asked her——

Q. Had Minnie given you a picture?

A. Yes, sir, Minnie gave me a picture when she first came to Leavenworth.

Q. Oh, when she first came to Leavenworth?

A. Yes, sir, when she first came to Leavenworth, she brought it from the College. I asked her if she would let me have it and when I got through with the picture I would return it to her, I was talking to Mrs. Hamilton. She gave me the picture and I told her at the same time I would take that picture and take it back to the man I was working for and tell him I had got on the trail of Minnie and I would arrange it so that Mrs. Hamilton could get to go with me on the search for Minnie. I asked her if she would go and she said yes; so I went to Tulsa and taken the picture.

Q. Now, have you, so far as you now recall, told all that occurred between you and Mrs. Hamilton?

A. On the first trip, yes, sir.

Q. On that first trip? A. On the first trip, yes, sir.

Q. Now, you went to Tulsa, you say? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And saw Mr. Bartlett? A. Called him up, yes, sir.

Q. And talked to him on the 'phone?

A. No, sir, I had him come to my house.

Q. And he came to your house?

A. He came to my house, yes, sir.

Q. And you had a talk with him?

A. Yes, sir, there is where I made a contract with Mr. Bartlett on that trip.

Q. Was that contract verbal or in writing?

A. No, sir, that is in writing.

Q. A written contract?

A. That is a written contract, yes, sir, in Tulsa now. Mr. Brown has it.

Q. Who has it?

A. Mr. Brown, my attorney, and C. S. Walker, the contract with Bettie Mann and I.

Q. What is the name of Brown?

A. I forgot, I believe his name is George Brown.

Q. George T., isn't it?

A. Yes, sir, I think it is, in that same building, the Reeder Building.

Q. Now, then, did you make any report to Mr. Bartlett as to what you had found out at Denver?

A. Yes, sir, and to show him further that I had gotten some news, I showed him Minnie's picture; it was the first time he had ever seen it or seen anything that she looked like, and I told him I said: "Now, Mr. Bartlett I want you to make a contract with me now for so much money if I find Minnie." You see I wasn't looking for Tommy. He said: "What do you want?" and I told him I wanted two thousand ($2,000.00) dollars for myself and he said: "Sadie you will have to let Bettie come in on this, she has been working for me so long I will have to let her have part of it" and I said: "Mr. Bartlett, I have never said anything to you before about it, but Bettie is going to double cross you", because at that time she was talking about letting Mr. Haskell have the deal—Judge Haskell. Mr. Bartlett said he would have to have Bettie in on it. Mr. Bartlett went up town and found Bettie and came back to my house in an automobile and taken me and Bettie Mann and went up to Mr. Brown's office, we had a contract drawn up for two thousand ($2,000.00) dollars, a thousand dollars to me and a thousand dollars to Bettie Mann when we were to find Minnie. Mr. Bartlett asked me when did I think I could go, I told him it would take me about a week or two to go back up to Leavenworth and get some things closed up there, because I knew that trip would take me quite a while from my home, but I didn't want Bettie to go with me, and he promised me he wouldn't send her on the trip with me and just let her be in on the contract. I was talking to him by himself then. Mr. Bartlett went to Sapulpa, I suppose to his home, and the next day I went to Sapulpa myself and to Bettie Mann's house the next day; they went away that evening.

Q. Bettie then, lived at Sapulpa?

A. Lived at Sapulpa, yes, sir, that was on a Sunday.

Q. Yes, I see. When was that—what time in the year was it? A. That was in May.

Q. 1914?

A. 1914, yes, sir. Bettie sent up to her daughter's house and got Minnie's son Harvey to tell Harvey that I had a picture of his mother and to come down there.

Q. You say Bettie sent?

A. Up to Bettie's daughter's house Hazel, who lived just two blocks from her.

Q. I thought you spoke of Harvey?

A. Well, Harvey was up there, that was Minnie's son, he was up there.

Q. Harvey Harrison?

A. Harvey Harrison, yes, sir; Minnie's son.

Q. He was there in Sapulpa?

A. Yes, sir, he was staying out in the country a good piece, but he was in town at Hazel's; so Harvey came and I showed him the picture and told him I had got on the trail of his mother, Harvey Harrison, but hadn't found her yet, and I asked him if he wanted to see his mother, and he said: "No, any woman that would go away and leave them as she had done, he didn't want to see her."

By Mr. Blakeney: Will our objection go to this?

By Mr. German: Yes.

A. He said if I found his father he wouldn't mind seeing him. So that was on a Sunday. I sent for Mr. Bartlett, called him on the 'phone rather and had him come down there, and told him I wanted money enough to go back to Leavenworth on. He gave me twenty-five ($25.00) dollars, and I staid there all night at Bettie Mann's house, and the next morning I went to Tulsa where I lived at my mother's, and that night, Monday night, I came back to Leavenworth, Kansas. I left going to Leavenworth, Kansas a Tuesday, I arrived in Leavenworth and taken this picture——

Q. When did you leave Bettie?

A. I left Bettie in Sapulpa. I wasn't to go on searching for a week or so. I taken the picture to Dennis Jones office——

Q. Was Dennis there? A. Yes, sir, Dennis was there.

Q. Did he call anybody up?

A. Dennis called Rube and had him come.

Q. He came over did he?

A. Yes, sir, he came to Dennis's office.

Q. What happened then?

A. I showed Rube and Dennis Minnie's picture the first time they ever saw anything that looked like Minnie, although I had described her before to them.

Q. What was said?

A. I told them that I had made a contract with Mr. Bartlett to go and find Minnie, and the reason I wanted to find her was because I knew her so well I could get her to do anything I wanted to and that the deal we were fixing there in Leavenworth would be all right with her, and if she was dead we would just go ahead with it anyhow, because nobody else in Leavenworth would know any better, but what it was so. I staid there about a week or more in town. Bettie came.

Q. Is that all of the conversation?

A. Yes, sir, at that time. In about a week, Bettie came with a hundred ($100.00) dollars for me and a hundred ($100.00) dollars for herself, and told me that Mr. Bartlett said for her and I—that was on a Thursday. She said that Mr. Bartlett said for her and I to leave and go and find Minnie. I said: "Well, I am not going", I said: "I didn't tell Mr. Bartlett to send you up here and I wont be ready for quite a while anyway to go and I can't go," but she gave me the hundred dollars,—check for one hundred ($100.00) dollars, I got it cashed, it was a check, and she went back home that night, back to Kansas City to the Stafford Hotel.

Q. So far as you knew Bettie was representing Mr. Bartlett and he alone, no one else at that time?

A. I knew she was working for Mr. Bartlett, yes, sir, I knew she was working for other people at that time. She had several promises, several other promises to give them who she found.

By Mr. Stuart: Of course we have to object to that. Let me ask a question—You got that from her, Bettie?

A. Some of it, yes, sir.

By Mr. Stuart: That is hearsay and I suppose you wont insist on that.

By Mr. German: No, I wont insist on that question she gave about the matter.

Q. Sadie, how did [] find out that she had made promises to anybody else besides Bartlett?

A. Why, when I went to the Hotel Stafford here, Jim Swift—Ben Porter——

Q. Was that before?

A. That was the first trip when they first got me—had called up Judge Haskell and he was to meet us there at the hotel.

Q. Who is he? A. C. S. Haskell, from Oklahoma.

Q. Governor Haskell?

A. Yes, Governor Haskell, I am talking about Governor Haskell—Sure, Gogernor Haskell.

By Mr. Stuart: C. S. Haskell?

A. Yes, sure.

By Mr. Stuart: Yes, I know him.

A. C. S. Haskell.

Q. You mean C. N. Haskell, don't you?

A. Yes, C. N. Haskell and Mr. Nixon. He had been talking to her and Frank Long in Sapulpa, Frank Long was talking to her.

Q. How did you find that out?

A. Saw him at the depot there in Sapulpa, on my trip down there to Sapulpa, Frank Long had Bettie and Rogers talking to them.

Q. You don't know what she said?

A. Only what she told me, she wasn't talking to me that time.

Q. All right, now, going back to the occasion when Bettie came to you at Leavenworth, that you mentioned just a while ago?

By Mr. Allen: In view of the disconnectedness of that answer just read, I want the record to show that at the time the witness was giving the answer and several answers before the preceding, that people around the table were indulging in talking and laughing to such an extent that neither the witness or counsel could understand the questions and answers.

By Mr. Blakeney: I want to object to counsel's statement, I was one of the parties who enjoyed the situation, and it might have annoyed counsel some, but it certainly didn't the witness as she detailed it all with her usual rapidity.

By Mr. Hanford: We except to the statement of counsel as stating a conclusion on his part, that we don't concede in so far as it annoyed the witness or interrupted her testimony. The remarks made were all subsequent to her answers.

Q. What was your information at that time with reference to C. N. Haskell's connection with this matter?

A. Where did I get it from?

By Mr. Blakeney: I would like to have her state where she gets the information?

A. I got this from Bettie and Swift.

Q. What did Bettie say about it?

A. That she and Jim Swift and Ben Porter had made arrangements with Haskell in Tulsa.

Q. You are telling what Bettie told you?

A. Yes, sir, that they told me, not that I know. Had made arrangements with Judge Haskell and Mr. Nixon and Frank Long, those three men in Tulsa.

Q. What kind of an arrangement did they tell you?

A. Just to get Minnie for them, to get Minnie for them if they found her.

Q. I see. Did Governor Haskell have any further connection in the matter? A. I didn't see Judge Haskell.

Q. Well, so far as they told you, I mean?

A. They called him up, I didn't hear them call him up, from the hotel in Tulsa.

Q. Did he come here?

A. They said he came, I didn't see him.

Q. What else did they say?

A. They went and talked to Judge Haskell and after Judge Haskell found out I was in the case, a negro woman, Bettie said he told her he didn't want anything to do with the deal, because he had been burnt by enough educated negroes in Oklahoma, and he went back.

Q. So far as you know that was his only connection with the matter? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, Sadie, going back to when Bettie came to see you the last time you have told about there in Leavenworth, you say you and she had some conference?

A. When she brought the money for us to go?

Q. Yes? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was that conversation?

A. She came and she had two hundred ($200.00) dollars, a hundred dollars for herself and one for me.

Q. What did she say?

A. She said Mr. Bartlett told her to tell me that we must leave out of there right away and be on the search for Minnie, and I told her I wasn't ready to go and I didn't tell Mr. Bartlett to send her, and I wasn't going.

Q. Well?

A. So, she and I then went up to Henry Byrd's, I think, I forgot the name of the street—to a colored man who was sick there, I told her I thought I could get Mr. Byrd probably in the case. We went up there and talked the matter over with Mr. Byrd, and he said: "No, he didn't remember of Minnie, didn't remember about no child or nothing else", and we told him we would like for him to remember it, because if he did there would be some money in it for him—a party to the suit. And Bettie told him we would take him to Claremore—he had been sick about two years. We promised to come to see him again but we didn't go back—Henry Byrd, a citizen there.

Q. When was that?

A. A Thursday night—That must have been in May, along about the 27th or 28th of May, she came back to the Stafford Hotel, I told her I would go down the next night—the next day, that would be Friday. I came down to Kansas City to the Stafford Hotel about four o'clock I guess when I got there.

Q. On Friday?

A. On a Friday, June—May, I think it was, May 29th or 28th, we left Friday.

Q. Did you see her?

A. I saw her at the Stafford Hotel, yes, sir.

Q. Did you have any conversation?

A. Had conversation with here, yes, sir.

Q. What was it?

A. She told me that Frank Long was there, had come from Tulsa, if I had wanted to see him. It was Bettie Mann talking to me. I told her, no. She said: "Sadie, we can get more money out of long than we can out of Bartlett for finding Minnie." I said: "Long aint got no money," "and at that time I didn't know he was in the employment of Mr. Page. I thought he was in the Government employment, I didn't know. That is why I said that he didn't have no money. I refused to see him, I was hunting a man with money. We staid there in the hotel until about five o'clock and caught a car and came to the Union Depot, at six-twenty we left for Denver. Can I recall back some things?

Q. Yes?

A. After Bettie left that night for Leavenworth, I went to the telephone and called Mr. Bartlett up at Sapulpa and told him that I wasn't going with Bettie Mann. He told me to tell Bettie to give me that hundred dollars she had and for her to come on back. I told him my reasons for not taking her; that she was going to double cross him.

Q. Well? A. When I got down to Kansas City——

Q. What did he say?

A. He told me to tell her to give me that hundred dollars she had and to come back.

Q. Did you report that?

A. Yes, sir, she told me she wasn't going to do it.

Q. When did you report that to her?

A. When I went down the next morning to Kansas City I told her at the Stafford Hotel. I said: "Bettie, Mr. Bartlett said for you to give me that hundred dollars he gave you and for you to come back to Sapulpa," and she said: "I am not going to do it, I am going." And I said: "Two hundred dollars won't be enough for us both to go on this trip, because you don't know where we have got to go to and we have got to have more money;" and she called up Mr. Bartlett, went out to call him, and when she came back she said: "Mr. Bartlett told her when we got to Denver he would have us some more money wired there, and for us to get Mary Hamilton and take her on the trip." I told her I wasn't going to take Mary Hamilton and wasn't going to show her or anybody else where Mary Hamilton or anybody else lived in Denver. We left Kansas City at six-twenty on Friday evening in May.

Q. Where did you go to?

A. Went to Denver Friday evening about May 29th, I guess, and we arrived there Saturday, I guess about eleven-thirty, and we got there on Decoration Day and the banks were closed and we couldn't get our money and we had to lay there until Monday.

Q. Mr. Bartlett had wired the money there?

A. He had wired the money, yes, sir, and we couldn't get it because the banks were closed.

Q. Did you get it Monday?

A. We got the money Monday, and Bettie wanted me to go there and find Mary Hamilton. You see she didn't know where Mary Hamilton lived. I told her I had been to see Mary Hamilton, but Mary Hamilton refused to go with her.

By Mr. German: Let me ask counsel a question. My understanding about your objections didn't cover the objection on the ground that her answer was not responsive to the question, as I understand it. I want to make sure that we understand.

By Mr. Stuart: I think we had better make specific objection as to leading or not responsive, as to all others the objection goes.

By Mr. Blakeney: The objection is against any evidence as to Page.

By Mr. German: O, yes.

By Mr. Stuart: The same objections you had before and we agreed that they might be applied all the way through. The solemn agreement is in the record.

By Mr. Hanford: And it also agrees that we may urge—point out our objections when it comes to the trial.

By Mr. German: Sure.

By Mr. Hanford: In other words, leave the interruptions until the time the depositions are read.

Q. All right?

A. On a Monday, Bettie and I both went to the bank, the First National Bank in Denver, the check was for fifty ($50.00) dollars.

Q. Did you get that fifty ($50.00) dollars?

A. We got the fifty dollars at the bank, yes, sir. We caught the twelve-fifteen leaving for Seattle. On the way going——

Q. You didn't get Mary Hamilton then?

A. No, I didn't show Bettie where Mary Hamilton lived.

Q. Did you see Mary Hamilton then?

A. Yes, sir, I saw her, I went to see her myself.

Q. Did you have any conversation with her?

A. Yes, sir, I told her I had a——

Q. What was it?

A. Indian woman with me that I didn't want her to see because she wasn't right in this deal, and told her who Bettie Mann was, and if Bettie came to her not to talk to her, that she might trail me and find out where Mrs. Hamilton lived. She promised me she wouldn't talk to her if she came. When we got our tickets in Denver, Bettie had a stopover for Portland, and I asked her why she done it and she said Mr. Bartlett told her to tell me for us to stop in Portland to see Harjo —Micco Harjo.

Q. He had formerly lived in Indian Territory?

A. Yes, sir, Micco Harjo, and she said Mr. Bartlett told her to do the wiring back to him herself of everything we found out. Well, I believed that part. When we got to Portland, Bettie put up at the Hotel Foster, and I went to a colored hotel, the Golden West, and she put out to hunt Harjo, and about two o'clock that same day she came to the hotel where I was stopping.

Q. That was two o'clock in the afternoon?

A. Yes, sir, in Portland, and said she had found Harjo and Harjo wanted to meet me at six o'clock that evening. I said: "I didn't work with you and Harjo on that deed that you all got," because I had refused to do so, "and I am not going to see Micco."

Q. Now, let's stop here and go back and find out about that deed. About what deed are you talking?

A. I am speaking about the deed that Mr. Bartlett first had the one that Bettie and Harjo had got him for this land.

Q. For this land?

A. For this land, yes, sir, a couple of years, or a year or two before that.

Q. And made in 1912? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Purported to be signed by Minnie Atkins?

A. Yes, sir, by Minnie Atkins.

Q. What did you know about the procurement of that deed, the execution of it and the acknowledgment and getting it? A. Shall I tell it?

Q. Yes?

By Mr. Blakeney: You mean what she knows others told her, or personally.

Q. Personally herself, go ahead.

A. In 1912, I were living out on the hill in Tulsa, a place that I run out there—— Of course, I had been working with Bettie for ten or twelve years in different things, and she came out there to see me. She asked me if I wanted to make some money and I told her yes, and she said: "Well, Harjo and I have told Hugh Bartlett that we know where Minnie is, and that we can get a deed from her." She said, "We don't, and we want to get you or somebody to go and sign the deed." I said: "I will do it for a thousand ($1,000.00) dollars," she said: "Well, that is more than what is going to be in the deal. There ain't going to be over three or four hundred dollars in it" and I said: "I won't do it for that." I said: "I will tell you where you can go." I was talking to— I didn't see Harjo. You can go to Kansas City and there is a Minnie Adkints— not Atkins but Adkins there, and you can hunt for her and she will sign it, and she left. That was in 1912. I didn't see her any more until about a week or so from that time, and she came back and told me about Minnie had signed it, and they brought it back and gave it to Mr. Bartlett. So, that is what Harjo wanted to see me that night for at six o'clock in Portland.

Q. The deed you refer to is the deed which purports to have been executed at Lawrence, Kansas.

A. Lawrence, Kansas, signed by Minnie Atkins.

Q. In 1912? A. In 1912, yes, sir.

Q. Well, to go back to your Portland, Oregon, conversation?

A. Bettie left my place at the hotel where I was, after I told her, I said: "I am going to leave here tonight at nine-thirty." She wanted to stay until the next day in Portland. I said: "I am going to leave here at nine-thirty tonight and get in Seattle tomorrow," so that forced her to have to go too. She came back to my place that night about ten o'clock, and said she had saw Harjo and had told Harjo that I was sure that I was going to find Minnie. Harjo told her "Well, if she does find Minnie, it will make trouble for you and I"—that is, Bettie and Harjo.

Q. She came back about ten o'clock that night?

A. About ten o'clock that night.

Q. I thought you were going to leave at nine-thirty?

A. It wasn't that late, it couldn't have been that late——

By Mr. Hanford: I object to counsel leading.

A. It couldn't have been that late, it was that same night she came back.

Q. Before the train left? A. Yes, before the train left.

Q. All right, go ahead?

By Mr. Hanford: Did you get my objection?

A. She said Harjo told me if I didn't find Minnie to let him know, that he was going to leave Portland right away, that he didn't think Minnie was living, because he had been living in Portland more than a year and if Minnie was living out that way he would have heard of it. I didn't see Harjo on that trip at all. That night, we left and we got to Seattle the next morning at six-fifteen I think the train came, got in a taxicab—Bettie said: "Sadie, we will both stop at the same hotel." I got afraid of her then. I said: "No, I tell you what you do, you stop at a white hotel and I will stop at a colored one, and you ask among the white people about Minnie and I will ask about the colored—all the colered people about her." She got in a cab and went on to see where I was going to put up at anyway, and she went to the Hotel Wright.

Q. What hotel did you go to?

A. I stopped at Mrs. Jackson's, at 1110, I think, North—1110 Jackson Avenue, in Seattle. Bettie stopped at the Hotel Wright. I didn't stay in that hotel but about an hour, I had a sister-in-law that lived in that town and I went out to hunt her; found a colored fellow and he knew right where she lived; I had never seen her and he taken me down there and I went to questioning her about Minnie, and she told me that she thought that she knew—had heard of a person in Vancouver of that name, and that there was one Indian woman that fit that description that she had saw in Portland, and I could go to a colored saloon there and ask Mr. Bissville and he would tell me, and I said: "Where is Vancouver?" You see I thought when Mr. Roach and them told me about Vancouver that it was Vancouver, B. C., that is what I thought it was. She said: "Why, it is right across the river from Portland," and I said: "I have just come out of Portland last night," and I said: "How can I get to the next place from here?" Told her I was dodging the woman I was with. And she told me I could catch the electric car and go to Tacoma and go to a colored woman named Mrs. Qunny there that she knew and she could tell me maybe something about her. I went down and got an electric car and went on to Tacoma and got in Tacoma about two or three o'clock I guess, I think it was.

Q. Did you find out anything there?

A. No, she told me of one Indian woman Mrs. Sanders and I went to her and knew when I got to her that she wasn't Minnie.

Q. The conversations you had there, I don't care much about, except those that led to locate Minnie.

A. No, but they thought they would.

Q. What did you do then?

A. She told me about some Indian woman being at Portland.

Q. Did you go back to Portland?

A. No, I didn't go to Portland, but caught the four o'clock train that evening and went to Van Couver.

Q. Did you get a line on Minnie there? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who from? A. A colored man there.

Q. Didn't have any conversations there about Minnie or Tommy, except——

A. No, sir, I spoke about her having some children there to Mr. Bivens, a colored man ex-soldier who runs a coal yard—

Q. Did he say he knew Minnie?

A. He said: "Well here is a picture of Minnie," he had one taken about 1902; he said "Minnie worked here for several years in the barracks, was quite a friend of my wife's," and he said: "We never knew she ever had a child at all," and I went on telling him about the children that she had down in Oklahoma and he had never heard of it. He said: "I don't know where she is, but I will go up here to the saloon and get a soldier who has just come from up there, and he can tell you because he is the same regiment of Minnie's husband," said "I know Harry and her both."

Q. Harry who?

A. Folk. Mr. Bivens told me. I said: "If you find out, I have got to leave here and I might as well leave tonight as to stay here all night." So, I went up the street with him and stopped on the corner and he went in the saloon and came out with a man talking to him by himself, he was a soldier, a white soldier. Mr. Bivens walked back with him and told me that this soldier said that Minnie was in Fort Wright.

Q. Where?

A. He didn't say where Fort Wright was. Mr. Bivens taken me down to the car. The train left going through there I think at ten something, ten-twenty-five I think, going over to Portland.

Q. Going to Seattle?

A. Yes, sir, going back to Seattle. I got to my hotel and the woman told me that the woman that I came there with, white woman she called her, had been there a dozen times.

Q. You went back to Seattle did you?

A. Yes, sir, went back to Seattle. Had been there a dozen times that day that I got in and for me to call her up when I got back. I went to the 'phone and called up the Wright Hotel and got Bettie.

Q. What hotel?

A. The Wright Hotel in Seattle, where Bettie was, and she came over and she said: "Sadie, where did you go yesterday?"

Mr. Hanford: I object and I want to interpose the objection, and move to strike the last part of the witness' answer on the ground that it is not responsive to the question.

Mr. German: The part with reference to the conversation with Bettie?

Mr. Hanford: Yes, as not responsive to the question.

By Mr. Blakeney: Just a minute. Some of this, while we are objecting as hearsay here, there is some of this in different degrees, some of it I suppose you expect ultimately to try to show came from some representative of some of these parties; some of this conversation I don't apprehend there will ever be any pretence—for instance, where this colored man at Van Couver told her that he knew Minnie and didn't know she had any children; so we have the hearsay to the thirty-third degree here, and we want out objections.

By Mr. German: Your objections reach all of it now regardless of the degree.

By Mr. Hanford: I also want my objections to be to the witness testifying in the narrative form and not in answer to interrogatory.

By Mr. German: From now on?

By Mr. Hanford: Yes.

By Mr. German: All right.

Q. Sadie, did you when you called Bettie on the telephone at the Wright Hotel, she responded, did she?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you talked with her on the 'phone?

A. No, sir, I had her come over, told her I had got back.

Q. That is what I mean, did she come to your hotel?

A. She came, yes, sir.

Q. What was your hotel?

A. I was on Jackson, I think the number was——

Q. She came to the place where you were?

A. Yes, sir, where I was. We didn't stop at the same hotel, she came over.

Q. It was not a hotel?

A. No, it was a rooming place, colored place where I was at.

Q. And she came over there? A. She came over there.

Q. And did you have a conversation with her?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. Relative to Minnie Atkins?

A. I didn't tell her where I had been at, no, sir.

Q. You talked with her about Minnie? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And about what you and she were engaged in doing?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Give the conversation?

A. I told her I had been to see a white man that used to live in Leavenworth—Jack Keenan. That is what I told Bettie and that he knew where Minnie was and wouldn't and wouldn't work with anybody but just me. She said: "Well, Sadie, if you find Minnie, you are going to let me know about it, aint you, so we can send for Bartlett?" and I said: "Why, sure, but it will take several days before I find her yet, because he is going to take me down in the country to see some people that know just exactly where she is."

Q. What did she say?

A. She said all right—that night—that evening.

Q. So you separated then, did you?

A. No, sir, we went down to a moving picture show and went all around town, but that evening about four o'clock, I went up to the hotel and told her that I was going to leave, going in the taxi-cab. I called just fifteen or twenty minutes before I left. She said: "All right. I will go on back to my hotel." So, that night about seven o'clock I went down to the depot and bought a ticket to Spokane, Washington, and I found out where Fort Wright was.

Q. That it was at Spokane?

A. That it was at Spokane, yes, sir, just about ten minutes till train time, I called Bettie up at the Hotel Wright and told her that I would be back in two or three days, that I was going to the country; that I was fixing to leave on the train; that was on Saturday evening. I taken the train at the station at seven-ten that night.

Q. And you went to where?

A. Went to Spokane, Washington, got in there on Sunday morning about seven-forty five.

Q. What occurred then?

A. I caught a street car and went to Fort Wright.

Q. Did you find out anything out there about Minnie?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who did you see there that knew anything about it?

A. Found Mrs. Richardson, a white woman, a soldier's wife.

Q. Had you ever seen her before?

A. Never had seen her before, no, sir.

Q. Did she claim to know anything about Minnie?

A. She knew all about them. Minnie and them hadn't gone very long.

Q. She reported to you?

A. She told me exactly where to find her.

Q. All right.

A. I said: "I am looking for a woman that was Mrs. Richardson", I said: "I am looking for a woman whose husband——

Q. Now, did she tell you anything about Minnie having any children or not having any children?

A. We didn't talk about that at all, no, sir.

Q. She did tell you just where she lived

A. Just where she lived, yes, sir.

Q. Where did she tell you about where Minnie lived?

A. I told her I was looking for a woman there whose husband's name was Harry Folk, he was in the band. She said: "Well, we have got no band here now, the band is in Fort Logan, and Minnie's husband Harry is in it." She said: "What are you hunting Minnie for?", and I told her I was a Government officer and I was going out there to find Minnie so that I could enroll her.

Q. Enroll her?

A. Yes, sir, and get the money for Minnie, and she said:

"Well, I am fixing to go to Alaska, I was to go through and see Minnie, and when you get to Fort Lawton, you tell Minnie I will be there."

Q. Where was Fort Lawton?

A. And I said: "Where is Fort Lawton?", and she said: "It is in Seattle," and I said: "My goodness, I have just come from Seattle", and she said: "It is seven miles out of town". I caught the car that evening——

By Mr. Blakeney: The conversation occurred in Spokane?

A. At Fort Wright at Spokane about six miles from town.

Q. Was anybody—Did you see anybody out at Spokane or Fort Wright about this matter? A. No, sir.

Q. You came back to Seattle? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When?

A. Got to Seattle the next morning, left there at night.

Q. What happened at Seattle?

A. I went back there and I caught a street car and went straight to the Fort.

Q. Did you see Bettie before?

A. No, sir, I didn't, I didn't want to see her.

Q. You talked to her before you went to the Fort?

A. No, sir, I just got in town, caught the street car as soon as I got off the railroad train there in Seattle.

Q. And went out to Fort Lawton?

A. Went out to Fort Lawton, I think it was the headquarters out at the Fort, and I asked for Harry Folk. I had his name, I got his name in Van Couver—Harry Folk.

Q. Did you locate Minnie out there?

A. I found her husband first.

Q. Did you have a talk with her husband?

A. Yes, they told me to go down to the band house, showed me where the band house was, and that I would find Harry Folk down there.

Q. That was inside of the reservation?

A. Yes, I was up in the Fort—Fort Lawton. I went down there and some one came to the door, and I asked for Harry Folk, and he just about about half closed the door I think, and I heard him say: "Harry, your colored girl is out here". Never had seen me before, and Harry came to the door and he said: "What will you have?", and I said: "Are you Harry Folk", and he said—and I said: "I am hunting for your wife, Minnie Atkins", and he said: "She don't live here", and he told me the number of the house, the place where I could find her, and he said: "What do you want with her?", and I said: "I want to see her on a matter of very important business", and he said: "You had better catch the street car back, and when you get down to the gate there is a little store there, and they can show you up the hill where my wife lives."

Q. What gate? A. The home gate.

Q. The gate to the Post?

A. Yes, sir, the gate to the Post, about three quarters of a mile, I guess.

Q. Is that what you call the gate to the Post?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All right?

A. I got on the street car and came on back to town where he told me, and I got to the little store, and a big fat Dago, I guess it was—she was in there, and I asked her if she knew where Minnie Folk lived, and she said — and she took me back on the other side and she said: "You see that little house up there?", and I said yes, and she said: "Minnie lives right there."

Q. Out side of the Post?

A. Yes, sir, she said: "Minnie lives right there.

Q. You got to see Minnie?

A. Yes, sir, I went up and knocked on the door.

Q. Well, what occurred there?

A. Well, I knocked on the door, the screen door was hooked, I knocked on the outside—it must have been about ten o'clock.

Q. What day was this?

A. That was on Monday, Monday, June—I can't say what —we had been out there about a week.

Q. In the early days of June?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 1914? A. 1914.

Q. All right?

A. I knocked on the door, on the side of the door because the screen was hooked and the next door inside was shut. Some one came to the door and I looked at her and I said "Is this Mrs. Folk?", and she said yes, and I said: "Well, can I speak to you?", and she said: "What do you want?", and I said: "Open this door, Minnie", and she unhooked the screen then, she had the other door opened and she said "come in", I said: "Minnie Atkins—That is what I said to her, and she opened the door then and let me in. She said: "Who is this?", and I said: "Don't you know?", and she said: "No". She told me to come around on this side of the table that she had a little square table in the front room, and she came around and took my hat off and in a minute I laughed and she said: "This is Sadie", and I said: "Yes—shall I say what she said.

Q. Yes?

A. She said: "How in the hell did you find me?" I told her then all the rounds that I had been the different places hunting her. She said: "Well, what do you want with me?' I hadn't seen her since '96. I said: "Minnie, I am a Government Officer working for the Government, and I am hunting people to enroll". I said: "You know in 1905 when you went to get your money, you enrolled Minnie Atkins, Thomas Atkins, Alice Atkins, Charlie and Harvey Harrison.

Q. 1905? A. No, sir, 1895.

Q. All right. A. 1895.

Q. All right?

A. I said: "I have found three of your children, the two principal ones that I am hunting for I can't find", I said, Thomas and Alice. She had sat down by that time. She said, Sadie, she said: "Thomas Atkins was my father. He had been dead seventeen years when I drew that money", and I said: Well, where is Alice?", and she looked up and she said: "Sadie, don't ask, she has been dead too long and [ ]don't want to know", and she looked so bad when she said that, I said to her, I said: "Well, it don't make any difference about Alice because she wasn't allotted, but Thomas was and his land is valuable." She said: "Sadie, I have been hiding from the Government for nineteen years for the crime that I committed for drawing that money and now you have found me to make me trouble", and I said: "No, Minnie, I have been your friend for thirty years and I can shield you from the Government", and I told her that I was working for the Government and that I was working for a man named Hugh Bartlett, and that all she had to do was to tell the Government—they would come along the Government officers and ask her if she had a child, for her to say yes—this man Hugh Bartlett would come along and give her two thousand ($2,000.00) dollars for a deed. She said: "Sadie, who is dead in Leavenworth, that if I say I had a child that was born in 1885, that I can say I give it to?" and I said: "My grandmother, Granny Letcher", she said: "Well, All right," she said: "Good, let me put that down", and she went and got a piece of paper", and she said: "When must I say, 1885". Minnie isn't a very good scholar, she got a paper and put down one, eight, and a five and said to her—shall I tell what I said?

Q. Yes?

A. I said: "Hell, that aint no way to put down 1885," and I put it down for her myself. She wanted that so as to tell what to say. I showed her the picture and she said: "Is that the one that I gave you?", and I said: "No, I got this from an old friend of yours", and she said: "Who?", and I said: "Mary Hamilton" and I said: "Minnie, I have already got this started because they thought you was dead", I says: "I have got it framed up with some people in Leavenworth", and I didn't tell her it was negroes. She said: "What did Mary Hamilton say about it?", and I told a lie on Mary Hamilton, I said: "Mary and Claude both are going to swear to the same thing"—Mary and Claude, Mary's husband, swear to the same thing, and she said good, alright—when she seen that they were going to do it. She said, Sadie, it is pretty near time for my husband to come; what did you say to him when you met him—did you say anything about any children? I said no; she said, for God's sake, don't mention it. I have been married to him seven years, and he don't know that I had a child. She said, if you had come when my husband was here, you never would have got in. So, she said, you come to-morrow. I went Monday when I found her, until Sunday night, every day.

Q. In that conversation when you first went to Minnie's house, did either one of you say anything about Harvey and Charlie? A. Yes.

Q. Except the mention you made of their being on the '95 roll?

A. '95, yes, sir, but I had to go. We talked it over a whole week; I had a whole week, every day with her.

Q. You saw her every day?

A. Every day, and spent until the Sunday night following. That was before Mr. Long got there.

Q. On the occasion of this first visit, you left her home?

A. Left her home and went back to town, where I stopped at, and called Bettie—she didn't know I was in the town.

Q. What was said?

A. After I called up she came over to the hotel. She said, Sadie, have you got any right dope on Minnie yet, and I said, yes. She said, Bartlett has wired and wants to know what is keeping us so long—we didn't send him some wire—and I hate to wire him unless I do know positively. I said, I will tell you—wire and tell him to send us $150.00, so we can have some more money—our money was getting short then; and she said, Mr. Bartlett told me to wire in the name—let me see what that name was now.

Q. Was it Smith, or Jones, or Brown?

A. Jones—Bill Jones—Bill Jones. I said, what in the devil does Bartlett want you to wire in the name of Bill Jones for, and she said, so the people in Oklahoma can't get on his trail when we find Minnie. She said, now, I want to know—must I wire and tell him? I said, you wire and get the money and tell him the next telegram will be for him to come. I wasn't ready for him to come yet. I went to my sister-in-law's and told her about my finding Minnie—the good luck I had had—told her I was expecting in a few days to have the man that I was working for, to come. The next day, as Minnie had asked me to come out the next day, I went to her house again. She asked me about her sister, Kate, but before she got to that——

Q. Let me hear about the talk—about your conversation with Bettie on the same day that you first found Minnie. Did you tell Bettie where Minnie was?

A. No sir, I did not; I didn't tell her.

Q. Did you tell her how to find Minnie? A. No, sir.

Q. Alright now; go on to this conversation on Sunday. You say——

A. No, on Monday I found her.

Q. On Tuesday, now.

A. On Tuesday, I went back, and went out to the Fort; got up early in the morning and went.

Q. Who did you see out there?

A. Nobody there but Minnie.

Q. Did you talk with Minnie? A. Yes.

Q. Tell what you said and what she said.

A. I said, Minnie, in thinking over this thing last night, I find out that Harry will have to know about these children, Minnie, on account of you having signed this deed, for you to get this money when the white man I am working for comes to pay you the money. She said, my God, Sadie, I can't tell him. I said, let me tell him; and she said, alright. She stepped out up on the hill to go to 'phone, she said.

Q. Minnie's house—

A. On the side of the hill—further on the hill is another house.

Q. Alright.

A. She came back there, and about twenty minutes, I guess, or a half an hour, Harry came.

Q. Alright. Did you see him?

A. The table was just about this size.

Q. About three feet square?

A. Yes, just a square table in the front room. Minnie sat here, and I was sitting here.

Q. The Court can't see those signs. Minnie set on your left? A. Yes, this hand—yes sir.

Q. The side of the table on the left of you?

A. Yes, I am sitting like I am, and Harry walked in and was standing about where Mr. Hanford is standing.

Q. Besides you?

A. In front of me, yes. I said, Mr. Folk, do you know your wife well, and he said, I think not; that is what he said—I think not. I said, well, I have come to tell you a secret about her, this morning, but before that—can I put this in about what I said to her about Harry?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, waiting for him to come, she said, my God, Sadie, Harry will about quit me; I said, no he won't—you know how a white man is about money—as soon as he finds out you are going to get some money he won't care how many children you had; that is what I said to her. Then, when Harry came, I asked him if he knew his wife, and I said, Mr. Folk, do you know your wife, and he said, I think not. I said, well, I have come to tell you a secret about her this morning; I said, she has got some children—she has got two sons living in Oklahoma. He just stood there. And I said, she has got a child that I am hunting, that she is going to make some money off of; I said, a boy that she had in Leavenworth, I told him. Minnie looked up at him and said, my God; she said, Harry, will you forgive me for deceiving you all this time? He never opened his mouth. I just kept talking to Mr. Folk. Minnie was asking him those questions. He said, well, Minnie, why didn't you tell me about those children? She said, well, you never have asked me did I have any. Mr. Folk was only there for a short time that trip, and he went back to the Post and I still stayed there. She said, Sadie, she said, where is my sister Nancy? I said she lives in Nowata; I said, Nancy, every time I see her, speaks about money that you drew of her's. She said, well, when I get this money, you tell Nancy that I am going to pay her. She said, and how is my sister Kate? I said, Kate Ward is dead and has been for three years.

Q. What was Kate Ward's name before?

A. Kate—

Q. Logan? A. No, sir.

Q. Holden?

A. Yes, Holden; we called her Ward all the time—Kate Ward. I said, she is dead—has been dead three years.

Q. She had lived where?

A. Before she died, she always lived in Oklahoma; she was an older sister.

Q. Indian Territory?

A. Yes, sir. She asked me, then, about the looks of the children—these two boys in Oklahoma—and I told her. I said, Minnie, there is so much difference between the color of these children. I said, one looks like a white man, and the other looks like an Indian. She said, I will tell you why that is. I am going to tell you but you don't ever tell those boys, and I told her, I wouldn't. She said Charlie is Peterkin's son; Harvey is Harrison's son—he was a dark complected man—I think he had Mexican in him—and that is why Harvey is so dark; but she said, don't tell them, and I said, I won't. I said, it won't make any difference anyhow if I did because they don't go together; they are paying no attention to one another; that Charlie thinks he is a white man. I left to go to town; on the way, after I got on the street car in town, two men were shadowing me—the first time I had known I was commencing to be shadowed. I went up to the hotel where [ ] and Bettie was and she showed me a telegram.

Q. Was Bettie at the hotel on that Tuesday?

A. The hotel Wright. She got an answer back—I forget where the first telegram come from—the first wire that we got. It seems to me that it was at Muskogee—I am not positive about the first one; I know where the other three came from.

Q. She showed you that telegram?

A. I seen the telegram; supposed to be from Bartlett.

Q. What did it say?

A. Said, I am on my way—coming; said, I will leave here tonight.

Q. Who was it addressed to?

A. Addressed to Mrs. Bill Jones, from Mr. Bill Jones.

Q. Signed Bill Jones?

A. Signed Bill Jones; that is the name she said Mr. Bartlett had given her to wire to him. And I went up to my place as I had promised, and the next day, I went to Minnie's. Harry came in, not very long after I got there.

Q. On Wednesday? A. On a Wednesday.

Q. Did you have a conversation with Minnie?

A. Had a conversation with Minnie and Harry.

Q. Tell what you each said.

A. Minnie said, you know one thing, you know when I was in Missoula, Montana, some years ago, some one wrote me a letter with a deed in it, telling me to sign this deed and they would be alright. Said they didn't sign any name to the letter. I said, who do you think sent it? She said, I think it was from Kate. I said, I told you Kate was dead; I said where is it?, and he said, go and find it in the bed-room some place, and she went and got that letter and a deed.

Q. You saw the letter?

A. Yes, sir, I saw the letter—enough of it to see that it was from Muskogee—a long letter.

Q. Do you recall what the letter said?

A. No, sir, I don't believe I can; no sir, I don't think I can read that letter there.

Q. Do you remember the substance of it?

A. It said, Minnie, it has been a long time since I heard from you; I just located you. I really wouldn't like to describe it because I can't—the letter.

Q. Did it say anything about Thomas Atkins?

A. No, sir, didn't even show that but the deed—seems it had his name on it but not the letter.

Mr. Blakeney: The deed has his name on it?

A. Tommy Atkins.

Q. Do you remember in what connection the name Thomas Atkins was in the deed?

A. Yes, that she was his mother.

Q. Did it say anything about whether he was living or dead? A. That he was dead.

Q. What? A. He was dead.

Q. It recited that he was dead?

A. Recited that he was dead; for her to sign that.

Q. Do you know what land it purported to cover?

A. No, sir, I don't. I suppose this but I don't know—I can't say that.

Q. Alright. Did it recite where the land was?

A. In Oklahoma.

Q. Alright.

A. She said, well, since I have found out that my sister Kate—no, she said, after I got that, and I found out somebody had located me out here, I left. We left Missoula, Montana. Harry Folk had taken that letter and burned it up while I was staying there, and the deed, too.

Q. What letter is that?

A. The letter and deed that she got at Missoula, Montana, two years before.

Q. When was that? A. That was on Wednesday.

Q. She yold you the letter had been burned up?

A. No, they burned it up while I was there; after I read that letter, and she found out Kate was dead, she put that letter in the stove; she never even wrote that to anybody—she got scared—she burned both of them. Then we talked about what Minnie—Minnie and I both were talking about what we had said, how that we had framed up about this baby at Granny Letcher's.

Q. Was Harry Folk still there?

A. Yes, sir; sat right at the table.

Q. Give the conversation.

A. I said, you know Harry, Minnie drawed some money in '95 for those children of her's—I named the children—shall I name them now?

Q. Yes, tell all the conversation.

A. I said, she drawed for Tommy Atkins, Alice Atkins, Charlie and Harvey Harrison. I said, now she didn't have no Tommy and Alice. We have framed up a way that we can get her loose from the Government because that was Government money, and Minnie said, she spoke in, she said, that is what I have been running from. She said, Harry, that was my father. Then I told him about the white man that I was expecting to sell this land to; I said unbeknowst to the Government—the Government don't know I am working for another man, I told Harry. And he said, when will this man come? And I said, he is on the way and is coming now, so the telegram read. It was alright with him and Minnie told me to come back the next day—that would be Thursday. When I left and got down to the car house, I saw a couple of men.

Q. The car house at the Post?

A. Yes, at the Post. I saw a couple of men.

Q. The station where you get on the street cars?

A. Yes, sir. But it wasn't the two I had seen the day before that—it was some more. I went down to the hotel Wright—I had never told Bettie yet where Minnie was.

Q. Those two men pay any attention to you?

A. They caught the same street car that I did going back into town; I went back—foinf to the hotel Wright, where Bettie was.

Q. You did?

A. I did. She got another wire and I really can't tell where that one came from.

Q. Did she show that to you?

A. She showed that to me, yes, sir.

Q. What did it say?

A. Will be there; have everything ready.

Q. Do you know where that telegram is?

A. I don't know where that one is, no sir. I don't know where any of those telegrams are, no sir. She was getting those wires.

Q. Did she show them to you?

A. She showed them to me—three of them; I will tell you who they were from.

Q. What did that wire say?

A. Will be there; have everything ready—Bill Jones.

Q. Addressed to? A. To Bill Jones.

Q. Signed who?

A. Signed Bill Jones; addressed Bill Jones, and signed

Bill Jones. I said, Bettie, there are two men who have been trailing me for the last two days, and I said, I wonder what on earth they want with me; do you reckon that they have found out that I have passed as a Government officer, and she said, oh no. I didn't stay there so awful long; I went up to my place.

Q. What happened at your place?

A. I caught a street car and went up stairs and looked behind me down stairs, and there were the same two men standing beside the door.

Q. The same that you saw at the Post when you got on the car?

A. Yes, sir. I called Mrs. Jackson—I was rooming with—and I said, do you see those two men? They are trailing me for some purpose—I don't know what—but myself, I was scared, I thought I was going to get arrested. They stayed there all that evening, and every day after that two other men were trailing me. Well now, on Friday, a telegram came from Portland.

Q. Portland? A. Yes, sir, Portland.

Q. How do you know?

A. Portland, I read that. I carried this one to the Fort.

Q. Where did you get it?

A. I got it from Bettie; got this telegram from Bettie—Portland, Oregon—I will be there in the morning.

Q. What did the telegram say?

A. This telegram? I will be there in the morning—have everything ready—Bill Jones to Bill Jones.

Q. Who was it addressed to?

A. To Bill Jones. I said, Bettie, give me this telegram; I will carry it out to the Fort.

Q. Do you know where this telegram is now?

A. No, sir, Bettie had all the telegrams; I had taken this telegram.

Q. What became of the telegram when you got through with it? A. I took it and give it back to Bettie.

Q. You say you had taken that to the Fort?

A. Had taken it to the Fort and caught the car.

Mr. Blakeney: I object to the contents of the telegram as not the best evidence.

A. Tell what I did?

Q. Yes.

A. I had taken the telegram out to the Fort—that was on Friday; Harry was at the house. I thought it was from Mr. Bartlett—the telegram. I said, my men will be here in the morning, and you will have to have everything ready, I said, because the banks will—we will have to take Minnie down town to get the money. He said, my God, Sadie, I can't be here because I am hired to go to Fort Wright to play for the Pot Black Indians. I said, you will have to get somebody I said, to be here to see that Minnie gets her money. He said, I will tell you what I will do; give me the telegram and I will go to the Fort and ask the Colonel if I can get leave and stay here, it is a business matter. I gave him the telegram, and he was gone quite a little bit—quite a while and when he come back, Harry said, Sadie, they won't let me stay here, I have got to go, but I have saw Captain McComb, and he will look after Minnie. I said, alright, you can trust to him; and he said, alright, I know Captain McComb, and if he don't do it, he will get Captain MacNab. I said, now, I will be here in the morning by 10:30—that would have been on Saturday morning. I left and went back. Now, when I got up to the hotel—I went up to the hotel where Bettie was—Bettie said, now Sadie, Bartlett will be here in the morning—

Q. Had you had any understanding with Minnie as to the making of a deed?

A. Yes, sir, she was going to sell this land.

Q. Tell about that conversation.

A. You mean the deed she was going to sign?

Q. Yes.

A. I didn't have no deed; I told her when the man came —her and Harry both—when this man came that they were going to buy the land and she would get two thousand dollars for that, and when the Government officers came behind me, and asked her if she had a child by that name, say yes, and that was all there would be to it.

Q. You went back to the hotel?

A. On Friday evening.

Mr. Hanford: I want to strike that previous answer as not responsive to the question.

A. I went back to the hotel that evening.

Q. Alright now; what occurred at the hotel?

A. I saw; I said, Bettie are you sure Bartlett will be here? She said, oh yes, he certainly will be here, and I have got to go up town. I said, Bettie, you know the banks close at 12 o'clock Saturday, and I said, what are we going to do about seeing about the money? Now, in the meantime, after I had found Minnie, they was to offer her $5000.00 that she would get for the land.

Q. Who was?

A. Bettie and I was to tell her—if we found her—she would get $5000.00.

Q. You and Bettie have any conversation about that?

A. Yes, sir. All along, Mr. Bartlett told us to tell her if we found her, to tell her he would pay her $5000.00 for the deed, and if she knew where her son was, he would pay her $5000.00 for the boy; if the son was dead, to buy it from Minnie. Bettie and I planned between ourselves to offer her $2000.00, and she and I were going to beat Bartlett out of the $3000.00.

Q. You and Bettie were going to beat Bartlett out of the three thousand?

A. Yes, sir, me and Bettie were going to get that three thousand dollars.

Q. What did Bettie say?

A. Bettie said that she had to go up town and get some business fixed; I went on home. Said, now Sadie, Bartlett will be here sure in the morning. I said, I won't go over, Bettie, until eight or nine o'clock, and she said, alright. That last telegram, I gave it to her. Harry brought it back and handed that to me and I gave it to Bettie.

Q. Harry had given you the telegram back before you came back to town?

A. Yes, sir, and I had taken and given the telegram to Bettie. The next morning——

Q. What occurred?

A. I went over to the hotel. I got up early; I knew I was going over there soon, but I told Bettie I would come about eight or nine o'clock—and I went over to the hotel, I guess about half past seven, anyhow.

Q. That was Saturday morning?

A. Saturday morning, yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember what day of June?

A. Yes, sir, I can count—that must have been about the 14th or 15th, along in there some place, yes, sir. I went in the room and was sitting down talking to Bettie, and I said, ain't Bartlett come yet? And she said, no, he hasn't come yet; and I said, my goodness, the train gets in——

Q. What time in the morning?

A. At a quarter of eight—half past seven, maybe. She said, that train is late, and I said, how do you know, and she said, I called up and found it was late; Bettie said, if he didn't come on this one, she said, there will be a twelve o'clock train, then, and maybe he will come. By that time, some one rung the 'phone and she went to it, and she said, Sadie, I have got a beau that will be up here pretty soon, and she said, you go and come back, and I said, alright.

Q. Did you go?

A. I did; I went outside the door, and got about as far as from Bettie's room—along a dark hallway, you know, and got about as far from Bettie's room as that door.

Q. About 25 or 30 feet?

A. The hall is a great long hall. I meets at that time, but didn't know who it was, Frank Long in the hall.

Q. Who did you think it was?

A. I thought it was Mr. Cook.

Q. Fred Cook?

A. Yes, sir. I said, good morning, Mr. Cook, and he said, hello; and he just kept passing me, and I looked and he went right on in Bettie's room.

Q. You looked what?

A. I looked back, and he went on in Bettie's room. I told Bettie I would be back latter on. I went home—back to where I lived at the hotel, at the rooming house—and in about an hour Bettie called me over the 'phone and asked me to come over. I went back over to the Wright hotel.

Q. Did you see Bettie?

A. I saw Bettie; she said, I guess Bartlett will be here pretty soon—shortly; the train will be in. I set there and talked to her for about an hour. No train come yet. Well, I had arrangement with Minnie for 10:30 but didn't tell Bettie of the hour—I told her.

Q. You didn't tell Bettie?

A. Didn't tell Bettie, no, sir. I said, well, I have got to go—it was about half past nine. Bettie said, no, wait; Bartlett will be here pretty soon—the train will come in. She kept me there until about half past eleven and no train came. I was over my time then of meeting Minnie. I said, I am going on back to my hotel, and Bettie put her coat on. Will you let me tell about this?

Q. Alright, tell about that.

A. Two other men got on my trail.

Q. Got on your trail?

A. They followed me clear to my house. I went down stairs, one was a little one, and the other, a big, tall man; I will know them if I ever see them, for I said, what are you men trailing me for?

Q. Where was that?

A. Seattle, where I was staying. The big one walked off, and the little one said, we ain't going to do you any harm; and I said, how long are you trailing me; and he said, had you picked up four or five days. And I said, who put you on my trail, and he said, the woman you are with, with that plaid coat on, she came up to our office and had us hired, and I said, what for, and they said, I don't know—just to keep tab on you. I knew what it was. I went over to Bettie's and stayed.

Q. Where?

A. I came back to where I was in the hotel at Bettie's. I said, I am going back up to my hotel, and she said, I will go on, Sadie, over there with you. We got got down to a kind of a little park, like, from the hotel where you sit, and wait for the street cars.

Q. Who was with you?

A. Bettie—she followed me. I was trying to switch her, but she followed me. I said, Bettie, I tell you what I am going to do—catch the street car and go out to Raner Beach. I looked, and those two men—the same two detectives—I found out later they were—were standing just about as far as from where we are sitting as Mr. Long is standing.

Q. About 12 feet away?

A. Yes, sir. Bettie said, alright I just had noticed those men because before that she kept on my trail herself. As soon as she seen those two men, she said, alright. I caught the street car, and when I got to the rooming house where I was, these two men were there too; I don't know how they got there.

Q. Bettie didn't go on?

A. No, she went back to the hotel but those two men did. I slipped down the back way—I aimed to get out to the Fort—and it was past the time for my meeting Minnie. I went down the back stairway and went over on the next street and caught a street car and went out to Fort Lawton—I thought I had got away from these two men. When the car stopped at the little car house where I was to get off and go to Minnie's, there was the machine right ahead of me, next to the porch.

Q. And automobile?

A. An automobile, and they were looking back just as I got off the street car—those two men—and stopped the machine—three men and the chauffeur—and the other man was in the back of the car. They stopped this car, and as I got off the street car, they turned and came back.

Q. In their car?

A. In their car. After the street car pulled off and I started towards Minnie's, I looked and these men got out of the car and started walking behind me. I started walking up the hill—didn't start to walk to Minnie's house at all because I didn't want them to know where Minnie's house was.

Q. About how far was Minnie's house from where you got off at the depot?

A. You can see it from the depot but it must be I guess, a block and a half, I guess—but you can see it. I started up the side walk, but there is a path that leads off to Minnie's house, and you can go the walk way that leads off below on that street; when I got up to Minnie's house, I saw the two men sitting on Minnie's porch and heard—she was dressed in white—I passed her house.

Q. Her house was down the hill?

A. Yes, down the hill; I simply glanced at her house and walked on. I had got about a block past her house and stopped.

Q. You came in front of her house?

A. No, her house is on the the side of the hill. I stopped and came about a block up the walk, and I wanted to see where these men were going and when I commenced to slow up, one passed me.

Q. One who?

A. One of the men passed me, and the other walked up to me and said, how far is it to the Fort—shall I tell?

Q. Yes.

A. I said, God damn you, I saw him then; if you keep in that machine the way you are going, you would have found the way to the Fort—you are trailing me. And the other one walked back and said, what do you think, this woman thinks we are trailing her; and he said, oh no, we are not. I turned then, to go back down toward Minnie's, and Minnie was coming up. I turned around and the way she came, and she was coming walking—Minnie was coming up the street this way—and I was walking along, going down toward her—I kept doing this way—I meant for—

Q. What way?

A. Why, to get her to stop—motioning for her.

Q. With your hand in front of your chest?

A. Yes. Minnie couldn't see me but when she got to me, this is what she said. She said, oh Sadie, the man you have been working for has been here and gone, and he said he had paid you and you had gone back to Oklahoma; and I said, the man I am working for? And she said, yes; and I said, Minnie, the man I was working for, hasn't come here yet. She said, well, he left some papers for me to sign and I am going to leave and go to Spokane tonight with him, and I said, oh God, Minnie, have you signed any papers, and she said, not yet; and I said, who is down at your house, and she said, Captain MacNab and another man; said, they are waiting for you, and she said, why don't you come, and I said, I will talk to you when I get down to the house. And when we got to Minnie's house, these two men were still up there on the side walk.

Q. These men that you thought were detectives?

A. Yes, sir, and one came down to Minnie's house and Captain MacNab and Mr. Hanford was in there.

Q. Did you meet either one before?

A. No, sir, never before. Minnie introduced me to them and Minnie said, Captain, this is the woman we were waiting for. Captain MacNab said, Sadie, this in Mr. Hanford. my lawyer, and as I am not well equipped in the law and Harry had to leave the business in Captain McComb's hands to come down here, Captain McCombs left me to come, and I met Mr. Hanford and thought best to bring him down.

Q. Now, what else was said?

A. Minnie said, Sadie, she says, the man that you are working for said that he had done paid you. I said, I haven't been paid by nobody and didn't know anyone was here; and Captain MacNab said, Sadie, do you know Frank Long? And I said, I do; and he said, do you know Charles Page? And I said, I do. Do you know C. Josey? And I said, I do. He said, well, Frank Long—he didn't say Frank Long—said Mr. Long—is here representing Mr. Page, and he is the man that has been here; he said, now, I wouldn't do much talking to him—he came in a machine, and I wouldn't do much talking to him as you didn't come. When we asked him what had become of you, he said, you had gone back to Oklahoma. I said, he is a liar; I didn't know Frank Long was in town.

Q. You told that you didn't know Frank Long?

A. I told him that I didn't know Frank Long was in town, and I didn't. And he said, Well, Sadie, here is the papers that is left for Minnie to sign, and I said, why Captain, has she signed them, and he said, no, we wouldn't let her; and he said, do you know Dana Kelsey? And I said, I do; and he said, well, Mr. Long has told us to wire to Dana Kelsey, asking Mr. Kelsey who Frank Long was—after Mr. Hanford and him refused to talk to Mr. Long much—and we are expecting an answer, anyway by five o'clock this evening, and we have got an arrangement with Mr. Long.

Q. With Mr. Long?

A. With Mr. Long, this evening; he will be back.

Q. Did he say at what time Long would be back?

A. Would be back at six o'clock—expecting an answer not later than five o'clock to this telegram that he was to send to Dana Kelsey.

Q. Who was Dana Kelsey?

A. The Indian Agent at Muskogee. He said, here is the papers that he wants Minnie to sign. About the size of this paper—the paper was laying there.

Q. About the size of this?

Mr. Blakeney: Well, we will agree that it is about the size of an ordinary typewriting sheet.

Mr. German: Alright.

A. It was something about this only it was typewritten.

Q. Was it typewritten or printed?

A. It was not wrote with a pen, no sir. He said, this is the paper they left for her to sign.

Q. Did you look at it?

A. I read just a few lines of it—I am the mother of Thomas Atkins born in Leavenworth, Kansas, in 1885, and died in 1899; that is as far down as I read. I said, Captain MacNab, don't let Minnie sign these papers; whatever you do —before that though, Minnie said, I told him that the baby died when it was 6 months old.

Q. Who said that?

A. Minnie. I told Mr. Long the baby died when 6 months old, and he said that was too early and we would have to fix it, and Captain MacNab spoke up and said, Sadie, don't you think Minnie ought to turn her business over to me and Mr. Hanford because she don't know how to talk. I said, yes, Captain MacNab, don't let Minnie sign these papers, and don't let her leave with Mr. Long for Spokane tonight. And he promised me he would not.

Q. What did he say?

A. He said, I will not. I said, my man, Mr. MacNab, hasn't come here. I said, this is another man. Then I seen I had been trapped. I leaves, and told them I would come back after they had arrangement with Mr. Long that night. I went and got on a car and went to hotel Wright, and opened the door and Bettie was there.

Q. You went to Bettie's room?

A. Yes, sir, I was mad. I said, Bettie, you sure pulled a nice trick on me; you had Frank Long to come here and go out there, and she said, oh no, I didn't; and I said, yes, you did. By that time, the door opened.

Q. You had closed the door as you went in?

A. As I went in; the door opened, and in walked Frank Long. May I say what I said to him?

Q. Yes.

A. He said, hello, Sadie; and I said, God damn you, what did you go out there and tell that lie on me; you told Minnie that you had paid me and that I had gone back to Oklahoma, and I didn't know that you were in town. He said. I didn't tell her; I said, you did. He said, well, Sadie, it is only a business matter now, and she has told me the baby died at 6 months old, and that won't do any good and I will give you and Bettie three thousand dollars to steal her and take her back to Oklahoma. And I said, I won't do it. I am going to keep her here until Mr. Bartlett comes; and I said, those papers that you left out there for her to sign, she is not going to sign them, and you are not going to take her off this evening either. I said, where you made your mistake at, was in not talking to Captain MacNab; and he said, I see my handwriting on the wall—throwed his hand up—this way—said, I see my handwriting on the wall and I am going. What I understood him to say—what he meant was, that he had made a mistake in not talking to Captain MacNab instead of Minnie. He said, Sadie, I will take care of you in this deal, anyhow, and there is no reason for you and Bettie falling out over it because it is a money matter. He left while I was there and Bettie and I went to talking and she said, Sadie, I will tell you how come me to wire for Long, and I said, Bettie, how come you to do such a dirty trick as that; she said, I will tell you how come me to wire Long. She said, Bartlett hasn't offered us but a thousand dollars a piece to find Minnie.

Q. Who said that?

A. Bettie was talking to me. And Long is working for Page and has got plenty of money, and Rodgers had an agreement with them—that is Bettie's man—

Q. Bettie's man?

A. Hook Rodgers—Charlie Rodgers.

Q. Where does he live?

A. I guess he is living in Tulsa with Bettie where she lives—that they would pay us six thousand dollars, me and Rodgers; and I said, so you are going to leave me out here broke. And I said. now I am going to stay here until Mr. Bartlett comes; I didn't have the money to leave there anyhow—I was broke; so, after I sit there a few minutes, I thought the matter over and thought there was no use of Bettie and me falling out. I said to her, you wire to Mr. Bartlett —she never wired to him at all—I said, you wire to him. And I left there, and I went on down to the depot myself—she said she was going to wire—I guess she did. I went down to the depot and wired to Mr. Bartlett myself.

Q. What did you wire?

A. I told him to send me a hundred dollars. I wanted to get detectives to take care of Minnie because Bettie had sold her and I was afraid they was going to take her away from town.

Q. You wired that to Bartlett?

A. I wired that to Bartlett. I didn't get any answer though.

And thereupon, recess is taken for the noon hour, to reconvene at 1:30.

And thereafter, having reconvened, further testimony is taken as follows:

SADIE JAMES being recalled further testified on direct examination by Mr. German, as follows:

Q. What time, was it, that you sent in the telegram to Mr. Bartlett—what day of the week?

A. You mean that I had been out there that morning and came back?

Q. Yes. A. It was on Sunday.

Q. That is the telegram—that is the first telegram that you set?

A. That I sent him at all, yes, sir.

Q. After sending that, did you have a reply to that telegram? A. I did not.

Q. Did you send that before or after you went out to see Minnie? A. Afterwards.

Q. After you had been out there? A. Afterwards.

Q. Now, did anyone go out there with you on Sunday—that Sunday to see Minnie?

A. I went back that Saturday night.

Q. Oh, you had been out Saturday night before?

A. I told Minnie when I went out there, Mr. Long was to be back there at 6 o'clock. Captain MacNab and Mr. Hanford, after this telegram was to come so they could find out who he was—I told Minnie I would be back after them. I went out to the Fort that night—the same Saturday night.

And thereupon, on account of the inability of the witness Sadie James to talk, an adjournment of the taking of testimony herein is had until tomorrow morning, February 4th, at 9 o'clock.

SADIE JAMES being recalled, further testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. German.

Q. Sadie, when was it you sent the telegram to Mr. Bartlett?

A. The first telegram was on Saturday—Saturday evening.

Q. Did you send him one on Sunday?

A. Yes, sir, I sent him one on Sunday, but I sent one Saturdat evening.

Q. About what time on Saturday was it?

A. About four o'clock in the evening.

Q. Did you go out to Minnie's after you sent that telegram on Saturday?

A. I went there Saturday night about 8 o'clock.

Q. Between the time that you sent the telegram and 8 o'clock, did you see Bettie Mann, or Mr. Long? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you get any reply to that Saturday's telegram?

A. I went out to the Fort first. No, sir, I didn't get no answer to that telegram.

Q. Who did you see at the Fort?

A. When I got out to the Fort, Minnie was there by herself, in the house. I said to her—she was walking the floor when I got there—I said, Minnie, is Mr. Long coming back? And I said, where are they? She said, they have gone to the Post.

Q. Gone where?

A. Had gone up in the Post. That was about 8 o'clock at night. She said, Sadie, you go to town and get detectives and have them take me to where you stay and keep me until my husband comes;Captain MacNab wants me to do something I don't want to do. I said to her, haven't you got sense enough to protect yourself; and she said, yes, but I am afraid of him. She said, if you don't get me to-night, you come back and stay with me tomorrow anyhow, it will be Sunday. I didn't stay in the house but about fifteen minutes and I rushed right on back to town, and went to my place where I stayed—up on Jackson street—to see if I had a telegram.

Q. Did you find any?

A. No, sir, none at all. I didn't go over to Bettie's. I got up the next morning—I guess it was about half past five—and went down to the Great Northern, I think—or the Northern Pacific—and sent another one.

Q. To Mr. Bartlett?

A. No, to Mrs. Bartlett. I told her to wire me a hundred dollars to hire detectives to guard Minnie.

Q. Did you get any reply to that?

A. Well, I didn't stay there long enough. I had taken the street car about six o'clock, I guess it was near about that time, and went back out to the Fort.

Q. Did you see Minnie?

A. When I got there, there was a soldier sitting on the porch, there was a horse in the yard, and a man standing in the door.

Q. Who was that soldier?

A. She introduced me to him but I don't know what his name was. I walked up and she introduced me to him and said come on in, and take off your things, Sadie. We walked back to the bed-room and I said, Minnie, who is that? And she said, don't talk in front of him; Captain MacNab put him here to watch me. I hadn't had my breakfast, and we came out of the bedroom and while we were talking in the kitchen I said, what did you do last night? And she said, Sadie, I signed my business over to Captain MacNab. She said, I can't sign no papers, or talk to nobody; if they want to see me, they will have to talk to Captain MacNab. She said, they are going to make white case out of it and they are not going to have any negroes in it at all. She said, they want me to say that I had a baby born in the hospital and I gave him away when he was two years old. She said, you know that letter and deed that I showed you; I said, yes. Well, she said, they want me to say those were letters——

Q. Did she say who?

A. Want me to say that the first that I got was in 1898 from the people that kept my boy, that he was sick and wanted me to send them money to take care of him on, and say that the other one that I got was six months later, stating that my boy was dead; and she said, Sadie, they have found out that you are not a Government officer and you are going to get arrested, and don't come back to my house any more, because I don't want to see you get in no trouble, but I will tell you what to do. She said, next month, Harry, who is off on a 12 day hike, and I are going to Portland, Oregon, to visit a friend of mine, Clara Kirk, a white woman, who has been a friend of mine for 12 years, and you meet me there. I ask her where Clara lived and she told me 445 East Market.

Q. Where?

A. Portland, Oregon, and she said, now, if you go to Portland before I go, you go to Clara Kirk and tell her who you are; tell her that you are a friend of mine, and she will let you stay there until I come. By that time, there was a white woman came in there by the name of Bertha, had been Captain MacNab's servant, she came there and stayed right in the house with us from then until six o'clock that day, and where we would go, she would follow us, and the soldier stayed out-doors until dinner time. That was about eight o'clock that night; I stayed out there all day that Sunday.

Q. Just a minute, I want to ask you a question. You say Minnie said they wanted her to do and say so-and-so—who was that?

A. I suppose she was talking about Captain MacNab; I thought she was telling me what they wanted her to do. Said that she signed her business over to Captain MacNab. She was talking about Mr. Bartlett coming and what she couldn't do.

Q. Alright.

A. About half past seven, I guess, I started down to the car line and she started with me, and this soldier went close—right with us. And when the car came along, I couldn't tell that he was right there. The white woman didn't leave until about six, and I went back to town and there was no telegram yet. She had told me not to come out there because I was going to get arrested but I got up and went back out there the next morning about ten o'clock, I guess I got out there. When I caught a car, Bettie Mann was in front of the car, and I saw that she didn't see me, and I sat down in the back.

Q. On the same car?

A. On the same car, yes. When we got to Minnie's place, I got off; she stayed on the car—Bettie did. I went to Minnie's house and there was nobody there. The curtains were pulled down and the house was all dark and I looked in, and there was no key on the inside. I walked down to the street—Minnie told me the woman was a friend of her's—and she was in the yard, and I said to her,——

Mr. Stuart: We object to all this as hearsay.

Mr. Hanford: The same objection.

Q. Did this woman with whom you talked there, claim to know where Minnie was? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you find out from her? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, did she say anything about—had Minnie said anything to her? A. No, sir.

Q. You located Minnie through her?

A. Through her, yes, sir.

Q. And did you go to Minnie?

A. I went to where she told me Minnie was at, yes, sir.

Q. Alright; where was that?

A. Up to Captain MacNab's house.

Q. Did you see any one else—any of those persons before you saw Minnie? A. I didn't go to see Minnie.

Q. When you went to the house, who did you see at the house?

A. The hall door was open and I rang the bell and no one came, and after a while I went around, and there was a soldier and a woman—an*d* officer and woman, I guess, coming across the grounds, and when they got on the steps he said, who are you looking for, and I said, I am looking for Captain MacNab; and he said, I guess you are a little late. A woman walked out and stood in the door, and I said, I am looking for Captain MacNab, and she said, you can't see him; he won't be here until two o'clock. He walked by me and got in the door, and I don't know what the woman said to him but he said, I ought to throw her in the guard-house. That is what I heard him say. I went back to catch a car and I saw Bettie going to the back of Captain MacNab's house—Bettie Mann. She wasn't close enough for me to speak to her. I caught the car and went back to town.

Q. What did you do there?

A. I hadn't got no telegram, nor anything else. That was on Monday. On Monday evening, I guess it was, about four or five o'clock, Bettie came over to my house, and I said, Bettie, have you got an answer from Mr. Bartlett, yet and' she said, no. Now, I didn't tell her that I had been sending telegrams, at all.

Mr. Hanford: Objected to as hearsay.

Mr. Allen: I suggest in the absence of Mr. Blakeney—I told him at Leavenworth, that should he not get here before we began taking—further taking of this deposition, all of the objections made by Judge Stuart and Mr. Hanford, would be preserved for him.

Mr. Stuart: Just let that appear in the record, all objections made by other defendants should enure to the benefit of Mr. Blakeney.

Q. About what time in the day on Monday was it, that you saw Bettie down town?

A. That was about four or five o'clock, I guess, in the evening.

Q. Now, what conversation did you have with her?

A. I asked her had she got a telegram from Mr. Bartlett yet, and she said no. I didn't tell her that I had been sending any at all. I didn't go back to the Fort anymore, and her and I stayed around in town, going to moving picture shows and all, until Saturday evening.

Q. Then what—

A. No, it was Friday. Yes, we stayed in town there, monkeying around—she thought he was coming. On Friday evening I went to the hotel where she was.

Q. What became of Mr. Long at that time?

A. Why, he and Mr. Hanford had gone to Spokane, Washington, to see Minnie's husband; they didn't take her. Friday evening about five o'clock—of that week—I went to Bettie's room and there was a telegram on her table, and I picked it up to look at it, and said, I will be there in the morning, six fifteen—was the way the telegram read. That was from Bartlett. I said, Bettie, you didn't tell me you got an answer from him, and she said, well, I forgot to—I intended to though.

Q. Did you notice the date of that telegram?

A. No, sir, it must have been on Friday; she must have just got it that day. She wasn't expecting me over there and she hadn't tore it up. She had been getting answers from him all the time.

Q. Alright.

A. The next morning I went down to the depot about half past five.

Q. Went where?

A. Down to the depot. I was going to meet him. About a quarter of six, Bettie came, and I said, Mr. Bartlett answered your telegram; I sure am going to give him the devil. I sent him a telegram and he never did answer it. And she said, he won't do anything but tell a lie anyhow—say he didn't get it; don't say nothing about the telegram.

Mr. Hanford: Object to that as hearsay. Move to strike.

A. About the time for the train to come in, we went down the steps, and went out to meet him, and he got off the train and spoke to us.

Q. What day of the week was that?

A. Saturday morning. He didn't get there until June 20th; he got there a week later after Mr. Long had gone.

Q. What did he say?

A. He got off the train and said, hello girls, and spoke to me. He said to Bettie—didn't speak to me—he said, Bettie, where is Minnie, and she said, I don't know; Sadie does. And he said, Sadie, have you seen Minnie? And I said, yes, I have seen her, and I told him a story; I said, she wants to see you right away. They have got her locked up, but I have seen her since then. We went on up-stairs in the depot, and Bettie wanted me to go over to the hotel and get some coffee and wanted to talk to me and I said, no, Mr. Bartlett, you won't have time to get the coffee, let's go out to where Minnie is. Bettie had taken his grip and went on and we had taken the street car and started.

Q. Who is we?

A. Mr. Bartlett and I. He paid the fares and sat down, and I said, Mr. Bartlett—he said, Sadie, where is Minnie? I said, she is out here in the Fort, and she is locked up. I said, if you had answered my telegrams like I told you, I would have had her here in town; and he said you wired and told me not to; and I said, I didn't; an he said, how many telegrams did you send? I said, I sent two; and he said, I got five, what did you send in the first telegram—what was on it? I said, I told you to send some money and come at once to find Minnie. And to show you I am not telling any story, he said, he opened his coat and took out five telegrams. He said, the first one I sent told him to send more money.

Mr. Hanford: I object as incompetent, and hearsay, and not responsive to any interrogatory, and I move to strike it for that reason.

Q. Who was present when you and Mr. Bartlett were having this conversation?
A. This was on the street car going to the Fort.
Q. Just you and he?
A. Just him and I, sitting in the seat together when I had taken him to the Fort where Minnie was.
Q. What was said about telegrams?
A. He pulled five telegrams out of his pocket and said, this here, I didn't get. The first I had sent telling him to wire me money and come at once, that I had found Minnie but Bettie had sold her to Frank Long; and another one came in a few minutes and he showed me this. He said, this one came in a few minutes later.

Mr. Stuart: Was that your telegram?

A. Yes, sir, that was my telegram. He had four others with my name signed to them. This next one said—

Mr. Stuart: Which was the next one?

A. Supposed to be mine—my name was on it.

Mr. Stuart: I object to it because it is hearsay and not the best evidence.

Mr. Hanford: The same objection.

Q. Now, did that telegram have your name on it?
A. On it, yes sir. It has got my name on there until today; he has got that.
Q. Who has got that?
A. Mr. Bartlett has got those telegrams.
Q. What did that telegram say?
A. The next one he got?
Q. Yes.
A. Said, don't pay no attention to the first telegram—mistake—Sadie James.
Q. Did you send that one?
A. No, sir, I didn't. The next one I sent was to send me a hundred dollars so I could hire detectives. He got one a little while later saying, don't pay anny attention to any telegrams until you hear from me, Sadie James.
Q. Did you send that? A. I did not.
Q. Was it from Seattle, to him at Muskogee?

A. No, sir, that was Sapulpa; the first one of the telegrams Saturday evening.

Q. Where was it sent from?

A. Sent from Seattle. He said, I didn't come until I got this one—he showed me the last one; that said, come at once, we have found Minnie—the girls—that was the name on the telegram—the girls; I didn't start until I found this.

Q. Did you send that one?

A. No sir, I guess Bettie sent it; I didn't send it.

Q. Did you know she sent it at the time she sent it?

A. No, sir, I didn't know she sent any.

Q. You didn't know any had gone to Mr. Bartlett besides those you sent?

A. No sir, she just told me she send it.

Q. When did she tell you?

A. I told her on Saturday to send a telegram to Mr. Bartlett and I slipped over to the office and sent one, too.

Q. Did she tell you what she had wired him?

A. No, sir.

Q. You didn't know what she wired him?

A. No, sir.

Q. Until you saw those messages Mr. Bartlett showed you?

A. Yes, sir, until I saw those messages he showed me. On the going out there he said to me, Sadie, have you seen Minnie and talked to her before they locked her up? I said, I seen her for seven days; he said, what did she say about the boy; and I told him.

Mr. Hanford: We object to all this as hearsay.

Mr. Stuart: Object to it as hearsay.

Q. What did you tell him?

A. I told him a lie. I said she told me that the boy was in Los Angeles and for me to go to Mary Stain—Mary Hamilton in Denver to get his picture, and I would find him. He said, I don't see no use for me going out to Captain MacNab's and he said, the best thing for you to do, is to rush right back to Denver and get that picture and go and find the boy, and if Long sold Minnie, they are liable to find the boy first, and I said, no, she has never told them where the boy is. When we got out to the Fort, we went to Captain MacNab's house.

O. You and Mr. Bartlett?

A. Mr. Bartlett and I together, about eight o'clock, I guess, or better, when we got there. Captain MacNab came down and I introduced Mr. Bartlett to him, and he asked us in the house, and taken us in a little parlor and sat us down, and

Mr. Bartlett said to him, Captain, I would like to talk to Minnie, and he said, alright, I will have her here.

Mr. Stuart: The same objection as before.

A. And he walked out this way some place, but he came back in the room and in about five minutes, Minnie walked in.

Q. Did the Captain stay while they were in there?

A. Mr. Bartlett was sitting about here and Captain MacNab told Minnie to sit down there. Captain MacNab sat where he could see Minnie and she never spoke to me—she never looked up. Mr. Bartlett said to her, are you Minnie Atkins, and she said, yes; and he said, are you the mother of Tommy Atkins? And Captain MacNab said yes, but she hasn't seen him since he was two years old. Mr. Bartlett asked her if she went to Carlisle, and she said, yes. And he asked her who she went to in Oklahoma before she went to Carlisle. She tried to tell him but she couldn't, and he asked her if she knew Miss Alice Robertson, and she told him that she did not. And Captain MacNab said, you know how these Indians are sulky and won't talk, and when Minnie gets on them spells, you can't do anything with her. Mr. Bartlett seen he couldn't talk to Minnie for Captain MacNab, Captain MacNab said, Sadie only offered Minnie two thousand dollars for the land, and Mr. Long said that the land is valuable and I have sent my lawyer down to Tulsa to investigate it. Mr. Bartlett said, well, Captain MacNab, I bought a deed to the land two years ago and sold the lease to the Gypsy, and I afterwards found out that it was a forged deed put up on me. He said, I am out here now, not in the interest of myself, but to protect the interests of the Gypsy, as I sold them the lease, and he said, I hope while your man is down there, you will have him go by and see the Gypsy, for they are able and will give you as much money for the land as anybody else will. And Captain MacNab told him he would; told him he would have his man go down there. And he said, Mr. Bartlett, you come out here about two o'clock this afternoon. So, we left; we went on back to town, and Mr. Bartlett told me, now Sadie, you go back to the hotel where Bettie is; said, you needn't tell her anything that went on out there, about what I found out about her selling Minnie to Long, but he said, we will leave here tonight.

Q. Had you told Mr. Bartlett about Mr. Long being there? A. I had told him; he was surprised.

Q. When was it you told him?

A. On the way—on the car going out to the Fort.

Q. What did you tell him? A. I told him I——

Mr. Hanford: I object to it as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial; not in the presence of any of the parties to the suit.

A. I told him that Frank Long had been out there and told Captain MacNab a lie on me. Mr. Long had been out there and told Captain MacNab a lie on me; told Captain MacNab I was working for him; that he had paid me and I had gone home. I said, I didn't know Frank Long was in town, Mr. Bartlett; and he said, I see Sadie, how it has been put up on you. That is what Mr. Bartlett said going out.

Q. Now, getting to the point when you and Mr. Bartlett returned from Captain MacNab's back to town, go ahead and tell what was said between you.

A. He told me not to say anything to Bettie about it, but he said, we will get ready and leave here this evening. He said, I bought my ticket routed back around by Spokane; will have to go that way; so you girls get a round trip ticket, and I said, no, we don't. He said, I will buy you all tickets—I ought to leave Bettie out here. I said, don't leave her out here; she will raise a lot of sand if you do. I said, she has got no money, hasn't got a cent, and she owes a hotel bill, and wash bill; Frank Long never give her a cent, and she will have to have money enough to pay it. He got off down in town some place, I don't know where; left me on the car and I rode on to the hotel where Bettie was. She asked me if we seen Minnie and I told her no; and she said Oh God, did you take him out to Captain MacNab's house? And I told her, yes. And I told her Mr. Bartlett said he was going to leave here this evening and if we had got no money, we had better let him take us home with him. She said I have got to get some money for my washing and hotel bill here. Mr. Bartlett told me to be back at Bettie's place at five o'clock, so I went over to my hotel and got my things ready, and sent them down to the depot and went back over there, and stayed with Bettie. Mr. Bartlett didn't come, I don't think—well, it was a little after five when he came. We went up town and bought our tickets —berths for us as far as Denver. We got into Denver, I forget what night it was—went around by way of Spokane.

Q. Now, Sadie, you didn't see Minnie any more then, did you? A. Not then, no, sir.

Q. Referring back to the visit that you had with Minnie on Sunday when you stayed all day there, did you have any conversation with Minnie about Thomas being alive?

A. Being alive?

Q. Yes. A. She told me about Thomas being alive?

Q. Yes, about Thomas being alive.

A. Wasn't none to be alive; no sir. That is what I said to her; I said, Minnie, being they have sold you from me, I haven't made no money and you are going to make a lot of money—I said—if I go to Mary Hamilton's and get a picture of the man, will you help me swear he is your son, and she said, yes; and I said that you always say that you had a son by the name of Tommy Atkins, I said, because if the Government finds out that you didn't, they will prosecute you; and as long as you live, I will shield you because I will keep the secret, and she said, she would.

Q. Now, what time in the day on Sunday was that conversation?

A. That was in the same morning. We didn't get to do any talking; the woman came there about ten o'clock.

Q. Was that before or after the woman came?

A. That was just a while after she did come; when Minnie told me not to come back any more, about the time she finished the conversation, this woman came. Later on, she had to go out in the yard—this woman did—out in the back yard, and that was when I got a chance to say that to Minnie. I didn't get a chance to talk in secret to her.

Q. Well, did you all leave Seattle?

A. We left Seattle, and on the way going on the train, sometimes Bettie would be in the same coach——

> Mr. Stuart: Your Honor, we object to that; not responsive to the question, and narrative, and not called for in the question.

Q. Did you have any conversation with Bettie and Mr. Bartlett on the train with reference to this matter?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. Which one? A. Mr. Bartlett.

Q. What was said about it?

> Mr. Hanford: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and hearsay, and not in the presence of the parties.

Q. Was Bettie present? A. No, sir.

Q. Well, tell what was said.

A. I said to Mr. Bartlett, I said, Mr. Bartlett, I will have to go along back to Leavenworth before I can go to Los Angeles to find this boy. I said, but I will go to Denver and get the picture from Mary Hamilton, and I will go to Leavenworth, and he said, Well, Sadie, I will stop at Pueblo, and go out to Rye; he said, when you get to Leavenworth, I will have you a deed there for the boy—for Tommy—and a hundred dollars for him, if you find him, to pay him, to pay him that much, and a check for money enough to take you and Mary

Hamilton to Los Angeles, so that Mary Hamilton can identify the boy. I had told him a story on Mary Hamilton; told him that she could identify the boy. He said, we won't let Bettie know when we are going to leave. And we got to Denver; stayed there all night, and he said, you go get the picture in the morning, and I will come down and see you. About ten o'clock at night, I think the night we arrived in Denver——

Q. You arrived in Denver about ten o'clock at night?

A. I think about ten o'clock at night, yes sir.

Q. Who got off there? A. Bettie and I, and Mr. Bartlett.

Q. What did you do?

Q. I gave him the number where I was going to stay, and Bettie had known already where I was going to stay at because we had stopped there before when we came through Denver, and Bettie said, I will see you about twelve o'clock; said, I am going to stop at the hotel where Mr. Bartlett is—I want to have a talk with him. And Mr. Bartlett told me he would see me the next morning early. I got up the next morning about half past five and went out to Mary Hamilton's.

Q. Did you find Mary Hamilton at home?

A. Found Mary Hamilton at home, and two of the girls and Mr. Hamilton.

Q. Did you have any conversation with her?

A. She said, did you find Minnie, and I said, yes, I found her. And she said, what did she say about that boy; and I said, well, she told me where he was at, and I said, Mrs. Hamilton, I want you to look in your album and get some pictures out. She got me the album and I picked out two pictures and she said, what are you going to do with these, Mrs. James; and I said, this one looks more like an Indian and I am going to tell the man I am working for——

Mr. Stuart: Objected to because it is hearsay, incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

Mr. Hanford: The same objections.

A. I am going to tell the man that I am working for that this is Tommy and that you know it is him. He said, this is a friend of my son's; he runs on the railroad; and I said, he won't know the difference, I just want to show it to him, I said, so I can get money enough to take you away. I said, do you want to go on a trip? And she said, Mrs. James, my daughter is to be confined in Los Angeles, and wrote me a letter for me to come to her and I haven't got the money to go; and I said, I would take you out there, and she said, do you think you can do it? And I said, yes. I will get the money and take you to Los Angeles; I am going to Leavenworth and it won't take me very long to get things straight there, and I will be back here in about a week, but I will wire you just when I will be here, and you commence getting yourself straight because I know I will be back. I left and went back to the place where I was stopping at and hadn't been there very long before Mr. Bartlett came.

Q. Did you have a conversation with him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was that?

A. He said Sadie, is Mary Hamilton willing to go, and I said, yes; and he said, did you get a picture of the boy, and I said, yes.

Mr. Hanford: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and hearsay.

Mr. Stuart: The same objection.

A. I said, yes, sir. I pulled it out of my pocketbook and showed him the picture. He said, is that Tommy; I said, yes, that is him. I said, Mrs. Hamilton got the picture; I got this right from her and she knows—I was telling a lie to him, —she hadn't said nothing to me about the picture. He said, well, we will leave on the 12:15, don't let Bettie see us. I will give her money enough to go on to Sapulpa and we will catch the train and go to Pueblo, and my son will meet me there with a car, and this evening when the train goes through there, you can go on to Leavenworth. So we did go to the depot. I never saw Bettie at all while she was in Denver that trip. We run off from her—run off from her in Denver.

Q. Well, did you have any further conversation about this matter with Mr. Bartlett before you left town, or he left town?

A. We left town together. We had taken the train about twelve—well, it was near twelve, or one, or two—I don't know what time—but that got in Pueblo about four o'clock in the evening and that throwed me to stay there until about seven to catch the train out.

Q. Where did you go to?

A. I went to a cousin of mine, 1015 Ash; I've got some cousins from Oklahoma out there.

Q. Did you do anything with reference to this matter there?

A. I was there that evening until about seven o'clock and had taken the train and come back to Leavenworth.

Q. Come back to Leavenworth?

A. Came back to Leavenworth, Kansas, yes, sir. I got there, I think, on Thursday night.

Q. What did you do with reference to this matter in Leavenworth?

A. On a Friday morning, I went up to Dennis' office.

Q. Now, referring to that, I want to take you back for a little to the time when you first had this matter up with Dennis and Rube Smith, about the time you were employed by Mr. Bartlett, in the spring of 1914. You related when you were on the stand before about having started this case, as you put it; did you know a man in that town at that time named Louis Brown? A. Yes, I knew Louis Brown.

Q. Did you know another man named Will Harker?

A. Yes, sir, raised with him.

Q. And another one named Henry Price? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you know another named Sam Nash?

A. Yes, sir, Sam Nash is supposed to be my brother but he isn't.

Q. Did you have any conversation with them, or either of them, with reference to——

A. Along in April, about the middle of April, I went out on Vine street where my brother was working—I say brother, but I want you to know he is not my brother.

Q. Who are you referring to?

A. Sam Nash; we passed as brothers and sisters all my life. He was working out there for Mrs. Davis.

Q. When was that?

A. Along in May, after we got the case started.

Q. After you were employed by Mr. Bartlett?

A. After I was employed by Mr. Bartlett, yes, sir. He was washing woodwork in the house, and Mrs. Davis, she was back in the dining room and there were double doors between them. I went in there and I said to him, Sam, do you want to make some money and he said, how; I said, you know there used to be an Indian girl who worked here for the Hyde's, and Dennis and I and Rube Smith have said she had a baby at Granny's. I said, we said it because Granny is dead, and I want you to say, I said—to swear to it. He said, Sadie, he said, now, I remember when Granny had Eva——

Q. Had what?

A. Had Eva, yes, sir. She kept Mary Anthony's baby Edna, and if we say she had a baby in her house, the old settlers——

Q. Who said that, now?

A. Sam; I was talking to my brother.

Q. Now, tell what Sam said.

A. Sam said, if we say——

Mr. Hanford: That is objected to as hearsay, incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

A. That this woman had a baby in Granny's house, the old settlers here in Leavenworth, Kansas, will know better and we will get into trouble; and when he said that, he was speaking rather loud, and I looked and Mrs. Davis had stopped cleaning silver—or what she was doing—and I was afraid she heard us talking, and I said, well, if you don't remember, all right, but I will see you again. The next day I met Louis—Louis Brown—he worked at the Foundry—office of the Foundry near where I lived.

Q. Did you have a conversation with him?

A. I had a conversation with Louis.

Q. About this matter? A. Yes.

Q. What was that conversation?

A. I said, Louis, do you want to make some money, and he said how?

Q. Who said how?

A. Louis said how. And I said, there used to be an Indian girl that worked for Hyde's named Minnie Atkins, and we were saying that she had a baby here at Granny's. I said, you know you have been living here a long time, and I want you to help us say so; and he said, Sade, I don't know that woman; I don't remember any Indian woman ever came here, and he said, I have been working at this Foundry too long to lose my job or get in any trouble over it.

Q. Who was that you were talking to?

A. I was talking to Louis Brown. That afternoon, I met Will Parker.

Q. Did you have a conversation with Will Parker.

A. I had a conversation with Will Parker.

Q. Tell what that was.

Mr. Hanford: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and hearsay; not in the presence of any of the parties.

Mr. Stuart: The same thing.

Q. I said, Will do you want to make some money, and he said, yes. I said, well, we have started about to say that there was a baby born at Granny's by an Indian woman. I said Granny is dead and the woman is dead. He said what is her name, and I said her name was Indian Minnie Atkins, and she worked at banker Hyde's; and I said, we are saying the baby was born in 1885. This was way before I found Minnie.

Q. I understand.

A. And he said, Sadie, at that time, I was working at the Planters Hotel and I don't remember any Indian woman ever being here. I said, yes, there was; he said, no, I don't want to have anything to do with it, and he just laughed it off. He never said anything more about it and I never tackled him any more about that. That night I went over to Henry Price's——

Q. Did you have a talk with him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Tell what was said.

A. I said, Mr. Price, do you know your boy Arty, and he said, yes; and I said, I want to use Arty, and say that he belongs to a woman by the name of Minnie Atkins, because you and your wife separated when he was small and he was adopted to Ida Foster. I said, now Ida is dead, and of course that will keep her out of it; and he said, no, I can't do that because my wife is living in Kansas City, and her name is Minnie Atkins and it is right here on the Courthouse records when Arty was adopted to Ida—I can't do that; every body knows that I am his father and I can't do it. I left then, and went down to Mary Smith's, a white woman. Dennis had told me before that that he had got Mary Smith.

Q. Alright; did you have a conversation with her?

A. I had a conversation with Mary Smith.

Q. Where was that?

A. That was in her house, in the front room.

Q. Do you know the number?

A. Why, it must be—yes, sir—I don't believe I know the number; it is on 7th street, between Delaware and Shawnee, on the left side of the street, in a little brick, on the corner of the alley.

Q. Did you have a conversation about this matter?

A. I did.

Q. What was said?

A. I said to her—I said, you know, Mary, you know that little boy Ida used to have, and she said, yes; and I said, we have started the case, and Dennis said that you were going to swear that you washed him and dressed him when he was two days old. I said, we are going to use Arty, I said, as him, and you can swear to that, and she said, no. I said, Ida is dead and you know that will keep her out of it and nobody will know. And she said, no, you know Ida was my sister but she was negro. Her sister was a negro girl. This was a white woman that I was talking to.

Q. A white woman who had a negro sister?

A. Yes, sir, a mulatto. I was raised with her in Leavenworth. She said, my sister was a negro and that is all done away with, and my children, now, are all grown; if I get into it and say Ida had him, that will bring up a disgrace to my children on account of his aunt being a negro.

Mr. Hanford: I move to strike all this as hearsay conversation, not in the presence of any of the parties.

A. So I left her place. I couldn't find nobody else there in town. Yes, sir, I tried a good many but they wouldn't do it.

Q. Do you remember, now, some of them whom you tried?

A. Yes, sir, I tried Eliza Scott. I didn't tell her this was a story. I asked her if she knew of anybody in the orphan home by the name of Tommy. She said, yes, I know Tommy Pad—they are colored people but they are Catholics. She said, I don't know who Tommy's people is but I will tell you what you can do. She said, you go up to Father Shorty's, the Catholic priest there—a white man—see him and he could tell you all about Tommy. I had taken a street car and went up to Father Shorty's.

> Mr. Stuart: All this is objected to and covered by our objection at the previous hearing that it is narrative, and hearsay.

Q. Who is this that you were just talking to?

A. I am talking to Eliza Scott—Eliza Lavally—that is her name now.

Q. What was it she told you about Father Scott?

A. About Father Shorty.

Q. Father Shorty?

A. I could go there and he would tell me all about Tommy because he was raised in this Orphan Home. I could go up there——

Q. Did you find Father Shorty?

A. Yes, sir, at his office—his place up there.

Q. Did you have any talk with him?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. With reference to a Tommy?

A. Yes, sir. He said, I know who Tommy's parents were. I couldn't get him to tell me who his parents were. He said his name wasn't Tommy Atkins at all; I was going to fool Father Shorty——

> Mr. Stuart: Your Honor, we object to the question because it is not responsive, is narrative on the part of the witness, and facts not inquired into by the Government.
>
> Mr. Hanford: The same objection.

Q. What was the name of that Tommy?

A. Tommy Pad. He told me of two other boys named Tommy.

> Mr. German: As I understand it, if any of the counsel have any objections upon the ground that the statement of the witness is not responsive to a question, you will so indicate it?
>
> Mr. Stuart: I am objecting to all of it, Mr. German, because two-thirds of it is not responsive. The witness, when you ask a question, will answer the question and then proceed in narrative form to discuss other matters not asked about by the Government.

Mr. German: As I understand you, you were going to make the specific objection if you objected upon the ground that the answer was not responsive.

Mr. Stuart: Well, from now on, we will do that. We will let this go, but without attempting to be patronizing at all, I do suggest that you let her answer questions that you ask. I know it is your intention to do it.

Mr. German: As far as possible, I will, Judge.

Mr. Stuart: Just make her answer the questions.

Q. Did you have any further conversation with the Father? A. Father Shorty?
Q. Father Shorty. A. Yes, sir.
Q. State what it was.
A. I said, well Father——

Mr. Hanford: Objected to as hearsay.

A. Have you got any other boys here on your records here, I said, of about 1885, whose name was Tommy? He said, yes, I got a Tommy Martin; I kept him until he was about eight or nine years old. I forget what the other name was. I said where are they at; he said, their parents, I think, lives in Montana—and the other parents, I don't remember that. I said are you sure that is his parents; he said, yes, but I am not supposed to tell you who they are. When we take children in here, we are not supposed to tell who their parents are but none of them were named Tommy Atkins and no Indian woman ever brought either one of them here.
Q. Who told you that?
A. He told me that, so I left. I knew nobody brought one there but I was trying to get someone named Tommy.
Q. Where was that conversation that you had with Father Shorty?
A. That was on—I think it was on Pottawatomie, I believe between 6th and 7th, on Pottawatomie; at the place where he stayed at the Catholic church—white Catholic church.
Q. You were relating now, an occurrence in April, 1914?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you report the various conversations that you had with these persons to Dennis Jones? A. I did.
Q. At that time?
A. At that time. I went back and told Dennis who all I had been to.
Q. Did you tell them what was said?
A. I told Dennis; I didn't tell Rube—I didn't see him—I told Dennis.

Q. You told them what these parties told you and the conversations that you had?

A. Yes, sir, and when I got to Mary Smith's part——

Q. Alright; what was said?

Mr. Hanford: Objected to as hearsay.

A. When I got to Mary Smith's name, telling the conversation was between Mary Smith and I was about Arty, he said, well, that is right; those children are grown, and I don't blame her for that; and he said, she is going to do what I told her, anyhow. So, I didn't bother Mary Smith any more at that time—not at that time.

Q. Did you have a talk with Rube Smith with reference to these persons?

A. No, sir, I didn't say nothing to Rube.

Q. Now, going again to the time when you reached Leavenworth from Pueblo in June, 1914, after you had been to Seattle, and after you had passed through Denver, and had come from Pueblo to Leavenworth, you say you saw Dennis Jones?

A. I got there on a Thursday night, I think it was June 25th I got back to Leavenworth.

Q. Did you have a conversation with Dennis that night?

A. No, sir, not that night; it was too late. I saw him Friday morning.

Q. Did you have a conversation with him about this matter? A. I went to his office.

Q. Tell what the conversation was.

Mr. Hanford: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and hearsay, and as not in the presence of any of the parties to the suit.

A. He said when did you get back, and I said, last night. He said, did you find the woman; and I said, yes; said, you know the woman I had up here—Bettie Mann—Sarah Mann? He said, yes; I said, well she double-crossed me and sold the woman to the Secretary of the Gem Oil Company, and they are going to make a white case out of this thing, and they ain't going to have no negroes in it.

Q. Who was the Secretary to the Gem Oil Company?

A. That was Frank Long.

Q. Alright. Mr. Page's man?

A. Mr. Page's man, yes, sir. I told Dennis about him. I said, I came by Denver to get this picture. I showed him this picture. By that time, as I was showing him the picture, Rube came in. I said, I got a picture Dennis; if I can find somebody who looks as near like this as we can, he will answer. Rube was in there then, and Rube said, I will tell you what we can do——

Q. Tell the conversation, now, between you and Dennis and Rube; what each of you said.

A. Rube Smith said—Rube said, Sadie——

Mr. Hanford: Objected to as hearsay.

A. Said, Sadie, I know what we can do. You know my son Lucien; he hasn't been around here for years and he is in New York, and Lucien has got a lot of sense and we can work Lucien. And Dennis said, No, Rube, everybody here knows Tiny is Lucien's mother and we won't work him?

Q. Won't what?

A. Try to work him. But the best thing for us to do, is to try to hunt somebody and bring them back here, and let them get acquainted in town, and do as Sadie said—switch them on to the Gypsy; and he said, that white man that sold her, he can't do no good here because we have already got it started. Mr. Long had never been to Leavenworth, yet, then. I said, now, I am going to stay here. I showed him the deed, and I took it out of my pocket and showed him. I said, I am going to stay here until the deed comes—that was on Friday morning—and as soon as the deed comes, I am going out West, and try to run down somebody that is strong enough to sign this deed and Dennis said, well, supposing I find somebody; and I said, well, if you do, you wire me, because I will let you know where I am; if you find somebody stronger than the one I have got, I will let him sign it. Well, I left there, and Saturday morning the deed came; letter and deed from Mr. Bartlett in Pueblo.

Q. Left where?

A. I left Dennis' office and went to where I was staying.

Q. At that time you were residing in Leavenworth, or just there temporarily?

A. Just temporarily, on the deal that Dennis and I had pulled off—other purposes.

Q. What purposes?

A. The deal Dennis and I pulled off before Bettie came—that referred to another case, not this—before Bettie came.

Q. You received a letter from Mr. Bartlett?

A. On Saturday morning the letter from Mr. Bartlett—Saturday morning—and a deed.

Q. What was in that letter?

A. The letter and the deed both came from Rye, Colorado, out to his place, and the letter said, Sadie, you will find a hundred dollar check for Tommy, a two hundred dollar check for yourself—that will be money enough to take you and Mrs. Hamilton out to Los Angeles.

Q. Now, just a minute, Sadie. The check for Thomas Atkins that was in the envelope, was for how much money?

A. It was for a hundred dollars.

Q. You say there was a deed in there?

A. There was a deed in there.

Q. How much was the check?

A. A hundred check for Tommy.

Q. And then, there was a check for you?

A. A check for me for two hundred dollars.

And thereupon an adjournment of the taking of testimony herein is had until 1:30 o'clock P. M.

And thereafter and at 1:30 o'clock, further testimony herein is taken as follows:

SADIE JAMES, being recalled to the witness stand, further testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. German.

Q. Sadie, the check that you referred to which came in the letter from Mr. Bartlett, and the deed that you referred to, were introduced in evidence in the trial in February, or March, 1915, at Muskogee, when you testified, were they not?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Stuart: Object to that because it is leading.

Q. Did you testify in that case at Muskogee—in this case at Muskogee, in February—in February or March, 1915, before Judge Campbell, before the court there? A. Yes, sir.

Q. In that testimony, did you or not refer to this letter which you had received from Mr. Bartlett? A. I did.

Q. Did you have with you on that occasion, the envelope and check payable to Thomas Atkins, and the deed for Thomas Atkins to execute? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was done with the envelope and the check on the occasion when you testified?

A. Judge Allen got me to give it to him, there in the courtroom, and I guess they have it.

Q. Was it or not, introduced in evidence? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Stuart: Let us assume that it is introduced, and save time.

Mr. German: We offer the documents referred to as Government's Exhibits 39, 40 and 41.

Mr. Hanford: I object on the ground that they are incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and relate to transactions between the witness and Mr. Bartlett, and in no way are pertinent to the issues in this controversy.

Mr. Stuart: The same objection for the other defendants.

Mr. Gorman: You don't question the identification of them?

Mr. Stuart: No, I think they are alright.

Mr. Hanford: No.

Q. Did you have any conversation with Dennis Jones and Rube Smith after the receipt of the check and the deed referred to? A. Yes, sir; not to Rube, but to Dennis.

Q. Dennis? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where was that conversation?

A. I got the check on Friday—the letter came on Saturday; the postman brought it about 9:30 Saturday morning, and Dennis was in the office.

Q. Did you have conversation with Dennis here?

A. About the check, but the day before that, I had a conversation about the check coming with the deed.

Q. What was that conversation?

A. In that conversation, I told him that I was expecting the deed and check with some money, to take Mary Hamilton on back West; I had told this man, I had to go out there and identify this picture, and as we got through talking, Rube stepped in.

Q. You have already related that conversation.

A. Yes, sir, but this is Saturday morning after the deed came in.

Q. Tell us the conversation Saturday morning after the deed came in.

Mr. Hanford: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and hearsay, and not in the presence of any of the parties.

A. I had taken the check and the deed up to Dennis'—that was about half past nine, I guess Saturday morning—and showed it to him; showed him the check and the two hundred dollars for myself.

Q. For yourself?

A. For yourself—that was expenses to take Mary Hamilton on to Los Angeles, and the hundred dollar check for Tommy and the deed.

Q. What conversation did you have with him?

A. That is all. He was to go and get a man while I was gone; I was going back West, you know, to hunt a man to see if he was stout enough to stand up for a deed, and Dennis was to hunt a man——

> Mr. Hanford: Objected to as not responsive to any question, incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and stating a conclusion of the witness, and I move to strike for the same reason.

Q. Was anything said on that Saturday morning with reference to what Dennis was to do in the matter of finding a boy?

> Mr. Hanford: The same objection.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was it?

A. I told Dennis, now, I am going back out West to try to find somebody stout enough to stand up with the deed. What we wanted was a Kansas man—Dennis said he didn't care who it was, except a Kansas man.

> Mr. Stuart: Objected to because it is narrative, and not called for by questions of the Government, to the witness; and I ask, that the witness be asked to answer the questions and not go off on excursions.
>
> Mr. Hanford: The same objection.
>
> Mr. Stuart: We ask the Examiner, now, to instruct the witness, if not peremptorily, in an advisory capacity, simply to answer the questions propounded by the Government, and not to narrate matters not germain to the questions asked, or we will never get through in the world, unless some limitation is put upon the witness. It will be a month.
>
> Mr. Hanford: I want to make the same request for reason that it is impossible to anticipate what the witness' narrations or answers are going to be, or are going to relate to, and it is therefore impossible to make the record by interposing timely objections, and it necessitates the resorting to motions to strike after the statements have been made.
>
> The Examiner: I don't consider that I have the authority to direct the method of the examination of this witness, but I suggest to counsel that it may be in the interests of time if the winess is directed to answer the questions without proceeding on a long narrative.

Q. Sadie, just as far as possible, you answer only the questions that I ask you. A. Yes, sir.

Q. And don't add anything else.

The Examiner: Since counsel for the Government has directed you, I will add that you will be required to answer the questions, and then stop until another question is asked you.

Q. Tell all of the conversation that you and Dennis had on the occasion that you have just referred to with reference to this finding a Thomas Atkins—a boy, with reference to his finding a boy.

Mr. Hanford: I reiterate my objections to the same questions.

Mr. German: Judge, we will never get through in the world, if we proceed as you suggested.

Mr. Stuart: Alright; take the bridle off and let her go.

Q. Go ahead and answer that question.

A. I had taken the deed up there and I spoke about this; Dennis was to get a man——

Q. Tell, now, what he said.

A. He said, well, I will go and try to find a man and see if he will be stout enough, and I will bring him back here to Leavenworth, and we will take him around here in town, and get him identified, and he can sign the deed, and we will switch him over on the Gypsy. I had told him before that the Gypsy had more money than Mr. Bartlett, because I didn't think Mr. Bartlett had any money—not as much as the Gypsy—and that is the reason we were going to double-cross him on it.

Mr. Hanford: I move to strike the reason as hearsay, incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

Q. What did Dennis say with reference to the Gypsy Company? A. At that time?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, not so much at that time; we had been talking about the Gypsy all the time since we had started the case. He didn't know the Gypsy; he hadn't seen nobody, then.

Q. Is that all of the conversation that morning?

A. That Saturday morning, yes, sir.

Q. Who did you next see with reference to this?

A. No one.

Q. Before you left Leavenworth?

A. No one that night.

Q. When you left Leavenworth——

A. Saturday night.

Q. Where did you go? A. I went to Lawrence, Kansas.

Q. Did you see any one there on this subject?

A. I met my husband at Lawrence, Kansas; I was going to take him with me to talk on this proposition—he didn't know anything about it.

Q. Did you meet Dennis, or Rube, or Mr. Bartlett, or Bettie there?

A. No, sir, I wired from Lawrence, Kansas, on a Saturday——

> Mr. Stuart: Objected to because it is not responsive to the question, and still in narrative form.

Q. Did you send any telegrams from Lawrence?

A. I did.

Q. To whom? A. To Mary Hamilton, in Denver.

Q. When?

A. That Saturday night, after I got to Lawrence, telling her——

Q. What did you tell her in that message?

A. I told her to be ready; I would be there by Monday anyway, and we would leave.

Q. When did you leave Lawrence?

A. I left Lawrence at 1 o'clock, or two, that same night—went away from Lawrence that same night.

Q. When did you reach Denver?

A. I got to Denver about 11:30, or 12:00 the next day.

Q. Who did you see there of these various people you mentioned?

A. Well, after I got my room, I went out to Mrs. Hamilton's on Sunday.

Q. Did you have a talk with her? A. I did.

Q. What was the conversation.

A. I told her I had taken the picture back and showed it to [] white men. I had cashed the check in Leavenworth, and I said here is this money I have got; I have enough now, to take you to Los Angeles, and she said, Lord, Mrs. James, I can't get ready by to-morrow, I don't think—it will take me a day or two.

Q. Did she finally get ready? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You left there with her?

A. Yes, sir, and carried her to Los Angeles.

Q. Before you left and while you were in Denver, did you see any of these people—Bettie Mann, or Mr. Bartlett, or any of them? A. No, sir; Bettie was down home.

Q. You and your husband and Mrs. Hamilton——

A. Mrs. Hamilton.

Q. Went to Los Angeles? A. Los Angeles, yes, sir.

Q. On the train going out there, did you and Mrs. Hamilton ride in the same coach, Minnie?

A. We did, and ate together.

Q. What relationship did you bear to her ostensibly on that trip?

> Mr. Hanford: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

A. I asked her on the way going out, I said, now Mrs. Hamilton——

> Mr. Stuart: We object to that because it is not responsive to the question, and the question can be answered without any explanation. Were you a valet, maid, or associate, or what—she can answer that.

Q. Were you either one of them?

A. That he is speaking of?

Q. Yes. A. I was the boss of the trip, yes, sir.

Q. Boss of the trip?

A. Yes, sir, I was the boss of the trip.

Q. Mrs. Hamilton is a white woman, isn't she?

A. Mrs. Hamilton is a white woman, yes, sir. She had known Minnie at Carlisle; she ran a laundry there while Minnie was at school.

Q. On the train going out there, did you have any conversation with reference to the boy that you were to find?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Tell what it was.

> Mr. Hanford: I object as to that as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial; calling for hearsay testimony, and conversations not in the presence of any of the parties to the suit.
>
> Mr. Stuart: The same objections for the other defendants.

A. I said, Mrs. Hamilton, now if I find Minnie, or find the boy, will you help me identify him as Minnie's son; and she said, no. I said well you won't have to, because she said, Mrs. James, I know who that picture belongs to and I can't see where Minnie had a son in Leavenworth——

> Mr. Hanford: Objected to as not responsive to the question, and move to strike.

A. Because as well as I knew Minnie, if she had had one there to live to be two or three years old even, I would have known him because there wasn't any two or three weeks in the month that I didn't see her. And I said, well, I told you when I got to Denver, the first trip, that it was a boy she had by a negro and she was keeping it a secret. She said, it might be that but, she said, if you find Minnie, as I know her so well, you send for me, and I will beg her to tell who this son is. That was on the way going.

Q. To Los Angeles?

A. To Los Angeles. I was telling Mrs. Hamilton a lie. I knew she didn't have a negro son.

Q. What, if anything, did Mrs. Hamilton say to you that she would do with reference to the boy and picture?

A. That she knew who the picture was and she wouldn't have anything to do with a boy; she knew Minnie didn't have no son that she knew of.

Q. Did you say anything to her about finding a boy that looks like that picture?

A. No, I asked her if I found a boy that looks like that picture would she swear that it looked like Minnie's son, she said no she couldn't.

Q. Did she say anything about whether she would say the boy looked like the picture, the boy that you might produce looked like the picture? A. No, she didn't.

Q. You arrived in Los Angeles? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you do then in reference to the boy?

A. After I got into Los Angeles, I taken Mrs. Hamilton in a taxi cab and carried her to her daughter's.

Q. What is her daughter's name?

A. Pearl, or something, 406—400 East Forty-sixth Street. I never saw her any more until last winter.

Q. You have never seen her any more?

A. Until last winter.

Q. About how long after you left her there until you saw her again? A. I saw her in December, 1915.

Q. This last December? A. Not this last December.

Q. You mean December, 1914?

A. December, 1914, yes, sir.

Q. You didn't see her from the time that you left her there until December, 1914?

A. No, sir, that was in July I carried her there, and I didn't see her until December.

Q. Where did you go to from Los Angeles?

A. I staid there about three days and I wired Mr. Bartlett a big lie—he has got the telegram.

Q. What?

By Mr. Stuart: Let her tell about the big lie.

A. I wired him a lie and told him to send me two hundred ($200) dollars, that I had hired some detectives in the case and I had found that Minnie had lived there in Los Angeles and had left there about five years ago and had gone to

San Francisco, and while I was waiting for the telegram then for the answer to it, I was running around Los Angeles trying to get me a man that I could work. I found five or six but they weren't strong enough for me to work.

Q. Did you get an answer to the message?

A. Yes, sir, I got a telegram, I told him in the telegram I sent him to waive identification, as I was a stranger there and I could get no one to identify me, and he did so. I went to the First National Bank with the telegram and letter that Mr. Bartlett sent me to Leavenworh, Kansas, and I had to give that telegram and that letter to that banker, and he has got them now.

Q. Did you get the money? A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Stuart: We object to the narrative part. She has lots of sense and should answer the questions and not relate into the record things not germane to the case.

Q. How much money did you get?

A. I got two hundred ($200.00) dollars.

Q. What did you do then?

A. I left the same evening I got this two hundred dollars and went to San Francisco.

Q. Did you see any of those people there?

A. Yes, sir, I run down two or three but they couldn't stand up.

Q. You couldn't get them to stand up?

A. No, sir, wasn't strong enough for me to get them to sign that deed.

Q. Did you communicate to Mr. Bartlett or any of them?

A. I wired to Mr. Bartlett, staid at San Francisco I think three days and wired a lie to him and told him in the telegram——

Q. What did you tell him?

A. I wired him and told him I was going to leave there that night, I found out Tommy was gone from there three years and was in Portland; I said I am leaving tonight, that is in the telegram, I did catch the train.

Q. Where did you go?

A. Went to Portland, Oregon, went to Seattle first, through Portland to Seattle.

Q. Did you see anybody in connection with this matter?

A. I saw my sister-in-law.

Q. You didn't see Minnie?

A. I didn't go out to where she was

Q. On that occasion?

A. No, sir, I was going to Portland to meet Minnie as she told me to meet her there in July. I went because my sister-in-law was there and I went to see her.

By Mr. Stuart: Objected to because it is narrative.

By Mr. Hanford: The same objection on the ground that it is incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

Q. July had come by that time?

A. That was in July then, yes, sir, July.

Q. How long did you stay in Seattle?

A. I got in there in the morning, Sunday morning on the first train and staid until Monday morning, July the——

Q. Did you do any work on this case while you were there on that occasion? A. In Seattle, no, sir.

Q. Where did you go to from there?

A. Came right back to Portland, Oregon.

Q. Who did you see when you got to Portland?

A. I run down two or three men there and they wouldn't do, and I wired Tuesday after I got back to Seattle——

Q. Who did you wire?

A. Mr. Bartlett, wired him another lie.

Q. What lie was that?

A. I said send me a hundred and fifty ($150.00) dollars, I have heard—find that Tommy has left here and has gone—I forget the name of the town I told him.

Q. You don't remember now the name of the place?

A. No, sir, but I can tell you in a second, the telegrams he has got them all—Butte, Montana; the races were going on, that was on Tuesday morning.

Q. Did he answer that message?

A. I got the telegram from his brother, his brother-in-law.

Q. Was it in reference to Mr. Bartlett? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did it say?

A. The telegram came that evening, I sent one in the morning, it came about three o'clock or four and said you will find Hugh Bartlett at the Oregon Hotel in Portland, he was there I didn't know it.

Q. Did you find Mr. Bartlett?

A. I called him up and I was scared and had him come to the hotel where I was; he had Mr. Crawley with him, the Gypsy man, and Mrs. Robertson—didn't bring Mrs. Robertson.

Q. Did you have a conversation with him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did he say?

A. I told Mr. Bartlett that I hired detectives and he said, Sadie, have you heard any trail of him for sure, and I said he is gone to Montana, and he said I will be back after a while and he goes up town and brings two detectives down there—

Burns men, one named Mr. Wright and I think the other named Mr. Edwards.

> By Mr. Stuart: This is covered I suppose, Mr. German, by our objections, no party to the record was present and there is no connection shown, and it is purely a narrative form; I think that is objected to.
>
> By Mr. German: I think so.

A. About six o'clock that evening, he brought the two detectives down.

Q. Who did?

A. Mr. Bartlett came with two detectives and they taken me in a room and talked to me and these detectives wanted to know all I found out, and I told them the same lies I told Mr. Bartlett, and they said have you got a picture of the boy aint you Sadie? and I said yes, and they said let us see it, and I handed it to Mr. Edwards and as soon as he taken it he said Sadie you can't do very much hunting this boy let me have it, and I said no I don't want you to have the picture because I got it from a friend of mine and I told her as soon as I found out where the boy is I will return it to her, and Mr. Bartlett spoke up and said Sadie give them the picture and I gave that to them and they trailed him down—the railroad conductor, Mrs. Hamilton's friend.

Q. Found out who he was?

A. Yes, sir, she told me who it was in the first place.

Q. Who did she tell you it was?

A. A railroad conductor, a friend of her son, and I got the picture.

Q. Do you remember his name? A. No, I don't.

Q. He was a boy who had lived in Denver, I believe?

A. He had lived in Denver and she had got a picture.

Q. Well, you separated there? A. Well, that night?

Q. Yes? A. I staid in Portland a week.

Q. Where did Mr. Bartlett go, did he stay there too?

A. Mr. Bartlett staid in Portland, and Mr. Crawley very near a week. He said to me the next morning—he came down and he said Sadie have you been out to Minnie's friend's yet? and I said no I am going out in the morning.

Q. What was the name of that——

A. Clara Kirk. I never had been there yet; this was about the middle of July.

Q. Clara Kirk was a white woman?

A. Yes, sir, the place where Minnie told me to meet her at. I said, no, sir, I haven't been out there yet but I will go in the morning, and he sais maybe I had better go with you and I said maybe you had better let me go first, and I can talk to her and you can come over and I will take you, so he left that evening and as soon as he left I caught a street car and went myself out to Clara Kirk's; I had never met her, I asked her if Minnie had come and she said no.

Q. You had a conversation with her about Minnie?

A. Yes, I——

Q. What was that?

A. I told her who I was and I says, Minnie told me to meet her here in July, Harry was going on a twelve days' hike, and she said Minnie was to come, I hadn't had a letter from her for about two weeks and I explained to her then about this money Minnie was going to get, and I said Minnie was going to get about fifty thousand ($50,000.00) dollars, and she said what for, and I said Minnie has had some children, and she said she has, and I said yes, and she said I have known Minnie for twelve years——

By Mr. Hanford: That is objected to as hearsay and a conversation not in the presence of the parties.

Q. I will ask you this Sadie: Did you and Clara go to Seattle? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long after this conversation you are speaking of?

A. The next day.

Q. The next day? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did Mr. Bartlett come to see her?

A. Not that trip, we went the next night.

Q. Did anyone else go with you and Clara to Seattle?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who?

A. Just a little girl four years old—an adopted girl she is.

Q. Clara is a white woman?

A. White woman—where Minnie used to be at.

Q. When you got to Seattle what happened?

A. I said Clara I tell you what you do, you go out there and see if you can get Minnie to come in town and see me, because Hanford has had me run away from there, I told Clara, and I said if you can get her you come right on back to town and let me know.

Q. Then what occurred?

A. She taken a street car and I told her how to get out to Fort Lawton, and she went out there.

Q. Did you go?

A. I didn't go then, but she called me over the 'phone where I was going to stop up on Jackson and she said Sadie everything is all right you come on out.

Q. Did you go?

A. Yes, sir, and I taken a street car and when I got there Clara and Harry was in the house but not Minnie; I said where is Minnie?

Q. Who is Harry? A. Minnie's husband, Harry Folk.

Q. Then what was said?

A. I said, where is Minnie? and Clara said she has gone up in the Fort to get some preserves and things for Mrs. McCombs, Harry walked in the other room and I said what did she say about me, and she said——

Q. You needn't tell that conversation, it would be inadmissible. Did you see Minnie? A. No, sir.

Q. You left there?

A. I taken Clara Kirk and brought her back to town, got her suitcase where she left it, and I said: Now, Clara, when you go back out to Minnie's, I said Hanford is likely to be there——

Q. Tell that?

A. I said Hanford is likely to be there and just as soon as he knows you are in town and you came with me he won't let you stay there, I said you get back out there and if they say anything that you don't like you come back to the depot, I am going to leave as soon as I find I couldn't see Minnie. When we got back to the car station, Harry was standing on that side of the station and seen Minnie on the street car and he beckoned for her to come back, and she had a little basket on her arm and she jumped off that car and flew back into the Fort.

Q. When was that?

A. That was after we went out there, they barred her from seeing me.

Q. Who did that?

A. Harry Folk, her husband, and she broke and ran back up to the Fort.

Q. You didn't get to talk with her at all on that occasion? A. I haven't never talked to her any more.

Q. Did you see any more of Minnie on that occasion, on the occasion of that trip to Seattle? A. No, sir.

Q. Well, how long were you there at all?

A. I went in there that morning and left there that night.

Q. Did Clara Kirk go back that night too?

A. Yes, sir, oh I guess it must have been about seven o'clock in the evening, I went down to the station where I had told her where I was going to leave that night.

By Mr. Stuart: Objected to because it is narrative, consumption of time, and merely a waste of money.

By Mr. German: You needn't relate that.

Q. Did you see Clara at the train that evening? A. I did.

Q. Did you see Mr. Hanford there?

A. I didn't see him, no, sir.

Q. You didn't see him?

A. I walked in the depot and she was crying and the little girl was crying, sitting in the depot when I got down there.

Q. How long was that before the train left?

A. Oh, I guess it must have been a half an hour or a little more before the train left, the train left at nine; she was crying, her and the little girl both standing by her crying. I said Clara——

Q. Well, you needn't tell the conversation. Did you leave for Portland? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when you got to Portland who did you see, Mr. Bartlett? A. I saw Mr. Bartlett and Mr. Crawley.

Q. Now, you say that was in July?

A. That was still in July, that must have been——

Q. 1914?

A. That must have been then about, let me see, I got there on the 13th and I staid there about a week, that must have been about the 15th I suppose right around there I guess, about the 14th or 15th, along there.

Q. Now, when you were in Seattle, you saw Minnie, you say Mr. Folk, as Minnie was approaching the house, went to her and made motions to her with his hand?

> By Mr. Hanford: I object as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and leading.

Q. What was it that you said about that, I will not require——

A. I said Minnie was on the street car, it was in the summer time, and Minnie was looking up that way and she seen Harry, he was beckoning for her to get off, and she jumped off that car and ran back in the Fort.

Q. Which way was that car going?

A. Toward the house, the one that I was going to take, the car was about a block and a half away from me then.

Q. She got off before it reached the place to get off to go to her house, did she? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which way did she go then?

A. Run straight back up into the Fort, Clara and I were standing in the station house waiting for the car.

Q. Where did you go to from Portland then, after you got back to Portland?

A. Well, I staid in Portland two or three days waiting for Mr. Bartlett and Mr. Crawley.

> By Mr. Stuart: Objected to as not responsive to the question.

Q. You say you staid in Portland two or three days?

A. I staid two or three days after that in Portland, got there on Monday and staid until the next Monday, almost a week.

Q. Did you talk with anybody there besides Mr. Bartlett?

A. And Mr. Crawley.

Q. And Mr. Crawley? A. No one outside.

Q. With reference to this case?

A. No one outside of them, I went to hunt me a man, I found two or three names—not named Tommy Atkins, but they wouldn't stand up anyhow.

Q. You didn't find any? A. Wasn't any to find, no, sir.

Q. Where did you go to from Portland?

A. Well, they had about eight detectives on us by that time.

Q. Who did?

A. I don't know what side. Mr. Crawley had to have some put in jail while we were there for trailing him; I had a meeting in the park and they had so many detectives on us; had to take two of them to take me back to my hotel, me and my husband, and had to take us sixteen miles from the station.

Q. Did any of these detectives say anything to you?

A. Not one of them, but one man, I don't know who he is, came to the hotel during the time—while Mr. Crawley had gone to Seattle to see me before I left Portland—he offered me two thousand ($2,000.00) dollars to swear I hadn't seen the baby since it was two years old.

Q. Who was that?

A. I don't know who it was, he had papers for me to sign, he introduced himself to me and said, Sadie all you got to do is swear you never seen the baby since it was two years old and you will get two thousand ($2,000.00) dollars and keep out of it.

Q. Who did he say he represented?

A. He didn't say, never did say.

Q. Say he had some papers for you to sign?

A. Yes, sir, had them all typewritten and everything, and all I had to do was to sign my name, and I said: No, aint nobody on earth going to get me to swear Minnie Atkins ever had a son named Tommy Atkins when I know she didn't, but I said I am going to make some money out of the case anyhow.

Q. Where did you go from Portland?

A. Medford, Oregon, and staid there a couple of days.

Q. Who went with you there?

A. Mr. Bartlett. They had sent to Spokane, Washington, after some big detective*s* there, name is Dunlap, supposed to be an awful shrewd man.

Q. You finally found your way home?

A. Yes, sir, came on back home.

Q. Where was that then?

A. Leavenworth, I was stopping.

Q. On your way to Leavenworth did you talk with anybody about this case except Mr. Bartlett? A. No, sir.

Q. When you got to Leavenworth, did you see Dennis Jones or Rube Smith?

A. I saw Rube, I didn't see Dennis. I think I got to Leavenworth on August 1st, I think.

Q. What did you do when you saw Rube?

A. I saw Rube but I didn't see Dennis.

Q. Did you have any conversation with him about this case?

A. No, sir. Only he was standing on the corner and I told him——

Q. Tell what that conversation was.

By Mr. Hanford: Objected to as irrelevant, incompetent, and immaterial, hearsay and calling for hearsay.

By Mr. Stuart: The same objection.

A. I said, Rube have you all found anybody? and he said, have you found anybody—and he said, Dennis has gone on a lying trip down to Vera Cruz, New Mexico, and wouldn't let me know anything about it; and he said, Sade I don't think you are all doing me well at all, I aint made no money out of this trip, and he said, Have you found anybody, and I said no. That is all the conversation I had with him, that was the same day that I got in there.

Q. How long did you stay there on that occasion?

A. No, I didn't stay there, I got in there in the morning and left that night.

Q. Where did you go to? A. Left that night for Tulsa.

Q. Did you see anybody else that day with reference to this case? A. Nobody, no, sir.

Q. You got into Tulsa? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was about what time?

A. Well, I say about August 2nd, I suppose, August the third or fourth, along in there some place.

Q. Who did you see in reference to Tommy and Minnie and your work in this case at Tulsa?

A. Bettie was the first one I met, Bettie Mann.

Q. Did you have any conversation with her about the case?

A. About the case but not about Tommy.

Q. Who was it about? A. About Mr. Page.

Q. Tell the conversation you had with her.

By Mr. Hanford: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and hearsay and not in the presence of Mr. Page or any other party to this suit.

By Mr. Stuart: The same objection for all of the defendants.

A. She said when I got back here, I said I went up to Page's to get my money and he said, he told me he didn't make any contract with me, and Rogers said Long had made the contract with us, said Long had made it and she said I told him if he didn't pay me I would blow that case up, and she said, you bet I made him come across; said I got a house out here in Sand Springs and they owe me some more money, said they gave me four hundred ($400.00) dollars for paying Maudie's tuition fees—Maudie is Bettie's daughter. I said, well Bettie I have got back here and I am going to see Mr. Bartlett because—and I am going to see that Mr. Bartlett gives me my money, he hasn't paid me all of it and I didn't double cross him and I think he has got a right to pay me, I went up to the Gypsy then.

Q. You left Bettie?

A. I left Bettie and went up to the Gypsy.

Q. Where was that conversation? A. In Tulsa.

Q. At what place?

A. In my house, down at my house there, I guess it was—went down to the Junction about a block and a half from my house near the Junk Yard; I was going up to Mr. Page's office, a Jew ran it, the Junk Yard place.

Q. It was near that? A. Near that, yes, sir.

Q. You then went up to the office of the Gypsy Oil Company? A. Yes, sir, the Gypsy Oil Company.

Q. Who did you see up there? A. I saw Mr. Crowley.

Q. You had a conversation with Mr. Crowley?

A. With Mr. Crowley, yes, sir.

Q. Did it purport to be a message from any one?

By Mr. Hosford: Objected to as leading.

By Mr. Gorman: I don't want to have her tell it if not on the subject of this case, and I don't know— This story is too doggone long for me to keep it in mind.

Q. Was it a conversation about this Atkins matter?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Tell what it was?

A. He said, Sadie did you find any one yet? And I said, no, sir.

By Mr. Hosford: Object to that as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and hearsay.

A. I said, no, sir. He said, well Jessie Jones told us that this boy had gone to Boston, Massachusetts, and he has gone on a trip there right now. He said, do you think he is in Boston and I said yes, sir—lying.

By Mr. Stuart: You were lying, you say?

A. I was lying, yes, sir, and Dennis, too; and he said, we had Minnie down here at Sapulpa taking her testimony since you have been gone, and McGraw and Josey had a fight, said McGraw knocked him down, and I said I would like to have been there and seen it, and he said Sadie when you do find this boy you be very careful because Page and them have got detectives on you and if they find you have found anybody they will take them away from you; the Gypsy was believing me and Dennis there was a Tommy Atkins and they had us out too; I think it must have been about August 12th before I saw Mr. Bartlett.

Q. Is he the next one you saw?

A. He is the next one, yes, sir.

Q. In reference to this case?

A. In reference to that case.

Q. Where was it you saw him?

A. Sapulpa, I went down to Sapulpa at his house.

Q. He lived in Sapulpa?

A. Sapulpa and I heard that he had just came back from Rye.

Q. Rye, Colorado? A. Colorado.

Q. Did you have a conversation with him about the case?

A. After I got home the postmistress at Fort Logan sent me a letter about the sign at the grave of Mabel Peterkin; I didn't have time for her to go out there with me when I was in Fort Logan and she told me—Mrs. Watkins did, she would go out and find out exactly when Mabel died.

Q. Told you of the death of Mabel?

A. The time she died and was born, yes, sir.

Q. You had a conversation with Mr. Bartlett?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. What was that conversation?

A. I said Mr. Bartlett here is a letter I got from the postmistress at Denver, Fort Logan, and he looked at it, and I said I think I can find Tommy. Mr. Bartlett said, Sadie, Dennis—as smart man as he was—went on a trip and fell down and didn't know anything about Thomas Atkins, I don't believe there was a Thomas Atkins, and I wouldn't give five cents for all the Tommy's you can find, and I asked him for some money and he said he didn't have any, said I haven't got much money Sadie, and he handed me a ten dollar bill and said as soon as I can get a start I will give you some money; I was talking to him about the contract, I left that evening.

Q. Where did you go to? A. Went back to Tulsa.

Q. Who did you see there? A. I went to my lawyers.

Q. What is his name? A. C. S. Walker.

Q. Did you have a conversation with him?

A. Well, not about this trip, not about Tommy—about the trip.

Q. What is that?

A. About the trip and what I wanted him to do, yes, sir, but not about this boy.

By Mr. Stuart: Let me ask a question: Was that firm Carroll & Walker?

A. Yes, sir, C. S. Walker, I think that is it, was my attorney, yes, sir.

Q. You told him what you wanted? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you tell him?

A. I said, Mr. Walker I went on a trip for Mr. Bartlett to find Minnie and I said I found her and I only got about four——

By Mr. Hanford: Object to that as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

A. I said I got about four hundred dollars out of him and he owes me six hundred ($600.00) yet; he said well have you got a contract—did you have a contract, you and Bettie with him, and I said yes, sir; he said where is it at, and I said it is up in Mr. George Barnes' office.

Q. Who was Mr. George Barnes?

A. The man who wrote up the contract for us before we were going to find Minnie.

Q. A lawyer?

A. I suppose he is, yes, sir, up the next floor from Mr. Walker's. And he said you go back up there with me to George Barnes and I don't know him up stairs, and Mr. Walker told Mr. Barnes he wanted to get a copy of that contract and he taken a copy of it.

By Mr. Hanford: I am still objecting, I want to object to this original conversation and narrative.

Q. Did you get your money out of Bartlett?

A. Why, he made a settlement with Mr. Walker, yes, sir. Not for the six hundred ($600.00) dollars, not for the amount of six hundred dollars.

Q. Were you discharged then by Mr. Bartlett?

By Mr. Hanford: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

A. Mr. Bartlett put me down out there when he was on the trip coming back; he found out that I didn't know after he got this Mr. Dunlap—Dunlap told him that woman is just lying to you, Bartlett.

Q. Who is Dunlap?

A. A big detective from Spokane, Washington, and he sent and got him and put him with me; had these two detectives already that were working for me and got Mr. Dunlap; he was in a big case at Spokane and we had to wait until he came.

Q. And Dunlap found out there wasn't anything?

A. He trailed it down and found out there was nothing to it.

Q. And Bartlett discharged you then?

A. No, sir, he treated me nice until we got back to Sapulpa, and he never did tell me he found out I was lying.

Q. But he took you off the case?

A. He didn't bother me any more with the case, no, sir.

Q. Well, where did you go to from Tulsa, how long did you stay in Tulsa on that occasion?

A. I staid in Tulsa for about—I staid in Tulsa about three months, but about August 19th——

Q. What happened about August 19th?

A. Between that time Bettie and Rogers came to me.

Q. Who is Rogers? A. Bettie and Rogers.

Q. Who is Rogers?

A. Rogers is the man she lived with, his name is Charlie Rogers.

Q. An Indian or white man?

A. He is an Indian, Cherokee Indian.

Q. A Cherokee Indian? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have a conversation with them? A. I did.

Q. About when was this?

A. That was about August 15th or 16th, I guess.

Q. Somewhere along there?

A. Along in there some place, I don't know the date.

Q. Where was the conversation? A. At my house.

Q. Tell what was said?

A. Bettie and Rogers came there, said, Sade, you are going to get arrested——

By Mr. Hanford: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and hearsay.

Q. Which one said that you were going to get arrested?

A. Bettie Mann.

Q. What else was said by either of them or you?

By Mr. Hanford: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

By Mr. Stuart: The same objection, are all objected to.

By Mr. German: On the ground that it is incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and hearsay.

A. They told me that Fred Cook was going to arrest me for passing for a Government officer, the best thing that you can do is stop making a live man.

Q. Who was Fred Cook?

A. One of the Indian agents down in there.

Q. A Government man? A. A Government man, yes, sir.

Q. Special agent? A. Yes, sir.

Q. All right.

A. And Bettie said you know you can do anything with the Gem that you want to——

Q. With whom?

A. The Gem Oil Company, they were working for the Gem because Fred Cook is working for them, they didn't stay very long, they left and on August 19th, on Wednesday it was about a quarter of three I went to my attorney's office, Mr. Walker.

Q. Went to Mr. Walker's?

A. C. S. Walker's office, yes, sir.

Q. What did you see him about?

A. I said: Mr. Walker—shall I tell?

Q. Yes, tell what was said by you and him.

By Mr. Hanford: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial as to the conversation.

A. I said, Mr. Walker, I am going to get arrested and he said what for? I said you know I have been running around here making a live man of Tommy, I said Fred Cook is on my trail for passing as a Government officer; he said, well, you told me, Sadie, after I went down and had that settlement with Bartlett, there ain't no Tommy Atkins, and I said yes, sir, and he said who in the devil is Tommy Atkins? I told him what Minnie said, I said Minnie told me when I went out there she drawed the money for her father and I said I want you to go up with me to Mr. Page's and I am going to tell Mr. Page there ain't no Tommy Atkins, and I am going to get out of his way because he is working with Fred Cook making a dead man. Mr. Walker pulled out his watch and it was five minutes till four, he said I won't go with you up there, you go up there and tell Page yourself and I will wait right here in my office until you come back, and you tell me what he said.

Q. And you left Mr. Walker's office?

A. I left at five minutes till four.

Q. Where did you go to?

A. I went to Frank Long's office.

Q. Is that the same as Mr. Page's office?

A. Well, it is on the same floor but not in the same room, Page's office is first as you get off the elevator and Long's next.

Q. You didn't go to Mr. Page's office?

A. No, sir, I didn't know Mr. Page but I knew Mr. Long.

Q. Did you find Mr. Long there?

A. He was in the room there by himself.

Q. Did you have a conversation with him?

A. He said, Hello, Sadie, what are you doing now?

Q. Did you say you had a conversation with him?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I didn't ask you to relate it. What was the conversation, tell us all that was said by either one of you?

A. He said hello, Sadie, what are you doing now? I said I ain't doing nothin'——

By Mr. Hanford: That is objected to as hearsay.

A. I said I ain't doing nothin', I said I came up here to tell Mr. Page that there ain't no Tommy Atkins, and I am going to get out of the way. He said, well, Mr. Page wants to see you, he said go on and I will take you in there; we came out of the door and walked a few steps and Mr. Long opened Mr. Page's door.

Q. Did you go in there?

A. No, we sat right there by a little railing, there was somebody talking with Mr. Page at his desk; Mr. Long called Mr. Page to us.

Q. Were you in the room?

A. Just inside the room, just inside the door, the door was about half closed.

Q. Is there any railing in there?

A. There was at that time, seemed like a kind of a railing gate you had to go through.

Q. I see, and it was outside of that you and Mr. Long sat? A. Yes, sir, not over inside of the gate at all.

Q. Is that a very large room?

A. I can't describe it now, just what size the room is, and I have been in that room twenty times and I can't describe it.

Q. What was it Mr. Long did?

A. He called Mr. Page to him.

Q. And did Mr. Page come over? A. He did.

Q. What if anything was said by either of them or by you?

A. I had never met Mr. Page, Long said Mr. Page this is that Sadie James, that is the way he spoke it, that Sadie James.

Q. Who spoke next? A. Mr. Page.

Q. What did he say?

A. He said, why hello Sadie, I have been looking for you.

Q. Who spoke next? A. Me.

Q. What did you say?

A. I said, Mr. Page, I came up here to tell you there is no Tommy Atkins.

Q. Who spoke next? A. Mr. Page.

Q. What did he say?

A. He said, I don't give a damn if there ain't, the Government record says so and we will make one. He said, Sadie, you know what we want—I did. They wanted to make a dead boy; I said yes; he said I want the birth and death of Thomas Atkins established in Leavenworth, Kansas. Can you do it? I said yes. He said I have been informed from friends of mine in Leavenworth, Kansas, that Dennis Jones is a shrewd man, he has been on the police force, and has been a detective, he is a lawyer and is a politician, and his influence in this case will help it, can't you get it? I said, Mr. Page, Dennis Jones and Rube Smith are my co-workers, they have been working for me all the time, but I can't get Dennis as easily as I can Rube because Dennis has just come back from a long trip with the Gypsy making a live man and he will hate to start now—turn around and make a dead one for him. He said, you tell Dennis Jones if he don't stop making a live man he will get arrested. By that time Mr. Long and I walked out of the office, got outside in the hall and Long said, Sadie——

Q. You say you and Long went out in the hall?

A. Yes, sir, down in the hall, Mr. Page went on back.

Q. Did you have a conversation there?

A. Yes, sir, in the hall way.

Q. What was said by both of you?

A. He said, Sadie, come go up stairs to Ben Rice's office and give him the name of the witnesses you have been working with. Now, before that—can I call myself back?

Q. Yes, where to? A. In the office.

Q. All right, was something else said in the office?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who said it? A. Mr. Page.

Q. What was it?

A. He said, Sadie, you meet me in my park tonight at eight o'clock.

Q. Was that said by Mr. Page? A. By Mr. Page himself.

Q. As a part of the conversation that took place before you and Mr. Long walked down the hall? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you say to him?

A. I told him all right, because I knew where the park was.

Q. Well, did he tell you what hour to meet him there?

A. Eight o'clock.

Q. Eight o'clock? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you know where his park was?

A. I had never been in it, but I knew where it was.

Q. Where was it? A. Out at Sand Springs.

Q. How far from Tulsa? A. Six or seven miles I guess.

Q. What direction?

A. Now, I have been to that park, I think it is south, yes, I guess it is south.

Q. Where with reference to the Arkansas River?

A. I don't know that. That park. I have been going to a colored park all the time, and lots of times take the car and go clear around to Mr. Page's park.

Q. The park is near Sand Springs?

A. Right in Sand Springs. before you get to Sand Springs —that is, Page's park for colored people——

Q. It is connected with Tulsa by interurban? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, what was said out in the hall by you and Mr. Long in addition to what you have already stated?

A. I want you to go up stairs and give Ben Rice the names of the witnesses you are going to give us that you have been working with. We went on the elevator and went up stairs to Mr. Rice's office.

Q. Who is he?

A. He is their attorney. I hadn't never seen him before.

Q. Of the firm of Rice & Lyons?

A. Yes, sir, the first time I had ever seen him.

Q. What did you do up stairs?

A. Walked in his office, he was in there alone, and Mr. Lond said Ben this is that Sadie James, said she has come up stairs to give you the names of the witnesses that has been working with her, but we have hired her and she is going to work for us. Mr. Rice said what are the names? I said Dennis Jones; Mr. Rice said, can you get Dennis? I said yes. I said Rube Smith and Kate Logan, Mary and Claude Hamilton. Frank Long spoke up and said we don't need the Hamilton's, because we can't handle them. I said well I can handle them. Mr. Long and I came on back down stairs and he said: Now, Sadie——

Q. Where did you go to when you went down stairs?

A. On the elevator, I was going on home. He said, Sadie, don't forget tonight.

Q. Where did you go to then?

A. I went from there on back down to my lawyer's, he was waiting for me.

Q. Was that all the conversation you had with Mr. Long that afternoon? A. That day, I had another one that night.

Q. I understand. So you went back to see your lawyer?

A. Went back to Mr. Walker's, yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Walker? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have a conversation with him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. State the conversation?

A. Mr. Walker said, did you go up there and tell Page, and I said, yes, sir, and I said I got a job, and he said a job, and I said, yes, sir, and he said to do what? And I said to hire some witnesses for him. He said you and Charles Page and Frank Long and Josey are going to the penitentiary. I said, I don't care if I do I am going to make me some money. I said he told me you come out in the park tonight about eight o'clock, and I said whatever is done out there or said, I will come to your office tomorrow and tell you, and he said all right. That was then about half past five or near six, near that time; I went home and told my husband that I had to meet Mr. Page in the park that night at eight o'clock, and he said, well, you can't go out there by yourself, and I said, well, you can go.

Q. Well, did you go? A. I did go, yes, sir.

Q. At what hour?

A. I left home about seven, I think it was about seven o'clock when we left town.

Q. Who went with you?

A. Will James, my husband, and when we got near the park, that was in the summer time and the car was open, I looked out at the station and Frank Long was standing there. Well, my husband had never seen Frank Long and I said, there is Long now.

Q. Did you get off the car at the park?

A. Got off the car right at the park station, yes, sir.

Q. How far is it from the park station to the park?

A. Well, it is a good ways up there, the park station is right at the park.

Q. Mr. Long was at the station?

A. Yes, sir, I introduced Mr. Long to my husband, he didn't know him and he said, come on now we will go up here in the park and I will set you down here until I go and find Mr. Page.

Q. Well, did you do that?

A. Yes, sir, sat us down—the park was full of white people, we were the only negroes out there. He sat me down there and went to look for Mr. Page.

Q. Where did he set you down in the park with reference to where the white people were?

A. Oh, it was a kind of a shoot the shutes out there, and he sat us about as far from that as from here to that door.

Q. About thirty or forty feet?

A. Yes, sir, I guess that is about it, just the way I judge of the distance.

Q. Were there any white people around close to where he sat you?

A. No, not about that particular spot, they were all down close to another place. They saw us though.

Q. Did anybody talk with you there in the park besides Mr. Long and Mr. Page and your husband that night?

A. No, sir.

Q. Well, what occurred after Mr. Long sat you down there?

A. He went and got Mr. Page from some where and brought him to us and introduced Mr. Page to my husband, Mr. Page had never seen him; Mr. Page said, Sadie——

Q. Did you have a conversation with Mr. Page?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was present when the conversation took place?

A. My husband and Mr. Page and Mr. Long and myself, just us four, wasn't nobody around us.

Q. Relate the conversation?

A. Mr. Page said, Sadie, you know what I want. I want the birth and death of Thomas Atkins established in Leavenworth, Kansas, and what will you charge to get witnesses to swear it? Well, I sat there a few minutes trying to think about what I should say to him, and he said I know what I will give you, I will give you a thousand ($1000.00) dollars; I said I will take it. The minute I said I will take it we were standing close together, Mr. Long, Mr. Page, my husband, and myself, the minute I said that Mr. Page said Long pull Fred Cook off of Sadie and tell him to let her alone she is working for me; at that time there was a little shower of rain started and Mr. Page and all three of us walked over in the drinking pavilion out of the rain, Mr. Page and I sat down together and my husband and Mr. Long right close to us; I said to him, Mr. Page, I want a contract. He said, Why, Sadie, you know me, I pay everybody; I said, yes, but I am having some trouble with a man now about a contract and he said why don't you sue. He said he sent his boy up in Kansas and got a forged deed and he ought to be put in the pen, and I wouldn't want to see a yellow dog in there, and I says, No, he didn't, I know something about that deed.

Q. That was the Bartlett deed?

A. Yes, sir. I said I know something about that deed, I said I want to get my lawyers to come up to your office and make out a contract. He said who are your lawyers? And I said Judge Williams, Judge Denison, and C. S. Walker. He said Williams & Dennison is all right, but don't get Walker, he has got a yellow streak up his back and he will holler, you meet me at my office in the morning at ten o'clock. While sitting there talking, I said, Mr. Page, if we are going to make a negro case out of this, what are you going to do with that testimony that Minnie gave at Sapulpa, I said there is where you made a mistake, in letting her go on the stand and swear that lie, saying she had a baby in the hospital, don't you know you can't get the Sisters or Charity to tell a lie?

Q. What did he say to that?

A. He said, well, I will make her go back on the stand and say the reason she told that lie she didn't want her husband to know she lived with negroes.

Q. What else was said up there to you on that occasion?

A. Nothing right there, he told me to meet him.

Q. What did he say if anything when you told him you wanted a written contract?

A. He told me to come up the next morning at ten o'clock to his office.

Q. Did you leave the park?

A. Yes, sir, left the park; we had been out there I guess an hour, it was raining and we couldn't go.

Q. Did you see him the next morning?

A. Saw him the next morning.

Q. Where? A. In his office.

Q. Did you have any conversation with him? A. I did.

Q. Had you seen Frank Long before you saw Mr. Page?

A. No, sir, they were both there when I got there.

Q. In the office? A. In the office.

Q. Did you have a conversation with him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Relate it.

A. Mr. Page said, Sadie, you don't need no contract, said Long can draw you up one and if it don't suit you you can change it. I told him that is all right, and he said how do you want it made out? I said, I want my contract made out with a thousand ($1000.00) dollar check for myself.

Q. For youself?

A. For myself, yes, sir, and five hundred ($500.00) dollars for expenses. I didn't know—I said I want on it to say for producing witnesses. He said, Long you make Sadie out a contract, and Mr. Long went somewhere and after a while he came back and I looked at it and it was satisfactory to me; and Mr. Page said, Now Long, you and Sadie go over and put that in the Exchange National Bank, and I said no I want it in the First National. He said, Sadie, this is our bank over there and we do all our business there and I said, yes, but I have been dealing with the First National Bank ever since I have been in Tulsa; and he told Mr. Long to go down there, and he said after you get through down there you come back up stairs.

Q. Sadie, was there a check written out for the thousand dollars?

A. Right there, yes, sir. Mr. Long went in the other room and brought the check out, and Mr. Page looked at it and signed it and put it in the envelope in front of me, I was sitting there and I wanted to see him put it in there.

Q. Was the envelope sealed or not?

A. Yes, sir, we put it in another one and carried it down to the bank, the check was in an envelope.

Q. On what was this contract written?

A. For me to get those witnesses.

Q. But what was it written on?

A. I don't know, that is all, but I don't know—that is all there was to it with a check inside.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit No. 2, I wish you would look at it? A. That is my contract, yes, sir.

Q. That is the contract, is it?

A. That is my contract, yes, sir.

Q. It is your signature at the bottom? A. That is my signature right there.

Q. Near the bottom? A. Yes, sir, that is my signature.

Q. That, Sadie, is an envelope and it is sealed, is there anything in that?

A. A thousand dollar check in there, a check for a thousand dollars ($1,000.00) in that contract.

Q. Is that the check you referred to?

A. Yes, sir, a thousand dollars.

Q. And signed there in Page's office?

A. In Page's office.

Q. Who is it payable to? A. To me, to Sadie James.

By Mr. German: We offer this Exhibit No. 42.

By Mr. Hanford: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, not bearing upon the issues in controversy.

Q. Who drafted that contract, who wrote it out on the back of this envelope? A. Mr. Long.

Q. Mr. Long? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who worded it if you know?

A. I told him what I wanted it to read, for producing witnesses, and Mr. Long taken it in to the other room.

By Mr. Stuart: Mr. Long says there is a check in there for a thousand ($1,000.00) dollars, and we assume that to be true; if it turns out not to be true, I don't want to be bound by that admission, but I think it is there.

By Mr. German: I am satisfied it is there.

By Mr. Stuart: I say this, Your Honor. Mr. German asked that it be opened——

By Mr. German: No, I did not.

By Mr. Allen: I suggested that to Mr. German, not for the record. I was just discussing it with Mr. German.

By Mr. German: I don't object personally to it being opened.

By Mr. Stuart: Then, I understand that the Government is not asking for this document to be opened?

By Mr. German: At this time?

By Mr. Stuart: At this time. Then, of course, I make no admissions in reference to the document.

Q. Sadie, was anything else said at the time of the execution of the contract? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was it?

A. Mr. Page, after I went and put it in the Exchange National, he said, You and Long go down to the First National and then come back up here. We went down there and Mr. Long read the contract—showed Mr. Bradshaw the contract; and he said, Ben, you understand this, and Bradshaw, he said he did, and we went back up stairs.

Q. What did you do with the contract?

A. Left it there with the bank, left it there with him.

Q. For safe keeping? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What instructions, if any, were given to him?

A. None at that trip.

Q. None on that trip? A. No, sir, none at that minute.

Q. Then you and Mr. Long went back up stairs?

A. Went back up stairs.

Q. Who did you see?

A. Saw Mr. Page. Nobody in the room but Mr. Page.

Q. What was said?

A. Mr. Page said, Sadie, whatever you do in this case don't bring it to me because I don't want to know it, you work with Long, Frank Long. Frank Long throwed up his hands this way and said: Sadie, you are working single handed, you go along and arrange the witnesses and I will come after them and lead them. Mr. Page said, will you go thi*d* afternoon? And I told him yes. Go tonight? And I said yes.

Long said you leave on the Santa Fe and that will throw you in Leavenworth about eighty-thirty, and I will leave on the Frisco and that will leave me get in there an hour behind you and you can be seeing some of them and talk to them and I will page you at the National Hotel—— He will page himself there where he would be at—the National.

Q. He would page himself?

A. Page himself at the National Hotel, and when I got to Leavenworth that is where I would find him, call him up. Mr. Long and I walked down the hall and when we got in the hall, he said, Sadie, Hanford is in my office and I want you to meet him; and I said, I don't want to meet Hanford, because I told him when I was in Seattle if ever I caught him in Oklahoma I was going to smash his mouth and I don't want to see him; and Long said, this is a money matter now, and let by-gone's be by-gone's; and I said well in a case like this I will; he said, you needn't tell Hanford nothing I told you; he taken me in his room—Mr. Long's room——

Q. Now, let's go back a minute, had you and Mr. Hanford had any quarrel at Seattle?

A. No, he had run me down to the depot to arrest me that night, the last night I was there, brought officers down there to run me out of Seattle.

Q. On the occasion that you had Clara Kirk there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see him that night?

A. No, sir, I didn't see him, I sent him word back—I didn't see him.

Q. Who did you send him word by?

A. I sent him word by Mr. Bartlett, for Mr. Bartlett to tell him, I don't know whether he told him or not.

Q. What was it you told him?

A. I told Mr. Bartlett, you tell that Hanford if ever I catch him in Oklahoma I will smash his mouth; I said, he came down to the depot with two officers to run me out of town, said my sister-in-law was notorious and I was too, and I don't know whether he told him or no.

Q. That was on the occasion of your and Clara Kirk's leaving Seattle? A. Yes, sir.

Q. In July? A. In July, yes, sir.

Q. Now, going back to the time that you and Mr. Long went up to his and Mr. Page's office and he spoke of Mr. Hanford being there, relate the conversation there?

A. Well, I just said that much; he taken me into his office, Mr. Long did, and said, I will be back in a minute; when he came back he brought Mr. Hanford with him and Hanford walked in and said, Hello Sadie, I suppose you are mad, and before I could say a word, Mr. Long spoke up and said: No, Sadie is one of those kind, she lets by-gones be by-gones, and he said, I will be back in a minute—that was Mr. Long. That left nobody in there but me and Mr. Stanford.

Q. Did you and he have a conversation there? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was said in that conversation?

A. He and I were sitting down at the same table together and I said, where is Minnie, and he said she is back out in Seattle; and I said you fell down on that little trip didn't you, and he said yes; and I said where you made a mistake was letting Minnie go on the stand in Sapulpa and say a lie and say that the baby was born in the hospital and she hadn't seen it since it was two years old; and I said, don't you know you can't get Sisters of Charity to tell a lie?

By Mr. Stuart: We object to that because it is repetition, it's been told three times.

By Mr. Cornman: No, this is a conversation with Stanford.

A. I said, you understand I am going to make a negro case out of it now; and he said, do you think you can make it? Long told me not to say anything to him, but I told him, I said: Where you made a mistake was letting Minnie go on the stand in Sapulpa and tell that lie on the stand, saying the child was born in a hospital, and she gave it away when it was two years old. I said, don't you know you can't get Sisters of Charity to tell a lie; I said, you understand now I am going to make a negro case out of it; he said, you think you can work it? I said yes; he said, I took old Minnie to Leavenworth and she didn't know anybody, she didn't know where to take me. I said, Minnie wasn't acquainted in the town she worked in the Fort. By this time Mr. Long came back in the office and I went back into Mr. Page's office.

Q. Who did you see there? A. Nobody but Mr. Page still.

Q. Did you have a conversation with him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Relate the conversation.

A. He said, Sadie when you get to Leavenworth if you get Dennis Jones you bring him to me, I want to see him and talk to him. I went right on up town to my lawyer's office, right away from that place to C. S. Walker's office.

Q. Did you have a conversation with him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Relate the conversation?

A. I said, Mr. Walker, I told him what was going on in the park that night, I got a contract placed in the First National Bank and I want him to draw a copy of that contract and notify Mr. Bradshaw in front of me not to let anybody take it out, because I am afraid they will steal it, because they tried to get me to put it in the Exchange National; that was about half past twelve that same day. Walker and I went up to the bank——

Q. What occurred at the bank?

A. Mr. Walker asked Mr. Bradshaw to let him see the contract.

Q. Did he agree to do so?

A. Yes, he did, and he said then I want a copy of it, and Mr. Walker took a copy off of that and came back out on the street, and I goes up town and gets Judge Williams, another one of my attorneys, and brings him back down to the bank and he got a copy of it, I told him the same thing: I was afraid they would steal it out of the bank, because they wanted to put it in the Exchange National too bad; and I went home then; and I was to come back there at three o'clock to go to Leavenworth.

Q. Come back where?

A. To Mr. Page's office to get a check to leave that night to go to Leavenworth; I came back about two o'clock that afternoon.

Q. Whom did you see? A. Mr. Page and Frank Long.

Q. What was said, if anything?

A. Mr. Page said, Sadie you are going to leave tonight? and I said, yes, sir; and he said how much do you want, and I said one hundred ($100.00) dollars; and Long said no we will give you a check for fifty and when I get to Leavenworth I will give you some more, and I said all right. Mr. Long went out and pretty soon he came back with a fifty dollar check and I cashed it.

Q. Did you get the cash on that check? A. Yes, sir.

Q. The same day your contract was entered into?

A. The same day, yes, sir; I left that night, that night I left on the eight-ten on the Santa Fe.

Q. Where did you leave for?

A. I left for Leavenworth, and I got in Leavenworth on Friday morning at eight-thirty about August 21st.

Q. Where did you go after you got to Leavenworth?

A. As I got off the electric car I saw Rube Smith on the corner—I don't know what is in the place now—the northwest corner.

Q. Right where you stop and get off the car?

A. Yes, he was on the other corner and he looked and saw me and I beckoned him to come over.

Q. Did you have a conversation with him?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. Relate the conversation?

A. He said when did you come, and I said I just come from Kansas City this morning, I started from Tulsa last night and I got in Kansas City, I said, Rube you know I have been working, I said, for Hugh Bartlett, and he said yes, and I said I quit for him now and gone to working for the Gem, because they are working for the Government. I said you can do anything in this case you want and won't get arrested and I said, will you work? and Rube said yes, and he asked me where I was going to stop at and I said stop down at Miss Patty's down in the alley—Miss Martha Smith, down the alley and he taken my handbag.

Q. Who was Miss Martha Smith?

A. Miss Martha Smith lives in the rear of Cherokee between Third and Fourth in the alley.

Q. White or colored?

A. Colored woman, one of Rube's clients.

Q. What age is she about?

A. She is about fifty-nine I guess. She and my mother used to run together years ago when I was small.

Q. What was done then? A. Rube and I finished talking.

Q. Tell the rest of the conversation?

A. When I got down there he said how much do you think I ought to make out of it, and I said about five or six hundred dollars.

Q. Where was that? A. At Miss Martha's.

Q. At the house?

A. Yes, sir, and I said about five or six hundred dollars.

Q. Who was this talk in the presence of if anyone?

A. No, sir, Miss Martha had gone up stairs.

Q. Go ahead with the conversation?

A. He said how much do you think I could make out of it, and I said about six or seven Hundred dollars, and he said who will I see, and I said Frank Long will be up here pretty soon and I came up here to see if I can hire you all for them; it will be about an hour before he gets up here; and Rube says I got to go to the Court House, I've got a case over there, and when he comes you call me up so I can meet him. Rube left and about the time I thought Mr. Long had come—got in town you know—I guess he had been there about an hour and pretty near a half in town, I went up to Third and Cherokee.

Q. You didn't talk with Martha Smith on that occasion?

A. Oh, no, sir.

Q. Is that the same woman Dennis referred to in the conversation you had in the spring?

A. Oh, that was Mary Smith a white woman; Mary Smith is a white woman, Martha Smith is a colored woman, Mary is a white one—the one that had a negro sister.

Q. Why did you go there?

A. You can get anything you want down there, she runs a kind of a boarding place in the alley.

Q. A convenient place for you to go?

A. To do anything you want to, yes, sir.

Q. You went to the hotel?

A. No, sir, I went to Third and Cherokee Street, the drug store there, I called the National Hotel and asked them.

Q. Where was the National Hotel, what street is it on?

A. It is on the corner of Fourth and Cherokee.

Q. You say you were one block from the National?

A. One block in the alley; I went to Third and Cherokee in the drug store and got Mr. Long.

Q. On the 'phone?

A. On the 'phone and told him how to get where I was, told him to come down the street from the National and only come to the alley and to turn and go on down I would be looking for him.

Q. Did he come?

A. Yes, sir, in a few minutes, wasn't no time, about the time I got back to the alley I turned and he came into the alley from the other end.

Q. He came to meet you?

A. He came in the house, yes, sir.

Q. He came up the alley?

A. Yes, sir, that's the only way you can get in there that is in the alley way; and he caught me in the house.

Q. Did you have any conversation then? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Relate it.

A. He said, have you seen Dennis, and I said no sir not yet, but I have seen Rube. And he said, will he work? And I said, yes, Rube will work. He said is that all you have seen, and I said yes, and he said I am going down to Aunt Kate Logan's now—another name I had given him.

Q. Who was Aunt Kate Logan?

A. Witness Dennis had.

Q. Colored or white?

A. Colored woman—she at that time——

Q. What had been her business?

A. Aunt Kate's business?

Q. Yes?

A. She had been selling clothes—second hand clothes around town, but she had been sick for quite a bit, very sick; I said I will go on down to Aunt Kate Logan's and he said which way does she live, and I said Seventh and Shawnee. I said you go down Shawnee and I will be standing out there waiting for you.

Q. Where was Shawnee Street with reference to Cherokee Street? A. Shawnee is north of Cherokee Street.

Q. How many blocks? A. Two blocks from Cherokee.

Q. Delaware is between Cherokee and Shawnee, is it?

A. Yes, sir, between Cherokee and Shawnee.

Q. And Seventh Street is west of Third Street, isn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Three blocks?

A. Three blocks—four blocks it would be.

Q. Four blocks from Third and Cherokee?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is Seventh and Shawnee would be?

A. Seventh and Shawnee, that is where we were to meet at.

Q. What did you do after that arrangement to meet there? A. I went on down to Aunt Kate's.

Q. Alone? A Yes, sir, by myself.

Q. Who did you find there?

A. No one in there but Aunt Kate sick in the bed, Aunt Kate Logan.

Q. Did you have a conversation with her before Mr. Long came? A. I did, I said——

Q. Tell the conversation.

A. I said, Aunt Kate you know the case Dennis was talking to you about, and she said yes about the Indian Woman's case, and I said yes, and I said well a white man is here now and wants you to work for him and wants to get a statement out of you, and she said I am so sick now I don't know whether I can give it or not, when will he come? And I said he will be here pretty quick, I was there probably a half hour before he came.

Q. He finally came?

A. Yes, he came down Shawnee as I walked out on the porch, old Aunt Kate's porch to see if I could see Mr. Long, I saw him coming down Shawnee near Seventh looking in the direction that I told him, and as soon as he saw me I walked right back in Aunt Kate's house.

Q. He came in?

A. Yes, sir, and I introduced him to Aunt Kate.

Q. Relate the conversation that took place?

A. He said Aunt Kate, I suppose you have been talking to Sadie; and Aunt Kate said yes, and he said Aunt Kate, I would like to get a statement out of you what you are going to say, and she said I am awful sick now, and she started in to a coughing spell—very sick, and that left Mr. Long and myself to talk; and he said, Sadie, I met George Crilly and he said you know he run the stable across from where Granny lived, and I hired him in the case. Mr. Long said in talking to George Crilly he found out George Crilly was a school mate of Mr. Long's mother, and I hired him in the case. By that time

Dr. Jackson, a colored doctor there at Leavenworth, he came in—that was Aunt Kate's doctor, and I introduced him to Mr. Long. Long said to me, you reckon we can get him, and I said, no, I said, because he wasn't nothing but a boy at that time.

Q. Did he say that in the hearing of Dr. Jackson?

A. I don't know whether Dr. Jackson heard him or not, he was standing about as close to us as Judge Allen.

Q. Yes?

A. He said, Dr. Jackson, I want to get a statement out of Aunt Kate, do you think she is able to talk? and Dr. Jackson said well I don't know, she is pretty sick, but if she don't have to talk long, he said, all right. Dr. Jackson he doctored on Kate whatever he was going to do. By that time Rube Smith's boy Albert he came in, he was living with Aunt Kate. I introduced him to Mr. Long and I said, Albert, you go and telephone for your father and tell him to come down to Aunt Kate Logan's, I want to see him. I didn't know where Rube was but he wasn't over twenty minutes coming.

Q. Rube finally came?

A. He came, yes, sir; and by that time Dr. Jackson was gone; he was writing now what Aunt Kate was telling him.

Q. He was talking to Aunt Kate?

A. Yes, sir, and writing it down. He had a paper about the size of that writing on the table what Aunt Kate was going to tell; you see Dennis had got Aunt Kate a long ways back before he was working for Mr. Long.

Q. What did she tell him?

A. Aunt Kate told him, yes, I seen the baby when it was two weeks old. He said when was the last time you seen him, and Aunt Kate said he was about nine or ten years old playing around the street; and he told Aunt Kate that was good, didn't ask her what she was going to tell, he told me to talk to my witnesses as I went; Long said Aunt Kate there is going to be a lot of money in this case and what you need after you get it is a trip to Claremore, because you are in awful bad shape. He gave Aunt Kate a paper dollar and said I am going up to the drug store and I will send you down some medicine, Aunt Kate for that cough you have got. By that time Rube came, Rube Smith.

Q. Had Mr. Long gone before Rube came?

A. No, Rube was to meet us right there, I sent his son to call him up, Rube walked in and I introduced him to Frank Long.

Q. Did you have any conversation? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Relate the conversation?

A. Frank Long said to Rube I suppose you have been talking to Sadie, and Rube told him yes, and he said what do you want to work for?

Q. Who said that?

A. Mr. Long asked Rube what do you want to work for, and Rube said I want five dollars a day and expenses, and five hundred dollars when the case is completed and Mr. Long said all right. By that time Aunt Kate wanted to get up out of bed and they had to go out on the porch until I assisted her up. After I got her in bed I walked out on the porch and Mr. Long looked at his watch and said, Sadie, it is past my dinner time, you go on now and meet Dennis; and Rube said when will we meet again, and Mr. Long said we will meet again down at Miss Martha's about four o'clock.

Q. That is the same place you first went to that morning?

A. Yes, sir, he said, Now Sadie when you go down the street—down to Dennis', if you get Dennis to work, you call me at the National and I am going on down there. By the time I got down to Dennis' office about half past twelve, or near one o'clock, Dennis was in his office.

Q. You saw Dennis? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have a talk with him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Relate the conversation?

A. I said Dennis I have made money off of Hugh Bartlett and you got money off the Gipsy; I said, well I have quit working for Bartlett and gone to working for the Gem, and I said will you work, and he said no, he said I have met the head man of the Gipsy through Lee Bond, and the Gipsy gave me a job and I have just come back from a trip making a live man for them, and I am not going to stop making a live man now and go to making a dead boy for the Gem; and I said Mr. Page told me to tell you if you didn't quit making a live man you will get arrested, and they are working with the Government; and at that time I did think so. Dennis said all right, I will work, what do you think I ought to make out of it Sadie? and I said eight or nine hundred dollars and he said who am I going to meet, and I said Frank Long is here, the Secretary, and he wants to meet you, and I said when he comes Dennis, don't you make no contract with him, he is nothing but the Secretary; I says, you tell him that you want to see the boss, because I had my contract made out with him, but don't you tell him what I said—not tell Long what I said; and I said when can you meet him, and he said two o'clock; and I stepped to the 'phone and called Mr. Long up, he was at the National.

Q. What did you tell Mr. Long?

A. Over the 'phone I says Dennis says to meet him in his office at Two o'clock, and he said where are you at now? and

I said down at Dennis' office, about one o'clock then, little past one because we had been talking quite a bit, about two Dennis and I were talking about other matters of our own, we had some business at that time and we were talking about our other business. About two o'clock, here come Frank Long up the stairs and I introduced him to Dennis and he says——

Q. About two, you say? A. About two o'clock, yes, sir.

Q. In the afternoon? A. In the afternoon, yes, sir.

Q. Then, you had a conversation about this matter?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Relate the conversation?

A. I introduced him to Mr. Long, and Mr. Long said, Well, Dennis, you have been talking to Sadie, Dennis said yes, he said, well what will you work for and Dennis said, I want a contract, and he said well I can make you out one, and Dennis said no I want to see the boss man, and Long said can you get ready and leave here tonight? And Dennis said no. He either said Saturday or Monday was Motion day, I wouldn't say which day but Saturday or Monday either one was Motion day and the attorneys were cited to be there. That was in the Leavenworth Court. And Dennis said I will tell you what I will do, I will leave here Monday night provided Sadie meets me at the depot, because I haven't been used to going down in those Jim Crow towns—can I call myself black?

Q. Yes, where to?

A. In the same room before Mr. Long came down there.

Q. Something else said that you didn't relate?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. State what it was?

A. I told Dennis Mr. Page told me if I got you to work for me to bring you to him, he wanted to talk to you, that is all. The agreement was made then for Dennis to go down; he said, Mr. Jones, are you working for the Gipsy yet, and he said I don't know, he says here is a letter I got from them, and he asked Dennis to let him see it.

Q. Have you related all the conversation that was had between Dennis and Mr. Long?

A. Yes, sir, only except about the letter.

Q. Except about the letter? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, tell that?

A. He said, are you working for the Gipsy yet, and Dennis said I don't know, I just got a letter from them.

Q. That is before or after Mr. Long got to the office?

A. We were talking to Mr. Long about Mr. Long's hiring him.

Q. Go ahead.

A. Mr. Long said let him see it, and Dennis let him see it. The letter read like this: We have investigated your statements and they have been verified. That is the way the letter read. And Dennis said then they gave me a check for three hundred ($300.00) dollars, sent me three hundred dollars, and Frank Long said let me take that down to my lawyer and Dennis said no I will bring it when I come. We left out of his office and when we got down to the bottom of the steps Frank Long said to me, Now Sadie don't forget the appointment with Rube at Four o'clock at Miss Martha's, and I said all right. That was maybe a quarter of three, if that late, when we came down. I didn't meet him, I went up town and got drunk—big drunk, yes, sir; and about half past seven in the evening a girl was bringing me down the street and I met Frank Long at Fourth and Delaware, and this girl had hold of me and Frank Long said where did Sadie get this jag.

Q. Who said that?

A. Frank Long; and she said she went up to one of the girl's and got drunk, and he said let's get off the street before she gets arrested; and Frank Long taken hold of one of my arms and this girl to the other.

Q. Where did they take you to?

A. Down the alley to Miss Martha's, and we got down there——

Q. What happened?

A. Frank Long told Miss Martha, now you put Sadie to bed and see that she don't get nothing more to drink that night and I will be back later on?

Q. Did she do it?

A. Yes, sir, some one did it, I was drunk but had good sense but I couldn't handle myself, I had been drunk quite a while that evening. In the morning about eight-thirty Frank Long came.

Q. Did you talk with him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was you sober?

A. I was sober but I was sick, and he says Sadie I was here last night and you were lying up there dead drunk and asleep and I didn't try to disturb you but let you alone, and he said you had your breakfast yet? and I said no, and he said do you want some whiskey, and he handed Miss Martha a dollar and said you get some whiskey and brace yourself up Sadie and catch the twelve-thirty car, because Hanford and Bettie are down in Kansas City and they are going to come up here and meet these witnesses and there is no use of you and old Bettie running together because we wont let her know what we are doing in the case, and he left. Well, at twelve-thirty I did catch a car——

Q. Where did you go to?

A. I went home, went to Kansas City and staid until that evening, I forget the time the train pulled out that night, but I left here and went to Tulsa, I got to Tulsa Sunday morning.

Q. Who did you see?

A. Not right that minute I didn't see anybody but I called up Mr. Page.

Q. What did you tell him?

A. I told him I just got back, I said, Mr. Page, I just got back, and he said did you get Dennis, and I told him yes, and he said I tell you what you do Sadie, you meet me at Archer and Main at two o'clock at my station, and I told him all right; about a quarter of two me and my husband went down there.

Q. Did you see Mr. Page?

A. Yes, sir, sitting on the bench waiting for us.

Q. Where is that? A. At Main and Archer.

Q. Did you have a conversation with him?

A. Yes, sir, he taken us on the inside and we were sitting on the bench.

Q. Relate the conversation?

A. He said Sadie did you get Dennis, talking about Dennis, and he said when is he going to come and I said Tuesday morning, Mr. Page; and he said don't you fail now in meeting him Sadie, and I said all right. We didn't stay there very long, because Rogers at that time—Bettie's man—was passing and Mr. Page seen him out there, and he said I don't want Rogers to see you all with me.

Q. Bettie's man Rogers?

A. Yes, sir, passed along and we went out the side way on Archer and started home.

Q. What was it Mr. Page said about him?

A. We were sitting so we could look out on Archer, and before we got to the corner Mr. Page thought he was coming around the front and come in on Main Street in the place to see him, and he told us he didn't want Rogers to see us with him, because Rogers and Bettie were working for him at that time; so Will and I got up then and went on out on Archer toward home; well, I didn't go up there any more until Tuesday morning.

Q. Where did you go Tuesday morning?

A. Tuesday morning I met Dennis at the train; it was raining like sixty and Will said to me you can't meet Dennis—

Q. Never mind what he said?

A. I went up there before the train come in and I said to the cab man, I said I got a man coming down here——

Q. You needn't to tell what you said to him.

A. And when Dennis got off of the train he said I had a pretty ride in a car by myself last night all the way down here, and I said come on in Dennis I got a cab out here for you.

Q. What did you and he do then? A. Got in this cab.

Q. Where did you go?

A. Went to a restaurant and got breakfast and I told the cab man to wait until we got through.

Q. And then where did you go?

A. I told the cab man to take us to the First National Bank Building, and he said shall I wait for you Sadie?—The cab man—and I said no I don't know how long I will be up in here, and I taken Dennis on up stairs.

Q. To what office? A. To Mr. Page's office.

Q. His office in the First National Bank Building?

A. Up stairs in the First National Bank Building.

Q. Sadie, what have you told, if anything, Mr. Page when —on the occasion when you contracted with him with reference to Dennis Jones and Rube Smith and their ability in the matter of proof? A. In the matter of proof?

Q. Producing proof? A. Producing proof?

Q. Yes? A. How was I going to do it?

Q. Did you tell him anything about them?

A. I had told Mr. Page there wasn't no Tommy Atkins, and he said he didn't give a damn if there wasn't, would make one.

Q. What did you say to Page about Rube Smith and Dennis Jones?

A. I told him Dennis had just got back from a lying trip for the Gipsy, that is all. He said he heard from friends in Leavenworth that Dennis Jones was a shrewd man. Mr. Page didn't tell us to bring anybody to him but Dennis.

Q. Go back now to the occasion——

A. We walked in to Mr. Page's office, I taken Dennis, and Mr. Page was in there alone.

Q. Did you have a conversation with him?

A. Introduced Mr. Page to Dennis.

Q. Tell the conversation?

A. He said, hello Dennis, I heard a lot of talk about you and I have been wanting to see you, and he said let's go in Long's room. We walked into Mr. Long's room and about the time we got into Mr. Long's room, Ben Rice and Mr. Long walked in. I don't think the table is quite as long as this in Mr. Long's room, and Ben Rice was at the head of the table and Dennis on that side and Mr. Long stood up between me and Dennis, and I sat at the end of the table.

Q. Dennis sat at your left?

A. Yes, Mr. Page was standing between Dennis and I, Ben Rice at the head of the table that way facing me, and Frank Long sat over on this side.

Q. The other side of the table from Dennis?

A. Yes, sir, the other side in front of Dennis.

Q. What was the conversation on that occasion?

A. When they walked in Frank Long introduced Mr. Rice to Dennis, Mr. Page said Denny how long have you lived in Leavenworth, Kansas? and Dennis said fifty years, and he said you are a lawyer aint you Denny, and Dennis said yes I have been practicing law for eighteen years. Mr. Page turned to Frank Long, he was standing by Mr. Page, and he said Long we need an attorney at Leavenworth and I will hire Denny as our attorney up there, and I want you to talk to Mr. Long, and I want you to look upon him as though you would any other lawyer. Dennis said, Mr. Page I want a contract, then Ben Rice spoke up and said well what do you want to work for, and Dennis said I want ten ($10.00) dollars a day and expenses, and five hundred ($500.00) dollars when the case is completed. Ben Rice said can you get it fixed within seventeen days and Dennis said I don't know. Mr. Page said to Frank Long: Long, you draw Denny up a contract and Long went out of the room and after a while came back with a paper and handed it to Mr. Rice and Mr. Rice looked at it and he passed it to Dennis. Dennis pulled his glasses out and looked at it—I don't know what was in that contract—and Dennis said that is too binding. Mr. Page said let Dennis write out his own contract; so they give Dennis a piece of paper and he wrote out his own and passed it to Ben Rice and he looked at it and give it to Mr. Long and handed it to Mr. Page; Long went out of the room and came back with it and Dennis filled it out and put it in his pocket. Then Mr. Page said Dennis, he said, you ought to be able to do anything in Leavenworth that you want, and Dennis said I can, and Mr. Page said I want the birth and death of Thomas Atkins established in Leavenworth, Kansas. He said I want him to be born in 1885 and die in the fall of 1898 or in the spring of '99, and live long enough just for an allotment; Dennis said, Mr. Page when I went to Boston making a live man for the Gipsy I run across a dead one, he is married to a white woman and his name is Thomas Atkins and he is a Kansas man, he died when he was twenty years old. Mr. Page said well if he died when twenty years old, he said to Dennis, under the laws of Kansas that would make him a minor and Dennis said I think so, and Mr. Page said is his widow living? And Dennis said I don't know, that the Gipsy called me in before I found out. Mr. Page said you let that dead man alone, he said his widow might be living and that would make her a party to the suit.

Dennis said I got another one at North Platt, Nebraska, he is a railroad porter and he is a Kansas man and he will do. Mr. Page said I don't want no live man I want a dead boy, I want him to be born in Leavenworth and die there, and you ought to be able to find a grave up there, and Dennis said I can. Mr. Page said Dennis I don't want the Gipsy to know you are working for me, work quietly on the case and when we get things ready we will notify the Gipsy we are ready for trial. He said have you seen the testimony Minnie gave at Sapulpa? and Dennis told him no. Mr. Page said to Frank Long, Long get that book.

Q. Who all was present?

A. Just us, the same five, Mr. Rice and Dennis——

Q. The same parties?

A. The same parties nobody else. Frank Long went somewhere and got a book and came back with it—a paper book, and he give it to Dennis. He said, Dennis—Mr. Page talking still—nobody talking but him—He said, Dennis look in that book and get out of it what you want for Leavenworth. Dennis just took the book and kind of looked through it and said it will take me a week to get out of this book what I want. Frank Long looked at his watch, ten minutes to twelve, and he said Sadie you take Dennis to dinner and be back here at one o'clock, and I did so. Dennis and I walked down town and bought him a hat, he was trading to a hat from a cap, but Mr. Crawley saw him, I didn't know it.

Q. How did you know Mr. Crawley saw you?

A. He told me afterwards, after Dennis had gone.

Q. What did you do after lunch?

A. At one o'clock we came back.

Q. Where to? A. To Mr. Long's office.

Q. Who was there?

A. Mr. Josey and Mr. Long were in there when we got back.

Q. What did you do then?

A. Frank Long said to me, Sadie now you can go and come back here at four o'clock and get Denny meet him up there. They didn't want me up there. Well, at four o'clock I went back and got Dennis, I don't know how much the check was for, but Dennis pulled it out of his pocket and said Sadie I got a check, I ought to get that check cashed here, and I said that check is good on the Gem up in Leavenworth or anywhere. It was four o'clock, but I didn't know what the check was for; I taken Dennis then, I said to Dennis, Mr. Page has got a Park——

Q. Told him what?

A. I told Dennis Mr. Page has got a park out here in the town and I said it is too late—too early to walk around until train time and I will take you out there.

Q. What park was that? A. Mr. Page's park?

Q. For colored folks?

A. No, white park. I was going to take Dennis out there in the day time and show it to him.

Q. The colored folks park?

A. About three miles this side of Sand Springs, but his park was right in Sand Springs. I wanted to show Dennis the white park. We taken the street car and went out there, I told Dennis on the way going out, I said this car line is his own, I told Dennis at Leavenworth he was working for the Government; Dennis said he must be working for the Government, he talked about this case like there is no secrets. We got back in town and I taken him and showed him the park—didn't get off the car though—got back to town and went down to a restaurant and got his supper and I taken him out to my house and kept him there until I think it was about half past —well I guess it was about a quarter of eight when we left my house and taken him back to the depot and he left.

Q. Where did he leave for?

A. Leavenworth, got him a ticket.

Q. You didn't go with him?

A. No, sir, I didn't go with him I staid there.

Q. What did you next do in this case?

A. Well, in about must have been about three or four days I will say before I went back up there again to the Gip—up to the Gem.

Q. Who did you see then?

A. Mr. Page had company in his office and he said Sadie you go in Long's office I will be in there directly.

Q. Did you do that? A. I did.

Q. Did he come in?

A. When I got in there Frank Long and Mr. Hanford were in there.

Q. Did you have a conversation with them?

A. No, sir, I walked in and said I am waiting for Mr. Page, and in about ten minutes Mr. Page come in.

Q. Did you have a conversation with him then?

A. As soon as he came in there he looked and saw Mr. Hanford sitting there and he said Hello Hanford did you get what you wanted at Leavenworth? and Mr. Hanford said yes; and Mr. Page said, you take that to Minnie and tell her, and just before we get ready to take depositions you switch her right back and take it at Leavenworth so she can meet them witnesses; and Hanford said, Mr. Page suppose Minnie don't want to come over this Leavenworth dope, and Mr. Page said you tell her if she don't she don't get another cent, and he flew out of the room and I followed him.

Q. Who went out?

A. Mr. Page did and I followed him. When he got to his door, just about to open his door, somebody stepped off the elevator and I didn't go in there because I knew he wanted to talk to him, and I left.

Q. Where did you go to? A. I went home.

Q. What did you next do in this case?

A. Well, it went on about a couple of weeks. I would go up there, but wasn't talking about this case. I had some other business with Mr. Page. In about two weeks, I think in September about the 7th or 8th, about two weeks after that, Frank Long and Mr. Page was in the office.

Q. What happened then?

A. I spoke to him just as I went in there.

Q. Did you have any conversation with him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Relate it.

A. Mr. Page said, Sadie, Dennis is a little slow up there at Leavenworth about finding a grave.

Q. Finding what?

A. Finding a grave. He said it looks like you ought to be able to go up there and find one, and I said I can, but I said I can find one maybe in Coffeyville, Kansas, just so it is in Kansas is all that we wanted. He said when will you go, and I said I will leave here tonight; and Long said if you will leave here tonight I will meet you in Leavenworth, Kansas, about Wednesday or Thursday, and I told him all right. Long wrote a check for fifty ($50.00) dollars and I went down to the First National Bank and cashed it, and I left there that night for Leavenworth, but I stopped at Coffeyville.

Q. You stopped at Coffeyville?

A. Stopped at Coffeyville and went out to the grave-yard.

Q. What did you do at Coffeyville?

A. I went out to the grave-yard, the grave-yard was right in town, I went out there to see if I could find any graves that didn't have any names on them.

Q. Did you find any?

A. No, sir, I staid all night there at my cousin's and left and went to Leavenworth.

Q. When was it that you got there?

A. I got to Leavenworth Thursday night, Thursday evening, because I came over on the Trolley car from—

Q. Do you remember when that was?

A. Yes, about Thursday night, September 10th, I guess it was about September 10th.

Q. In 1914?

A. Yes, sir, that is 1914, I got my husband, I roomed up on Shawnee and the next morning I had told Frank Long where I would be at.

Q. Where were you going to be?

A. At Miss Martha's, this colored woman's on the alley.

Q. Did you go to Miss Martha's?

A. I didn't go that night, he and Rube went.

Q. Who went?

A. Frank Long and Rube went, bet me to Leavenworth, and I called him up over the 'phone from where I stopped and told him I would be down there, and when I got to Miss Martha's Long and Rube both were there.

Q. Did you have a conversation with them? A. I did.

Q. Repeat it?

A. Rube said Sadie you ought to got in last night, we had all the whiskey and everything we wanted and were looking for you; and Frank Long said Sadie did you do any good—on my Coffeyville trip—and I said no, but I am going out on Pilot Knob—an old graveyard out there—and see if I can find any graves that will do, I will have to have a horse and buggy; and Long said, you go up to Joe Cranston's Livery Stable and tell him I say let you have a horse and buggy on Frank Long at the National.

Q. And then where did you go? A. To Dennis' office.

Q. Did you have a conversation with him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Relate that?

A. Dennis said when did you come and I said I came last night, and I said have you found anything, and he said I have tapped the mortuary records here in Leavenworth, searched them, and I can't find any unknown dead there that will do us any good; and I said I am going out here to Pilot Knob, I said you know my Uncle and cousin and some more used to be out there and they buried their dead out there, it is an old grave yard—maybe I can find something, and I left his office.

Q. Where did you go to?

A. My house on Shawnee Street. About two o'clock, I guess, I went down to Mr. Cranston's Barn, it was raining.

Q. What did you do down there?

A. I said, Mr. Cranston, I want to get a horse and buggy, I said what will it be, and he said two dollars, it is a bad day for a horse to be out. It was raining awfully hard and I said, Frank Long told me to tell you to let me have a horse and buggy, and he said Long the Secretary of the Gem, and I said yes, sir, and he said all right, and he let me have a horse and buggy.

Q. What did you do then?

A. I drove near about the Pilot Knob, I didn't know how to get there, it was long years since I had been there and I turned to Mount Munsey Cemetery and walked around in the grave yard and didn't find anything and I came back to town and put the buggy up and went to my room and called Frank Long up.

Q. How long were you gone on that trip?

A. All the afternoon, I didn't come back to the stable until about half past seven that night, I called Mr. Long over the 'phone.

Q. Where did you call him?

A. Called him at the National, told him to come up to 221 Shawnee at Ben Samuel's place, that is where I had my room.

Q. You had a room at Ben Samuels?

A. Yes, sir. I just put up there what time I was going to stay in town, I was just there a week.

Q. You roomed there during that week at Ben Samuels?

A. Yes, sir, I was, I and my husband rooming there. Long came about half an hour after I called him up.

Q. Came to Ben Samuel's?

A. Yes, sir, came to where I had my room.

Q. And you had a conversation? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Relate it?

A. He said, Sadie, did you find anything? And I said no, but I will have to go across the river to my Aunt's, in Waldron, Missouri, and see what I can do over there; and he said Rube wants me to go to Kansas City with him, I don't know whether I will be here when you get back, but if you find anything you come on home to Tulsa and let me know, and I told him all right. I didn't leave I don't think until about a day or two to go to my aunt's, I went to Waldron, and got a horse and buggy, it was muddy as could be and I couldn't find nothing, even where the graves had been—it was an old graveyard. I cane back Friday night to Leavenworth, and when I got back there there was a telegram for me.

Q. Who from?

A. From the Gem telling me to be there in the morning.

Q. To be at Tulsa? A. To be at Tulsa in the morning.

Q. What did you do?

A. I couldn't go that night, I had just got there; the next morning about eight o'clock I went down——

A. I couldn't go that night, I had just gotten there. The next morning about eight o'clock, I went down—that came over the Postal Telegraph Company—the telegram did—I went right down back there and sent another one to the Gem Oil Company, that I would be there in the morning—Sunday morning. I left there; I started down to Dennis'. It was the soldier's pay day, and me and Dennis had a job of business of our own up there. So, when I gets about the middle of the alley, I met my brother.

Q. What is his name?

A. Sam Nash—he is not my brother.

Q. You speak of him as your brother?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why do you speak of him as your brother?

A. We have been passing for brother and sister since '79 or '80; people knew we were not relatives.

Q. Did you have any conversation with him about the Atkins matter?

A. I did. I had had him way before that, but when I first come to Leavenworth the first part of the week, Martha Miller told me about my brother being drunk around there; she said, Sade, Sam ain't doing a thing but getting drunk around here in town. But I happened to meet him that morning going to Dennis' about eight o'clock, and my brother was drunk then.

Q. Did you have any conversation with him?

A. I did.

Q. Relate it.

Q. I said, Sam, you are running around here telling a lot of lies for this white man, and ain't getting a thing out of it but whiskey, and he said, no, he promised me a thousand dollars. He said he went down to the Jefferson hotel, here in Kansas City, and made me and Wall both drunk.

Q. Walter who?

A. Walter Banks—that is the boy my grandmother raised—Granny Letcher—and I said, this is a money case.

Q. Just wait a minute before you do that. What relationship was Sam Nash to Granny Letcher?

A. Her grandson—her daughter's son.

Q. Had she raised him?

A. Yes, Granny raised him from a small boy; his mother married another man and that forced her as his grandmother——

Q. What relationship was Walter Banks to Granny Letcher?

A. Walter's mother, on her deathbed—Fanny—that is his mother—gave Walter to my grandmother—and told her to raise him.

Q. And did she raise him?

A. She raised him until she died. I left Sam and went on to Dennis' office but we didn't talk nothing about that case. I was talking about this pay day business. That night, I left Leavenworth——

Q. Where did you go to?

A. Tulsa; Saturday night, September 19th; I left as soon as I got the money. I saw Dennis again that afternoon, after I drawed the money and went back and give him some of it, and I left.

Q. Well, did you go to Tulsa?

A. Yes, sir, got there Sunday morning.

Q. Who did you see?

A. I didn't see anybody but I called up Mr. Page.

Q. Did you talk with him on the telephone?

A. Yes, sir; told him I was back.

Q. What was the conversation?

A. They sent me a telegram and I said, Mr. Page, I am in town, and he said, you meet me down at my station at the end of Third Street—he has got a station there—about two o'clock; and I told him, alright. About two o'clock, I went out there by myself.

Q. You met Mr. Page? A. I met Mr. Page.

Q. Did you have a conversation with him?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. About your work?

A. About my work.

Q. And what was that conversation?

A. I said, Mr. Page, I can't find nothing; and he said, well, you just let that go, Dennis will have to do that; he guaranteed to do it. That is what he said to me. I didn't stay there very long; I came back to town. That was, now, in September. Just about a week before they went to take depositions at Leavenworth, I went up to Mr. Page's office. Remember, I was running back and forth to Mr. Page's office every two or three days, but not on this case—something else.

Q. Alright. A. But, in about two weeks after that——

Q. After what?

A. After I got back from Leavenworth, they was getting ready to take depositions at Leavenworth in the case, and Mr. Page said, Sadie——

Q. You went to Mr. Page's office in this matter?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was said?

A. He said, Sadie, we are getting ready to take depositions at Leavenworth; I want you to go, because you can handle Minnie, and while you are up there, I want you to get a deed from her, unbeknown to Hanford, and you tell her that the money that has been paid to her, she is not getting it; Hanford and MacNab are using it for themselves. He said, if you get Minnie to sign that deed, I will give you a thousand dollars. I said, alright. I left Mr. Page's office——

Q. Where did you go?

A. I went to my attorney's office—C. S. Walker's.

Q. Did you have a conversation with him about this matter? A. I did.

Q. At his office? A. At his office.

Q. Relate that conversation.

A. I said, Mr. Walker, we are fixing to take depositions up at Leavenworth, and I am going, and he said, you going to testify? And I said, no, nobody got money enough for me to testify that Minnie Atkins ever had a son name of Thomas Atkins; and he said, Judge Allen, is going to be up there to set in that case, and you stay away from there; and I said, I am going up there and get a deed—get her to sign a deed.

Q. Did you tell him who you were going to get to sign a deed? A. I did—told him, yes sir.

Q. Who did you tell him?

A. Well, I haven't mentioned his name and of course I would like not to say who I told him I was going to get a deed for, because that man has never been mentioned in the case, and I rather not say who. He has been a very good friend of mine and I will answer it if you so so, though——

Q. I thought you were referring to the deed that you were going to get for Mr. Page?

A. Yes, sir, but before that time, if you want me to tell who it was for, I will tell it.

Q. Go on, and tell what you are getting this deed for.

Mr. Stuart: We will get that on cross examination, Sadie.

A. I will tell it.

Q. Did Mr. Page have anything to do with it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The other deed you are referring to?

A. The same deed, I am talking about him and another man; talking to me about their deed.

Q. Who and another man?

A. Mr. Page and another man talking about their deed.

Q. Had they talked about it before you talked to your lawyer? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, who was the other man? A. Shall I tell it?

Q. Yes. A. Bill Creekmore.

Q. Where was that conversation?

A. The conversation was right in Mr. Page's office.

Q. When was that? A. The same day.

Q. The same day Mr. Page told you?

A. To go up there and get it, yes, sir.

Q. Was Mr. Creekmore present at the conversation you referred to when they desired you to get a deed?

A. I had been up there—Mr. Creekmore had been up there several times before that with Mr. Page, yes sir.

Q. I see.

A. Yes, sir, but I didn't care anything about saying anything about Mr. Creekmore because he——

Q. Had been a friend of yours?

A. A friend of mine when I was running the road-house for him, and I didn't care to mention it.

> Mr. Hanford: I move to strike the answer as not responsive to the question. I would like to have that question answered.

Q. Now, Sadie, relate the conversation when they desired you to obtain the deed from Minnie.

A. Between Mr. Creekmore and Mr. Page, now, and myself?

Q. That is right; that conversation.

A. Mr. Creekmore was in the office that day; we had been there two or three times before that, talking—not on that case, though; Mr. Creekmore, and Mr. Page, and I, lots of times, on a business matter of our own—not this.

Q. Alright.

A. Mr. Creekmore was in there, and Mr. Page says, when you get Minnie to sign this deed, it will be for your friend here, Bill; and you will get a thousand dollars if she sign it. Mr. Creekmore said, well, Charlie, why don't you get it; let the deed be signed in your name? He said, no, that will look too bad; he said, I have got a lease and I don't want the deed, but Bill, you take it. So, when I goes down to my lawyer's office, I told told Charlie Walker——

Q. You told Charlie Walker this conversation?

A. I told my lawyer that it was Mr. Creekmore that I was going to get the deed for.

Q. I see. A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, have you told all of the conversation that you had with your lawyer about obtaining that deed?

A. Yes, sir, about staying away from there; he told me not to go up there; that Judge Allen was going to set in that, because he was——

Q. You told him about your plan of obtaining the deed?

A. Yes, sir, that I wasn't going to testify.

Q. Did you go to Leavenworth?

A. No, I didn't go to Leavenworth.

Q. Where did you go to?

A. I came here to my daughter's; here in Kansas City, and the rest went on to Leavenworth.

Q. Who is the rest? A. The rest?

Q. Yes.

A. Mr. Page, and Mr. Josey, and Mr. Frank Long.

Q. Was Mr. Hanford along?

A. I didn't see none of them; he told me that was who was going.

Q. But you didn't come up here with them, then?

A. No, sir.

Q. You don't know whether Mr. Page came or not, of your own personal knowledge?

A. I know when he got back, what he said; I don't know that he came but he was supposed to be and I was supposed to meet them in Leavenworth.

Q. You came to Kansas City?

A. I came as far as Kansas City, yes, sir; I was going to try to get a deed here.

Q. Did you see anyone with reference to this case, when you got to Kansas City?

A. I saw a white man here, yes, but I refuse to call his name. He was interested in the case.

Q. Was he representing the Page interests?

A. No, sir, he just wanted to see what they were going to swear to up there, is all; he was going up in the day on the Electric car and coming down here in the night, telling me what was going on up there.

Q. Keeping you advised as to what they were swearing to at Leavenworth? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see Mr. Page, or Mr. Long, in Kansas City?

A. I didn't see none of them.

Q. What next occurred as far as you were concerned with reference to the case?

A. I went home and I stayed here a couple of days, I guess—maybe more—and I went back to Tulsa, and about two days after I got back to Tulsa,—yes, two days—I went up to Mr. Page's office.

Q. Who did you see there?

A. Mr. Page sitting there in his office.

Q. Did you have a conversation with him? A. I did.

Q. Relate it.

A. He was sitting up there, looking pretty bad. He spoke to me first and I said, hello, Mr. Page; and he said, hello, and I said, how is everything coming off at Leavenworth; and he said, Sadie, Minnie broke down and she can't stand it, and we can't get her to testify. He said, Long tried to pacify her, and we got her some whiskey and she blowed up. And I said, where is Minnie, and he said, I left her there, and as soon as we get her under control, we are going to bring her back here and let her testify; and I said, has Dennis found a grave up there, and he said no; and I said, what did the witnesses say about the boy? And he said they swore the boy up in the air until he was 14 years old and left him there; and I said, my, that is bad, I said, that testimony helps the Gipsy; and he said, yes, the Gipsy, strong; he said, they are swearing he is living and we are swearing he is dead, and the Gypsy is going to make us prove where he died, and we got to find a grave. The Gypsy was crowding us awfully close; put detectives on Dennis and he couldn't find no grave—couldn't do nothing. And I left.

Q. Left his office?

A. Yes, he was looking bad. I didn't say nothing more to him; I got out of there.

Q. Where did you go to? A. To my home.

Q. When did anything else occur as far as you are concerned with reference to the case?

A. About a week, I guess, that long—maybe a little longer——

Q. What occurred then?

A. I went to Mr. Page's office—I was going in there but to talk about this matter.

Q. Did you find Mr. Page?

A. Found Mr. Page by himself.

Q. Did a conversation take place between you and him?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Relate it.

A. He said, Sadie, Minnie and Hanford are in Long's room, they had brought her back from Leavenworth, and he said, you can handle Minnie. I want you to go in there and talk to her; and I said, Mr. Page, I don't want to see Minnie. By the time I got through speaking, Frank Long walked in and he said, Mr. Page, we are ready now, Hanford and I, going to take Minnie up to Ben Rice's office, and rehearse her, because we notified the Gypsy that to-morrow we will be ready for trial. Mr. Page said, I will be up there after a while. Frank Long walked out of the room and left the door open. I goes up and peeps through the door; he left a crack like this, and I said to Mr. Page, I said, I want to see Minnie, I haven't seen her——

Q. Alright.

A. Since in June. I peeped at the door. Frank Long and Hanford and Minnie got on the elevator and started up stairs; I supposed to Mr. Rice's office—started up stairs, and I came back and sat down and Mr. Page said, Sadie, I wish Minnie had as much sense as you've got, we wouldn't have the trouble with her that we are having now; and I said, I wish I did have the chance to make that money. That time somebody came in and I went out.

Q. Where did you go to?

A. Home; and about three days I came back to Mr. Page's office.

Q. What occurred then?

A. I said, Mr. Page, how did Minnie do; and he said, done well. And I said, she did; and he said yes, it won't be but a few days now and we will have everything alright.

Q. That was with reference to the manner in which she testified?

A. Yes, sir, that was after they rehearsed her.

Q. She hadn't yet given her deposition?

A. Yes, sir, she had given it at Tulsa and I waited two or three days after when she testified before the Gypsy, and I asked how she done before the Gypsy.

Q. Prior to the time that she gave that deposition, did you talk to her there?

A. I hadn't seen Minnie until I peeped through that door since she run in the Fort, I hadn't seen her.

Q. What else did Mr. Page say with reference to Minnie?

A. Not at that time. A week, about two weeks, I guess, I was back up there again on this matter I am speaking of. I don't mean that I stayed away from there that long—I mean on this matter. Mr. Page and Frank Long was in the office.

Q. Did you have a conversation with them? A. I did.

Q. Relate the conversation.

A. Mr. Page, he said, Sadie, you ought to handle Nancy.

Q. Handle who?

A. Nancy, that is Minnie's sister; and I said I can, and he said, I want you to go to Nowata and see if you can get the truth out out of Nancy about her baby.

Q. Nancy Atkins?

A. At Nowata, yes, sir. And if you can get a confession out of Nancy. I want you to take her to Kansas City, steal her from her guardian and take her to Kansas City. and in Kansas City, Long will be at the Baltimore hotel and he will meet you there, and I want you to take her and Harjo in the Courthouse, and get them to testify about the truth about the baby.

Q. About what baby? A. About Nancy's baby.

Q. Alright.

A. And take them from there to Seattle to live with Minnie and you tell Nancy that if she will do that, I will give her a thousand dollars, and I will give you a thousand dollars. I said, Mr. Page, it will take a lot of money for me to go to Nowata, and get people to get Nancy out of Nowata to Kansas City, because that is a dangerous job, and he said, I know it; he said, you make arrangements with the people to get Nancy out of Nowata, and I will furnish the money. You pay them because I don't want to see them; I am only dealing with you. He said, when do you want to go? That was on Wednesday. I said, I will go this afternoon. Long said, where are you going to stop at; and I said, I am going to stop at a cousin's of mine in Nowata, and he asked me the name of my cousin and I told him. I said Nelson Grubbs. He asked me what the name was, and he said, I will tell you what you do; when you get to Nowata, he said, you go to Jefferies—do you know him; and I said, why I have heard about him—seen lots about him in the paper. He said, you go to Jefferies and tell him you are working for me, because he is a friend of mine, and tell him where you are stopping at, so that if I want to send you word, or you want to send me word, Jefferies will know where to get you at, and I said, alright. I left that night.

Q. Where did you go? A. Nowata.

Q. What did you do?

A. I found my cousin at his house.

Q. What is his name?

A. Nelson Grubbs. I went out to Nelson's house and I said, Nelse, I've got a job and I want you to help me handle it; and he said, what is it? And I said, I came up here to steal Nancy, and I said, you got much control over Nancy; and he said, no, I ain't; I know a white woman here that has, Mrs. Yarboro, and that she is a dressmaker; she can get Nancy to do anything. And he said, on my way back to town, I will stop and see her, and tell her who you are. That evening about four o'clock, my cousin came home, and I was supposed to be hid. I didn't go up in Nowata; he lives way out from Nowata, in the edge of town. He said, about four o'clock, when he got back, Mrs. Yarboro wanted to meet me, so he and I went down about eight o'clock Thursday night.

Q. Did you have a conversation with her? A. I did.

Q. Tell what it was.

A. I said, Mrs. Yarboro, I came up here to steal Nancy; I want to get a confession from Nancy about her baby and get her away from here; and she said, I will tell you, I can handle Nancy, but people are beating her out of her money, and not giving her nothing, and she said how much are you going to give her; and I said, about a thousand dollars. She said, I will do this: I will go with you to Nancy if you will let me be her guardian over this thousand dollars, so I can buy Nancy a home out of this thousand dollars; and I said, I will be satisfied with that. I said, what will you do that for, Mrs. Yarboro? And she said, I don't know; I never was in a case like that before; and I said, I will give you a hundred dollars if you get Nancy to do it—get her over here to your house. We left that night at Mrs. Yarboro, and went to my cousin's and the next morning about nine o'clock, she sent her little girl after me.

Q. To come back to Mrs. Yarboro's?

A. I went back to Mrs. Yarboro's, and Nancy was in the house when I got there.

Q. Did you have a talk with her?

A. I talked with Nancy.

Q. Relate the conversation.

A. I said, hello, Nancy—it had been a good while since I had seen her—I said, Nancy I came up here after you; and I said, I came up here to make some money for you.

And thereupon a recess is taken until 7:30 o'clock P. M.

And thereafter and at 7:30 o'clock P. M., further testimony herein was taken as follows:

SADIE JAMES being recalled further testified as follows:

Direct Eaxmination by Mr. German.

Q. Sadie, what is the name of the dressmaker at Nowata?

A. Mrs. Yarboro, a white woman.

Q. Before we adjourned, you were relating a conversation that you had with her, or with Nancy, I mean, at her home on the second day that you were at Nowata?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, will you proceed to relate that conversation?

A. Mrs. Yarboro sent over the next morning to my house —that is, after I had been down to her house that night— about half past nine when the little girl came; had a note, saying for me to come right away over there to Mrs. Yarboro's house. And I got over there and found Nancy in the house and Mrs. Yarboro. I said, Nancy, I have come, I said, to see you to make some money. She said, what's doing. Well, I said, Nancy, I want you to tell me the truth about your baby, and she looked up at Mrs. Yarboro when I said that, and she wouldn't answer. I beckoned Mrs. Yarboro to go out of the room; we were in the kitchen. I said, Nancy, who got you to tell that lie, I said, about your baby. She said, Bettie Harjo —Bettie Ann Harjo—she said, they told me my sister Minnie was dead and that all I had to do was to say that my little girl was a boy, and I would make the money, and after I went in the courthouse and swore, I didn't get the money. They put a guardian over me, and she said, just look here—I have got no shoes on my feet, and I ain't had no money since. I said, well, Nancy, I want to tell you, I want you to go to Kansas City, and from there to Portland, Oregon, and see Harjo. By that time, Mrs. Yarboro had got back in the room—she same in there—

Q. What was Harjo's given name—Micco?

A. Micco Harjo. Mrs. Yarboro walked in then and she said, oh, I am afraid of Harjo.

Q. Who said that?

A. Nancy. She said, if I see him coming now, I would just run myself to death, and I said, you used to be crazy about Harjo, and she said, yes, but after Harjo took my money away from me and spent it on Millie—that was his wife—he got mean to me. And I said, Nancy, why didn't you recognize Minnie when she was down to court? She said, Mr. White told me if I recognized Minnie, that I wouldn't get no more money; Minnie would get it, and told me to stay away from Minnie—Minnie would poison me. I said, oh, no, Nancy she wouldn't do that; I said, will you go, Nancy, if I come and take you away; and she said why yes. The- she jumped up; Nancy is very hard to handle, and Nancy got up then and left. So I stayed at Mrs. Yarboro's from about half past nine in the morning until four o'clock in the evening before I went out of the house. Mrs. Yarboro said to me after Nancy was gone, Mrs. James, how will I know that Nancy is going to get this money, and who are you working for? I said, I am working for Charles Page, and as socn as I got arrangements fixed, I was to call Mr. Page right up; and she said, you can call him right up in this house, and let me know if you are working for him and not fooling Nancy.

Q. Did you call him up? A. I did, yes, sir.

Q. What name did you give him?

A. I name was Mrs. Whittaker; I gave my name as Whittaker, calling over her 'phone.

Q. Where did you call Mr. Page?

A. Here is the 'phone and she was standing right here trying to listen to the coversation, because she didn't believe I was working for Mr. Page.

Q. You called him at Tulsa?

A. At Tulsa, yes, sir. Wasn't very long before I got him. I said, hello, Mr. Page.

Q. Relate the conversation you had with him on the telephone.

A. I said, hello, Mr. Page, do you know who this is? He said, it is Sadie, and I said, yes; and he said, Sadie, how have you got things up there at Nowata? And I said, I have got all the arrangements made; I said, you have the money for me to night because I will be back on the train and I will have to get right out of there before day, and I won't want anyone to see me. Now, can I call myself back to Tulsa before I left?

Q. Before you left Tulsa? A. Yes.

Q. In a conversation with whom?

A. In a conversation I had with a man about helping to steal Nancy.

Q. Where was it, and who was it?

A. That was Piano Bill there in Tulsa, a white man.

Q. A white man? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What does he do?

A. Piano player and gambler, around there.

Q. Did you have a conversation with him?

A. Yes, sir, before I went to Nowata.

Q. Relate it.

A. I went down to the Oliver hotel, and he was standing down there and I called him off to the side, and I said, Bill, do you want to make some money; and he said, yes—what doing? And I said, I am going up the road and try to steal somebody from a guardian, and I will need an automobile to get her out of the town. He said, just wait a minute. There were two or three machines standing in front of the Oliver, and he called one man off a little piece and talked to him, and came back to me and said, Sadie, that man is alright and will do the job for three hundred dollars, and I said, alright, it might be two or three nights, though, before I will need you, and he said, alright, and you will find me right here when you get ready. He always stayed around there at the Oliver place. Now, I will go back to my telephone.

Q. Alright; go back to the telephone conversation with Mr. Page.

A. Alright. I said, Mr. Page, I have got everything alright now. and you get the money and have it for me because —so I will get into Tulsa tonight on that train and have to get right out; and he says, alright, I will get it and I will have Long meet you at that depot tonight, Sadie. That was the end of that conversation. That was about four o'clock in the evening.

Q. What did you do next?

A. I went out to Mrs. Yarboro's house then. Nancy stayed with some people that claimed to be cousins of mine—Josie Fair and Julia Patterson—I went over there and Nancy was there.

Q. Did they live together, Josie and Julia?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Alright; what happened?

A. Nancy was there. I said, Julia do you want to make some money, and she said, yes. I said, well, I want you to help me to get Nancy out of here, and I will be back tomorrow night about seven o'clock—that is Friday—and I will have a machine, and you and Mrs. Yarboro, and I and Nancy will leave, I said; Mrs. Yarboro will get off at Coffeyville, but we will go right on to Kansas City, because we want to meet Frank Long there. Then I told Josie, her sister, I said, Josie, if I get Nancy away from here, I will give you $25—she wasn't going to be in the deal at all—and I said, you keep Nancy right here until I come back here to-morrow evening. Nancy's guardian's wife had died and he was down in Alabama. Mr. Long had found out before I had ever left Tulsa. He said, Sadie, the guardian is down in Alabama and you have got a good chance.

Q. You say Mr. Long told you before you went to Claremore?

A. I mean before I went to Nowata; found out that Nancy's guardian was gone.

Q. Was that before or after Mr. Page had had his conference with you?

A. That was right in there while Mr. Page and I were talking.

Q. That Mr. Long told you that?

A. Yes, sir, that Nancy's guardian had died—that is a colored man there in Nowata and he was out of town and told me I would have to be careful and watch Mrs. Looney.

Q. Was she the—who was she?

A. I don't know who Mrs. Looney was; I didn't know her.

Q. But that is what Mr. Long told you?

A. Yes, that is what he told me.

Q. Alright; go back to the——

A. That evening, about six o'clock——

Q. You are back to Nowata, are you?

A. I am in Nowata yet.

Q. After the conversation with Nancy and Josie?

A. With Josie, yes, sir. Nancy was in the house when I got over there, and I asked Nancy, will you leave, and she said, yes, I am going over to—I forget the guardian's name now—and get my clothes now. And she got a suit case and packed it and brought it back to Josie's—back to Josie Pierce's; the suit case with the clothes in it.

Q. Then what occurred?

A. I left that evening; I think the train left at 6:38 coming back to Tulsa.

Q. Now, what did she pack her suit case?

A. Stealing her clothes out of her guardian's house and bringing them over to Josie's so she would have them.

Q. Had she agreed to go with you?

A. Yes, sir, she agreed to go.

Q. Where? A. In Mrs. Yarboro's house.

Q. What had she said about going?

A. Mrs. Yarboro said, Nancy I will go with you, provided you will let me be guardian, and take that money and buy you a house next to me, and Nancy had consented for Mrs. Yarboro to be guardian.

Q. Had she consented to go?

A. Yes, and Mrs. Yarboro was going too.

Q. What did Nancy say when she consented to go with you? A. What did Nancy say?

Q. Yes. A. She said she would go.

Q. You say you left?

A. I left Nowata about 6:28 that evening.

Q. Where did you go to?

A. Went to Claremore; had to change trains there, and wait for the train.

Q. You went from Nowata to Claremore on the Missouri Pacific? A. On the Missouri Pacific.

Q. And there you caught the Frisco for where?

A. Tulsa.

Q. What did you do when you got to Tulsa?

A. Well, when I got to Tulsa, Frank Long and my husband were at the depot.

Q. Did you talk with them?

A. Frank Long said——

Q. Tell what the conversation was.

A. We didn't have the conversation on the street.

Q. You did not?

A. No, a lot of people were at the depot and Frank Long told me, Sadie, you and Will follow me—that is my husband.

Q. What did you do?

Q. We followed him and went up to the First National Bank Building.

Q. What time was this?

A. It must have been half past ten or eleven at night.

Q. You went up in the First National Bank Building?

A. Went up there, and the elevator wasn't running, so we walked up to the office.

Q. What occurred then?

A. Frank Long said, did you make the deal; and I said, yes; and he said, you got to watch Looneys awful careful now, Did Nancy say she would go? And I said, yes; and he said, I have got some money but I don't know whether I have got enough—how much do you want? I said, I want $740; he said, that is enough to buy Nowata; and I said, if you can go up there and get the deals done any cheaper, said, you do it. He said, no, I don't give a damn if you drag Nancy out of there by the hair of the head, just so you get her out of there. I said, I didn't tell you to send me up there no how, about that deal, and he said, I will call Mr. Page. He went to the telephone—right in the room where we were, and called Mr. Page, and this is what he said to Mr. Page;—Mr. Page, Sadie is here and I haven't got enough money for her, what will I do? Mr. Page must have told him because Long told me Mr. Page wants to talk to you, Sadie, and I went to the 'phone, then.

Q. Did you have a conversation with Mr. Page over the 'phone? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was that conversation?

A. I said, Mr. Page, Mr. Long hasn't got enough money for me to make that trip.

Q. Now finish that conversation, if you haven't, on the telephone.

A. He said, Sadie, I am with Bill tonight, old friend Bill, and he said——

Q. Bill who? A. Talking about Bill Creekmore.

Q. Go ahead.

A. And he said you meet me in the office in the morning and I will have money enough. We went home that night and the next morning about ten o'clock, I went back up to Mr. Page's office.

Q. Did you have a conversation with him?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Relate it.

A. He asked me what Nancy said and I told him, and I said, now, I have made the deal, I said, and I want $740 and Long wouldn't give it to me, and he said, Sadie, that is a lot of money; you take five hundred dollars and go back up there. And I said, no, I ain't going to deal with no cheap people and help steal Nancy out; I said, it will take three hundred dollars to get an automobile to go up to Kansas City. And he said, well, we will just drop that for a while; so I didn't go.

Q. You didn't go?

A. I didn't go back, no sir. That was on a Saturday morning; on a Sunday, I don't but that was—someone called me over the 'phone—sent word out that I had a 'phone—and when I got up to the telephone office, wouldn't tell me who the name was.

Q. Did they talk with you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. On the telephone? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did they say?

A. Said, don't come back up here, Sadie, because you are going to get arrested for trying to kidnap Nancy.

Q. Where was the call from? A. From Nowata.

Q. I understand.

A. And I haven't been back up to Nowata.

Q. Since then?

A. Since then, no, sir. So then, I guess about near a week after that, Judge Williams——

Q. Mr. Williams, your lawyer?

A. Yes, sir, one of my attorneys, had found out that the Gypsy——

Q. How did you know that he had?

A. That is what he told me.

Q. You had a conversation with him, did you?

A. Yes, sir, after I was up in the office; I didn't go up there to see him about that.

Q. Well, you needn't state. A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did he tell you?

A. He said, Sadie, I see where the Gypsy and the Gem are to get together and if course if they do, that it will end the law suit between the two, and your contract will be fulfilled, and he said, I would go down and ask them for some money, if I was you. I hadn't heard anything about it but I had been going in the office every day.

Q. You were still working for Page under that contract for him?

A. Sure, I never quit working for him until about November 12th.

Q. When was this conversation with your attorney?

A. Along between the last of October, or the first of November, and I went right out of Judge William's office and went up to Mr. Josey's.

Q. Did you talk with Mr. Josey?

A. Talked with Mr. Josey, yes sir.

Q. Let me ask you, now; when was it you talked with Mr. Josey?

A. When I got to his office.

Q. About the last of October, you say?

A. I say about the last, or first of November.

Q. 1914?

A. '14, yes, sir; went right down to Mr. Josey's.

Q. Did you have a conversation with him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was said by both you and him?

A. Mr. Josey and I went throught the room that Mr. Eberle worked in all the time.

Q. Who is Mr. Eberle?

A. The private secretary, or something, to the Gem Oil Company, and went in Mr. Josey's office, and I said, Mr. Josey, I see where you and the Gypsy are about to get together, and he said, yes, you know the reason we done that, he said, we got Minnie but the Gypsy has got the land, and the laws of Oklahoma are so funny that the Gypsy could keep it in court five or six years and we wouldn't make any money, and by getting together, the Gypsy has got good lawyers and we got good lawyers, and we would soon have the Nancy whipped out and they will have nothing. I said, Mr. Josey, I want some money; and he said, of course you can have some spending money, and he said, Eberle, write Sadie out a check for a hundred dollars. When he said that, he went out of his office, and when he returned, he had another man with him—something we had never done—talked with strangers before—he brought the stranger in and said, Sadie, this is Mr. Kinnye, a friend of mine. By that time, Mr. Eberle had the check wrote out, and he said, Sadie bring the contract here and let Mr. Eberle put the hundred dollars on it; and I said, no, I wouldn't do that. He said, bring the contract here and put the money on it, and I said, it is down in the bank; and he said, how in Hell are we going to pay you any money on your contract when it is down in the bank. And he said, you and Eberle go down and bring it up here and let him put that hundred dollars on it; and I said, No, I won't do that; I will tell you what I will do. I will go up town and get my lawyer and bring him down here, and him and Mr. Eberle will do it; and he said, you don't need no lawyer for that. I said, I will be back; and I walked out of the door, and wouldn't take the check, and the next morning, I went to Judge Williams and told him what was said, and wanted him to go down there. I had taken him down to Mr. Josey's office about eleven o'clock.

Q. Did you see Mr. Josey when you got there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have a conversation with him?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was said by either of you, or by all of you, I should say.

A. In the office when we got back down there?

Q. Yes.

A. Mr. Josey was in the office, and Judge Williams said, Mr. Josey, I came up here to see about Sadie's contract, and he said, I didn't make no contract with Sadie, you will have to go and see Page. And he jumped up and went out of the room, and Mr. Williams came back and talked to Mr. Eberle about ten minutes and Judge Williams and I walked into Mr. Page's room.

Q. Mr. Page in, then? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you talk with him?

A. Judge Williams did, I didn't.

Q. Did you overhear the conversation?

A. I was right there; standing listening to my lawyer.

Q. What was said?

A. Judge Williams, said, Mr. Page, I came up here to see about Sadie's money, and I went to see Mr. Josey and Mr. Josey said come to you. And Mr. Page said, Josey is mad; he is one of these men that come from Texas and tell negroes to stand back and they have to stand back. I don't care nothing about Josey's madness, Sadie's contract has been filled and she deserves the money. That was Mr. Page talking. Why then, he says, I will pay her what I owe her; he said, who will I pay it to? Judge Williams said, I don't care nothing about Josey's madness; her contract has been filled, and she deserves the money.

Q. Relate that over.

A. Judge Williams said, I don't care nothing about Josey's madness; Sadie's contract has been filled and she deserves the money; and Mr. Page, said, yes, Sadie has done all she can do and she deserves the money, and just as soon as I and the Gypsy get the papers signed, I will see that she gets every cent of it, and Mr. Page said, who will I pay it to; and Judge Williams said, that is left to Sadie. Judge Williams turned to me—we were standing close to Mr. Page—and said, Sadie, who do you want that money paid to; and I said, I want it paid to you, Judge. Mr. Page said, well, Judge, I will call you up in four or five days because I know we will have the papers signed by that time. So we went on down stairs and I went home, and in about four days—well, I guess it was—well, three days, about, after that—one morning about eight o'clock Bettie Mann came to my house.

Q. Did you have a conversation with her?

A. Yes, sir, after I let her in.

Q. What was said before she got in?

A. When she knocked on the door, I got up and let her in.

Q. Alright.

A. I said, what are you doing over here this soon in the morning?

Q. Tell all you and she said.

A. I said, what are you doing over here this soon in the morning? She said, I am as mad as the devil; and I said, what are you mad about? And she said, oh, Page owes me three thousand dollars and he won't pay me; said, I went up there yesterday after some money and he sent me to Long, and Long sent me to Josey. She said, I am going to blow this damn case up. I said, Bettie, you don't know so much about that case; and she said, yes, I do. Do you know when I was working for Hanford and Long, before you got Dennis to go into it? I ran around with them in Kansas City, trying to start a lie, and up to Leavenworth. And she said, I was with you, and you had taken me down to Dennis', and got Dennis to start that lie. I said, well, you can't do nothing with it alright; and she said, I know what I will do——

Q. What was it you said?

A. You can't do nothing with it, I said to her; she said I know what I will do—I will get on the train and go to Muskogee and tell Judge Allen that you framed up the case and he will throw you in jail. Well, that talk sounded too loud to me and I had to get her quiet. She stayed there about a half an hour longer—she had been there quite a bit; she left to go up on Greenwood. I had my clothes on by that time and I went up to Mr. Page's office and he wasn't in, and I went to Mr. Josey.

Q. Did you see him? A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. Talk to him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was said?

A. I said, Mr. Josey, Bettie is raising a lot of sand around here in this case, and she is talking about blowing it up. He said, oh, Bettie is a crook and nobody will believe her; and I said, yes, but she told me she was going over to Muskogee and tell Judge Allen that I framed it up; and he said, why Sadie, Judge Allen is a personal friend of mine and should Bettie do any showing up, I will see that she serves that seven years. That wasn't no satisfaction to me. I came out and came up to Mr. Page's office, and he had come.

Q. He had come? A. Yes, sir, in his office.

Q. Did you talk with him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was said?

A. He said, hello, Sadie; and I said, Mr. Page, Bettie is raising a lot of sand around here in town, and she is talking about blowing this case up; and he said, everybody knows old Bettie. I will call up Judge Breckenridge and her bondsmen, and have her throwed in jail. And I said, yes, but she says she is going to go to Muskogee and tell Judge Allen that I framed up the case, and have me put in jail. And I said, I am afraid; and when I told him I was afraid, he looked up at me then, and he said, Sadie, I will tell you what I will do—I was scared, too—he said, I will tell you what I will do; I will give you two hundred dollars and you go to Leavenworth, Kansas, and stay there until I get Bettie quiet. I said, Mr. Page, two hundred dollars ain't enough for me to leave home; and he said, Well, Sadie, next month, I will give you two hundred dollars more, and from that on, I will give you fifty dollars a month until I get things settled. He said, when do you want to leave, and I said, I want to get out of town as soon as I can. He called over the 'phone——

Q. Who did he call? A. He called Mr. Eberle.

Q. Where was this conversation?

A. In Mr. Page's office; no one there but Mr. Page and I. Mr. Eberle came in there.

Q. He has a private 'phone system in there?

A. Yes, a private system.

Q. What was said after he came?

A. After he came, Mr. Page said, Eberle, write Sadie out a check for two hundred dollars; and he said, you know, Sadie, I let you have two hundred dollars of my own money not long ago.

Q. Who said that?

A. Mr. Page. And I said, yes; and when Mr. Eberle went back and came back with the check, signed it up, he said, I tell you what you do, Sadie—you and Eberle go down stairs and get that contract and bring it up here and we will put it on your contract as part payment. I said, no, I got to go down stairs to get my check cashed and Mr. Eberle can go with me down there and put that on my contract, and still leave it in the bank.

Q. How much was that check?

A. That check was for two hundred dollars, and the one the week before that. was for fifty, and he gave me that money at the Central, but the two hundred check was the Exchange National. Mr. Eberle and I started down stairs and Mr. Page, said, Sadie, when you get through, you come back up here.

Q. Who said that? A. Mr. Page.

Q. Did you go to the bank? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you get any cash on the check?

A. No, I asked Mr. Bradshaw for the contract, and I said, let Mr. Eberle have the contract—he wants to put the money on it, so he got the contract and Mr. Eberle put the amount two hundred and fifty dollars on it.

Q. Sadie, I show you Government's Exhibit No. 42, and will ask you to state whether or not the notation appearing there, dated November 10th, 1914, is the memorandum made at the time you referred to? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. German: We offer the memorandum appearing in writing at the bottom of the contract which is Government's Exhibit No. 42.

Mr. Hanford: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

Q. Then did you get the cash on that check, Sadie?

A. I went to the bank down stairs, and when they looked at it, they said, well, this is on the Exchange National; and I said, well, you have been cashing checks down here for me; and they said, well, they have been small, and we are not going to cash that check. And I went over to the Exchange National, and signed it and put it up there to be cashed, and the banker said, you will have to get some one to identify you; don't you know any one here?

Q. Did you get anyone to identify you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who did you get?

A. I looked around and Mr. Gilmore, the janitor at the bank—at the Exchange National——

Q. A colored man?

A. A colored man—I have known him four or five years before that—I said, here, your janitor here knows me; so they called Mr. Gilmore up there, and I called him Brother Gilmore because he used to belong to the church long ago. I said, Brother Gilmore, will you identify me; and he said, yes, sir. Brother Gilmore came up there and said—the man said to him do you know this woman, and he said, yes, that is Sadie James, I know her. He said, this check is for two hundred dollars, and Brother Gilmore said, that is alright; so the banker gives me the money, and I goes back across the street then.

Q. Who did you see? A. Mr. Page's office——

Q. Who did you see at his office?

A. Nobody but Mr. Page.

Q. Did you have a conversation with him?

A. Just a short one.

Q. Relate it.

A. He said, now Sadie, when you get to Leavenworth, you write me so that I will know where you are, and if everything goes alright, you can come on back home.

Q. Let me ask if the deposition had been taken in Leavenworth before this? A. Oh, long ago; this was way in November.

Q. The depositions had been taken in October.

A. About the—I guess about the middle of October some place, the depositions had been taken.

Q. Alright; go ahead. Was there anything else said?

A. No, sir.

Q. In that conversation?

A. No, sir, but I pulled out of there and left for Leavenworth that night, getting out of Bettie's way and Judge Allen's.

Q. Sadie, in the course of your testimony this afternoon, you stated that Mr. Crawley, of the Gypsy Oil Company, had seen you and Dennis Jones on the street, when on the occasion of Dennis' first visit to Tulsa—— A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did you know—how did you learn that he had seen you?

A. Well, about three days after Mr. Page came home, I had been up to the office.

Q. Home from where?

A. From up at Leavenworth, and said that Minnie broke down.

Q. After the depositions?

A. After the depositions taken at Leavenworth, I went to the Gypsy to see what they thought about the case. I was running backward and forward up in there, too, and Mr. Crawley was in the office.

Q. Did you have a conversation with him? A. I did.

Q. Relate that conversation.

A. He said, Sadie, he said, that was rotten testimony up there at Leavenworth; they got that boy up to 14 years old and couldn't get him no further; and he said old Dennis Jones had a string of negroes lined up and you could tell that they had been framed and he said, I am going to throw old Dennis in the Pen; he said that he got on the witness stand and swore that he never had been in Tulsa, and he said, I saw you and him at 3rd and Main, myself, and he said, didn't I; and I said, yes, sir. And he said, I thought Dennis Jones was too shrewd a man for that. He said, what became of that—he said, something is wrong about this case; and I said, no, there ain't—I told him a lie—I said no, there ain't—I said, a man took the boy away, and they don't just know where they was. I seen Mr. Crawly was pretty sore and didn't believe it, and I walked on out of there.

Q. When you got to Leavenworth after getting that two hundred dollars, did you see Dennis or Rube?

A. I didn't see Rube right away bit I hadn't drawed no money up there for about two or three months on that deal of Dennis' and I, and I went to Dennis' the next morning after I got there.

Q. The next morning, did you have a conversation with him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Relate what was said.

A. You mean on this case?

Q. On this case, yes, sir.

A. On this case. I said Dennie, there is going to be some trouble on that case down there; I said, you better come on clean because the Government is after me, and I said, we can get out of it easy now. Dennis said, I quit working for the Gypsy for you and went to working for the Gem, and I have been in the court house and swore and I ain't going to take it back. He said, I don't know what the laws of Oklahoma are, but they don't reach Kansas. I said, alright; you are going to get in some trouble. Now, that was the next day after I got there. About five or six days after that, I met Dennis on the corner of Fourth and Delaware, there at the bank—German bank——

Q. Did you have a conversation with him there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was said there?

A. I am trying to think what that conversation was that Dennis and I had. I told him I was going to see Rube.

Q. Did you tell him you were going to see Rube?

A. Yes, sir. He told me not to tell Rube nothing about it because Rube would give it up. Well, I didn't see him no more, because I had been there, then, about a week and a half in Leavenworth.

Q. Well, what next occurred with reference to this case? Who did you next see, or talk with, with reference to this case?

A. I saw Mr. Buell, and Mr. Robinson. I had been there about a week and a half, I guess; I went—to come back to my story there before I got through——

Q. Back to where?

A. Back to Dennis; later in the afternoon, to Dennis.

Q. After you went back to Leavenworth?

A. Yes, sir, after I went back to Leavenworth.

Q. Yes. go ahead and tell it.

A. Well, in the conversation there with Dennis——

Q. Tell when this was.

A. That was at Fourth and Delaware.

Q. The conversation that you already referred to?

A. Already to about my telling him I was going to see Rube.

Q. After you got to Leavenworth the last time?

A. Yes, sir, after I done run off from Tulsa.

Q. Alright; tell the rest of that conversation.

A. I said to Dennis—Dennis said to me, said Sadie, he said, you know we say those boys got drowned—can say one of those was Tommy Atkins; said, nobody will ever know who those boys were. I said, no, we can't do that Dennis, because those were my dead aunt's boys, and my mother and the father of those boys are living, and the people will know better. My aunt had had two boys drown there, and they never have been found until today.

Q. Not even today?
A. Not even until today, no, sir, not even a day.
Q. Was that all? A. Yes, sir.

And thereupon an adjournment is taken until 9:30 tomorrow morning.

And thereafter, and on February 15th, 1916, at 9:30 o'clock A. M., further testimony herein was taken as follows:

SADIE JAMES being recalled, further testified as follows:

Cross Examination by Mr. Hanford.

Q. Sadie, you left some things in your direct examination, evidently for cross examination, so we will just get them out of the way.

Mr. German: I object to that remark, and move to strike it; I think it is very improper.

Q. The first is the name of the man that you say was passing back and forth between Leavenworth and you, when depositions were being taken; who was that man?

A. I refused to answer that a while ago when I was telling it.

Mr. Stuart: Did what?

The Examiner: Answer the question.

A. I refused to state then, who he was.
Q. Answer the question.
A. White man here.
Q. What was his name?

Mr. German: What do you refer to—the man when the depositions were taken in October, 1914; I don't think your question was clear.

A. Jim Redman.

Q. The next is, you spoke of a deal between you and Dennis Jones over in Leavenworth, what was that?

Mr. German: I object to that question on the ground that it is incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and improper cross examination.

Mr. Blakeney: I would like to make an inquiry in the record; are you still enforcing the rule that only the interested parties, or their attorneys, are allowed in the court?

Mr. Allen: This is the District Attorney of Kansas.

Mr. Blakeney: Well, he can not be here for any other purpose except to intimidate somebody—no other purpose.

Mr. Allen: Judge Stuart said yesterday, there would be no objection.

Mr. Blakeney. He doesn't represent me; I don't want to interpose any particular objection, but I want it to be understood that I protest against the United States bringing unnecessary officers here, for he sole and only purpose of trying to intimidate parties and the witnesses in the case.

Mr. German: I object to the remark of counsel going into the record, and strenuously protest against his asserting that the United States Attorney for the District of Kansas is here for the purpose that he stated.

Mr. Blakeney: And I insist that he could have no other purpose.

The Examiner: Mr. Blakeney, do you make objection to the presence of the gentleman mentioned?

Mr. Blakeney: I want to enter a protest against the method—I just want the record to show that they are here over my objections.

Mr. German: I am willing that the record may show that but not in the shape in which you put it.

Mr. Blakeney: I am wanting it there in that shape.

The Examiner: Mr. Blakeney, do you ask me to take any action in connection with the presence of this gentleman

Mr. Blakeney: I am making it for the record.

Mr. Hanford: Strike that question for the time, please; I withdraw that question for the time being.

Q. Sadie, who is John Redman—Jim Redman?
A. A white fellow who used to live in this town.
Q. Does he live here now? A. I don't know.
Q. How long since you have seen him?
A. About a year I guess since I met him.
Q. What is his business?
A. I don't know that; I don't know that.
Q. What was his business then? A. I didn't know then.
Q. How long had you known him?

A. About three or four years.
Q. And never what his business was?
A. Never knew what his business was.

Mr. German: We object to this as improper cross examination, and ask that all the inquiries concerning this man be excluded.

Q. What kind of a looking man was he?

Mr. German: Our objection we desire to go to all the questions concerning this man.

Mr. Stuart: Let your objections go to the whole thing.

Q. What kind of a looking man was he?
A. Well, I am not a very good hand to describe white people; I don't know just about how he looked.
Q. Well, was he a big man or small man?
A. No, he was a small man.
Q. A small man?
A. Yes, I think about the size of Jim Swift—you know him—about Jim Swift's size; a small man.
Q. You say he was interested in this case?
A. In a way, yes.
Q. What was his interest in the case?

Mr. German: I object as improper cross examination; incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

A. He was going to be a witness.
Q. Who for? A. For Mr. Page.
Q. Did he ever talk to Mr. Page? A. No, sir
Q. Who did he talk to? A. Me.
Q. You, only? A. Yes, sir; me, only.
Q. You say that he attended the hearings at Leavenworth? A. Yes, sir, in October.
Q. Then he would come and tell you what the witnesses said? A. Tell me what they said?
Q. Yes. A. No, he didn't tell me what they said.
Q. What did he tell you?
A. He was watching Minnie; he was just telling me about Minnie. He didn't tell me about what they said. He was watching and telling me what Minnie said. I wanted him to go up there and see how Minnie was going to stand that stuff.
Q. Then, why did you say he came to you every day and told you what took place at those depositions?
A. They hadn't testified; he was just telling me about Minnie. He didn't tell me about who testified; he didn't——
Q. Then, how did you know what was going on?

A. Up there?

Q. Yes.

A. I didn't know then until I got back to Tulsa and Mr. Page told me.

Q. Did you testify on direct examination, that this man was keeping you informed of what the witnesses said?

A. Of what the witnesses said?

Q. Yes. A. He was watching Minnie.

Q. Didn't you testify on direct examination that that was what he was doing, and you knew through him, all that these witnesses were testifying?

A. I didn't say that I knew what the witnesses were testifying because I didn't—I didn't know.

Q. You didn't say that on direct examination?

A. I don't remember of saying it, if I said that he was telling me what the witnesses said.

Q. That you knew what those witnesses were testifying?

A. No, I didn't know what the witnesses were testifying then.

Q. Didn't you say that on direct examination—answer the question.

A. I will answer it in a moment, when I think.

Q. Well, you have thought it over, now; answer the question.

A. Well, I can't answer that, just as I said it, because I don't think I did say it, that he was making——

Q. Then if you did say it, it was not true, is that a fact?

> Mr. German: I object to that as argument, and a very improper question.

A. If I said that he told me what the witnesses said?

Q. Yes, if he said——

A. Not him—no, he didn't tell me that—what the witnesses were saying now.

Q. Then, if you testified to it, it was not a fact?

A. Well, I think it must have not been a fact, if I said that he told me what the witnesses were saying.

Q. What did he tell you about Minnie?

A. He was just watching Minnie to see——

Q. Just answer the question; what was he telling you about Minnie?

A. He told me they couldn't do nothing about Minnie; she has been in the hotel—she hasn't testified yet—that is all he told me.

Q. That is all he told you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was he at the hotel? A. I guess so, I don't know.

Q. Well, what did he tell you? A. What did he tell me?

Q. Yes.

A. Watching Minnie and told me she hadn't testified yet; they couldn't get her to testify.

Q. Did he tell you that he saw her?

A. Yes, he told me that he saw her.

Q. Saw her up in the hotel?

A. Told me that he saw Minnie, yes.

Q. Did he say that she was in bed?

A. He didn't tell me that she was in bed, no; just told me that she was in the hotel. No, he didn't tell me that she was in the bed.

Q. How did he know that Minnie couldn't testify; how did he know that Minnie was going to testify?

A. Why, I had told him that I was going to stay here in Kansas City and when Minnie got back down here, I was going to get the deed from her down here. Mr. Page got me to go to Leavenworth.

Q. That doesn't answer my question.

> Mr. German: I submit that she is explaining preliminary to answering, so that she may intelligently answer.

Q. Go on and answer the question.

A. Ask it over, please.

Q. How did he know that Minnie was intending to testify? A. I told him myself.

Q. You knew it, did you?

A. Why, I came on that intention myself, of going to Leavenworth with the depositions; sure, I knew that.

Q. And because the depositions were to be taken there, you assumed that Minnie was going to testify, is that true?

A. No, sir, Mr. Page got me to come over and get this deed unbeknownst to you.

Q. I am asking you, Sadie, if you didn't just assume that Minnie was going to testify? A. Did I assume that?

Q. Yes.

A. No, I knew she was taken there for that purpose; I knew that—I didn't think it. I knew she was taken to Leavenworth for that purpose.

Q. But did you know that in your own mind, or was you informed?

A. I was informed by Mr. Page, yes, sir; that is why he asked me to come.

Q. Where? A. He asked me in Tulsa.

Q. In Tulsa? A. Yes, sir, in Tulsa.

Q. He told you that Minnie was there for the purpose of having her deposition taken?

A. Her deposition taken there with the bunch, yes, sir.

Q. Where did you get hold of this man Redman?

A. I met him around here in town; I used to live here in Kansas City.

Q. I asked you the question, where did you find him?

A. Picked him up on the street.

Q. Just picked him up on the street here?

A. Yes, I had known him; picked him up on the street, right here.

Q. When he came back from Leavenworth, did he come to see you?

A. I told him where to meet me at; he didn't know where I was stopping at, no.

Q. Then, when he came back, did he call you up?

A. No, I knew how to meet those trains—the interurban cars from Leavenworth. He was coming down on the interurban car.

Q. You have known him here for three or four years?

A. About three or four years, yes; about three or four years, right here. I first met him here; right here in Kansas City.

Q. How long ago was that?

A. That has been—now, I guess that has been about five years, I guess; five years I guess now—five years I suppose.

Q. You don't know what his business was?

A. I guess he was a crook. Sure, he couldn't have been nothing else—he wouldn't have been with me.

Q. I guess that is right? A. Yes, that is right.

Q. Now, Sadie, what was that deal that you spoke of in connection with Dennis Jones?

> Mr. German: I object to that as improper cross examination; as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and call counsel's specific attention to the fact that the witness did not relate anything about the transaction referred to on her direct examination, nor was she inquired of about it, and unless he makes her his own witness, I think he should not now ask her to relate it.

Q. Go on and answer the question.

> Mr. Blakeney: You are making her your witness?
>
> Mr. Hanford: No, indeed.
>
> Mr. Stuart: Your Honor, I would like to make this statement in the record so that the Court may have it before him at the time he rules on the objection. That is, that Mr. German, in his examination asks this witness about her relations with Dennis Jones, and that she answered that she had already pulled off a deal with Dennis Jones; that is correct?

A. Yes, sir, it is.

Mr. Stuart: But did not state the deal.

Q. Go on, Sadie, and answer the question.

A. Well, I rather not answer that question about my and Dennis' deal because that wasn't connected with this case. That was a case of my business.

Q. Answer the question.

Mr. German: Just a minute, please.

Mr. Blakeney: I want to show that the prosecuting attorneys—United States attorneys, are consulting these Kansas attorneys, and agents of the Government. I mean the Kansas District Attorney who can have no interest in this controversy, and I object and I want to object to it.

Mr. German: In this connection I desire the record to show that at the request of the United States Attorney for the Eastern District of Oklahoma, the United States Attorney for the District of Kansas is present here this morning, aiding counsel of record and the Government in this case.

Mr. Hanford: I want to state an objection to having the examination of this witness suspended pending a consultation between counsel in this case and outside persons. My examination of this witness is not dependent upon any advice or consultation between those parties and she should be required to answer my questions.

Mr. German: Mr. Examiner, I ask permission to withdraw the witness from the stand to advise her what her rights are in connection with the matter inquired about.

Mr. Blakeney: We object.

Mr. Hanford: Yes, sir, I object.

The Examiner: The witness is on cross examination by the attorneys for the defendants. I suppose you can state anything which you desire in this record. I see no reason why she should be withdrawn from the witness stand for that purpose.

Mr. German: Then let me state in the record, I want to say to the witness that she has the constitutional rights to decline to testify concerning a matter that incriminate her if it be a matter other than that which relates to the case here now on trial.

Mr. Blakeney: We object to any such statements. It is not a statement of the law. The witness has not the right to determine whether it will relate to the controversy or not, and when she has taken the stand and testified voluntarily regarding the transactions, she is not at liberty to avoid cross examination upon the suggestion that if she deems the question not relevant to the matters before the court, leaving it entirely in her judgment whether she will be cross examined or not.

Mr. Allen: Whether it is relevant or not relevant, she would not be required to answer the question if it would incriminate her.

Mr. Blakeney: Unless she had voluntarily taken the stand and testified in the matter.

Mr. Allen: She took the stand as a witness for the Government under process from the Government, in this case.

Mr. Blakeney: She has been a very willing—I don't mean on the stand, but off the stand, a very earnest, persistent, witness, and while she may have been served with process, it was wholly unnecessary so far as getting her presence here.

Mr. Allen: Of course we protest against any such statement in the record.

Mr. Hanford: I understood that this matter was brought out on direct examination, and that any incrimination that attaches to the witness was testified to by herself at that time, and she stated that she herself was instrumental in this deal—in pulling off this deal that she refers to.

Mr. Stuart: I am now going to make an open protest against the withdrawal of this witness at any time during the cross examination for the purpose of advising her of her legal rights, such advise being——

Mr. German: It has already been made, Judge, already been given.

Q. Now, we can have the question answered, Sadie.

A. Well, I will say that I don't want to answer that question; I refuse to answer it—I refuse to tell you what deals that was. They incriminate me and I am not going to tell it.

Mr. Hanford: I insist that the question be answered, Mr. Examiner.

Mr. German: Mr. Hanford, is not there a warrant out for her over that matter at Leavenworth?

Mr. Hanford: There is a warrant out for her for criminal libel sworn to by Dennis Jones for statements that she has made about him regarding some matter. What it is, I do not know.

Mr. German: Doesn't it pertain to the very matters that you are inquiring about?

Mr. Hanford: I think it does.

Mr. German: And it doesn't pertain to this law suit—either matter——

Mr. Hanford: That will be determined when the witness answers the question.

Mr. German: You know it does not.

Mr. Hanford: I know it pertains to a matter brought out on cross examination, and I insist upon my right to cross examine.

Mr. Blakeney: I would like to know when the District Attorney for the Eastern District of Oklahoma, or his assistants, got to representing Sadie in a state prosecution that may now be pending in Kansas, if any such be pending.

Mr. German: I will protect any witness that takes the stand for the Government just as you would protect one that takes the stand for the defendants, for that matter. I will protect just as you would protect one who takes the stand for the defendants; for that matter, I will protect one who takes the stand for the defendants, when we are before the Examiner who has no power to sustain the objection.

Mr. Stuart: In other words, Mr. German, if you were in our fix, you wouldn't ask her to answer the question?

Mr. German: No, I wouldn't ask.

Mr. German: You have very much higher ethics than I have.

Mr. Allen: We are not going to make her answer this question here.

The Examiner: I will not require the witness to answer the question, under her statement that it will be in the nature of an incrimination.

Mr. Hanford: We except.

Mr. Blakeney: Without waiving any of our rights to have that question answered, we will proceed with the examination. It is obvious that I am interested with Mr.

Hanford, with the discrediting of this witness. We can reserve the right.

Mr. Hanford: I reserve the right to apply to the court to have her answer this question——

Mr. Stuart: Predicated upon her testimony given upon direct examination, voluntarily, and without objection, and without claim for immunity, and without any advise to that effect. Go ahead now.

Q. Now, Sadie, you said that you were going to the offices of the Gem Oil Company, every few days but on another matter, did you? A. On another matter.
Q. Is that what you said?
A. I was not working for—for the Gem Oil Company?
Q. Yes.
A. Yes, I said I was going up there every day or two.
Q. On another mission? A. Yes, sir.
Q. Not relating to this case?
A. Not relating to this case, no, sir.
Q. What was that other matter?

Mr. German: I object to that as improper cross examination.

A. I don't think you want it answered.
Q. Answer the question, Sadie.
A. I was an intimate friend of Mr. Page's.
Q. What do you mean by that?
A. I mean, seeing him for myself; him and I just alone, yes, sir. Now, you want that out—yes, sir, I will have to tell it if you want it.
Q. Where did you go to see Mr. Page—to the offices of the Gem Oil Company—you stated, didn't you?
A. I was up in the offices of the Gem Oil Company, yes, sir.

Mr. German: You understand we are objecting to all of this?

Mr. Hanford: Yes, sir, I understand.

A. You pulled it out of me, I will tell it. I didn't want to tell it but I told it.
Q. You are familiar with those offices, are you not?
A. Yes, sir, been in there lots of times.
Q. How many offices, how many room-, are there in connection with those offices?
A. Well, there are four that I have been in.
Q. Four?

A. Yes, sir. No—yes, there is, four that I have been in on that floor.

Q. Can you describe them?

A. No, sir, I don't think I can; I wouldn't attempt to describe them, no, sir.

Q. Can't describe?

A. I can't describe them, no, sir, and I have been in there lots of times.

Q. Can you name the four offices that you were in?

A. Yes, sir, I think I can.

Q. Name them.

A. I have been in the little office this way from Mr. Page's office, where Clarence is.

Q. Who?

A. Clarence, little secretary in that office; him and the lady sits in there.

Q. You mean the office right adjoining Mr. Page's?

A. Yes, sir, I have been in there, yes, sir.

Q. Then another one? A. Mr. Page's office.

Q That is——

A. Right next to—before you get into Clarence's office.

Q. That is the entrance?

A. That is the entrance, yes, sir. Mr. Page had his desk —right back to the window in—right as you go in there.

Q. He has his desk in that room? A. Yes, sir.

Q. The next office? A. Mr. Long's.

Q. That is separated? A. By a door.

Q. From Mr. Page? A. From Mr. Page.

Q. No passage between there?

A. No passage, no, sir; you have to go out to the hall and go into the next office.

Q. And then the next office? A. Mr. Josey's.

Q. Josey's?

A. Yes, that is five. Mr. Eberle's is the first one. I would never go in through Mr. Page's office bu always go in where Mr. Eberle is and through that door to Mr. Page's room.

Q. The offices of the Gem Oil Company and Mr. Page's are on the same floor but they do not adjoin? A. Open——

Q. That is, do not open between?

A. No, sir, except as you go to Clarence's, right here.

Q. Mr. Page's and this person that you speak of as Clarence?

A. Yes, sir, I guess that is the name, Clarence—just those two.

Q. Then, you have been in the entrance of the Gem Oil Company; you say that is where Mr. Eberle was?

A. No, that is Mr. Josey's room where you go in where Mr. Eberle is—that is Mr. Josey's office.

Q. Then is Mr. Long's office? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then Mr. Page's? A. Yes.

Q. And that is the room where you say Clarence is?

A. Yes, that little room right there; that is a small place.

Q. Now, when you went up there Sadie, where would you see Mr. Page? A. Talking to him in his office.

Q. In his office?

A. Yes, talking to him in his office. Do you want to know where else I seen him?

Q. Yes. Then I want to know where else you seen him.

A. I seen him at night; yes, seen him at night. You want me to tell it, do you?

Q. Yes. A. Yes, I seen him at night.

Q. Where?

A. Up in that office; in his office, at night.

Q. At night?

A. Yes, about ten o'clock at night; nobody there but him and I—Mr. Page and I.

> Mr. German: You understand that we are objecting to all of this as improper cross examination, and as being incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

Q. This was three or four times a week?

A. No, sir, I didn't say that.

Q. That is what you said, isn't it?

A. I did not; I said I would be going there two or three times a week talking to him—I didn't say two or three times in the night.

Q. That is what I want to get at. What did you go there in the day for?

A. Just talking between him and I, about our nightly matters and other matters. I was Mr. Page's friend, if you want me to tell it.

Q. You came up there and would visit with him in the day?

A. Yes, sir, sitting there just as I am here. If anybody came in, I would go out.

Q. You had long conversations?

A. No, not so long; you mean in the daytime?

Q. Yes.

A. No, no long conversations in the day time.

Q. You would go in and sit down and talk with him in a friendly way?

A. Yes, sir, sure. Why shouldn't I talk to him in a friendly way—I came to get money from him. Sure.

Q. All the doors closed? A. In the day time?

Q. Yes.

A. Not closed in the day time, no; the doors would be open and people going back and forth, attending to business; sure. Mr. Page would sit on this side, in that big chair and I would talk to Mr. Page.

Q. Laughing and talking with Mr. Page?

A. Yes, sir, I am his friend—talking.

Q. Just visit with him there in the office?

A. No, talking of our secrets; we were not doing anything in the day time, you understand that?

Q. Yes, I understand. And you talked about it openly; you visited before other people?

A. You mean before other people?

Q. Right there in the office where they were passing back and forth?

A. Oh, yes. You would have to go out that door; that was a good little piece from Mr. Page's table where we were sitting. We would be sitting there and talking. I didn't want to tell that and you brought that out.

Q. Now, just wait for me to ask you a question. How often did you say that you were up there at ten o'clock at night?

A. Why, I don't know; really I can't tell how many times I have met Mr. Page in that three month-.

Q. A good many times?

A. Yes, I met a good many times. Just I——

Q. And always at night?

A. Now, what could we do in the daytime?

Q. Answer my question. Always at night?

A. Always at night, when I met him, yes; late at night.

Q. Anybody else there?

A. Nobody else there, no, sir; nights when I would meet him, no, sir.

Q. The lights out?

A. Why wouldn't they be out? The lights would be out and you would think the offices were closed—locked up; nobody up there, yes, sir. I am sorry to say this though—sure am. I don't care so much about myself but I wouldn't tell it on him, because he did nothing to me—not a thing has he did to me.

Q. Are you sure that you never saw anybody else up there at night? A. I never have.

Mr. German: I want the record to show that it is over our protest that counsel is developing these matters.

A. I am sure sorry that I had to tell it, too. I certainly don't like to be pulled out with a secret.

Q. Now, Sadie, you say that you went up there always at ten o'clock?

A. No, it wouldn't always be at ten.

Q. Sometimes earlier and sometimes later?

A. Oh, no, I wouldn't be there no earlier than that.

Q. Never any earlier? A. Never any earlier.

Q. Sometimes later, though?

A. Yes, sometimes later and sometimes it would be maybe twelve o'clock at night before I go out of that office.

Q. Now, Sadie, can you name any day that you were up there? A. No.

Q. Specific day? A. I wouldn't attempt to, no, sir.

Q. You got a pretty good memory of days and dates.

A. I am not going to do that because I can't; I went up there too often—I will not do that.

Q. Can you name any day of the week that you were up there? A. No, I can't do that.

Q. Were you there on a Sunday? A. No.

Q. Never up there on a Sunday?

A. Never in his office on Sunday, no.

Q. Never at night?

A. No, never on Sunday night because Mr. Page would go to the Park on Sunday, and Sunday night.

Q. Oh, that is why you were not up there Sundays; you had to think that over to answer it. Now, let me ask you something else.

A. Well, I am going to take my time, Mr. Hanford, before I speak.

Q. Were you ever up there on a Wednesday night?

A. I can't say that; I am not going to say what night it was.

Q. Well, now, Sadie, when you were up there in the daytime, you would make appointments, wouldn't you?

A. Well, he would say, meet me tonight.

Q. Or some other night, or something like that?

A. Something like that, yes.

Q. Well, can you remember whether he ever asked you to meet him on a Wednesday night?

A. No, I can't remember ever of being there on a Wednesday night, I don't think now. I am not going to say whether I was there——

Q. I want you to be sure.

A. Because, I don't know what nights in the week I was there. Sometimes it would be a week before Mr. Page and I would meet. At night, I mean. Now, do you want to know where else I met him?

Q. Yes.

A. I met him at [] house, 504 East Archer, in my house at night.

Q. He would go out there at night, would he?

A. At 504 East Archer, in my house.

Q. Now, why didn't you tell me that before when I asked you where?

A. You asked me at the office—that is where. But being you brought this out of mr, I didn't want to tell it—but I am telling it now.

Q. Now, where else did you meet him?

A. I never met him outside of those two places; not outside of those two places, have I met him. You mean on the night I am talking about—my own and his business, ain't you?

Q. Yes.

> Mr. Allen: Understand that our objection to this line of testimony is going to each and every question for the reason that it is incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and improper cross examination of this witness.

Q. Now, the only time that you ever met Mr. Page at night, was during those three months?

A. I never had met him before because—I didn't know Mr. Page.

Q. Answer my question. You say that the only time during those three months—— A. Just met him once——

Q. No, the only times you saw him at night was during those three months?

A. In between those three months, you mean?

Q. Yes; answer that question.

A. I got started in those three months; I can't tell you the nights.

Q. What were those months; name them.

A. I started in August to work for him, and didn't quit——

Q. I am asking you to name the months.

A. There is August and November, I worked with him from then until I——

Q. What is the other month?

A. There is August, September, October, November—those three months after I started working for him in August; then I worked with him—whe to meet him at the first part of November. The last time I met Mr. Page must have been between the first and fifth of November.

Q. And you never saw him after that?

A. In November? No, I haven't been there; didn't he send me up here to Leavenworth? That is the reason he told me to write to him, so he would know where I was.

Q. You never saw him since the fourth or fifth of November? A. Yes, I have seen him since then at court.

Q. That is all?

A. That is all I have seen Mr. Page, yes.

Q. Now, when did you start to see him in August?

A. In August—well, that must have been right along about the last part of August—along about the 25th or 26th —along there; I don't know—it was the last part of August.

Q. The last of August.

A. Yes, the last part of August I started in being his friend; from that first night, we would have other meetings—from that along up in November. Did he tell you to ask me those questions? I didn't want to tell it; I didn't want it known either. You are bringing it out on me and disgracing him yourself.

Q. Now, Mr. Page gave you money? A. Yes.

Q. He is a pretty rich man, isn't he?

A. Yes, I guess so; he handles money like he is.

Q. What do you mean by that—he gave you a lot?

A. No, not a whole lot; ten, fifteen, twenty, sometimes when I needed it. One time he wrote a check and give me fifty dollars and I cashed that down in the Central National Bank and that was shoes and things of mine—I went and asked him for it and he gave me fifty dollars. I cashed it at the Central National because it was on his bank; he told me where to go and get it cashed.

Q. Fifty dollars?

A. Fifty dollars, the latter part of October or November. I will tell you what was on the check. You will find in his office——

Q. What do you say that he put on that check?

A. He put on the back of that check like this—like a loan; he said, Sadie, I will just put this on there, and I went down to the bank and cashed it.

Q. And the check was in the month of what?

A. The latter part of October, or the first part of November, I forget what part. I guess it was maybe about two weeks before I left, I suppose, or maybe a little later.

Q. Now, then, how many other checks did he give you?

A. I haven't got no more check from him on my business, and that is the only check; he didn't have no money in his pocket that day.

Q. He gave you a check for fifty dollars? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the other times he gave you money?

A. Yes, sir; when I asked him for it, he would give it to me.

Q. He always had money in his pocket?

A. No, but he would always give me what I asked him for.

Q. He did that a good many times?

A. A good many times, yes, sir, he did.

Q. So, altogether, you had a good deal of money from Mr. Page?

A. Out of Mr. Page, by himself, I don't mean the Gem Company, now—by Mr. Page, out of his own pocket to me.

Q. That is what I am asking you.

A. Yes, sir, out of his own pocket to me.

Q. About several hundred dollars?

A. No, you never did see a white man give a negro woman that much money, did you?

Q. Several hundred?

A. No, he didn't give me no several hundred dollars. I didn't get that much out of him, no, sir; but I got enough money to live on.

Q. He kept you pretty well, didn't he?

A. No, I knew what a colored woman could get out of a white man, and I didn't ask him for no big amount of money, you see. I didn't do that. You are pulling this out of me; I certainly hate it, though.

Q. Now, Sadie—— A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you first see Minnie?

A. Saw Minnie on a Monday in June. You mean the first time ever I saw her in my life?

Q. Yes.

A. Oh, it was about—I will say this, between about the middle part of July, 1884. You mean the first time I ever saw her?

Q. That is when she first came to Leavenworth, isn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then you got to know her very well in Leavenworth?

A. Yes, I knew her good there.

Q. Very well? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You used to visit with her? A. Yes, we worked——

Q. I am not asking where you worked, you visited with her? A. Yes, visited with her and she with me.

Q. You ran together?

A. Didn't go up in town any place because we didn't live around there.

Q. Just visited back and forth? A. Yes, sir.

Q. She came to Hyde's house?

A. Yes, and she would go down to the block north and meet me.

Q. Did you go to the house and visit her? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And go up in her room? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where was her room?

A. Her room then was right down off the kitchen out in the yard.

Q. That is all?

A. That is all I have seen Mr. Page, yes.

Q. Now, when did you start to see him in August?

A. In August—well, that must have been right along about the last part of August—along about the 25th or 26th—along there; I don't know—it was the last part of August.

Q. Out in the yard? A. Yes, sir, out in the yard.

Q. That is the only room you ever was in?

A. I didn't go in the other part of the Hyde house, no, sir.

Q. You visited Minnie at her room?

A. Yes, sir, and she would come to mine.

Q. Out in the yard?

A. The kitchen at the Hyde house is built—the kitchen runs back out this way, the kitchen faces the north I think — won't swear that but I think it does. You could go into the Hyde house off of Archer.

Q. Was Minnie's room attached to the house?

A. Attached to the house.

Q. But separate of the house?

A. Yes, sir, all off of the kitchen.

Q. All off the kitchen?

A. All off the kitchen, yes, sir.

Q. And you continued to know her intimately until she went to the Fort?

A. Oh, I continued to know her until she left town, she left long about—well, she left there—well, at least the last time I saw her was about January, 1888, I think that is the last time I saw anything of her.

Q. She used to tell you all about herself?

A. Well, yes, no, I suppose she kept some things, no.

Q. But she told you a good many things?

A. She told me a good many things, yes.

Q. Told you who she was going with?

A. Not at that time. She did after I got back from the west, told me then; that was along about October, 1885, September, 1885, then she commenced talking about men but not before that time; she hadn't mentioned any men to me.

By Mr. Blakeney: When was that she said she got back from the west?

A. I didn't say when I got back from the west.

By Mr. German: Correct your statement now.

A. I got back about the first week in March, 1885, I left Leavenworth the 22nd, along about the 22nd day of November, 1884.

By Mr. Hanford: I move to strike all of this as not responsive to any interrogatory.

Q. How did Minnie dress when she was around the Hyde's?

A. Well, you know about how all Indians dress, wore nothing but plain dresses and aprons, she was a servant, she was not any associate of the Hyde's, she was their servant.

Q. Did you ever see Mrs. Hyde about the house?

A. Oh, yes, they would pass in and out, yes.

Q. Did you ever hear her speak to Minnie?

A. No; she might come out into the kitchen, Mrs. Hyde —Minnie didn't like Mrs. Hyde; she didn't want to stay there when she first came.

Q. Now, wait for me to ask you questions, don't fill this record up. Mrs. Hyde would come out in the kitchen and talk to Minnie?

A. Yes, come out in the kitchen, no I don't know that so much talking was going on.

Q. But she would be about?

A. Would be about sometimes, yes.

Q. And that was all the time that Minnie was there that you would occasionally see Mrs. Hyde?

A. I didn't go over there every day, no.

Q. You would go there a good deal while she was there?

A. At different times.

Q. Several days apart or a week apart?

A. Oh, maybe more than that I had a better house for her to come to at Haven's. I had a better way for her to come to my place, because my place had a big yard and a big porch and we could talk there all we wanted to, it wasn't so convenient at the Hyde's.

Q. I see. Minnie would come very often to the Haven's?

A. Yes, sir, pretty often. My folks never come out in the yard, I was away off from the house, you see.

Q. You did go at different times to the Hyde house to see Minnie? A. I did go at different times, yes.

Q. About how long was she there?

A. Well, to my knowing from July to November, right at the Hyde's.

Q. You would go there sometimes in July and sometimes in August? A. Sometimes in July.

Q. Clear up to September?

A. Until she left. I left her with the Hyde's and I went west; I still left her at the Hyde's.

Q. And you went there enough to see Minnie and saw Mrs. Hyde too?

A. I didn't see Mrs. Hyde no whole lots of times; Mrs. Hyde had a lot of little children in the house, you know how people are who are wealthy, they don't come in the kitchen very often, my folks didn't come in my kitchen.

Q. All right, Sadie, all right. Now, you say that Minnie gave you a photograph of herself? A She did.

Q. And that it was taken while she was there?

A. At Carlisle.

Q. Out in the yard? A. Yes, sir, out in the yard.

Q. That is the only room you ever was in?

A. I didn't go in the other part of the Hyde house, no, sir.

A. She brought that from Carlisle with her.

Q. And while she was at Hyde's you say she gave you that picture of herself?

A. Yes, she gave me a picture of herself.

Q. Now, when did you next see Minnie at Leavenworth?

A. After Leavenworth?

Q. Yes?

A. I saw Minnie about after she left there about '89, I left around here but not—I left to come down here but not——

Q. You know when Minnie left Leavenworth, do you?

A. I don't know exactly when she left, no.

Q. Did you know she had gone?

A. Yes, I did know that, heard it after she had gone, that was in '88 sometime.

Q. Did you know where she went to?

A. No, I didn't know where she went to, I wasn't working in the Fort.

Q. You saw her next when?

A. In 1895 when I was living down here.

Q. She told you where she came from?

A. No, she didn't. She told me she came from Colorado, but she didn't tell me where, what town she come from she didn't tell me.

Q. Now, what month was that?

A. It was either in—I guess it must have been about the first of September or the last of August, I wont say; most sure it wasn't any later than that when she came.

By Mr. German: That was in Kansas City?

A. Yes, sir, down here in Kansas City in 1895, either the latter part of August or the first of September.

Q. It was in the fall?

A. It might have been the first part of September, it wasn't later than that.

Q. Not later than the first of September?

A. Not any later than that I am positive, I mean—not the first, the first part or September, I don't mean the first day of September.

Q. But the latter part of August.

A. No, I ain't going to say, I know it was the latter part of August.

Q. I see?

A. Oh, yes, I thought you said September. Yes, the latter part of August or the first part of September.

Q. Where were you living then?

A. I were living on *H*ampbell Street between Pacific and Independence Avenue.

Q. What number? A. 575.

Q. Campbell Street? A. Yes, Campbell Street.

Q. What was your name then?

A. I don't want to tell it. I had somebody else there in the house with me and I don't want to tell it.

Q. Answer the question?

A. I will have to give you three or four names if I did.

By Mr. German: Well, go ahead and give them Sadie.

Q. That is what I want? A. Carney.

Q. How do you spell that? A. C-a-r-n-e-y.

Q. Another one? A. Curtis.

Q. Another one?

A. I am trying to think of them, I can't think of the other names that I went by.

Q. Well, what was your name, your actual name at that time? A. Why, my real name?

Q. Yes, at that time? A. Sadie Harris.

Q. You were not married at that time? A. Sadie Harris.

Q. You were not married at that time? A. No.

Q. That is your mother's name, Harris?

A. That is my father's name.

Q. Father's name?

A. Yes, my maiden name was Harris; I had been married though, I had been married.

Q. I am asking what your name was?

A. My name was Harris.

Q. Well, what was your name when you had been married? A. I had been married two or three times.

Q. Before that? A. Yes. My name was Harris.

Q. What else? A. Curtis and Carney.

Q. Now, what time of day was it that you saw Minnie?

A. I met Minnie, it was about half past nine—You mean when I saw her the day she came from the west?

Q. Yes, that is what I mean?

A. That must have been about half past nine or ten in the morning.

Q. Where did you see her?

A. Saw her down on Bluff Street, used to be a big frame and I had some friends up there.

Q. One of the streets of Kansas City, is it?

A. Yes, but the house is torn down where I used to go.

Q. And she had her children with her?

A. She had two and a couple were on her farm.

Q. How big were the children?

A. The first one was about a year and a half old, I think, a little girl about this high, I should judge, I never asked her the age of those children.

Q. That is what you figure it up?

A. Yes, sir, I figured that.

Q. You took her to your house?

A. Took her to my house, yes sir.

Q. And she staid there?

A. She staid there I think until about four.

Q. And then you took her down town?

A. No, I didn't take her down town.

Q. You let her go?

A. Yes, sir, I let her go I didn't go back down town with her.

Q. She had the babies—she took the babies and went to the depot?

A. Yes, sir, told me what she was going down there after.

Q. What did she say she was going for?

A. She told me she was going to the Indian Territory to draw her money, but she didn't tell me how much she was going to draw then.

Q. And then you saw her many months afterwards?

A. Well, I can't exactly say now, say the exact number, but I will say eight or nine, and maybe a little bit longer, it wasn't much longer than that, she came back in '96.

Q. In 1896?

A. In 1896, yes, sir. I figured she had been gone, well I will say eight or nine or ten months, I can't say just exactly, I don't know; it wasn't very soon though after she left before she came back, it was a good while.

Q. And she told you about drawing the money?

A. Yes, I asked her about the children first.

Q. Did she say—Was she alone at this time?

A. She was alone, didn't have no babies with her, didn't bring the children to my house at all—by her lone self.

Q. She came out by herself?

A. Yes, sir, when she came that time.

Q. How long did she stay that time?

A. She staid at my house about three or four days, and I could hear of her up at the White's Saloon I didn't see her.

Q. She staid around town then?

A. Staid around town there from what I heard, I didn't see her but two days.

Q. How long did she stay here?

A. I can't tell you that, I didn't see her but the first two days.

Q. She stayed with you two days?

A. No, she didn't stay with me at all, she came to my house two straight days, I don't know where she was staying here in Kansas City.

Q. After those two days you saw her around three or four days?

A. No, I never seen her, I heard of her.

Q. Heard of her three or four days?

A. I heard of her three or four days after that, I don't know when she left though.

Q. You knew she was in town for that length of time?

A. What time?

Q. Three or four days?

A. I was positive of her being there two days.

Q. And you heard of her being here?

A. I heard of her being here.

Q. After that? A. After that, yes.

Q. Did she ever come to your house any more?

A. No, I never did see Minnie any more after that until 1914.

Q. Sadie, how long did you live in Leavenworth?

A. How long did I live in Leavenworth?

Q. Yes? A. Let me see; thirteen years.

Q. You were there in 1884?

A. I got there in 18—about the middle of January, 1876.

Q. Answer my question, you were there in 1884?

A. Yes.

Q. And you were there in 1885? A. Yes.

Q. When did you go away from there?

A. I went away in November.

Q. 1885? A. No, no, November 1884.

Q. November 1884? A. Yes.

Q. And came back in 1885? A. Yes.

Q. In the month of March?

A. In the month of March.

Q. You were there all the rest of the year 1885?

A. I was there clear on up until 1889.

Q. Continuously until 1889?

A. About the fall, I think the fall of '89.

Q. And you knew Minnie all this time from 1885?

A. 1884.

Q. From 1884 until 1889?

A. No, she wasn't in town in 1889 that I knew of, she wasn't there that I knew of in 1889, I never seen her.

Q. Well, then, you saw her all the time that she was there?

A. Yes, I saw her all the time pretty near that she was there.

Q. How long was that?

A. Minnie was there from the summer of 1884 until, as I say, about the spring of 1888, I guess, I never saw her at all—

Q. Well, you knew her in 1884? A. '84?

Q. And you knew her from March 1885 until the spring of 1888? A. From March—yes, yes.

Q. You knew her all that time? A. Yes.

Q. You knew her well?

A. Yes, I knew her pretty good.

Q. You would see her often?

A. No, not so very often because she was at the Fort and I never did go to the Fort.

Q. You would see her as often as three or four times a week?

A. No, not after she went to the Fort I didn't see her that often.

Q. Well, how often would you see her? Three or four times a month?

A. Well, I expect about that, she came down in the hertige, they had the hertig then at the Fort.

Q. Where would you see her?

A. Sometimes I would see her where I worked and sometimes I would see her on the street, run across her.

Q. Did you see her in the daytime or the night time?

A. No, it would be in the day time.

Q. Always in the daytime?

A. Always in the daytime except a short while.

Q. You are sure you didn't see her oftener than three or four times a month?

A. I might have seen her oftener than that, yes, I might have seen her oftener than that, I can't tell how often I would see Minnie, but now I saw her at night several times, three or four weeks I saw her at night.

Q. Three or four weeks?

A. Yes, sir, I think I saw her at night.

Q. When was that? A. That was in 1885.

Q. 1885? A. Yes.

Q. Where did you see Minnie then?

A. Saw her at Leavenworth, saw her where I worked at.

Q. Did she stay there? A. She did.

Q. At your house?

A. It wasn't no house of mine, it was where I worked.

Q. Staid where you worked? A. Staid where I worked.

Q. Where was that?

A. Brock's, Seventh and Shawnee. They are dead, but a sister of Mrs. Brock is living, a sister is living on the same place.

Q. What are their names?

A. The oldest on- is Mrs. McFarland and the other one is Mrs. Rhody Taylor, a banker's wife up there, they live at the same place.

Q. Minnie stayed there at that house?

A. She stayed there at that house, yes.

Q. Did she work? A. Yes, sir, she worked.

Q. Work with you?

A. No, working for Doctor Brock. She wasn't working for me.

Q. Who were you working for?

A. Doctor Brock and she was too.

Q. You worked in the house together?

A. Well, I was Mrs. Brock's maid, we had a cook name of Maggie Turner, she had been there eight or ten years at that time; Minnie was the house girl.

Q. Now, that was three or four weeks in about 1885?

A. Yes, that was about four weeks or near five, not much more than four weeks she stayed there.

Q. What time of the year was that?

A. She started to work there about the middle of September and worked to about the middle of October, and left there and went to the Stafford's in the Fort again, Major Staord's. Went right out of the house where I was working out to Stafford's.

Q. That was from September until October?

A. Until October about the middle, I will say about the middle of September I suppose, it wasn't any earlier than that and it was about the middle of October that she quit and went right back up into the Fort again, left out of our house and went to Major Stafford's; she had worked for this man—Rudivant, Rudiman or something, I forget the name. She quit them to come to us; my people were friends that I worked for, they didn't visit no people in Leavenworth, they visited the officers and their friends—Mrs. Brock.

Q. Who was Major Stafford?

A. I don't know, officer in the Fort.

Q. Was he an army officer? A. He was an army officer.

Q. Lived out in the Fort?

A. Lived out at the Fort, yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever see her out there at the Fort?

A. Never saw her in the Fort, no. I had been in the Fort long before Minnie went up there, just as a girl but I never did go to see Minnie in the Fort.

Q. How did you know when she left? A. When?

Q. When she left Dr. Brock's?

A. She told us she was going to Major Stafford's, going to get a job of cooking at Major Stafford's, I didn't know

Stafford, I supposed Minnie knew them, she had been working in the Fort before.

Q. But that is all you know about Major Stafford is what Minnie told you?

A. Yes, I don't know Major Stafford, never was in the Fort to get acquainted with Major Stafford; I had been in the Fort a hundred times but never was up there while Minnie was up there, the whole time she worked in the Fort I never was up there, I don't know who she worked for.

Q. How do you know he was an army officer?

A. Because he must have been because he wouldn't be working in the Fort.

Q. Well, you assumed he was an army officer because he had a title?

A. I did, yes, sir, and because he was in the Fort, I knew he wasn't a common soldier hiring nobody, yes, sir.

Q. If you had not heard them call him Major would you know he was an officer?

A. Yes, I knew he was Stafford, but I didn't know him myself, no, sir.

Q. Now, how long did Minnie work for Major Stafford?

A. Well, now, I can't tell you that, I don't know how long she worked for Major Stafford.

Q. Well, you saw her in town three or four times a month?

A. Yes, I did, but I don't know how long she worked for Major Stafford, she was working in the Fort from the time, I will say, up until the time she left there as far as I know of.

Q. Then she worked in the Fort until she left there?

A. I suppose she did, I never asked her, you remember, when she would come to see me or I would meet her, every time she would say who was in the Fort.

Q. How did she come to go to work for Dr. Brock?

A. I can't tell you that, who sent her there—brought her there?

Q. Yes, sir?

A. I can't tell you. She knew I was there.

Q. She knew you were there?

A. Yes, sir, she knew I was there.

Q. So she came to work where you were?

A. Yes, she had been coming there before, I went to work for the Brock's in May and Minnie was in the Fort, I went to work there in May and I met her and told her where I was working at; when I got back I met her first in March on the streets, I thought she was at Hyde's yet and she said, No I am working up in the Fort, and when I seen her after that, maybe a dozen times before that I got a place to work at Brock's and I told her where I was working and she came there.

Q. Now, she came to work at Brock's because she knew you were there?

A. She didn't come there to follow me, she didn't have no work.

Q. Now, she was out of work and she came there and got a place?

A. Yes, sir, she came and got a place and cooked, she didn't work there over four or five weeks, I don't think she did.

Q. Did you know Minnie in 1886?

A. I knew her until she left I tell you.

Q. Well, did you know her in 1886?

A. Yes, sir, sure I knew her.

Q. Where was she working then? A. In the Fort.

Q. Who for?

A. Major Stafford, the Staffords I suppose, yes.

Q. Did she work for him all that year?

A. Well, now, I don't know, all of that year, I can't say whether she did or not. Now, listen: From January, 1886—from February, 1886, I never saw Minnie until about the latter part of July or first of August, 1886. There was about five or six months maybe that I didn't see her, she quit coming there to where we were, where I worked at.

Q. When was that, from when?

A. That was from about February, I think, 1885—No, 1886, I have got that wrong Judge, 1886 until about the first part of August 1886, now I didn't see her, I think.

Q. Now, you fix the time do you? A. Do I?

Q. You fix it now? A. I have fixed it now.

Q. From February?

A. I think it was from February along right about that.

Q. Why did you say February?

A. Well, it was in the early part of the spring, it might have been late, might have been March, I don't say positively it was February, but the early part of the spring.

Q. And you remember of stopping seeing Minnie?

A. Yes, for four or five months, I guess that long, I didn't see her.

Q. Well, then where did you see her?

A. I saw her at the Continental Hotel, right across from where the National is now, the Continental, the place I was working at and burned down, burned down in June, I lost my job. In June I went to work for the Continental as Chambermaid on Fourth and Cherokee right across from the National.

Q. How long did you work there?

A. I worked there, let's see, I went to work, I went to work and worked all of August, Oh, I worked until pretty near the middle of September, I went to work there in the first part of August and worked there until about the middle of September.

Q. So you fix the first of August when you saw Minnie by the fact that that was when you went to work at the Continental Hotel?

A. I figured that up, yes, I figured that up, it must have been in August.

Q. Well, did Minnie work there?

A. No, Minnie was in the Fort, I suppose.

Q. Well, did she come there to get work?

A. At the Continental?

Q. Yes?

A. No, she knew I was down there, she found out through the cook, Maggie Turner, cooking for Brock's. Maggie Turner still had a place there yet although the house burned down, but she and the Doctor stayed there some place on the ground and she went there to find out where I was an- Maggie told her she would find me down at the Continental.

Q. And she came down there?

A. And she came down there.

Q. What did she go there for, just to visit?

A. To see me, I don't know how many times she was down town during that time I worked at the Continental, she was there about three times, because I would be busy and I told her I was going to work at the St. James Hotel on Shawnee Street, and she went down there and I wasn't there and she came up there.

Q. Up to——

A. At Blankenship's, the old St. James Hotel. I went there to cook about the last part of September, went there about the latter part of September 1886 and worked there until I think December, yes.

Q. Of that same year?

A. Of that same year, yes, sir.

Q. Then Minnie came there to the St. James Hotel?

A. Yes, to the St. James Hotel, yes, sir.

Q. How often did she come there?

A. Oh, whenever she come to town, I can't tell you, she would come there to the kitchen, I cooked for Blankenship's at the Hotel, wasn't very large when I was cooking.

Q. Before you went to the Continental Hotel you were at Brock's? A. At Brock's.

Q. The place that burned? A. Burned down, yes.

Q. Minnie used to come there?

A. Minnie stayed there, Minnie worked there.

Q. But after she went to the Fort?

A. She still would come until the early part of the spring, she didn't come so often when she left and went to the Stafford's, she hadn't been there very long, she came down there and told me about this man Oliver, I knew he was a soldier because I never had heard her speak of no other man before that. That was in the fall of '85.

Q. Then that was when you learned that she was going with Oliver?

A. Through herself, I didn't see her at all, I never did see him.

Q. How long did she continue to go with him?

A. Now, I don't know, because a great while after——

Q. You only know what she told you?

A. A great while after that she started about this Peterkin, I never did see him.

Q. The only one she ever did tell you about was this man Oliver? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many times did she tell you about him?

A. Oh, after that whenever she would come down she would speak of him all the time.

Q. Talk about him?

A. Yes, talk about him but I never saw Mr. Oliver.

Q. Was that what she came to see you about, to tell you about this fellow?

A. No, just came down to do a little trading in town and stopped up to see me, she didn't stay long.

Q. Tell you anything about this fellow when she came down there at the Hotel? A. About who?

Q. About Oliver?

A. No, I don't know who she was talking about then. She started talking about Peterkin sometime before she left town, I don't know about the times, this is the only two men I ever heard her speak about but I never did see either one until last winter, I saw Mr. Peterkin.

Q. Now, Sadie, did you know Mr. Micco Harjo?

A. Yes, Micco?

Q. Yes? A. Yes, sir, I know Micco.

Q. How long have you known him?

A. I have known Micco about six years I guess, maybe a little bit longer, not any longer than that, I have heard of him a long time though.

Q. In what connection did you get acquainted with him?

A. Just met him.

Q. I am referring now to your testimony on direct examination where you mentioned that you and Harjo had been connected with the Nancy case?

A. Oh, no, I didn't say I had been connected with Harjo.

Q. You didn't?

A. No, I never worked with Harjo, Bettie worked with Harjo, not me.

Q. You didn't have any connection with him?

A. No, I never worked with Harjo, no.

Q. Then the first you ever knew about this land or case, was when Bettie came to you?

A. That was in 1912, and she came up to Kansas City and got the deed, but I didn't see Harjo. Bettie would come out there to the Road House where I was and was talking to me, I didn't see Harjo at all.

Q. Then the first time you knew anything about this was when they came to get you to sign a deed?

A. You mean about the land?

Q. Yes? A. Yes, yes.

Q. They told you what the land was?

A. No, here is what she told me—can I explain what she said?

Q. Just answer my questions, I will get into it all. Did they tell what the deed related to, what particular land?

A. Yes, what particular land, yes.

Q. Did they mention the name Atkins in connection with it? A. Yes, Minnie Atkins.

Q. And you wouldn't sign that deed?

A. Wasn't enough money, no I wouldn't sign it.

Q. They only wanted to give you three hundred ($300.00) dollars?

A. Yes, they wanted to give somebody three hundred ($300.00) dollars and I didn't take it, I told them I wanted a thousand ($1,000.00) dollars to sign it; if I had got it I would have signed it.

Q. So they went off and got somebody else to sign it?

A. I told Bettie where she could go up here to Kansas City, I told her about the Minnie Adkins—not Atkins but Adkins.

Q. They did go up and got somebody else to sign it?

A. Yes, sir .

Q. And you lost track of it until you heard of it later on?

A. Yes, later on when they came back.

Q. Then the next thing you heard about the case was when Bettie came to you?

A. When Bettie came to me, yes.

Q. At Leavenworth?

A. Yes, Bettie had been up there once before, and she didn't know I lived there, Bettie had been up there about the month of February.

Q. You didn't know about that?

A. Yes, sir, she didn't know I was in town there.

By Mr. German: What year was that?

A. 1914.

Q. She came in March or April?

A. That was in March.

Q. What time of the month?

A. That was the 30th day of March on a Monday in March.

Q. And she came to your house?

A. To my house, yes, my husband saw her on the street and I sent him and told him to tell her; he seen her in town and he couldn't call her name, he called her that seven year woman; he had seen us around in Tulsa together, that is all he could call her to make me know who she was.

Q. So, when she came to your house you asked her what she was doing there?

A. Yes, I asked her, but I knew what she was doing there.

Q. How did you know?

A. I didn't know on that deal, but I knew Bettie was after some fraud up there, because that is all Bettie does do and you know it.

Q. Well she told you then the principal thing she was working on when you asked her?

A. She was working on two things, yes, working on two, but she told me the principal thing she wanted to pull off was that one, but she was working on two.

Q. What was the two?

A. Well, it was another one——

By Mr. German: Other than the Atkins matter?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Blakeney: We object to the question of counsel.

Q. What were they Sadie?

A. I refuse to tell the other one, but I will say that that one wasn't connected with this case at all, another one, a deal of somebody else's but not in this case.

Q. State your grounds?

A. On the grounds that I would make it hard for Bettie and some more people that is all.

By Mr. Stuart: That is not sufficient.

By Mr. German: I object to her stating that it is incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and improper cross examination.

By Mr. Blakeney: We think she ought to be required to answer, because it is a mere assumption to say that it is incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and the witness might not know exactly what is pertinent in this case.

Q. But Bettie did tell you that she was working in regard to this land? A. Which land?

Q. This land in controversy?

A. That you are talking about now?

Q. Yes? A. Yes, she told me that.

Q. And what did she say she was doing?

A. What did she say she was doing?

Q. Yes? A. She wanted to go up there and make a boy.

Q. A boy? A. Yes, wanted a boy started for on there.

Q. Did she say anything about Minnie Atkins?

A. She knew Minnie was living there in Leavenworth at one time, because they came from Carlisle together.

Q. Did she say anything about Minnie? A. Yes.

Q. What did she say?

A. I asked her how come her to know Minnie had ever been in Leavenworth, and she said Mrs. Mary Hyde brought them from School and she came there to work for banker Hyde's, and that they separated at St. Louis, and that is the way that Bettie knew that Minnie had ever lived in Leavenworth.

Q. Well, you told her that Minnie had lived in Leavenworth? A. Yes, I told her about it, sure.

Q. Did she ask you about a boy?

A. Ask me about a boy?

Q. Yes? A. No.

Q. Ask you about Thomas Atkins

A. Ask me about Thomas Atkins?

Q. Yes?

A. No, she didn't ask me about no Thomas Atkins.

Q. Say anything about Thomas Atkins? A. Yes.

Q. What did she say?

A. Said she would have to start—she was up there looking for a boy, to start one of Minnie's because J. B. White would make Mr. Bartlett trouble, so they would have to get a boy.

Q. Did she ask you if Minnie ever had a boy there?

A. I asked her, who ever said Minnie ever had a boy, Minnie had no children here, no boy by the name of Thomas Atkins; and she said she started it.

Q. She started it?

A. Yes, and I will tell you what else she said. She said she told Mr. Bartlett that because she knew Minnie had been in Leavenworth, because she didn't know what Minnie drawed that money for, she told him a lie.

Q. Told him a lie? A. Yes, sir, she knew it was.

Q. She came up and said she had come to make a boy?

A. Yes, had come to make a boy; and I taken her down where she could get one.

Q. And you told her, you asked her what she had come there for to look for a boy? A. Yes.

Q. And told her Minnie had never had a boy there?

A. I told her Minnie never had a boy here named Tommy.

Q. Sadie, what did you tell her that for if she already knew it? A. That she had none?

Q. Yes?

A. I wanted her to know she never had one there, she didn't know what Minnie had there, after she told Mr. Bartlett that she had been there a whole month, February, running around there and nobody in Leavenworth knew it.

By Mr. Blakeney: I move to strike out the statement about running all around in Leavenworth as hearsay, incompetent, and immaterial.

Q. What did you say to Bettie?

A. What did I say to Bettie?

Q. Yes, when she told you she came there to make a boy?

A. I told her I had been working with a negro and I had just pulled off a deal and you can get anything you want.

Q. What did you say first?

A. I asked her if the white man had any money she was working for, and she said yes, and I said well I can get a job, and she told me yes, and said all you got to do is to tell him —I will wire him.

Q. Now, Sadie, did you ask her, what are you going up to look for a boy for? A. Did I ask her that?

Q. Yes?

A. Yes, I asked her that, I said whoever said Minnie had a boy named Tommy, and she said I did.

Q. You asked her what she came there to look for a boy for, because Minnie hadn't had any boys there, is that what you told her?

A. Yes, sir, and you know why she came up there.

Q. Now Sadie, why did you tell her that if she already knew it?

A. Because she wanted to start there, she knew Minnie had lived there, they separated in St. Louis, and she told Mr.

Bartlett a lie, that Minnie had a baby up there named Tommy Atkins, she told him that lie, yes, sir.

Q. Answer my question, why did you tell Bettie Mann that Minnie never had a boy up there, if she told you she came to make one? A. To make one?

Q. Yes?

A. And I told her if she had one there by the name of Tommy Atkins I knew I would have seen him. She said she was going to have him raised there, I knew I would have seen him, I was there.

Q. Sadie, why was it necessary to tell her that she never had a boy there if she already knew it?

By Mr. German: I object to this as argument, calling for a conclusion and opinion of the witness. Let him find out what was said and done.

Q. Do you remember the question?

A. Yes, sir, no I don't.

Q. Why was it necessary to tell her that Minnie never had a boy there if she already knew it?

By Mr. German: Same objection.

A. Shall I answer?

Q. Yes?

A. Do you know why it was necessary to tell her?

Q. I am asking you why?

A. I wanted to tell Bettie that I knew there wasn't, because I could get me a job, and that I knew it was nothing but a frame up, and let her know that I knew the facts, she was up there and knew that I did.

Q. Well, then, what did you say to her?

A. I asked her if the white man she was working for had any money.

Q. What white man was that?

A. She was working for Bartlett, that was the forged deed that she had to make good, her and Harjo together.

Q. What did she say about Mr. White?

A. Said she had been working for J. B. White too, working for two men and it wont do now for me to let them know no better; she was out lying.

Q. You asked is Bartlett and White had any money?

A. I didn't ask about Mr. White, she was talking about Mr. Bartlett.

Q. You remember you didn't mention Mr. White?

A. She mentioned Mr. White.

Q When you asked her about the money, didn't you mention Mr. White's name?

A. Did I mention Mr. White's name?

Q. Yes?

A. Only Mr. Bartlett's. Can I tell why I asked about Mr. Bartlett?

Q. Yes? A. Because she says——

Q Hold on, tell me just exactly what you did ask her when she mentioned the money.

By Mr. German: I object because counsel asked the witness to tell why she inquired about Mr. Bartlett and declined to let her conclude her answer.

By Mr. Hanford: No, I didn't, I want her to answer the question.

By Mr. German: Let her answer it then.

A. Tell why I asked about Mr. Bartlett?

By Mr. German: Yes

Q. No, Sadie, what did you say to Bettie when you asked her about the money?

A. I asked her, Bettie has the white man got any job—any money, what I was speaking about—I knew two years ago her and Harjo had got this deed and I wanted to know if he had any money.

Q. Didn't you say, has this white man Bartlett got any money?

A. No, I knew who she was pulling for, trying to save herself and Harjo on the deed.

Q. Answer my question?

A. I didn't say Mr. Bartlett, I asked her if the white man she was working for—trying to protect that fraudulent deed that she got——

Q. Sure you didn't mention any names?

A. No, I didn't know Mr. White.

Q. Didn't you mention Mr Bartlett's name, didn't you say this white man Mr. Bartlett?

A. No, I didn't say that, I knew.

Q. What did you say after this conversation?

A. I said, Bettie I am working for a negro lawyer here and him and I just pulled off a big deal and I will take you down there and you can get anything here in Leavenworth that you want.

Q. Now, that is the deal that you refused to answer the question as to what it was?

A. Yes, sir, that had been four months before that she came up there, four months past.

Q. And you and Dennis, you say had pulled off that deal?

A. Yes, sir, me and Dennis and an old soldier, yes, sir, pulled off that deal.

Q. Now, then, where did you go?

A. Went down to Dennis's.

Q. Went down to Dennis's? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see him?

A. Yes, sir, saw him in his office, yes, sir.

Q. You and Bettie? A. Me and Bettie.

Q. Who else was there?

A. Well, his niece, you have been in Dennis' office I know, you have been in there hundreds of times, Dennis has got a double office, one in there for his niece or typewriter, this one in here where his couch is at, little sofa in there, a private place. We went in there.

Q. How many offices has he got? A. Two.

Q. Two? A. Yes.

Q. They adjoin? A. Yes, with the other.

Q. Where are they?

A. In front of that building on Choctaw Street, in front of that—they face the west.

Q. You went into—— A. His private office.

Q. His private office? A. Yes.

Q. And Dennis was there? A. He was there.

Q. Tell what took place?

A. The door was open when we went in there. You have been in there——

Q. What took place?

A. He closed the door to when we got in his private place.

Q. Did you tell him what Bettie was there for?

A. I introduced him to Bettie.

Q. Yes? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, then that was after Bettie came to your house-

A. After she came to my house.

Q. Where did you live?

A. Lived at the corner of Second and Cherokee temporarily, I moved there to pull off this deal in Leavenworth.

Q. You went direct from your house to Dennis' office?

A. Dennis's office on Fourth and Choctaw.

Q. What time in the day?

A. That must have been maybe two in the afternoon, maybe a little earlier, I don't know, it was in the afternoon.

Q. What time was it that Bettie came to your house?

A. Well, Bettie had been to my house quite a bit.

Q. Before noon or afternoon?

A. Well, I don't remember, we were talking about a lot of things that happened in Tulsa.

Q. You went straight from your house to Dennis's office?

A. Right straight from my house to Dennis's office, yes, sir.

Q. Did you stop at any place on your way down?

A. No, sir.

Q. How long were you at Dennis's office?

A. At Dennis's office maybe three quarters of an hour, that long.

Q. Where did you go from Dennis's office?

A. Went from Dennis' office and carried her then up in the alley to Mrs. Smith's, you know where Martha Smith lives in that alley, I carried her up there.

Q. And how long were you there?

A. Well, we wasn't there over twenty minutes, I don't expect.

Q. Who did you see there?

A. Saw Rube Smith; Miss Martha is his client.

Q. Who did you see next? A. After seeing Rube?

Q. Yes? A. Didn't see anybody.

Q. Not anybody that day? A. Not anybody that day.

Q. You say Dennis is the first one you saw?

A. Yes, the only one I carried it to.

Q. Rather Bettie was the first one you saw?

A. Yes, and then Dennis.

Q. And then Rube? A. And then Rube.

Q. And then the next day?

A. She didn't stay there that day, she went back to Kansas City to where Mr. Bartlett was, and come back, she found a woman that knowed something.

Q. Who did you see after Rube? A. That day?

Q. Any time?

A. I don't know who in regard to that case, not anybody that day.

Q. How long was it before you did anything more in the case, a couple of days?

A. No, I went to Kansas City. Bettie said Sadie I will go to Kansas City tonight and wire for Bartlett to come, I was to tell him this lie when he came.

Q. You went to Kansas City when Mr. Bartlett got there?

A. The next morning. I met Rube and Dennis in the office and—you want the next?

Q. The next person you saw was Mr. Bartlett?

A. No, I saw Rube and Dennis that night about six o'clock in Dennis's office.

Q. The next person in addition to Dennis and Rube was Mr. Bartlett, was it?

A. No, two white men come up there with Bettie, Jim Swift and Ben Porter, Indian boys, Cherokee.

Q. Where did you see them, in Leavenworth?

A. Saw them in Leavenworth, they were in my house.

Q. That day? A. Yes, in my house.

Q. And the next day? A. I went to Kansas City.

Q. Who did you see there?

A. In the room when I got down here was Jim Swift, Bettie, and Ben Porter, and Bettie had Mr. Bartlett there but the boys went out.

Q. Did you see Mr. Bartlett?

A. I did see Mr. Bartlett, she wired for him and had him to come, yes.

And thereupon a recess is taken until 1:30 o'clock. And thereafter, and at 1:30 o'clock P. M., the testimony herein is taken as follows:

SADIE JAMES, being recalled further testified as follows:

Cross Examination by Mr. Hanford.

Q. Now, Sadie, did you say that you saw me at Dennis Jones' office?

A. No, I didn't. I didn't say I saw you there.

Q. What did you say?

A. I said you knew where it was, I said you knew where it was.

Q. How do you know that?

A. I don't know it, but I am just betting you do, I never did see you there.

Q. Well, you said I had been there?

A. I said you knew where it was, and you do.

Q. You are just making that as a statement you don't know it?

A. Yes, not that I saw you there, I didn't see you there.

Q. You say that I know where this other place is where you say you met Rube Smith? A. Who, you?

Q. Yes, is that what you said?

A. I didn't say I saw you there, I said you knew.

Q. You know that I have been there, do you?

A. No, not myself, no, sir.

Q. Did anybody ever tell you that I have been there?

A. No, they didn't.

Q. Now, Sadie, you went to Kansas City and saw Mr. Bartlett there and then you came back to Leavenworth?

A. The same evening.

Q. Yes, the same evening? A. The same evening.

Q. And who did you see when you got back to Leavenworth? A. Well, I went to Dennis's office.

Q. Did you see him there? A. Yes, at Dennis's office.

Q. What time was that?

A. Oh, it must have been about—that was in the evening, late in the evening, I don't know about what hour that was.

Q. After supper time? A. Yes, after supper time.

Q. Who else was there?

A. Rube, they were waiting for me.

Q. Rube Smith?

A. Yes, they were waiting for me to come back.

Q. Now, the next day did you do anything, the next day?

A. The next day?

Q. Yes?

A. Just went around there in town, I didn't do anything more than try to get people to swear this——

Q. Who did you go to see?

A. I went to Louis Brown—I went to a good many people, but I went to Louis Brown.

Q. Went to him first?

A. Yes, not the next day. That was a space of—I don't know how many days before I went to see Louis.

Q. Who did you go to see the next time?

A. I don't know who I went to see the very next day.

Q. Do you know if you went to see anybody?

A. I wont say I saw anybody the next day, no. There was a space of about two weeks there that I was working.

Q. Who did you go to see first?

A. Approached first?

Q. Yes? A. Louis Brown.

Q. Louis?

A. Yes, that was the first person that I had asked——

Q. And then whom did you see after Louis?

A. I saw Will Parker.

Q. Will Parker? A. Yes.

Q. Then after Will Parker who did you see?

A. Did I see? I saw later on I saw my brother first, I saw Sam first.

Q. Before?

A. Before, yes, before I had seen Louis Brown, yes, I saw him first.

Q. And then Sam comes first?

A. Yes, Sam is the first person.

Q. And then? A. Louis Brown.

Q. Louis Brown? A. Yes.

Q. And Will Parker? A. Will Parker.

Q. Next?

A. The next is now this aint just every day.

Q. Well, give the order that you saw them?

A. Yes, Eliza LaValley.

Q. After Eliza?

A. I went to see Father Shorty then, up at the Catholic place, Pottowatom*y* between Sixth and Seventh.

Q. Father Shorty?

A. Yes, Father Shorty the Catholic Priest.

Q. And after him?

A. Well, I don't know—Yes, I then went to see—but not that trip while I was there. Later on I saw Henry Price.

Q. Henry Price?

A. Yes, Henry Price. That is the father of the boy that I wanted to work.

Q. And after Henry Price?

A. I saw Mary Smith, the white woman there on Seventh Street between Shawnee and Delaware.

Q. And after Mary?

A. You understand me, this aint every day.

Q. I understand, I want to get the names of the people and in the order that you saw them?

A. Let me see, who else I saw there. I don't know just what day I saw the people on, but I saw about a dozen more people, I don't know whether they came first after this or not.

Q. Give their names then?

A. Ben Samuels, Martha Miller, a man out at the Soldier's Home named Britton, that is about all I can think of right now. I know I saw more than that.

Q. Well, think it over, I want to get the people that you saw.

A. Well, let me see, I saw—what is that name, I forget the woman's name, she lives on Stroupe I think between Third and Fourth; I went there to find out where her boy lived in Omaha, but I forget what her name was.

Q. Well, that about completes the list then, don't it?

A. No, I don't think that completes the list, no. I saw so many people that I talked to about this case.

Q. Well, now you have apparently a good memory for names, just take a moment and think it over.

A. Well, I saw so many until I don't know, I don't recall any more right now.

Q. Well then, the people that you saw are Dennis Jones, Rube Smith—well first is Bettie Mann?

A. Bettie Mann is first.

Q. And next is Dennis Jones? A. Dennis Jones.

Q. Next is Rube Smith? A. Rube Smith in the alley.

Q. Next Mr. Bartlett? A. And the next day.

Q. Yes, the next day?

A. No, not the next that I saw, and that same day, and I saw Jim Swift and Ben Porter there with Bettie.

Q. But they came with Bettie? A. Yes.

Q. And then you came back and saw Dennis and Rube?

A. Yes.

Q. And then you next saw Sam Nash?

A. Not that next day now.

Q. No, but he was next?

A. He was next, my brother was next.

Q. And then Will Parker? A. Yes.

Q. Louis Brown and Will Parker?

A. And then Will Parker.

Q. And then you saw a number of others?

A. A number of others, yes, after that.

Q. Now, these first names you are sure that you saw in that order?

A. Oh, I don't—— Now, I don't know whether I saw them right the next trip or not, but I saw them during that stay.

Q. Yes, and in that way?

A. No, I wont say in that order, no, I wont say them is the first ones, the first people that I saw there.

Q. Well, you did say they were the first, now if they are not I want to know it?

A. I think they are the first. I think I—I know I saw them now, but the order I saw them in I don't know it exactly, but I did see them and talk to them.

Q. Well, you are sure that you saw Bettie Mann first?

A. Yes, I know——

Q. You are sure of that? A. Yes, I am sure of that.

Q. And you are sure that you saw Dennis Jones because you went to his office? A. Yes.

Q. You are sure of that?

A. Yes, I am sure of that—Mr. Bartlett.

Q. Then, you are sure you saw Rube Smith? A. Yes.

Q. Because you went over to Dennis's office? A. Yes.

Q. And then you are sure you saw Mr. Bartlett? A. Yes.

Q. Because you went over to Kansas City? A. Yes.

Q. You are sure of all that?

A. That was just two days.

Q. Yes? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then when you came back from Kansas City you saw Dennis and Rube?

A. That same night, that same one day trip.

Q. And then you are sure the first one you saw next was the boy you call your brother, Sam Nash?

A. Yes, but there was a long space in there before I went to see them.

Q. I don't mean everybody you met on the street, but the next one you saw in connection with this case?

A. Well, listen: There was a space in there before I saw anybody, about a week and a half, I don't know what days I saw those people on.

Q. I am not asking you the days but the names of the people and——

A. Well, I saw them, but I can't say whether I saw them the second, third, and fourth or not, I can't do that.

Q. You saw Bettie Mann, Dennis, Rube Smith, and Mr. Bartlett? A. Yes, I saw them.

Q. Those you are sure?

A. I am positive of that, yes, sir.

Q. Now, Sadie, when you saw these people what did you ask them? A. What did I ask these people?

Q. When you first would go to see them?

A. I went out to Mrs. Davis's on Vine where she did chores.

Q. I will ask you this, did you ask them if they knew Minni Atkins? A. Yes, asked them.

Q. And did you ask them if they knew anything about a boy? A. No, I didn't have to ask them that.

Q. You came right out and told them?

A. Told them plain, I knowed they didn't know the boy, there was none there for them to know.

Q. You told them she didn't have a boy and you were framing one up?

A. Yes, she had none there; what did I wont to tell them did they remember the boy, because she didn't have one.

Q. You told them that?

A. They didn't even know Minnie, didn't even know her.

Q. You told them you wanted them to know her?

A. Yes, sir, what I wanted them to do. Dennis and I and Rube had started and wanted them to help.

Q. You couldn't find anybody that knew Minnie?

A. I never did find anybody there in Leavenworth, not a nigger there in Leavenworth that knowed her. I was about the only nigger there that she knowed, and I was in the neighborhood there about three months I guess where she was.

Q. You knew her very well when she was in Leavenworth?

A. Oh, after that, I was trying to fix up this thing, lying about eighty-five.

Q. You couldn't find anybody who knew her in eighty-five?

A. I couldn't find a soul I went to at all, in eighty-five or at all until she left, never found a nigger who knew her.

Q. Sadie, why did you fix eighty-five?

A. You know why.

Q. That is what I am asking you?

A. Because I knew that if I said eighty-four, I would be lying on Carlisle, because she left there in eighty-four, that is why I said eighty-five.

Q. So you just fixed the date eighty-five?

A. Date of the year, yes. I stated that that night to Dennis and Rube.

Q. Did Bettie tell you eighty-five?

A. No, Bettie didn't say that, Bettie just knew she came there in eighty-four.

Q. You just fixed that date yourself?

A. Myself, because I knew I would be into it sure enough if I said Carlisle eighty-four, because she didn't come there until then.

Q. Then you told Bettie eighty-five?

A. I told Bettie eighty-five, when I came down to Dennis's; that is when I first suggested eighty-five, Bettie didn't say no year at all.

Q. You said eighty-five because you knew Minnie was there in eighty-five? A. In Leavenworth?

Q. Yes?

A. Yes, sir, I knew when she came, and I knew in eighty-four when she came there there was nothing the matter with her.

Q. Rube Smith didn't know when she came?

A. Rube Smith didn't see her until about a year ago.

Q. Rube didn't say anything about eighty five?

A. No, Rube didn't say anything about eighty-five until I told him.

Q. And you told Rube and Dennis the year?

A. I told Rube and Dennis the year, yes, sir.

Q. Now, that was up in Dennis's Office?

A. Yes, sir, up in Dennis's office.

Q. When you first took Bettie there?

A. No, no, that night when we met, we never said what year when Bettie and I was up there at Dennis's at all.

Q. That was later on?

A. Yes, that night after Bettie had gone to Kansas City.

Q. You did your framing up with Dennis and Rube that night?

A. That night about six o'clock, I told them to meet me and I would be back to Dennis's office at Six, and I told Rube the same, to meet me at Dennis's office, not Bettie.

Q. So that wasn't gone into that afternoon?

Q. No, not no year, Bettie just said she wanted a boy started there, she didn't name no year.

Q. Dennis said to have the boy born at Granny Letcher's?

A. No, I am the one that suggested that, I said that Granny was dead.

Q. You suggested that? A. Yes.

Q. That was that night?

A. That was that same night that we met up there, me and him and Rube.

Q. Why did you name Granny Letcher's?

A. Well, sir, I will tell you why, Granny was dead and I knew her but she was dead. Do you know why we didn't say on Cherokee Street? We started to say on Cherokee Street, and we figured Granny lived on Cherokee Street—too many saloons there, three saloons right opposite us and if we said that, we would find Granny didn't live on Cherokee Street in eighty-five. I figured the time that she would be living on Cherokee Street—I mean on Seneca Street, she wasn't living on Seneca Street in eighty-five at that time.

Q. Used to live on Cherokee?

A. Yes, clean up into the fall.

Q. And moved up to Seneca Street?

A. On Seneca Street.

Q. Now, when did she move?

A. Moved the last part. She must have moved in November I spect, along in the holidays in eighty-five on Cherokee Street.

Q. Do you remember that, when she moved?

A. I don't know exactly the date, but she moved.

Q. Do you remember her moving?

A. I remember her moving.

Q. In the fall?

A. I am most positive it was in the fall late, yes, sir.

Q. So you and Dennis and Rube figured out that Granny didn't live on Cherokee Street at that time?

A. We knew she didn't and my brother did too.

Q. So you decided to put it later and make it when she lived up on Seneca Street?

A. Yes, just say that, lived on Seneca Street. I had to stop my brother from saying Cherokee Street, he was running around the first time with the lies and said Cherokee Street, and we had to stop him, me and Dennis did, he was saying Seneca Street.

Q. That was the fall of eighty-five?

A. That was in the fall of eighty-five, my grandmother moved up there along in there. I don't think she is blood relation but I had been raised to call her grandmother, she is not a relative of mine, I lived with her five years right in the house.

Q. I understand you simply called her that? A. Yes.

Q. Now, Dennis Jones told you when you had Bettie up there that he didn't know Minnie?

A. Yes, right in front of Bettie, he told the truth, he didn't know, he told the truth then.

Q. And you told him that she used to work for banker Hyde?

A. No, I didn't give him so much talk until that night. Bettie told him she used to work for banker Hyde; he told her he knew Hyde but didn't know of no Indian girl being there, didn't know no Minnie, he told the truth then.

Q. Then, after you—How long did you stay in Leavenworth after you got back from Kansas City?

A. Oh, I stayed there quite a bit, quite a few days, I stayed there working around there in the town, and of course sometimes I would be at home and sometimes I would be there on the street.

Q. Do you remember how long it was?

A. It must have been two weeks I guess.

Q. Then where did you go?

A. I met Dennis one morning going down to my house, that was in April, I started to work. Bettie came up there Monday, March 10th.

Q. Answer my question. Where did you go after you stayed around Leavenworth? A. Two weeks?

Q. Yes? A. I met Dennis going to my house——

Q. Just tell me?

A. I came back down here to Kansas City to see my boy.

Q. You went to Kansas? A. Yes.

Q. You stayed in Kansas City one day?

A. One day and came back that night, and came straight back to Kansas City again and taken the train to Tulsa. I was to go to Muskogee but didn't go there.

Q. When you got to Tulsa did you call Mr. Bartlett?

A. I didn't see him for about four days after I got down there I guess, because they were all in Muskogee having this boy up there before the Dawes Commission or something.

Q. You stayed in Tulsa? A. At my house in Tulsa.

Q. Then you called Mr. Bartlett up?

A. About the time I thought he got to his home in Sapulpa, I called him over the 'phone and told him to come to my house.

Q. And he came to see you?

A. Yes, sir, he came to see me.

Q. You told him you knew Thomas Atkins?

A. Oh, I told him that lie in Kansas City here.

Q. Did you tell him that in Tulsa?

A. Still sticking to that lie, yes, I was lying.

Q. Well, where did you see Mr. Bartlett when you told him that you last knew the boy when he was five years old?

A. When Bettie had me to come down the very next morning after she came, I met him at the Stafford Hotel and I told him that lie to get the job right here.

Q. You first told him you knew the boy?

A. Yes, right, here, told him that lie right here.

Q. And you didn't have to tell him that in Tulsa?

A. No, because he believed me, no.

Q. Now, where did you see Mr. Bartlett when he asked you who raised the boy? A. Raised him?

Q. Yes?

A. I saw him in the Stafford Hotel, March 31st, the very next day.

Q. He asked you then who raised the boy?

A. No, that is what he said, Bettie told me what to tell him, so I could get my job, what kind of lie to tell him. And he said, do you know Minnie? and I said yes, I did, and he said, do you know when she had the boy? and I said yes I know Tommy, and he said when did you last see him, and I said when he was five years old my grandmother had him. I told him that lie to get the job. I knew I was telling him a lie then.

Q. When you first saw Mr. Bartlett didn't he ask you who raised the boy?

A. Oh, he asked me who had the boy.

Q. Who had him?

A. Yes, who had him. I told him, and he said when did you last see the boy, and I said when he was five years old.

Q. Then he never did ask you who raised the boy?

A. I don't think so, I told him my grandmother had him when he was five years old when I last seen him. I knew I was lying because my grandmother never did see him. She is dead and she never did see him before she died, because there was none.

Q. Now, when you saw Dennis at six that night Rube was there and you framed up to find this boy? A. What boy?

Q. A boy?

A. Well, we will say that, didn't tell me Tommy, a boy. Wasn't no Tommy.

Q. You were going to frame up one? A. Frame up, yes.

Q. Now, that boy you were going to frame up——

A Yes.

Q. You and Dennis and Rube planned you would find the—— A. Find somebody.

Q And then turn him over?—— A. To the Gipsy.

Q. That was the Gipsy that Dennis was working for?

A. Dennis wasn't working for the Gipsy then, Dennis never told that lie until July.

Q. Who was working for the Gipsy at that time?

A. Gypsy?

Q. Yes?

A. Wasn't nobody working for the Gipsy at that time, nobody working for the Gipsy.

Q. Well, where did you hear about the Gypsy?

A. Listen, haven't I been living in Oklahoma. I knew when Bettie and Harjo got that deed for Bartlett, and I knew it was a forged one and I knew they sold it to the Gipsy.

Q. And you said to Dennis, did you, we will find a boy?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then we will switch him on to the Gypsy Company that you spoke of?

A. To the Gipsy was what we were trying to do.

Q. That Dennis spoke of?

A. Dennis didn't speak of the Gipsy, he knew no Gipsy at that time.

Q. Didn't you tell him that?

A. I told him we would switch him off on the Gipsy.

Q. You didn't use those words "switch him on the Gipsy" that he spoke of?

A. Dennis was working for nobody then, he told that lie in July and got sent off on that trip.

Q. The first time he knew about the Gipsy was later on?

A. Way before when we started the lie back here in April.

Q. Now, after that meeting, that six o'clock meeting, how many days was it before you met Dennis on the street?

A. Oh, that was very near two weeks I expect, yes.

Q. That is as near as you can fix it?

A. Yes, that is as near as I can fix it, yes, sir.

Q. You were around Leavenworth?

A. All that time? No, I wasn't in there all that time, you know what I was doing, I was going down to Kansas City to the Stafford Hotel with Bettie and Ben Porter and Jim Swift; they was doing something else in the Stafford Hotel.

Q. Then you went to Kansas City? A. Yes.

Q. And saw this boy? A. Yes, the detectives had.

Q. And came back to Leavenworth? A. That evening.

Q. The same evening? A. Yes.

Q And got ready?——

A. Yes, didn't have but a short time.

Q. And went down——

A. Got ready and came back to Kansas City.

Q. And caught the train and went to Tulsa?

A. And went to Tulsa.

Q. Now Sadie, I meant to ask you before we started this cross examination. You say you live in Tulsa?

A. Yes, that is where I live.

Q. That is your home? A. That is my home.

Q. And you can't go back there? A. Can't go back?

Q. Yes? A. Can't go back?

Q. Didn't you say that?

A. Yes, sir, I did say that. I can't stay there, that is what I said, said I can't stay there.

Q. Well, why?

A. I haven't been staying anywhere for the last year, since I have been with the Government, because detectives on the other side or some place are running me around that is why I haven't been staying there, that is my home though.

Q. Down at Tulsa, you arranged with Mr. Bartlett to go and find Minnie?

A. That is what I told him, yes, sir, to go and find Minnie.

Q. You told him that you didn't want to have anything to do with this boy they had down there in Muskogee?

A. I told him I rather him let the detectives and Bettie prove up that boy. They had taken him before the Dawes Commission or somebody and let me go and find Minnie, yes, sir.

Q. You got fifty ($50.00) dollars from Mr. Bartlett?

A. From Mr. Bartlett, yes, sir.

Q. To go to——

A. I stayed down there about four or five days in Tulsa.

Q. And then came back to Leavenworth?

A. Leavenworth.

Q. Who did you go to see when you got back?

A. I went to see Dennis and Rube to tell them about the boy, how he looked, and to go to find Minnie.

Q. Where did you see them? A. In the office.

Q. How long did you stay in Leavenworth that time?

A. In Leavenworth that time? I stayed there almost—I must have stayed there two days.

Q. Then, where did you go? A. Went to Omaha.

Q. Who did you see up there?

A. I saw Bertha Black, a white woman.

Q. Bertha Black used to live in Leavenworth?

A. Used to run in and out there, yes, sir. She was a sporting woman and she run in and out of there, and she knew when the soldiers left.

Q. You went to find her?

A. I went up there to see somebody else and I ran across Bertha, I didn't know she was up there.

Q. Whom did you go to see in Omaha?

A. I went to see Al Walker.

Q. Why did you go to see Al?

A. Well, I went up there for something else, to see him to ask him if he knew who she was and where she was.

Q. Did he know Minnie at Leavenworth?

A. I thought he did, because he used to work in the Fort, but he didn't. He didn't work in there until later on, about eighty-eight he said.

Q. You say you didn't find out anything at Omaha?

A. Only thing I found out there, Bertha told me the soldiers went west, how come me to go to Denver; said the soldiers when they left they went to Fort Logan.

Q. How did she know that?

A. Well, I suppose she was running up there making hay days with them, I guess.

Q. She was there then?

A. Yes, sir, running back and forth and she must have stayed down here.

Q. What soldiers were these?

A. The white soldiers, I don't know who they was, I wasn't up there with them.

Q. She didn't know Minnie though?

A. No, she just said that the soldiers, I was telling her about Minnie—Well, now, she did know Minnie.

Q. I see?

A. Yes, she did. She knew Minnie, yes, she did.

Q. So you asked her what soldiers these were?

A. I told her I wanted this man—I called this man Peterkin's name to her.

Q. She knew Peterkin?

A. She knew all the regiments he belonged to, yes.

Q. And you knew Minnie was going with this man Peterkin?

A. Yes, that was the last man I heard her talking of, yes, I don't know who she went away with.

Q. Now, how did you know Minnie went with the soldiers?

A. I didn't know whether she went with the soldiers or not, that was the last man I heard Minnie speaking of and I figured up she must have went away with them, I didn't see her when she went, and I figured she went with these soldiers.

Q. You remembered the name of Peterkin?

A. And Oliver.

Q. And Oliver?

A. Yes, sir, the only two names I had ever heard.

Q. You didn't know when Minnie left? A. No, I didn't.

Q. And then you went to Omaha? A. Yes.

Q. And asked? A. Bertha Black.

Q. If she knew when Peterkin left Leavenworth?

A. Yes.

Q. And she told you that they went to——

A. Went to Fort Logan.

Q. Went to Fort Logan?

A. Yes, sir, that the soldiers went up there.

Q. And that is where you got the idea of going to Fort Logan? A. Yes, of going there—St. Joe.

Q. And you came back to Leavenworth?

A. No, came back to St. Joe and stayed about four or five days, I don't know which it was, in there somewhere, four or five days.

Q. You got some more money there?

A. Got some money in Omaha, telegraphed for money, yes and got it cashed at the First National Bank.

Q. Then from St. Joe you went to Fort Logan?

A. Fort Logan.

Q. Yes?

A. Oh, no, I stayed in St. Joe about four or five days and came right straight back to Leavenworth.

Q. How did you come—You did come back to Leavenworth? A. Yes, and stayed there.

Q. How long did you stay in Leavenworth?

A. I stayed there in Leavenworth I suppose three days on that trip, two or three days, along in there.

Q. What were you doing then?

A. Not anything in particular, I had a house there.

Q. Did you go and see anybody about this case?

A. I went to see Dennis, yes, and Rube, and told them that I was going to Denver.

Q. And that you were on the trail?

A. That I was on the trail, I thought. Bettie had told them that Bettie was dead when she first went there that day and they believed it.

Q. You didn't know for sure Minnie was alive, did you?

A. I didn't. I hadn't seen her for a number of years I didn't know she was not alive.

Q. After you staid in Leavenworth and saw Dennis and Rube—— A. About three days I guess.

Q. You went to Fort Logan?

A. No, I came back and went to Denver and then we had to go out——

Q. You went to Denver? A. Yes.

Q. When you got to Denver, did you go to see anybody before going to Logan?

A. No, I went to Fort Logan first. I found out that the Fort was about twelve miles from town.

Q. And when you got to Fort Logan, you saw those people that you have named—James O'Conner?

A. Yes, James O'Conner.

Q. Saw him first?

A. No, I didn't see him first. Let's see, who was the first person I found. Some one I met and I asked about Minnie and they told me to go down to Mrs. Jenson's, because she was one of the oldest people out there and she could tell me of anybody that I wanted to know. I went to Mrs. Jenson's first—Mary Jenson.

Q. Then, who did you see after Mrs. Jenson.

A. Mrs. Jenson sent up and got her nephew.

Q. What is his name?

A. Frank Barron—or Niece's husband, her nephew I think, Frank Barron.

Q. And then you saw Mrs. Watkins?

A. I didn't see Mrs. Watkins nest. I went down then to Mrs. Lamb's, an old woman Minnie rented from.

Q. Mrs. Lamb? A. Yes.

Q. Now, how many days did you put in out at Fort Logan?

A. Well, I came back in town and would go out again, I think I went out to Fort Logan about twice while I was there in Denver.

Q. You went to see Mrs. Hamilton? A. Yes.

Q. You knew Mrs. Hamilton in Leavenworth?

A. I knew Mrs. Hamilton in Leavenworth.

Q. You knew she was a friend of Minnie's? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You just went to see her to find out what she knew?

A. I found out in the Fort, I didn't know Mrs. Hamilton was out there. Mrs. Jenson told me Mary Hamilton was in town. That is how come me to find Mrs. Hamilton, I didn't know they were out there.

Q. Now, wasn't it Sargeant O'Conner who told you about Mrs. Hamilton? A. Mrs. Jenson, no, it was Mrs. Jenson.

Q. Are you sure of that?

A. I am sure it was Mrs. Jenson, yes, it was Mrs Jenson.

Q. You found Mrs. Hamilton in town?

A. Found her in town, yes, sir.

Q. You went to her house? A. Went to her house.

Q. How many days did you see Mrs. Hamilton?

A. It must have been that I saw her about twice, I staid a good long while when I went, I was in Denver though four or five days, I was out at Mrs. Hamilton's house two days, once I was out there at night.

Q. What was this man's name that told you where to find Minnie? A. Where to find Minnie?

Q. Yes?

A. Captain White, I think that is his name, lived next door to Mrs. Roach in town. He didn't tell me where to find her, he said that is where he left her in 1902, and was positive that if I would go there and if she wasn't there somebody there could tell me where she left for.

Q. And that was what sent you on to hunt for Minnie?

A. Yes, but I didn't go from there, I got a picture from Mary Hamilton and came back and went to Tulsa again.

Q. Well, now, wasn't it Mary Hamilton that told you where to find Minnie? A. No, it was Mr. White.

Q. Captain White?

A. Captain White and Mr. Roach, they had left Minnie there in Van Couver in 1902. Mrs. Hamilton didn't know where Minnie was.

Q. The only thing that Mrs. Hamilton knew was that Minnie left Fort Logan in 1898?

A. I guess yes, and had a picture of Minnie.

Q. Yes. A. Yes, not in eighty—ninety-eight.

Q. 1898? A. 1898, yes.

Q. I said 1898. So Captain White is the one that put you on to Minnie? A. Put me on the track, yes.

Q. The only help that Mrs. Hamilton gave you was the picture?

A. Well, yes, she knew she had lived there, she had been visiting Minnie while Minnie was there, and I asked her for a picture, I told her the one Minnie gave me I lost.

Q. Did you tell her what you wanted the picture for?

A. Yes, yes.

Q. What did you tell her?

A. I told her I wanted that picture to keep and use it, because I was going to show it to the white man I was working for when I went back, so he would know I was on the trail of Minnie, that is why I got the picture from Mrs. Hamilton for.

Q. Didn't you tell Mrs. Hamilton you wanted the picture so you could identify Minnie if you found her?

A. Why, no. Why would I have to have a picture to identify Minnie.

Q. Now, Mrs. Hamilton didn't know where, said she didn't know where Minnie was?

A. No, she didn't say she knowed where Minnie was, no.

Q. But she said she didn't know where Minnie was?

A. Yes, she said she didn't know where Minnie was, she didn't either.

Q. Then, Mrs. Hamilton didn't tell you that Minnie was married to a soldier in the band and was out near Seattle?

A. Oh, no.

Q. Well, out in the State of Washington?

A. No, a nigger told me when I got to Van Couver, because Minnie married right there in Van Couver.

Q. I said Seattle, I mean the State of Washington?

A. Van Couver.

Q. Mrs. Hamilton didn't tell you she was married to a soldier in the band?

A. No, she didn't, she couldn't tell me because Minnie wasn't married to Harry Folk when she left there.

Q. She didn't tell you she had been told by some soldier that Minnie was out there? A. No, not Mrs. Hamilton, no, no.

Q. Now, who told you where Mrs. Hamilton was?

A. Mrs. Jenson, Mrs. Jenson, because she thought that Mrs. Hamilton and Minnie had been school mates.

Q. Who told you to go to Mrs. Roach?

A. When I got to Mrs. Lamb's she told me about Mrs. Roach.

Q. Now, Sadie, you found out about Minnie's three children out there at Denver, didn't you?

A. Well, the post-mistress, when I saw Mrs. Watkins, she told me about Minnie having that baby and it dying—Mabel Peterkin.

Q. And Harvey and Charlie?

A. Mrs. Hamilton told me about this and Mrs. Jenson, they knew about these children. Captain O'Conner too told me about these children she had had there.

Q. They knew their names?

A. They knew th*eir* names of those children, yes, sir.

Q. Did you talk to Mrs. Hamilton about this boy?

A. This nigger that I lied about?

Q. Yes?

A. Yes, sir, the nigger that I lied about, I told her about that.

Q. But she didn't know about Minnie having a boy?

A. Yes, she only knew of Minnie having one baby there in Leavenworth, but I didn't know that, and she said, when and where could Minnie have a boy there that I didn't know, and I said she had it by a nigger, told her a lie. I told her she had it by a nigger man, and that is why you didn't know it.

Q. She told you Minnie had one baby there in Leavenworth?

A. No, she didn't tell me that. She knew about that but she didn't tell me she had any.

Q. But she knew that this boy she knew about was not Tommy, did she know the name of that boy in Leavenworth?

A. That dead boy up there?

Q. Any boy?

A. She never told me about Minnie having no baby at all, but I later found out Mrs. Hamilton did know it, but it was after that a year after that, a year from then; she didn't tell me no secrets at all on Minnie about this baby, about this dead baby.

Q. But she told you that Minnie couldn't have had a boy there without her knowing it?

A. I told her how big the boy was, and she said when and where?

Q. What did you tell her?

A. I said the reason you didn't know it, Mrs. Hamilton —I told her a lie—the reason you didn't know it was because she had it by a negro there, Rube claimed to be the father and the boy would have to be a nigger.

Q. That was while you were in Denver?

A. In Denver, yes, on the way going and at Denver, told it both, because Mrs. Hamilton was so struck to know that Minnie had a son there and she didn't know nothing about it.

Q. Did you tell Mrs. Hamilton that Minnie had any children at Leavenworth? A. Did I tell her that?

Q. Yes?

A. No, how could I told her that, I didn't know it. I just told her the lie you see that she did have one by a nigger man there, told Mrs. Hamilton a lie, but Mrs. Hamilton couldn't hardly believe me, because she said where and when could Minnie have had a boy that she didn't know it; because Mrs. Hamilton was the only place Minnie visited. None of those niggers up there didn't know her because they didn't see her until about a year ago.

Q. But she told you about these three children born in Denver?

A. And when Mabel died. Mrs. Hamilton knowed that.

Q. And these other people told you about them?

A. Yes, they told me about it too.

Q. You were surprised to learn about them?

A. About them children?

Q. Yes, these other children?

A. Oh, no. How was I surprised to know about them children when I had seen them. This was 1914 when I was out there hunting Minnie, and I seen them children here in '95, why was I surprised when Mrs. Hamilton told me about those children. Surprised about the one that was dead out in the grave-yard.

Q. That is the first time you heard that?

A. Yes, because Minnie never told me when she came through here.

Q. So the only ones you knew——

A. Were Harvey and Charlie. I knew them myself.

Q. Did you tell Mrs. Hamilton Minnie had some children in Leavenworth? A. In Leavenworth?

Q. Yes?

A. I told her about this nigger I was lying about, nigger baby.

Q. I mean, now, didn't you tell her Minnie had a child living in Leavenworth now?

A. Oh, no. I told her she had the nigger boy and I was hunting him. She never had one how come I told her that. Minnie didn't have no Thomas Atkins, if she did she raised him off the floor like me and Dennis told a lie to raise him off the bare ground.

Q. What did you tell Mrs. Hamilton about Alice?

A. I told Mrs. Hamilton she had Alice, and Alice was living—told a lie, told her a lie.

Q. In Leavenworth?

A. Yes, about Alice, but I told Mrs. Hamilton a lie. I was lying to Mrs. Hamilton all the time.

Q. Then, you did tell Mrs. Hamilton that Minnie had a child living in Leavenworth, didn't you?

A. I told her I knew where Alice was, yes, lying.

Q. Didn't you tell her it was in Leavenworth?

A. Yes, told her I knew where Alice was, yes—lying.

Q. Now, before the recess, we were talking about Minnie's other children, Sadie. You already knew about those two children, Charlie and Harvey?

A. Yes, sir, I already knew them.

Q. So the child you found out about at Fort Logan was Mabel? A. The child I found out about at Fort Logan?

Q. Yes? A. Yes.

Q. That was the first time you had heard about that child?

A. Yes, I wasn't hunting no child when I went to Denver, I was hunting Minnie.

Q. Yes, and you found out about that child? A. Yes.

Q. You didn't make any inquiries about any children?

A. About any children out there? No, people just voluntarily told me about the children she had out there, I didn't talk to anybody about the children.

Q. They told you about Mabel?

A. They were telling me about Minnie's life out there, and bringing up this baby.

Q. And you told them about Harvey and Charlie?

A. I told them she had two sons down there, and they told me about her taking some away, and they said yes we knowed when she taken them away, but we thought those boys were dead.

Q. Did you ever tell anybody else about those two children? A. What two children?

Q. Those two boys, Harvey and Charlie?

A. Did I ever tell anybody else?

Q. Yes?

A. Yes, I told Dennis about her running off and leaving them, I told people in Leavenworth about her running off and leaving them, yes.

Q. Told Dennis about Harvey and Charlie?

A. Yes, told them about those boys. You see Denny had said Minnie was dead when we were framing it up.

Q. You told them about her running off and leaving them?

A. Yes, told them about her drawing the money, I told them all about——

Q. What makes you say about her running off and leaving them? A. You know why?

Q. I am asking you?

A. Because her coming back like she did and saying nothing about the boys I knew she was running off because she said so.

Q. Did she say she was going off and leaving them?

A. No, wasn't going off and leave them, but she came back here without them children, she was running off, she was going to the Philippines, leaving the country.

Q. You testified at the Receivership here, didn't you?

A. I did.

Q. Down at the Court? A. I did.

Q. And didn't you testify down there that you found out about Harvey and Charlie at Fort Logan?

A. I found out that they was born there, I didn't know where those children was born at no.

Q. You testified that you found out that they were born there?

A. Born there, and I testified that I saw them, I know what I testified to, yes, sir.

Q. And you are sure that you already knew about those children? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when you got out to Seattle, did you talk to Minnie about her visit and seeing you in Kansas City? A. I did.

Q. You did? A. No, no, I didn't.

Q. You didn't? A. No, no.

Q. You didn't mention that?

A. No, we didn't talk over that, I don't think we did, we were talking a lot more things about how we were going to get this thing, I am not sure.

Q. Did you talk about Harvey and Charlie?

A. Yes, I told her about them being grown and everything, yes.

Q. Didn't you tell her that you had found out about those children at Denver?

A. Oh, no, I said I have found Mabel Peterkin dead in the grave-yard, and I said Harvey and Charlie are home in Oklahoma. She thought the boys were dead, that is the two boys she had left.

Q. What I mean is this: Didn't you tell Minnie that you had found out about her two children at Logan while you were in Denver that you had learned about them there?

A. No, I didn't tell her that.

Q. Because she already knew? A. That I knew it, yes.

Q. So you didn't have to tell her?

A. Didn't have to tell her that, I didn't have to tell her that no, but I told her about the dead one that I fount out about out there at Fort Logan.

Q. So you told her about these two boys being grown and living down in Oklahoma?

A. And about the color of them and all, she hadn't seen them since they were small.

Q. You knew that?

A. Yes, I knew that. They were grown you know, and I had been down where they was thirteen or fourteen years, you know.

Q. Know them personally?

A. No, not to associate with them, no.

Q. Now, when you got to Seattle, you found Minnie's husband first and then you went down to the house?

A. I found Harry up in the band house.

Q. You went down to Minnie's house?

A. He told me how ho get there, Mulberry on some kind of street, he told me how to go.

Q. You went up to the door? A. To the door.

Q. Knocked? A. Yes.

Q. And Minnie came to the door? A. Yes.

Q. What did you say?

A. When she opened the door the screen was fastened, the inside door was shut, I knocked on the door and she opened the screen which was fastened and I wanted to see if she knew me and I said, Is this Mrs. Folk? And she said yes, and I said can I see you—I seen she didn't know me, and I said can I see you. I was out doors and she said what do you want with me, and I said open that door Minnie. I called her Minnie Atkins, and I said open that door Minnie Atkins and she unhooked the screen and she said who is this? I walked in, she said who is this, I had a hat on, it was a wide hat about the shape of that, and she said who is this? And I said, don't you know? She was on that side of the table and she walked around and taken my hat off and I just smiled this way and she said it is Sadie, it is Sadie, and I said yes, and she said how in the world did you find me? That is just what she said, she knew it was me the minute I smiled, it is Sadie, I said yes. That is what she said. She was scared.

By Mr. Blakeney: I move to strike out that "she was scared," as a conclusion.

Q. Then, what did you say, Sadie?

A. I told her then the rounds that I had taken to find her.

Q. What did you tell her, that is what I want to know.

A. I said, Minnie I have run all over the country hunting for you, and she said, good God, if you went to Leavenworth to Mrs. Captain Ferguson's, I believe she said, she could have told me right where she was; and I said I didn't know Mrs. Ferguson, and I never did go up in the Fort to hunt you; and she said what do you want with me, Sadie, and I said I am a Government officer, I am working for the Government and I am hunting children to enroll; I said, I find—— You know, Minnie, when you went and drawed that money in 1895, you drew for Minnie Atkins, Thomas Atkins, Alice Atkins, Harvey and Charlie Harrison. I said, I find Charlie and Harvey at home, I find Mabel Peterkin dead in the graveyard in Fort Logan, but the two principal ones I am hunting I can't find I said, and that is Thomas and Alice. She said, Sadie, Thomas Atkins was my father, he had been dead seventeen years when I drew his money; she was sitting just about like you are, and I said well where is Alice? She just drooped all down and said Sadie, don't ask me, she has been dead too long, don't want to know—told me not to want to know where she was. I didn't know where she was; I said well it don't make any difference about Alice because she wasn't enrolled anyhow, but Thomas was and his land is very valuable.

Q. Did you tell her of the places you had been?

A. Yes, sir, I told her all around the world I had been hunting her.

Q. Now, Sadie, what I want to get at is exactly what was said?

A. Well, I don't know all I could have said that day, because I staid there about three hours in the house with her.

Q. When you first arrived?

A. After I got to talking to her, she said, my God, did you say anything to Harry about my children?

A. I said, no, I just told him I wanted to see you on important business.

Q. Well, now, I want to know what was said when you came into the door, what you have told her, is that what took place and what was said? A. While I was in the house?

Q. Yes? A. While I was in the house?

Q. When you first arrived?

A. I don't know what was said when I first arrived—asking about Harry—about the children?

Q. Well, when you first mentioned to her Harvey and Charlie?

A. That is when I told her I was hunting the children to enroll, I mentioned them then to her.

Q. Right away?

A. Yes, right away about them, because I knew they was down there.

Q. And you told her right away that they were living?

A. Yes, she thought they were dead.

Q. Now, you remember that very clearly, do you, when you first arrived there at Minnie's house?

A. When I went out there?

Q. Yes?

A. We sat down at the table and went to talking.

Q. You remember arriving at the door and having the conversation with Minnie and what was said?

A. After I got in the house, yes.

Q. What you just told us? A. Yes, I remember that.

Q. As to what was said?

A. Yes, but I said a whole lot more.

Q. Did you tell Minnie that you had just found out about Harvey and Charlie in Denver?

A. No, I didn't tell her that I had just found out, I told her that I found out where they was born.

Q. Now, she said that her father—that Thomas Atkins was her father?

A. Said Thomas Atkins was my father and he had been dead seventeen years when I drew this money.

Q. She said seventeen years?

A. She said seventeen years, what she said to me.

Q. She didn't say fifteen?

A. No, she didn't, I understood her to say seventeen years.

Q. And she didn't say he had been dead fifteen years now?

A. Oh——

Q. Said he was dead seventeen years when I drew the money?

A. When I drew the money. She said Sadie I have been hiding——

Q. She said she had been hiding?

A. From the Government.

Q. Hiding from the Government? A. Yes, sir.

Q. For this crime? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Drawing the money? A Drawing the money.

Q. How long did she say?

A. She said, Sadie I have been hiding nineteen years from the Government for the crime of drawing that money, and now you have found me to make me trouble.

Q. Nineteen years, she said? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, Sadie, when did Minnie's father die?

A. I don't know, I didn't know she ever had a father.

Q. Now, this money was drawn in 1895?

A. Yes, that is when she went there for.

Q. And you found her in 1914? A. Yes.

Q. So 1895 from 1914 is nineteen years, isn't it?

A. I don't know, I have never figured it up. Now, I don't know, I can't tell you, I am telling you what she told me, I didn't figure it up I didn't care when he died. Nothing to me I just wanted to get her to tell that lie.

Q. And you are sure she said seventeen years?

A. I am sure what she said to me. I am not going to tell no lie on Minnie.

Q. I am asking you.

A. Told me—— We were sitting talking good then; I told her I was working for the Government and she wasn't afraid of me.

Q. Now, when you went on that trip to find Minnie, Bettie went with you, didn't she? A. No. Oh, when I first left?

Q. When you went from Tulsa after you came back from Denver?

A. After I got Minnie's picture and came back from Denver and made a contract with Mr. Bartlett?

Q. Yes?

A. Later on, about a week or so Bettie joined me.

Q. And went on that trip?

A. Yes, she went on that trip.

Q. That is all I want to know, just answer my questions. She went on that trip? A. Yes.

Q. Now, you met her at the Stafford Hotel at Kansas City?

A. When I came down that afternoon to go on the train?

Q. Yes. A. Yes, she was up at Stafford's.

Q. Did she tell you then anything about Frank Long?

A. Yes, told me Frank Long was there and did I want to see him, and I told her no.

Q. Did she tell you Mr. Long was right there?

A. Yes, I didn't see Mr. Long myself. She said, Sadie, Mr. Long is here, do you want to see him? and I said no, I never did see Mr. Long.

Q. But she told you the name, Frank Long?

A. She told me the name.

Q. So, when you got out to Seattle and you learned from Minnie that Frank Long had been there, why you knew who she was talking about right away? A. When?

Q. Out in Seattle?

A. Minnie didn't tell me nothing about Frank Long. When she met me to keep me from going to her house and Long went out there and stole her.

Q. Yes?

A. She told me this: They had detectives right behind her, she told me to go back.

Q. Who did tell you about Frank Long, Captain McNab?

A. You and Captain McNab——

Q. Well, who?

A. Captain McNab and you went up on the hill to see who those detectives were, I told you I was afraid.

Q. Who mentioned the name of Frank Long?

A. Captain McNab.

Q. You knew who he was talking about?

A. Yes, you were sitting there.

Q. I am asking you to answer my questions. Captain McNab mentioned the name of Frank Long, did he?

A. Yes, and then——

Q. Did you know who he was talking about?

A. When he mentioned Frank Long's name?

Q. Yes?

A. Yes, I knew it was Frank Long back from home.

Q. Bettie had told you about him?

A. He didn't leave us.

Q. Bettie had told you about him in Kansas City?

A. Yes, in Kansas City, yes.

Q. So, when Captain McNab, out in Seattle, told you Frank Long was there, you knew who he was talking about?

A. Yes, he told a lie on me and said——

Q. Well, you knew who he was talking about?

A. Yes, I knew who he was talking about.

Q. Now, going back, Sadie, to when you were in the house there with Minnie, you say she told you she didn't have a son Tommy Atkins?

A. Told me that was her father herself, what she told me.

Q. But she told you she didn't have a son, didn't she?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. How did she say it?

A. Here is what she said: Sadie, I have been hiding from the Government nineteen years for the crime I committed in drawing that money, and if I say I had a baby in Leavenworth—— You see she had that dead baby there then and I didn't know it. She said if I say I had a baby there in Leavenworth, who is dead there that I can say I give it to, and I said my grandmother, Granny Letcher.

Q. Sadie, didn't she tell you she never [] a son named Thomas Atkins? A. Yes, said that was her father.

Q. Did she say that in so many words?

A. Told me that is who she drawed the money for.

Q. Well, did she say that?

A. Yes, in conversation she said she had no son named Thomas Atkins, she didn't tell me what his name was, that dead baby at Leavenworth, she didn't tell me what his name was.

Q. You say she asked you who was dead in Leavenworth?

A. Yes.

Q. So she could say that was her son?

A. So she could say that was who she give it to.

Q. But, Sadie, how did she tell you that she was not the mother of Thomas Atkins?

A. Late- on she said, during this conversation, she said I had no son named Thomas Atkins.

Q. That is what she said?

A. Yes, she didn't tell me about that dead baby up there though, just told me she didn't have no son named Thomas Atkins.

Q. That is what she said? A. Yes.

Q. That was later on in the day?

A. Yes, we talked a good deal, talked with her seven days before Frank Long got there and stole her, or six days.

Q. How long were you out at the house that Monday morning?

A. That Monday morning, I must have been there about —got out there about—I don't know just about what time it was in the morning that I got there, I say I got in on that train from Spokane.

Q. Was it early?

A. Yes, it was early and I staid until after dinner because she didn't want me to be there when Harry came, so he will know about these children; said he is all excited now, he has got to come now and see what you are hunting me for.

Q. You staid there until after dinner?

A. Sometime after twelve o'clock I think, I didn't eat dinner there.

Q. Did her husband—— Her husband didn't come in while you were there?

A. No, he didn't come in that day. I didn't see him until the next day.

Q. He didn't come down to get his lunch?

A. Not while I was in the house, he might have come after I left. That was the next day, she wanted me to go before he did come.

Q. What did you tell Minnie you were doing?

A. I told Minnie I was working for the Government, I said I am working for a white man, Minnie, and I am selling land to people too, and I said when this white man comes up, all you got to do is to sign a deed and I will get you two thousand ($2,000.00) dollars, and when the Government comes along you just tell the Government that you had that child.

Q. Well, when you told Minnie that this land was very valuable? A. Yes.

Q. Then, right away she said, well, who is dead so I can say I gave the child to, did she?

A. When I said the land is valuable?

Q. Yes.

A. No, here is what she said: I said Thomas' land is valuable, she sat right behind this, and she said, Sadie, I have been hiding from the Government for nineteen years for the crime I committed, and now you have found me to make me trouble, and I said no, Minnie, I have been your friend for thirty years and I will shield you.

Q. That is what she said? A. Yes.

Q. That is what she said when you told her the land was valuable? A. Yes.

Q. Well, then, what did you say?

A. I said I have been your friend for thirty years and I will shield you. When I said that to her, she said if I say I had a baby who is dead in Leavenworth that I could say I gave it to.

Q. Well, that was when you first got in the house?

A. Yes, this same conversation, yes.

Q. So Minnie got right into your scheme right at the start? A. Right at the start?

Q. Yes?

A. She thought I was a Government officer, I told her a lie, sure; and I told her about my work selling to white men, I was selling land to white men unbeknown to the Government she knew.

Q. You didn't tell her you were trying to frame up the boy? A. Told her that right there.

Q. After you told her you were a Government officer?

A. Yes, sir. She said suppose I say I had a baby in Leavenworth, who is there I can say I give it to. Dennis and I had framed up the lie back here in March. She just had my story like I wanted, I said my grandmother. We had started the lie in Leavenworth saying my grandmother.

Q. She believed you when you told her you were a Government officer? A. Yes, she did.

Q. So you told her that you were hunting for this boy, so she said—— A. Hunting for what boy?

Q. Didn't you tell her you were hunting for a boy?

A. I said the two principal ones I am hunting for—I thought she could have had a baby, I didn't know what she had there in Denver, or some place else. I didn't know who Thomas Atkins was——

Q. Oh, so you thought she might have had Thomas?

A. I didn't know who Thomas Atkins was on the roll, you see. When I went out there I found the baby dead in the grave-yard, I didn't know she had one in Leavenworth, I didn't know nothing about Alice; I told her the two principal ones I am hunting I can't find, that is the way I wrung it out of her, and I said that is Thomas and Alice—she drew for them too. She said, Sadie, Thomas Atkins is my father, I didn't have no son, I never had a son named Thomas Atkins; she said he had been dead seventeen years when I drew his money, and I said where is Alice, and she just drooped right down and said, Sadie don't ask me, she has been dead too long, don't want to know, and she looked so bad when she said that, I said well it don't make any difference about Alice no way, she wasn't enrolled no way.

Q. You found out out there about this Peterkin baby?

A. In Fort Logan.

Q. In Fort Logan? A. Yes.

Q. And did you find out about the one in Leavenworth?

A. No, I didn't know nothing about that dead baby.

Q. You didn't find out anything about that?

A. No. About six months there in Leavenworth I didn't see her at all. I didn't know she had had one.

Q. When you told her this land was valuable, she asked you, if I say I had a boy who can I say I gave it to?

A. She didn't say that right then. She said, Sadie, I have been hiding from the Government for nineteen years for the crime I committed in drawing that money and now you have found me to make me trouble; and I said, no, Minnie, I have been your friend thirty years and I will shield you. I wanted to let her know this was a frame up about selling the land, I wanted to give her a hunch there was some land she could make money out of.

Q. She caught on?

A. Yes, Minnie has got some sense, fifty years old of course. My being a Government officer and coming to sell this land—that I was a crook, she knew what I would do.

Q. Right away, believing that you were a Government officer she dropped right in?

A. Dropped right in, yes, I told her I was going to sell the land to a white man, she seen a scheme to get two thousand ($2,000.00) dollars.

Q. Now, when did you tell her you were going to sell this land to the white man?

A. I told her the white man was coming, I told her he is coming—he is coming and as soon as he gets here——

Q. Was that before she asked you who she would say she had given the boy to?

A. Oh, no, that was after that. I went on and told her then about this white man coming and she would be getting two thousand ($2,000.00) dollars for signing a deed to him; and I told her the Government officers would come along after a while, they would follow me, and all you got to do was to say you had that baby.

Q. That was after she said who shall I say I gave it to?

A. Yes, yes.

Q. Now, did you see Minnie's husband that day?

A. Saw him that day at the Fort—— No.

Q. After you saw Minnie?

A. I never saw Harry that day, didn't see him until the next day. Harry didn't come down there while I was there that morning.

Q. What time the next day?

A. You see after I got home I went back——

Q. When did you see her husband the next day?

A. I saw Harry the next morning.

Q. At Minnie's house?

A. No, he wasn't there, she went and 'phoned for him.

Q. Where did he come? A. Come from?

Q. Come to? A. He came to Minnie's house.

Q. Then, you saw him at Minnie's house?

A. Yes, after I got there he came, after she called him over the 'phone

Q. Now, what did you send for him for?

A. I will tell you what I sent for him for: I said, Minnie, since that night I went back after Mr. Bartlett came, now, if Minnie signs the deed her husband she married would have to sign it——

Q. You sent for him to tell him about Minnie's children?

A. Yes, she didn't want me to tell Harry about this frame up.

Q. Is that right, that what you sent for him for, to tell him about Minnie's children?

A. Yes, about Minnie's children.

Q. So he came to the house?

A. He came to the house.

Q. What did you say to him? A. When he got in?

Q. Yes?

A. He came in and stood right along there and Minnie would be setting at the end of the table like this, she had told me, I said Minnie don't you know——

Q. What did you tell Minnie's husband?

A. When he came in?

Q. Yes?

A. I said, Mr. Folk—he stood right there and Minnie was sitting here and me here.

Q. Sadie, go on and tell—make your answer to the question?

A. I said, Mr. Folk, do you know your wife? He said, I think not. I didn't know what had been going on that night. He said I think not. I said, well I have come to tell you a secret about her this morning—she had told me I could tell him about the children, she wouldn't do it. He said, I think not; I said, well I have come to tell you a secret about your wife. I said in 1895, I said, she came down to the Territory and drawed some mone-, I said she drawed for Alice Atkins and Thomas Atkins, Charlie and Harvey Harrison and herself, and Minnie looked up and I said, did you know she had any children, and he said no. Minnie looked up by that time an said, Harry, will you forgive me, sitting right here, he told me she was married to him seven years and he didn't know she had a child; by that time he sat down facing me and Minnie over here.

Q. You had told him about Minnie's drawing this money?

A. Yes.

Q. In 1895? A. In 1895, yes.

Q. You had told him about Minnie's visiting you in Kansas City?

A. No, I didn't tell him about Minnie visiting me, not Harry.

Q. Didn't tell him about that?

A. No, I told him about Minnie and me being in Leavenworth, just telling about the children now.

Q. Sadie, who did you ever tell about Minnie visiting you in Kansas City?

A. I didn't even tell Bettie. When Bettie came up here and told me it was dead in Leavenworth, because I want to show you why, it run in my mind that she said in ninety-six when I seen her.

Q. Who did you first tell about that? A. About what?

Q. About Minnie visiting you in Kansas City?

A. I told a good many people, I guess ten thousand.

Q. The first time you ever told that then was after the Receivership hearing down in Muskogee down in Muskogee, wasn't it?

A. Oh, listen, I had never told anybody up here at Leavenworth about it only Dennis and them.

Q. Who did you tell about it?

A. Dennis and them unless I was talking to somebody in the neighborhood in Kansas City where I was living, but I told them that night that we were framing up about what she had done about running off, but I didn't tell about her drawing for the children then because I didn't know then, I hadn't found her.

Q. Did you tell Mr. Buell and Mr. Robertson about that, about Minnie's visiting you in Kansas City?

A. Oh, that was away behind that, yes, I told them that.

Q. You told them that when they first found you?

A. When they first found me?

Q. Yes?

A. Yes, I told them when they first found me.

Q. You told Mr. Montgomery?

A. Yes, sir, I told Mr. Montgomery and I told Mr. Bartlett.

Q. When they first found you?

A. When they first came to me.

Q. Do you remember that?

A. Yes, I remember that; that was near back when Mr. Bartlett got me in Kansas City.

Q. And they took your statement, didn't they?

A. They took my statement.

Q. Yes, and affidavit? A. Who did?

Q. Didn't they? A. Who did?

Q. Mr. Robertson and Mr. Buell.

A. Mr. Buell ain't had no statement of mine Mr. Montgomery had a statement what I had done.

Q. He put that in that statement? A. Yes.

Q. Now, then what did Minnie's husband say after you told him about these children?

A. After I told him a white man was coming to give her some money he was satisfied about it.

Q. What did he say at first before you told him that?

A. I said Minnie, I said, is going to get some money. I hadn't told him then about this being a frame up, Minnie and I hadn't. I said Minnie is going to get some money, I said one of her boys, I said, she is going to sell that land and a white man will be up here and will give her two thousand ($2,000.00) dollars, will be up here—and I even told Harry I was a Government officer and was going to protect Minnie.

Q. So you told him that it was a frame up?

A. No, not that day, I didn't tell him nothing about that frame up until Wednesday, the third day I seen him.

Q. What did he say then?

A. I told him then what we had done, that Minnie didn't have no boy and that that was her father that she had drew the money for, and he said he thought that was all right if she could make the money, that was Harry.

Q. You told him that she did have children named Harvey and Charlie? A. Yes, about Harvey and Charlie.

Q. And Mabel?

A. I didn't tell him about Mabel, didn't tell him about the dead girl, no.

Q. You didn't tell him anything about Alice?

A. I told him about Harvey and Charlie being down home and he said right away when I said she was going to get some money, Minnie ought to have Harvey and Charlie come out here to see her, he got satisfied.

Q. What did Minnie's husband say when you asked him if he knew his wife?

A. He said I think not. I don't know what she had said to him that night, but he said I think not. I said, Mr. Folk, do you know your wife, and he said I think not, and I said I have come to tell you a secret about her this morning.

Q. So you went on and told him about the three children?

A. About her drawing this money and about the children, told him she had some children, named them over, even named Alice and Thomas, but the next day on Wednesday we showed him where there was no Thomas.

Q. But you named them all? A. That day.

Q. In the order? A. Yes.

Q. Named Thomas? A. Yes.

Q. And Harvey? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Charlie? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Mabel? A. Yes.

Q. And Alice?

A. No, didn't talk about that dead one, no.

Q. Mabel?

A. Didn't talk about no dead ones, Mabel, never have talked about a dead one to him.

Q. How many times have you seen Nancy, Minnie's sister? A. How many times have I seen Nancy?

Q. Yes?

A. I don't know how many times I have seen Nancy.

Q. Where have you seen her?

A. Over at Nowata and at Wagoner.

Q. You have been in Nowata?

A. Oh, my goodness! I know people that lives all around it and around Wagoner too.

Q. Did you talk to her? A. To Nancy?

Q. Yes? A. Yes, I have known Nancy.

Q. Known her to talk to her? A. Yes, to talk to Nancy.

Q. Now, what did Minnie tell you about that letter she had received?

A. She didn't tell me about it, she showed it to me. The letter and the deed, showed it to me.

Q. Where was that from?

A. Mazoola, Montana, she got it in Mazoola, Montana, but it was from Muskogee, dated from Muskogee and sent to her at Mazoola, Montana.

Q. She let you read it?

A. I read just a part of it, just looked at it.

Q. Why didn't you read it? A. Read it?

Q. Yes?

A. I looked at part of that letter, she had done told me who it was from, she didn't know who it was from, didn't have no name signed on the letter.

Q. Was it signed? A. No, it wasn't signed.

Q. Why didn't you read it?

A. I read it enough to know what was in it, just looked it over.

Q. Enough to excite your suspicion wasn't it?

A. Oh, no.

Q. What did it say?

A. It just said that Minnie—I think it said, dear Minnie, something like that, it has been a long time since I—no, I have been trying to locate you for a long time, or something like that.

Q. That is all?

A. No, said more than that. I can't read that letter because it was nothing but just a——

Q. Well, what did you think was in it?

A. That letter was just one sheet of paper.

By Mr. German: I object to what she thinks.

Q. You said that you saw enough to know what was in it?

A. There was nothing important in it, just said sign this and I will be all right, didn't say who they were, just said sign this and I will be all right. That meant this deed.

Q. Is that what it referred to?

A. Yes, sign this and I will be all right, but didn't have no name down at the bottom at all.

Q. Nothing important in the letter?

A. That was the most important thing there was in it.

Q. And there was a deed in it? A. Deed in the letter.

Q. A deed for this land? A. A deed for the land.

Q. And you were working on this case then, weren't you? A. Yes.

Q. And you saw a deed there for Minnie to sign?

A. A letter, and in that letter was a deed she said.

Q. To this land?

A. I guess it was to that same land, yes. She said she had gotten that two years ago, that letter, and she thought—— She said I thought it was from my sister Kate, and I said, no, Kate Ward had been dead for three years.

Q. What did she do with that letter?

A. She didn't do nothing with that letter, Harry took that letter and that deed and put that in the stove, Harry Folk himself, burned it up.

Q. What did he do that for? A. I don't know.

Q. Did you see him do it?

A. Yes, I was sitting right here, he went on in the kitchen tore it up right at the table, he tore that up, that letter and deed he tore it up, and he went on in the kitchen where the stove was.

Q. That all took place right while you were there?

A. Me right in there. You know how [] white man is when he is going to make some money and negroes in it, he was just as loving to me as Minnie was, he thought he was going to make some money.

Q. This took place with you there?

A. Right with me present there in the house.

Q. Harry you say was showing you a little attention?

A. Treating me more so than the white men ought to treat me you know if there wasn't something to me, just good to me you know, treating me nice, he thought Minnie was going to make some money, he didn't care if Minnie had a thousand children.

Q. Now, who did you tell Harry that Minnie drew that money for in 1895?

A. I didn't have to tell him, she told him herself.

Q. Herself?

A. Yes, you see she told him about this frame up and didn't have no baby in Leavenworth, she tells him about that was a frame up, the whole scheme.

Q. Well, how many children did she tell Harry she had drawn money for in 1895?

A. She didn't tell Harry about how many children she had drawn for, but she tells him she draws this money to Thomas Atkins, who was her father.

Q. Did you tell that to Harry, or did Minnie?

A. Minnie told him herself, said, Harry, that money I drawed for Thomas Atkins was my father's, laughing and excited, we were in there framing a lot of stuff.

Q. So Harry didn't find out how many children she had drawn the money for?

A. No, he didn't find out, she just told him that Thomas Atkins was her father.

Q. Now, did Minnie tell Harry that she had been hiding from the Government for nineteen years? A. Told all of that.

Q. She told him that? A. Yes, she told him that.

Q. She came right out and said, Harry, I have been hiding from the Government for nineteen years?

A. Told Harry that?

Q. Yes?

A. Yes, she told him about when she drawed this money, she said, Harry, that is the reason I have been hiding. I said, Minnie, I was going clean to the Philippines and hunt you.

Q. Did she say where she had been hiding?

A. No, didn't say where she was hiding. Harry found out after she told him about the children how dark her life had been when I explained to him about the children—fast life because he was living with her as his wife seven years and he didn't know it.

Q. She didn't tell where she was hiding?

A. No, she said Harry when I left the Territory I was running off.

Q. Did she say she had changed her name?

A. No, she didn't say that but she had never been called Atkins after she left Leavenworth.

Q. You are sure of that?

A. Not after she left Leavenworth, I am not so positive, but after she left——

Q. How did Captain White know who you were inquiring about?

A. I was asking for an Indian Minnie—Indian Minnie. He didn't know her by no Atkins, never nothing else only Indian Minnie, they all called her that long before.

Q. She was never called anything else except Indian Minnie? A. Indian Minnie.

Q. That is the name she gave to people?

A. I don't know whether she gave that or not.

Q. But you know she didn't give the name Atkins?

A. Yes.

Q. How do you know that?

A. I don't know, I would ask for Indian Minnie, they didn't tell me her name was Atkins.

Q. Now, after she left Oklahoma in 1896 when she visited you, then she never went back, did she? A. Back where?

Q. To Oklahoma?

A. I don't know, I didn't know where Minnie went to, I couldn't tell you where she went shen she left this town, I don't know where she went.

Q. She ran off and left those children, didn't she?

A. She didn't have them when she came back there.

Q. And she was hiding for the crime of drawing this money, wasn't she? A. I guess she was.

Q. So, you know she didn't go back? A. No, I didn't.

Q. You didn't know that?

A. No, I didn't know whether she ever did go back there or not, I didn't know, I couldn't say that, I don't know.

Q. Well, did she tell you she never went back?

A. No, she didn't tell me she never went back.

Q. When she told you she had been hiding nineteen years, didn't she say she never went back?

A. No, she didn't tell me that, didn't tell me she never went.

Q. Didn't tell him that?

A. ——Back, no, she didn't tell me that.

Q. Now, Harry said it was all right with him, this frame up?

A. All were sitting around the table talking, it was all right, we explained it to him.

Q. Did he say he would help you? A. Help us?

Q. Yes?

A. Nothing for him to help about, nothing for him to do. All that Minnie had to do was to do as I told her to do.

Q. Well, then Harry had to go away didn't he while you were out there? A. Harry left, yes.

Q. You were waiting for this man to come with the money? A. Bartlett?

Q. Yes, and you asked Harry to be there, didn't you?

A. That was on Saturday morning.

Q. Yes, Friday? A. Yes, Friday.

Q. And he said he had to go away?

A. Yes, I brought him out a telegram, I brought him a telegram out there Friday morning and showed it to him that the man would be there in the morning.

Q. So he couldn't get permission to stay over there from Spokane, he had to go?

A. No everybody else heard about him going to get this money and they wouldn't let him stay. He went up there and came back and said, Sadie, I think they ought to let me stay, they don't need me in the band, I guess Captain McNab seen how he could get some money and he wouldn't let him stay.

Q. Well, that was the reason they wouldn't let him stay?

A. No, I don't know that, I ain't going to swear that, I ain't saying that, I don't know it.

Q. Well, they wouldn't give him permission to stay over?

A. No.

Q. He told them about the money at this time?

A. Oh, no, I don't know what he told them, I hadn't seen him talking to them, I hadn't seen Captain McNab or you either then.

Q. Do you know who he went to?

A. No, he went to see some captain, I don't know who, and went to see the Colonel.

Q. He told them about this money?

A. I don't know what he told them, he showed the telegram I gave him, that Frank Long would be there in the morning—Bartlett, and I taken it up to the Fort so they would know the man was coming, I thought it was Mr. Bartlett coming.

Q. Well, now, who was the first officers that you saw at the Fort? A. Captain McNab and you.

Q. That was Saturday?

A. That was Saturday morning, six days after I had found Minnie, I saw you and Captain McNab, met you too.

Q. Captain McNab came down to the house there?

A. You both were down there when I got there.

Q. What did you say to Captain McNab down at Minnie's house there that Saturday morning?

A. Minnie—I came down there with Minnie, you know, she came up on the hill and got me.

Q. Yes, I know she came up the hill and got you and went up on the porch and went in the house?

A. And I came in behind her and you two were sitting in there.

Q. Were sitting in the house?

A. You two were in the house.

Q. And you came in and saw us sitting inside?

A. Inside.

Q. Then what was said there?

A. I said, Captain, I said, there are two men trailing me. I thought they were detectives, and he told you to go see who they were, and you went and said something to the men and came back and said they ain't going to bother her, and Captain McNab said Sadie they ain't going to bother you, they are just trying to bluff you. You said right there——

Q. Now, then, what else was said?

A. Captain McNab said, why Sadie the man you have been working for has been here and gone; he spoke the same thing to me Minnie had spoke- up on the hill; I said no, Captain, I said, the man I am working for hasn't come yet. He said, well, do you know Frank Long, and I said yes, sir; he said, do you know C. Josey, and I said yes, sir; he said, do you know Charles Page, and I said yes; he said, well Frank Long is representing them and said he paid you and you had gone home and you were working for him; and I said, Captain, I didn't know Frank Long was in town; he said do you know Dana Kelsey, and I said yes, sir.

Q. Didn't you ask him who Frank Long was?

A. As long as I have been knowing Long and been with him, how could I ask him who Frank Long was, what is the matter with you?

Q. You knew who Frank Long was all the time?

A. Oh, great Scott! Do I know who Frank Long was, I guess so, shucks!

Q. You knew Frank Long all right?

A. Awfully well, awfully well.

Q. And you knew he was working for Page because he told you so in Kansas City?

A. Knew he was working for Page?

Q. And Bettie was working for him?

A. No, I didn't know she was working for him.

Q. You didn't?

A. No, I didn't know she was working for Frank Long, she had suggested Frank Long and Mr. Nixon and Governor Haskell while we were there.

Q. So you didn't know at that time that she was working for him? A. Oh, no, no.

Q. She didn't tell you about him in Kansas City?

A. No, not in Kansas City, that she was working for him, she didn't say that.

Q. She told you that he was there in the hotel?

A. Said Frank Long is here in the hotel, do you want to see him, she didn't tell me she was working for him no.

Q. So, when she told you Frank Long had been out there, you said you didn't know he was in town?

A. I didn't know he was in town, but——

Q. But you knew who he was?

A. I knew who he was but I didn't know he was in town.

Q. And you told Captain McNab who he was?

A. Yes, I told Captain McNab who Frank Long was.

Q. Did you tell him who Mr. Page was?

A. No, I didn't tell him who Mr. Page was, I didn't tell him who any of them was, I told him I knew them, he called over the names and asked if I knew them and I said yes, I didn't tell him who they were because I supposed Long had told him who they were before I came.

Q. Well, did you tell him who this man was that you were waiting for?

A. Mr. Bartlett, yes, I said the man I am working for, I said I am not working for Frank Long, I said I am working for Bartlett, you were sitting there.

Q. Did you tell him? A. You were in there.

Q. Sadie, after you were out at the house there that Saturday morning, you went back to the hotel where Bettie was?

A. That was in the morning when I came up to where you were?

Q. In the afternoon?

A. Between twelve and one when I got out there.

Q. Then after you left there you went back to the hotel?

A. Where Bettie was?

Q. Where Bettie was? A. Yes.

Q. And what did you tell Bettie?

A. I said Bettie you have done a nice trick, I said, selling Minnie to Frank Long unbeknowns to me. She said, Sadie, the reason I done that—shall I finish?

Q. Yes?

A. She said the reason I done that, Bartlett hadn't offered us enough money, she said, for Minnie, and Rogers and I had made a contract, that is what she tells me, had made a contract with Mr. Page with Long—— No, Mr. Page, she said, for six thousand ($6,000.00) dollars to get Minnie.

Q. Now, how long were you up in Bettie's room that day?

A. I was there, I don't know, about an hour or more, I guess. Mr. Long, he came in while I was there.

Q. You were up there in the morning, that same Saturday morning, weren't you?

A. I thought you meant after I got back?

Q. Well, I did. Well, you were up there in the morning?

A. About a quarter of eight.

Q. How long were you up there that time?

A. I was up there I guess about twenty minutes if that long, because Bettie said the train hadn't come, Bartlett hadn't come, and pretty soon the 'phone rang and she said Sadie I have got a beau, she had been running there with different men, she didn't have but one room and I was going to get out of the way and let whoever it was come in.

Q. Did you do that?

A. I did do that, I went and told her I would be back about half past nine, thought the train would be in then.

Q. Where did you go?

A. I started out and got as far as that door and met a man in the hall, I thought it was Fred Cook, and I said hello Mr. Cook, he had his collar up, pulled up like that, and his cap down over his face and he said hello and passed on by me; I turned around and looked and he went right on in the room where I came from.

Q. That was Bettie's room?

A. Bettie's room, 25, right in that room.

Q. Now, that afternoon when you were up there with Bettie, Frank Long came up?

A. He came in the room about the time I got to bawling Bettie out, and Frank Long walked in.

Q. What did you say to him then?

A. He said hello Sadie, and I said God damn you what did you go out there and tell that lie on me and say that you had paid me and I was working for you and I had gone home, and I didn't know you were in town; and he said I didn't; I said you did; he said, Well Sadie, Minnie told me the baby died when it was six months old and that is too early, and I will give you three thousand ($3,000.00) dollars to steal her and take her to Oklahoma.

Q. He said before that, didn't he, say that he was through? A. Through with what?

Q. Through with the case?

A. No. Through with what case?

Q. Through with this case?

A. No, he didn't say he was through with no case. I will tell you if you will let me.

Q. Didn't he throw up his hands and say that he was through? A. No, I will tell you what he said.

Q. What did he say?

A. When he told me he would give us three thousand dollars to steal her and take her to Oklahoma, I said no I am going to leave her right here until Hugh Bartlett comes, I said, she aint going to sign those papers that you left nor you aint going to take her to Spokane, Washington, tonight; I said where you made your mistake was by not talking to Captain MacNab; he throwed his hands——

Q. Did Mr. Long say that he had quit, that he was through with it? A. No, he didn't.

By Mr. German: I submit the witness hadn't completed the previous answer before counsel asked another question, and ask that she be allowed to do so.

By Mr. Hanford: Her answer is not responsive to the question and I interrupted her.

By Mr. German: I ask the Examiner to allow her to complete that answer.

The Examiner: You gentlemen will have to control the taking of this testimony so far as the questions and answers are concerned.

Q. Did he say that he would give you three thousand ($3,000.00) dollars apiece or three hundred ($300.00) dollars apiece? A. Oh, no, three thousand ($3,000.00) dollars.

Q. Didn't you testify down at Muskogee at the Receivership's hearing that he said he would give you three hundred ($300.00) dollars apiece?

A. They misunderstood me if they got it down there. No.

Q. I will ask you if you didn't testify as follows at Muskogee:——I am reading from, beginning with the 10th line from the bottom of page 137 of the printed record of that hearing: "She told me the baby died when it was six months old. He says I will give you and Bettie three hundred ($300.00) dollars apiece to steal Minnie and bring her to Oklahoma?"

A. Frank Long didn't offer me no three hundred dollars.

Q. Did you testify that way at Muskogee?

A. I don't know as I did, if it is down there that way it is wrong, three hundred dollars apiece, three thousand ($3,000.00) dollars.

Q. Three thousand dollars apiece?

A. He didn't say apiece, I will give you three thousand dollars, he was talking to both of us, to steal Minnie and take her to Oklahoma, three thousand dollars.

Q. Now, did Frank Long tell you that Minnie said the child died when it was six months old. A. Yes.

Q. Or did you tell him that Minnie had told you that?

A. No, Minnie never told me nothing about anybody dying.

Q. Never did?

A. No, only about this Mabel, no. She told me when I got back out there in front of you and Captain Mcnab what she told Mr. Long, in front of you and Captain Mcnab.

Q. What was that?

A. She said Sadie I told the man the baby died when it was six months old, and she said that was too early, we will have to fix it. Captain Mcnab said, Sadie don't you think Minnie ought to turn her business over to us, she don't know how to talk? And I said yes.

Q. Did you tell her that the baby wasn't dead?

A. What baby, what baby?

Q. Tommy? A. What Tommy?

Q. Thomas Atkins. A. Where did he come from?

Q. Answer the question. Did you tell her that?

A. No, I didn't never know no Thomas Atkins.

Q. You didn't tell Minnie that Thomas was dead?

A. No, sir, I didn't tell her that.

Q. Did you tell Minnie that the boy might be dead?

A. Might be dead?

Q. But that you (Minnie) don't know that he is dead?

A. Oh, no, I didn't have that conversation, I didn't have no business to have that conversation with her.

Q. Did you tell her that? A. No, no sir.

Q. Did you tell her you knew more about the baby than she did herself and that you had seen it when it was five years old? A. Mr. Hanford, no.

Q. Did you?

A. No, no, I couldn't have told her that, I aint seen nothing but the ground, dirt in Leavenworth, I couldn't have told her that.

Q. And didn't she keep telling you that it was dead?

A. Oh, no we never spoke of nobody about being dead at all, about no dead boy of hers, she never told me that.

> By Mr. Blakeney: I would like to have the Examiner ask the witness when she is cringing around in her chair, whether or not she is suffering from any physical condition.

Q. Did you tell Captain Mcnab that Mr. Page held that forged deed to this land?

A. Didn't speak about any deed.

Q. Didn't speak about the deed?

A. Didn't speak about the deed, no, sir.

Q. Didn't you describe to Captain Mcnab how Mr. Page had gone into court and held that deed up and claimed the property before the Commission?

A. Oh, no, you wasn't there, we didn't discuss that.

Q. Well, I am asking you to state it?

A. No, I did not, my; I didn't know what Mr. Page had.

Q. Well, did you tell him who Mr. Page was?

A. No, I just told him I knew him.

Q. You told him who Mr. Josey was?

A. I did not, he asked me if I knew him and I said yes.

Q. But you did tell him who Mr. Long was?

A. I did not. He asked me if I knew those men and I said yes.

Q. You didn't ask him, who is this Frank Long?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Where did he come from? A. Did I ask?

Q. Captain Mcnab?

A. And I had been knowing Frank Long as long as I have, no.

Q. Nothing was said like that?

A. Oh, no, nothing like that was said.

Q. Now, you say that you saw some papers that Mr. Long had there—had left there?

A. Yes, there was two laying on the table, they was printed, they was printed ones.

Q. They were about this size?

A. They were about that size.

Q. That is legal cap size?

A. I guess so, about that size laying on the table. Captain Mcnab said here is the papers that he left for her to sign, I looked at one of those.

Q. What did that say?

A That paper had on there that she was the mother of Thomas Atkins, and that he was born in 1885 and died in 1898; like that, that is the way that paper read. Now, I didn't look at that bottom paper, as you remember, you were sitting there.

Q. There were two papers were there?

A. There was two there one on top of the other.

Q. You only read the first one?

A. Yes, sir, just the first paper there, I don't know what was on the other one, I couldn't see.

Q. Did you discuss that paper with Captain Mcnab?

A. Yes, you were there. I said Captain Mcnab, don't let Minnie sign those papers and don't let Mr. Long take her to Spokane tonight.

Q. He told you what it was? A. No.

Q. Read it out loud?

A. No, you were sitting there, you remember Captain Mcnab showing me the papers?

Q. Answer my question, Sadie, you didn't read it out loud?

A. No, he just said Sadie here are the papers that Mr. Long left for her to sign.

Q. Now, where was this about Thomas Atkins being born in 1885 and dying in 1898, where was that?

A. Where was that at?

Q. Yes?

A. It was in Leavenworth but it didn't say whose name.

Q. Where abouts on the paper, at the top?

A. I don't know, I just looked over there and glanced at that paper, and I said oh, Captain Mcnab don't you let Minnie sign that paper, don't let Minnie sign those papers, and don't you let him take her to Spokane tonight, and he said I wont.

Q. You didn't read all the papers yourself?

A. I didn't, just glanced over them there, you know how excited I was when I got in there and found Long had stolen her.

Q. You just saw that on that paper?

A. I just saw that on that one, there was two.

Q. What did you tell Minnie about these papers?

A. Who?

Q. Minnie?

A. You and Captain Mcnab were talking, I wasn't talking to Minnie.

Q. What did you tell her?

A. I said nothing to her. Minnie told me, the man has been here, Sadie, that you are working for, and said he paid you and you had gone home, said he had left some papers here for me to sign; and I said Minnie you signed those papers, and she said no, Minnie didn't know what they were, and she brought me down there. When she brought me down to the house and introduced me, told Captain Mcnab who I was and he introduced me to you, said you were his lawyer.

Q. Now, Sadie, that is not responsive to my question. You didn't tell, you say, Minnie anything about those papers?

A. No, I told Captain Mcnab.

Q. Now, going back Sadie, on your way out there, you had in mind a scheme to find Minnie?

A. Yes, I had in mind a scheme to find her.

Q. And get a deed from her to Mr. Bartlett, and then after you had sold the deed from Minnie to Mr. Bartlett?

A. Yes.

Q. You were going to find a boy and sell him to somebody else? A. Yes.

Q. That was your plan then?

A. That was our plan then to get Minnie to say she had a boy.

Q. Yes?

A. That is what that was.

Q. And then to find a boy and say he was Tommy Atkins? A. Say he was Thomas Atkins.

Q. You were working a double thing?

A. A double thing to make Minnie say——I knew she had none in Leavenworth—to get her to sign, and we were still working that end in Leavenworth.

Q. You didn't want her to say the boy was dead, then you couldn't do it? A. Yes, couldn't she said he was dead.

Q. You wanted her to say that the boy was dead?

A. At that time, Mr. Hanford, I didn't have no deed with me, on the trip that we found her, no, sir.

Q. So you wanted her to say that the boy was dead?

A. No, I didn't, I just wanted her to say this much; that she had a boy, that she had a boy, that was all I wanted her to do, to say so, to fool Mr. Bartlett when he come.

Q. Now, after you saw Mr. Long in town that Saturday afternoon, when did you next see Minnie?

A. I saw Minnie that night, you know.

Q. That night?

A. Yes, that night about half past seven or eight, that night.

Q. Saw her at her house? A. Yes, went out there.

Q. And she was there all by herself?

A. All by herself scared to death.

Q. Now, when did Mr. Bartlett get there?

A. Frank Long got there on a Saturday, June 13th, and Mr. Bartlett didn't get there until a week later, Saturday the 20th.

Q. And when Mr. Bartlett got there, you told him they had Minnie in the Guard house, didn't you?

A. I told him that lie in front of Bettie to get him away from Bettie.

Q. And you told him you hadn't seen Minnie since that Saturday afternoon, didn't you?

A. Didn't I stay out there all that Sunday, no I didn't tell him.

Q. You saw her Sunday too?

A. I stayed all day Sunday with her, from eight o'clock Sunday to that night.

Q. You are sure you saw her Saturday night?

A. Saturday night?

Q. How long were you there?

A. About thirty minutes, I suppose until she got to explaining to me, I was going back to town to get detectives like she said and get her away from there.

Q. So you saw her at eight o'clock? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And saw her about twenty minutes?

A. About that length of time, yes, only when she got through telling me that stuff.

Q. All of that?

A. Might have been longer than twenty minutes, but not very long.

Q. Could have been an hour?

A. No, I wasn't there no hour.

Q. This was up at her house? A. Her house.

Q. Her husband wasn't there?

A. Harry couldn't have been, he left Saturday morning for Spokane.

Q. Anybody else?

A. Nobody else, she was walking the floor.

Q. Did you see Minnie at anybody else's house?

A. No, just her own, I never been in anybody else's house.

Q. So about half past eight you left her house and went back to town that night?

A. Yes, I went right back to town to where I stayed at, at a rooming house, and I thought there was a telegram there for me and there wasn't none there.

Q. Did you ever see Minnie at Sargeant Everman's house?

A. I never been in that Fort to see nobody's house except Captain Mcnab.

Q. Are you sure you didn't see Minnie—— A. No.

By Mr. Blakeney: I would like to repeat my inquiry that the witness is rising and making grimaces ask the examiner to ask if she is suffering.

By Mr. German: I ask the Examiner to certify in the record the witness' movements in the chair. I think they are discolored in counsel's statements.

The Examiner: I can't see the witness. Are you suffering?

A. No, sir, I am tired.

Q. Now, if Minnie was at Sargeant Everman's house that night at eight o'clock, you couldn't have seen her could you?

A. I couldn't if she was there.

Q. And if she was up at Captain Mcnab's house signing that trust deed, then you couldn't have seen her at eight o'clock that night? A. At eight o'clock that night?

Q. Yes?

A. No, I couldn't have seen her because I wasn't in the Fort.

Q. You are sure you saw her there at her house?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. At eight o'clock that night?

A. Yes, sir, along in there, it might have not been eight, between seven and eight anyhow, I couldn't state the exact hour.

Q. After five o'clock though?

A. Yes, after five o'clock.

Q. And after supper?

A. Yes, it was after supper.

Q. Now, at that meeting, Minnie told you that Frank Long had come back and that they had all gone up in the Post, didn't she?

A. She didn't name nobody, didn't even name him. I said, Minnie did Frank Long come back, and she said yes and they are up in the Fort, she didn't say who.

Q. She told you to go down and get detectives to protect her?

A. No, she said, Sadie you go to town, she was walking the floor, and get detectives and take me to where you stay and keep me until my husband comes, because Captain Mcnab wants me to do something I don't want to do.

Q. Did she tell you what that was?

A. No, I said aint you got sense enough to not do anything you don't want to do, and she said yes but I am afraid of him, said I am afraid of him, didn't call his name, said I am afraid of him.

Q. Captain Mcnab knew this was a frame up, didn't he?

A. He said right there in front of me, you were sitting there in front Captain Mcnab and Mr. Hanford, said I told the man the baby died when it was six months old and he said that was too early we would have to fix it.

Q. So we both knew that was too early, did we?

A. You both knew that, yes, both of you.

Q. Then, we both knew this was a frame up?

A. At that rate, you didn't know that me and her had framed up I suppose, but I am telling what she said in front of you and Captain Mcnab.

Q. Said the boy died at six months old?

A. Said the baby died at six months old and that was too early and would have to fix it. Captain Mcnab said, Sadie don't you think Minnie ought to turn her business over to us; I don't know who was us.

Q. Captain Mcnab asked your advice about turning her business over to him?

A. Yes, sir, I said yes Captain and don't let Minnie sign those papers, and don't let him take her to Spokane tonight. Frank Long was taking her to Spokane where he was.

Q. What did she say that Captain Mcnab wanted her to do? A. Something I don't want to do.

Q. Something she was afraid to do?

A. Something she didn't want to do. Said he wants me to do something I don't want to do; and I said haven't you got sense enough not to do something you don't want to do? and she said yes, but I am afraid of him.

Q. Did you ask her what that something was?

A. No, I didn't have time, because I was uneasy too. She said if you don't get me tonight you come and stay with me tomorrow anyhow; that is the reason I went out there soon Sunday morning, she told me that same thing, said Sadie if you don't get me tonight come back tomorrow and stay with me tomorrow anyhow. I told her I would. I was figuring on going to town and get detectives and coming back to her but nobody wired me any money.

Q. Was it in the afternoon or night that she told you to come back Sunday?

A. That night. Said if I didn't get her that night, you come and stay with me tomorrow anyhow. She was pacing the floor.

Q. You didn't even ask her what this something was?

A. I did not, I didn't ask her.

Q. And she didn't tell you?

A. And she didn't tell me, no sir.

Q. So you didn't know what it was?

A. No, sir, I didn't know until the next day, the next morning, she told me the next morning, Sunday.

Q. What was it?

A. She said Sadie I have signed my papers over to Captain Mcnab and I can't sign no papers or talk to nobody that comes, if they want to see me they have to go to Captain Mcnab. That is what she told me the next morning.

Q. Did she tell you when she signed it over?

A. No, only just what she said. I said, Minnie what did you do last? And she said, Sadie I turned my business over to Captain Mcnab. Didn't say whether she done it last night, this morning, or when, that was the answer she gave me.

Q. So she did turn it over to Captain Mcnab that night?

A. I don't know what she done, I am telling you what she said she did.

Q. What she had said she had done?

A. She didn't say when she had done it.

Q. Did she say whether Captain Mcnab was at the house?

A. Didn't say whether it was at the Fort or whether he came down there, or what.

Q. Didn't say what time? A. She did not.

Q. So you knew she was up in the Post seeing Captain Mcnab the night before, didn't you? A. Did I know it?

Q. Yes? A. I didn't know it.

Q. You found it out the next morning?

A. I didn't know she was in the Fort, she didn't tell me where she was, no.

Q. Now, that night when you got out there, you say nobody else was there? A. Nobody in that house.

Q. And you found her there all by herself?

A. By herself in the house.

Q. Are you sure of that?

A. I am positive of it, yes, I know there wasn't nobody in there, if they was they was hid in there.

Q. You couldn't see them any place?

A. Nobody was around there that I saw.

Q. You couldn't see anybody on the porch?

A. Nobody that I saw.

Q. How about that soldier that you said was out on the porch?

A. That was Sunday morning. I got there about a quarter to eight and a soldier was there with his horse in the yard, and stayed all day long.

Q. He was out there Sunday?

A. Sunday morning when I got there about a quarter of eight, and didn't leave until I left and I left about eight o'clock that night.

Q. Did he say what he was there for?

A. He didn't, Minnie told me what he was there for, but he didn't.

Q. Didn't you say on direct examination that there was a soldier there on Saturday night?

A. Oh, no, not Saturday night.

By Mr. Blakeney: I would like to repeat my statement into the record that I find the witness making grimaces and nervously twitching around in the chair as though suffering from something.

By Mr. German: If counsel is serious in his remarks, I would suggest a recess, because this witness has been on the stand yesterday morning, yesterday afternoon, and last night, and this morning and this afternoon, and it is now twenty minutes after four.

The Examiner: We will take a recess until tomorrow at nine-thirty o'clock.

By Mr. German: I would like to have the Examiner certify to what the witness—I would like for the Examiner to certify to the witness' statement.

The Examiner: The witness stated that she was tired.

By Mr. Blakeney: I would like to make a statement that every time the cross examination seemed to be vigorous I noticed this situation and I join with counsel who made the statement that he would like to have her taken to Muskogee and let the Court see her. I join in that request.

By Mr. German: I challenge counsel's statement in reference to the conduct of the witness on cross examination.

And thereupon an adjournment of the taking of testimony is had until tomorrow morning at nine-thirty o'clock, and thereafter, and on February 16th, 1916, at 9:30 o'clock A. M., further testimony herein is taken as follows:

SADIE JAMES, being recalled, further testified as follows:

Cross Examination by Mr. Hanford.

Q. Sadie, you never did go to Butte, did you? A. Sir?
Q. You never did go to Butte? A. Butte?
Q. Yes? A. No, I never did go there.
Q. You met Mr. Bartlett at Portland?
A. Portland, Oregon.
Q. Then went on back with him?
A. Came on back to Oklahoma as far as Denver.
Q. As far as Pueblo? A. That is as far as Pueblo.
Q. Then you came on back to Leavenworth as far as Pueblo? A. Yes, I came back to Leavenworth.
Q. And left him out there?
A. Left him out at Rye or somewhere.
Q. That is when he sent you the deed for Thomas Atkins to sign, and the check? A. If I found him.
Q. Yes? A. Yes, sir.
Q. Mr. Bartlett joined you at Seattle on what date?
A. Saturday, June 20th, a week after Mr. Long had been there.
Q. Mr. Long left on a Monday?
A. I didn't see Mr. Long any more after that Saturday.
Q. That was a week after you saw Mr. Long that Mr. Bartlett came? A. Yes, on that Saturday, June 20th.
Q. And you met him at the train when he came?

A. Yes, Bettie and I both, Bettie Mann and I met him at the train.

Q. And you went out to the Fort with him by yourself?

A. By myself, yes, sir.

Q. On the street car, and where did you go from the street car? A. To Captain Mcnab's house.

Q. And you went in?

A. Yes, Captain Mcnab let us in yes, sir.

Q. Captain Mcnab let you in himself?

A. No, I think somebody else. We rang the bell and I think somebody else came to the door—a lady I think, and he came down.

Q. Where did you go when you went in the house?

A. Mr. Hanford I can't describe to you, the hall runs this way; we went right in the side door to Captain Mcnab's parlor, went through the hall door and turned to go back through another door here into the parlor room.

Q. Into a front room? A. Yes, into a front room.

Q. You didn't go to his office?

A. No, we went to that front room.

Q. What kind of a hall did you pass through?

A. The hall is quite long but we didn't go clear through the hall, we were going probably the length of this table if that long.

Q. Only about ten feet?

A. I think so, and went in, we were right in the front, because I could look out doors.

Q. Now, where did you sit in that room?

A. I sat—well I don't know just the way that house runs, it faces this way, but I don't know which way that is.

Q. The house faces north.

A. North? Well, I sat on the west side, and Mr. Bartlett sat on the window side right in the big arm chair, and Minnie came in, Captain Mcnab brought Minnie and he told her to sit down here, said sit down here Minnie, Captain said right here,—Like Mr. Bartlett was sitting there, so he could look at Minnie if she looked up, but she didn't look up though.

Q. Captain Mcnab stood up? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You sat on the west? A. I sat on the west.

Q. And Minnie sat on the south?

A. South facing Mr. Bartlett.

Q. Facing Mr. Bartlett? A. Yes.

Q. Now, where was Minnie's chair, against the wall?

A. Well, I can't tell you that, I don't know whether that chair was against the wall or not, but quite a space between her and Mr. Bartlett.

Q. Now, is that a large room or a small room?

A. Well, it is not a very small room. I am not very good on describing. I wouldn't like to describe the size of that room because we were not in there long enough.

Q. Did you notice anything particular about the room?

A. What was in there?

Q. As to what was in there?

A. No, I was watching Minnie to see if she would look up at me, no.

Q. Did you notice what rooms opened off of this room?

A. I don't think there is a thing there but the hall, that is the way he went out, the hall and stairway goes right up, and I think the hall and stairway goes right up and I think the hallway comes further back.

Q. Did you notice any other rooms that opened or connected with this room?

A. I did not, I didn't pay any attention to them.

Q. You didn't notice anything on the wall that attracted your attention?

A. I did not. Minnie attracted my atention, see how bad she looked, no, sir.

Q. Didn't you see any sheep's heads?

A. I did not. I keep telling you I didn't notice those, I was watching her.

Q. No hides or furs? A. I was watching Minnie.

Q. Did you see a case of rifles?

A. I was watching Minnie all the time after she came in, she was looking down, and I wanted to see if she would look up at me.

Q. You didn't see that case of rifles?

A. No, sir, I never noticed a thing but her.

Q. What did Mr. Bartlett sit on? A. In a chair.

Q. Chair? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Could you see up the stairs from where you sat?

A. I don't know as I did, I wont say I did, because Mr. Hanford, I was too busy watching Minnie.

Q. Well, how did you know Captain Mcnab came down from up stairs?

A. Well, I saw him—out doors, I saw him coming down stairs to let us in.

Q. You looked through the door?

A. No, the maid went up there and called him, I think it was a white woman, and she left the door open and Captain Mcnab came down stairs and I noticed him, and Mr. Bartlett——

Q. That is how you know he was up stairs because you saw him come from up there? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Saw him come down stairs? A. Saw him come down.

Q. Now, what was said when you first went in?

A. I introduced Captain Mcnab to Mr. Bartlett.

Q. To Mr. Bartlett?

A. Yes, and Mr. Bartlett said Mr. Mcnab—Captain Mcnab, may I see Minnie? He said, yes I will get her. By that time he took us in the room and he told Mr. Bartlett to sit down and I went and found me a chair.

Q. Captain Mcnab said he would get her?

A. Yes, he would get her.

Q. Then how long before Minnie came?

A. I couldn't say how many minutes but it wasn't very long, because he went out and came back and stood in the door until she got to him.

Q. So she must have been right there?

A. She was somewhere very close, I didn't know whether she was in the house or not, but she was somewhere very close.

Q. Do you know how he got her, did he just go and tell her to come?

A. Oh, I didn't see her, you know Mr. Bartlett and I were in the room.

Q. Did he telephone?

A. Captain Mcnab went out and turned this way, I suppose in the hall, I don't know where he went because we couldn't see him, we were sitting down in there.

Q. Captain Mcnab came back and waited for Minnie to come there?

A. He came back, but he didn't come in, he stood in the door where he could see her when she came.

Q. Did he say anything?

A. No, he didn't say anything, just said I will have her.

Q. So you and Mr. Bartlett just sat there waiting?

A. And Captain Mcnab was standing in the door waiting for Minnie to come, this way from where she would come from, Mr. Bartlett and I were just sitting there waiting for Minnie to come in.

Q. Now, what is the shape of that hall?

A. Well, now, I can't describe that hall. I wasn't in it only to come from the front door into the room.

Q. Well, it is about ten feet long—long as this table, didn't you say?

A. No, I don't know whether it is that long or not, I wouldn't care to describe that hall, I wouldn't try to.

Q. Well, is it wide as it is long?

A. Well, I wouldn't say that because I don't know, I didn't pay that much attention to that hall.

Q. Who spoke first when Minnie came in?

A. Mr. Mcnab spoke first.

Q. Captain Mcnab spoke first? A. Yes.

Q. What did he say?

A. He said sit down here Minnie, the chair facing Mr. Bartlett, he said sit down here Minnie.

Q. He pointed to the chair?

A. Yes, the chair he had there, yes, sir.

Q. Then, who spoke? A. Mr. Bartlett.

Q. What did he say?

A. He said are you Minnie Atkins? She was sitting down this way, never did look up at me or him either when she came in. Mr. Bartlett said are you the mother of Thomas Atkins? Minnie never answered, but Captain Mcnab said yes, but she hasn't seen him since he was two years old. Minnie didn't get to answer the question.

Q. Captain Mcnab answered the question?

A. Answered the question for Minnie.

Q. Did Minnie speak while she was in there, in the room?

A. Yes, just answered that her name was Minnie Atkins.

Q. That was all? A. Yes.

Q. So that all the time Mr. Bartlett was there, that is all the thing that she said?

A. No that is not all she said.

Q. What did she say?

A. Mr. Bartlett said, Minnie did you ever go to Carlisle? and she said yes, and he said what schools did you go to in Oklahoma, and she couldn't tell him.

Q. She didn't say anything then?

A. She didn't answer that and he asked her if she knew Miss Alice Robertson, and she said no, and Captain Mcnab then spoke up and said you know how Indians are, sulky, and Minnie is one of those kind. Mr. Bartlett couldn't say anything further to Minnie, Captain Mcnab was talking, and he turned and said, Sadie only offered Minnie two thousand ($2,000.00) dollars for her land.

Q. Did Minnie say anything more than that?

A. No, sir, not a word.

Q. How long were you there?

A. We were in there I suppose a half an hour from the time we came in.

Q. That was all Minnie said?

Q. Yes, that was all that Minnie said, Mr. Bartlett didn't ask Minnie another question. Captain Mcnab was undering the questions too much for Minnie, she couldn't talk.

Q. He wouldn't let her talk?

A. No, he was doing the talking.

Q. Well, he answered the questions and wouldn't let her say anything?

A. I don't know whether he would let her or not, but before she could say anything he answered them.

Q. Did he answer as to what school she went to in Oklahoma?

A. No, he just knew that Minnie was down there, he didn't know the school down there.

Q. So he was just talking for the money?

A. I didn't see what else.

Q. Now, what else was said by Mr. Bartlett after he stopped talking to Minnie?

A. Before Mr. Bartlett could say anything else, Captain Mcnab said, Why Sadie only offered Minnie two thousand ($2,000.00) dollars for the land, Mr. Long said the land is valuable; and Captain Mcnab said I have sent my lawyer down to Oklahoma to investigate it—didn't say Minnie's, but his. Mr. Bartlett spoke then and said, Captain Mcnab I bought a deed to the land two years ago and sold out to the Gipsy and I afterwards found out it was a forged deed put off on me and I hope while your lawyer is down there you will have him call to see the Gipsy, because they are people who will give you as much money as anybody else will. Captain Mcnab said he would have whoever it was he had down there—said he would, and he said, Now Mr. Bartlett you come back here at two o'clock.

Q. Did Mr. Bartlett go back?

A. I guess he did, but I didn't go back out there with Mr. Bartlett at all.

Q. Then, did you leave? A. We left them.

Q. That was all that was said?

A. That was all that was said at the house, yes, that I know.

Q. Did it take you thirty minutes?

A. Took me thirty minutes?

Q. To say that much?

A. Listen, we had to wait for Minnie to come.

Q. You didn't have to wait very long for Minnie, did you?

A. No, but during that length of time waiting for Minnie until the conversation was over, I guess it was about that length of time.

Q. Might have been less?

A. Might have been less or longer.

Q. About thirty minutes? A. I will say that.

Q. Nothing else was said?

A. That I paid any attention to if it was.

Q. Did Mr. Bartlett tell Captain Mcnab that you were working for him? A. I don't remember, I don't remember.

Q. Did he tell Captain Mcnab that Bettie Mann had been working for him?

A. Why, I don't remember; I don't remember now. I am just telling you what I know, I think he told him that probably if he went back, but he didn't that morning while I was in the house.

Q. Did they talk about Bettie Mann?

A. Not that morning, no.

Q. Not that morning?

A. No. I don't know what they talked about after he went back.

Q. You are sure he went back then?

A. Well, I don't know whether he went back or not, because I didn't see Mr. Bartlett any more until about five o'clock in the evening; he said he was going back, as Captain Mcnab had asked him back.

Q. What I want to find out is this, why you say if he went back that afternoon, they talked about certain things?

A. You asked me if they stated them.

Q. That is all I am asking you about, not anything that took place after that.

A. Well, I don't know anything more than that, what I have told you.

Q. Now, did Captain Mcnab say anything about Minnie?

A. He said that Indians were sulky, he said you know how Indians are, they are sulky, and Minnie is one of that disposition. That satisfied us and Mr. Bartlett that she couldn't talk any more, wouldn't talk any more.

Q. Did you talk about Thomas Atkins?

A. Mr. Bartlett simply asked Minnie if she was the mother of Thomas Atkins and Captain Mcnab answered it.

Q. What did he say?

By Mr. German: I object to that as repretition that has been over two or three times on cross examination.

Q. What did she say? What did Minnie say?

A. She said yes, No she didn't say nothing when he asked her that.

Q. Well, what did she say?

A. Before she could answer Captain Mcnab answered that.

Q. For her?

A. When Minnie came, Mr. Bartlett asked her: Are you Minnie Atkins, and Minnie said yes.

Q. I am not asking about when she came in there, I am asking what Captain Mcnab said when Mr. Bartlett asked him that?

By Mr. German: The same objection.

A. Asked who?

Q. Asked Minnie?

A. Was she the mother of Thomas Atkins?

Q. Yes?

A. Captain Mcnab said, yes, but she hasn't seen him since he was six months old.

By Mr. Hanford: Do you withdraw your objection?

By Mr. German: No, that is still repetition.

Q. Did Mr. Bartlett ask Minnie where the boy was born?

A. No.

Q. Anything like that? A. Not then.

Q. Did Captain Mcnab say anything about Minnie's self?

A. No, sir.

Q. Didn't say anything?

A. No, sir, not before me, he didn't.

Q. Did you tell Captain Mcnab anything?

A. Captain Mcnab wasn't talking to me at all, he never paid a bit of attention to me at all.

Q. You didn't say anything to him?

A. No, he wasn't paying a bit of attention to me, he was talking to Mr. Bartlett and watching Minnie.

Q. But, Sadie, what I want to know is, did you say anything while you were in there?

A. Not to Captain Mcnab, nor to anyone else.

Q. You simply introduced Mr. Bartlett to Captain Mcnab?

A. To Captain Mcnab at the door.

Q. And then you just stopped——

A. I just went in there and sat down because it wasn't none of my conversation. Captain Mcnab never paid no more attention to me.

Q. So, you didn't say anything until you got up and left after you introduced them? A. Yes, that is it.

Q. So that the first time that you ever saw Captain Mcnab, was that the only time that you ever saw Captain Mcnab, with the exception of that Saturday when you were down there at Minnie's house? A. No.

Q. You had seen him before that?

A. Had I ever seen him before that?

Q. Had you ever seen him at any time either before or after? A. No.

Q. Just those two times? A. Just those two times.

Q. Now Sadie, after you got back from Seattle, you went to Leavenworth, how long were you there?

A. Back from Seattle when, the first time?

Q. Yes?

A. The first time I had been out there and went back to get the deed?

Q. Yes?

A. I got in on Thursday night and left Saturday, there just two days, all day Friday and I left Saturday evening.

Q. Saturday evening?

A. Saturday evening, got the deed and the check in the morning.

Q. Who did you go to see?

A. I went to see Dennis Jones and Rube Smith.

Q. And where did you see them?

A. I saw them up in the office Saturday morning.

Q. What did you tell them?

A. I showed them, I had been up there before, I showed them, I told them—I didn't show them the deed because I didn't have it. I showed them this picture I had gotten from Mary Hamilton, and I said now we want to get a man that looks something like this, and Rube said I will tell you what we can do, we can work my son Lucian, he is in New York.

Q. What I want to know is did you tell them you had been to Seattle? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you tell them about that?

A. I told them about Bettie Mann double crossing me and about Frank Long stealing her and they were going to make a white case out of it.

Q. What did you mean by that?

A. Why, we had got a negro case started in Leavenworth, and when I got out there, Minnie said they are going to start a white case out of it; and Dennis said you all can't start nothing like that here.

Q. Minnie told you they were going to start a white case?

A. Yes, wasn't going to have no negroes in it at all.

Q. Minnie told you we were framing up with her?

A. Didn't say framing up, said Sadie they are going to make a white case out of it, they want me to say the baby was born in a hospital and I give him away at two years old, aint going to have any negroes in it at all. They found out you were no Government officer and you will get arrested.

Q. She told you that we were going to have the baby born in the hospital?

A. Wanted her to say so, yes, that is what she said.

Q. Did she say who wanted her to say that?

A. No, but I had in my own mind who she was talking about.

Q. Who did you have in mind?

A. In my mind that you and Captain Mcnab, for she had turned the business over to Captain Mcnab that night.

Q. She said they were going to have the baby born——

A. Wanted her to say so.

Q. Did she say what hospital?

A. No, she didn't say what hospital.

Q. Just said a hospital? A. A hospital.

Q. Did she say where the hospital was?

A. No, you found that out when you went to Leavenworth.

Q. I am asking you? A. Oh, no.

Q. Didn't say where the hospital was?

A. Oh, no. Didn't name the hospital.

Q. And didn't name the hospital but just wanted it to be a hospital?

A. Be born in a hospital and say I gave it away when it was two years old.

Q. Didn't she tell you the Sister's Hospital in Leavenworth? A. No.

Q. When you got back to Leavenworth, did you tell that to Dennis Jones?

A. Sure I told that to them, didn't tell them the Sister's Hospital, because I didn't know where you were going to start that lie at all.

Q. Didn't tell them that?

A. No, I didn't say Sister's Hospital.

Q. Didn't tell them a hospital in Leavenworth?

A. I didn't know what Hospital, because I didn't know where you were going to have her say that, I didn't know.

Q. Is your memory clear on that?

A. Sure, Minnie was talking to me and I took the news to Dennis.

Q. No, Sadie, you sent some telegrams to Mr. Bartlett out there in Seattle, didn't you? A. In Seattle?

Q. Yes?

A. Oh, yes, two. Two telegrams, one on——

Q. One on Saturday? A. One on Saturday evening.

Q. And one on Sunday? A. One on Sunday morning.

Q. Where did you go to to send those telegrams?

A. I went to the Western Union, first went Saturday evening to the Western Union right around from——

Q. From Bettie's hotel?

A. From Bettie's hotel, yes.

Q. Now, did you see Bettie after—did you see Bettie any more after Mr. Bartlett arrived there?

A. Did I see her?

Q. In Seattle?

A. Oh, yes, I came back to the hotel where she was that evening.

Q. How long did she stay? A. Did Bettie stay there?

Q. Yes?

A. Frank Long hadn't given Bettie no money to go on, Mr. Bartlett——

Q. How long did she stay?

A. She stayed as long as we did and left when we did.

Q. So, you saw——

A. Mr. Bartlett paid her board bill.

Q. You saw her a number of times?

A. I went up and got my things ready and went to the depot and Mr. Bartlett went to Bettie's and met us up at the depot that evening, left I guess between six and seven o'clock.

Q. Between six and seven o'clock?

A. I guess, I don't know, I know we left that evening early.

Q. Probably seven o'clock?

A. Well, maybe so; we went around by way of Spokane.

Q. Then, you went over the Northern Pacific?

A. Well, that is the road.

Q. And then you left at Seven o'clock?

A. Well, maybe so, that is the road we went over.

Q. Did you see Bettie in the afternoon?

A. Yes, after I went to the hotel and sent my things, my trunk, I went back.

Q. Where did you go after you left Captain Mcnab's house that morning?

A. That morning? Oh, I went back to Bettie's house.

Q. Did you tell her what had taken place?

A. No, I didn't tell her what had taken place.

Q. Didn't want her to know?

A. Just told her Mr. Bartlett was to go back to Captain Mcnab's that afternoon and he said we would leave that night. I didn't tell Bettie what Captain Mcnab had said, no.

Q. You didn't tell her what he had said to Mr. Bartlett?

A. No, I didn't tell her anything.

Q. Didn't tell her anything about that visit at all?

A. No, I told her that we were out there, but I didn't tell her what went on.

Q. Did you tell her you went there when this conversation took place?

A. Yes, but I didn't tell her the conversation?

Q. Did she ask it?

A. No, Bettie had done enough, she knowed I wouldn't have told her nohow.

Q. Now, Sadie that Sunday that you say you were out at Minnie's who else was there?

A. I got there in the morning near eight o'clock, it was a soldier sitting down on the front porch and his horse out in the yard, and Minnie standing in the door.

Q. So the soldier was there?

A. The soldier was there when I got there, yes, sir.

Q. And he stayed?

A. Until I left, and that was near eight o'clock that night, he stayed all that day.

Q. Anybody else there?

A. Yes, a woman named Bertha came about an hour and a half after I got there and she stayed in the house with Minnie and I.

Q. And she left about six? A. Yes, I think about six.

Q. And you left near eight? A. Near eight.

Q. Was anybody else there?

A. Nobody else came that day.

Q. Nobody else? A. Nobody else, no.

Q. And Minnie was there all the time that you were?

A. Minnie was there all the time, she never left that day.

Q. Up until eight o'clock?

A. Yes, and she went down to the car station wth me, a soldier tagged us to the car station.

Q. She went to the car station with you?

A. Yes, she went to the car station with us and this soldier tagged right behind us.

Q. Now, Sadie, why did you go back to Leavenworth before going to Los Angeles? A. Going to Los Angeles?

Q. Yes?

A. I wanted to tell Rube and Dennis what had happened.

Q. So you came back there and stayed how many days?

A. I got back on a Thursday night and left Saturday evening.

Q. Did you see anybody else while you were there?

A. Yes, I seen other people but I wasn't talking to them about that.

Q. Not about the case?

A. No, just Dennis and Rube—Dennis and Rube, who I was working with then.

Q. You didn't inquire of anybody else?

A. No, Dennis had got all the negroes so strung up, I didn't have anything to do with it then, he had done that while I was out west.

Q. Did you ever go to see anybody else at Leavenworth from that time on?

A. Not, after I found the picture, no. I went away and was gone about a month. It was about the first of August when I got back to Leavenworth again.

Q. Sadie, when you went up to Seattle with Mrs. Kirk, what did you do first when you arrived in Seattle?

A. I went and got Clara Kirk a room at the Wright Hotel.

Q. The Wright Hotel? A. Yes.

Q. Took her from the train?

A. Taken her from the train, yes, sir.

Q. How did you travel between the train and the hotel?

A. Well, I don't know whether we walked or I don't remember now whether I walked or whether I taken her in a car, in a taxi-car, I don't know whether or not.

Q. And after you got her a room? A. Yes.

Q. You signed for her at the hotel?

A. No, I didn't sign for her, she signed for herself, I didn't get no room there.

Q. How long did she stay at the hotel?

A. She didn't stay there so very long, we went up stairs in the room, she and I.

Q. Then she went out?

A. Yes, I gave her my 'phone number so when she got out there, if everything was all right I would go out.

Q. Did she 'phone you? A. She did.

Q. You went out? A. I did.

Q. What time did you go out?

A. Oh, I got out there, I guess, I didn't get out there—Minnie had gone away from the house and Clara had gone some place to 'phone, she didn't call me right away.

Q. What time did you get out there?

A. It must have been two o'clock in the afternoon before I got out there.

Q. How long did you stay? A. Stay out there?

Q. Yes?

A. I didn't stay out in the house thirty minutes if I stayed that long.

Q. Who did you see there?

A. Harry Folk and Clara Kirk.

Q. Minnie's husband? A. Yes, sir.

Q. At the house? A. He came while I was there.

Q. What did you tell him?

A. He asked me what do you want Sadie, and I said well I would like to see Minnie. I said I am just passing through here, and he quit talking to me and called Clara Kirk in the kitchen. I don't know what he said to her at all. And they came back in and Clara said I got to go and get my suit case, she left it in town, she didn't let on like she knew me, and she said I got to go and get my suit case, and I said where are you stopping at? and she said I am stopping at the Hotel Wright; and I said I am going back that way and I will show you where the place is.

Q. You told Minnie's husband you were just passing through? A. Told who?

Q. Told Minnie's husband?

A. Yes, Minnie wasn't there.

Q. Did you tell him where you were going?

A. No, I didn't tell him that I had come on that special business to see Minnie, I didn't tell him that, but that is what I was there for.

Q. Didn't you tell him you were just passing through there and you were going to Van Couver?

A. No, I had no business at Van Couver, no.

Q. Of course you had no business, but didn't you say you were going to Van Couver? A. No.

Q. You didn't say that?

A. No, I know I didn't tell Harry that.

Q. Positive of that?

A. Positive I didn't tell Harry I was going to Van Couver, I didn't tell him where I was going.

Q. Did you have any other conversation with her husband?

A. No, Harry didn't talk to me at all; he got too much money, he wasn't going to talk to me.

Q. He left?

A. He ignored me entirely, yes. I had found Minnie for him and made him some money and he was through with me.

Q. And then you went on back to town?

A. Yes, Clara and I went on back down to wait for a car and Harry he was standing there near by, and as soon as the street car came out of the post—it was in the summer you know, and it was an open car—Harry looked and saw Minnie on it with a basket on her arm, and he waved this way for her to get off, waved his arm this way, and she jumped off of that car and run as fast as she could back to that Fort.

Q. Did she run to where Harry was or did she run towards the Fort?

A. No, she didn't run towards him because she would have run to us, she was running going into the Fort.

Q. Back into the Fort? A. Back into the gate, yes.

Q. What did he do that for, did he do that to keep her from seeing you?

A. To keep her from seeing me, that is what I figured out, yes, from seeing me.

Q. He didn't want her to see you?

A. That is the only way—the only thing I could figure because she had been there with Clara.

Q. Who paid Clara Kirk's fare? A. I did.

Q. Both coming and going?

A. Both coming and going, yes.

Q. What was she to do when she got out there to the house? A. What was she to do?

Q. Yes?

A. Nothing only talk to Minnie and see if Minnie would have me to come out there if nobody was around, Minnie would have me to come if nobody was around there she knew, Clara knew that.

Q. That was all? A. That was all.

Q. You went up to the office of the Gipsy Company how many times Sadie?

A. Oh, my goodness; When Dennis and I first started that lie, I told him when I was going to Oklahoma that I would go and tell the Gipsy that I knew all about the boy, and I told Dennis and Rube the interest the Gipsy had in this land.

Q. You went up there a number of times?

A. Told a lie to them, yes.

Q. Who all did you see up at the Gipsy?

A. Mr. Crawley——

By Mr. German: I ask that counsel designate the time.

By Mr. Blakeney: The witness seems to know the times she has answered.

Q. Who all did you see up at the Gipsy Company?

A. I saw Mr. Crawley that time.

Q. At different times, any time?

A. Oh, way after that, I would see Mr. Crawley and Mr. McGraw.

Q. Just those two?

A. Just two, the only ones that I talked to at the Gipsy. They believed I was telling the truth and thought there was a Thomas Atkins.

Q. When you saw Dennis in Leavenworth after the deed and the check came from Mr. Bartlett, what did you tell him?

A. I told him that I was going back out west and if I could find a man that was stout enough to hold up for me, I would let him sign it and bring him back to Leavenworth and let them switch him back—Let the negroes tell a lie and say it was Thomas Atkins and let them take him to the Gipsy.

Q. That is what you told Dennis? A. What I told Dennis.

Q. That was when you got the deed and check?

A. Oh, I went up there and showed him the deed and check that I was to get, Saturday morning; I saw him Friday morning and Saturday.

Q. Did any conversation take place?

A. No not special. When I brought the picture back was the only conversation about that, when I told them where I was going.

Q. Sadie, after you got back from Portland the last time, you were out there with Mr. Bartlett, you went back to Tulsa, didn't you? A. Came back to Leavenworth first.

Q. Then came to Tulsa?

A. Yes, came to Leavenworth, went along about August 1st.

Q. And you went up there to see who?—To see Mr. Walker—Mr. C. A. Walker?

A. Oh, no, not when I came back. When I left Leavenworth then I went back to Oklahoma.

Q. And went to see Mr. Walker?

A. Didn't go to see Mr. Walker right away, no. Didn't go to see Mr. Walker for quite a bit.

Q. How long? A. A couple of weeks maybe.

Q. Do you remember about the date?

A. That I saw Mr. Walker?

Q. Yes?

A. It must have been about a couple of weeks before I saw Mr. Walker, no I think it was—Let's see: It was about a week I guess before I saw Mr. Walker, I guess.

Q. Can you approximate the date? A. No, I can't.

Q. You don't know the date?

A. No, not that time. I can the next trip that I saw him.

Q. Is that the time you told him you were going to see Mr. Page?

A. Oh, no, I didn't tell him that until later on. I was talking then about my money from Mr. Bartlett.

Q. When was that that you saw Mr. Walker?

A. About Mr. Page?

Q. Yes?

A. Wednesday, August 19th—Wednesday, on the 19th, about a quarter of three.

Q. What did you tell him?

A. I went in there and told Mr. Walker, I said: Mr. Walker I am going to get arrested, Fred Cook is going to arrest me, and he said what for? And I said you know I have been telling there is a Tommy Atkins, and there is none, and Mr. Cook is going to arrest me for passing as a Government Officer, and I want you to go over there with me and tell Mr. Page there aint no Tommy Atkins.

Q. Aint no Tommy Atkins?

A. Wasn't none, And I was going to get out of his way making a live one. You all were making a dead one at that time.

Q. Yes, and you told him you were going to get out of the way?

A. The way of Mr. Page, Frank Long and Fred Cook were running together and I was going to get out of Frank Long and Fred Cook's way was what I was running from.

Q. Were these the words that you used?

A. Something like that; and told him the whole details of it; and he said Sadie, have you, after having to go to Mr. Bartlett——

Q. Now, what do you mean by getting out of his way?

A. Mr. Page's way, the same as you—I wont say you because you haven't got money enough.

Q. What did you mean?

A. Mr. Page had detectives on me from the time you all sold Minnie up until that time, and he was afraid Dennis and I would make our live man first before you all can get a dead one.

Q. So you went to Mr. Walker and told him there aint no Tommy Atkins?

A. Yes, I knew there wasn't, I knew that.

Q. And I am going up and tell Mr. Page?

A. I told Mr. Walker; Mr. Walker, I want you to go up with me and tell Mr. Page.

Q. There aint no Tommy Atkins?

A. Yes, tell Mr. Page that there wasn't none.

Q. And I am going to get out of his way?

A. Yes, and I told him about their making a dead man, and the crew up there with me making a dead one when there wasn't none.

Q. And you went from there up to Frank Long's office?

A. Mr. Walker looked at his watch, he said it is five minutes till four.

Q. Did you go up to Frank Long's office from there?

A. Yes, he sent me away, and said he wouldn't go.

Q. Where did you find Frank Long?

A. Found Frank Long at his office by himself sitting in there.

Q. Did you walk into where he was?

A. Yes, I opened the door, I knew where his office was and opened the door.

Q. So, when you got in there was just Mr. Long?

A. And myself.

Q. And yourself? A. And myself.

Q. Now, there are two offices there of the Gem Oil Company? A. Yes.

Q. Which office was he in?

A. I opened that big office—in the little place. You can go right in here there is a little room. I am talking about the one right next to Mr. Page. Frank Long, I think his is the next one to that.

Q. Where there is a big table and safe?

A. Yes, and that is where he was.

Q. What was he doing?

A. I can't tell just what he was doing, he was in there by himself.

Q. Standing up or sitting down?

A. I can't remember that.

Q. Who spoke first? A. He did.

Q. What did he say?

A. He said hello Sadie, what are you doing now?

Q. What did you say?

A. I said aint doing nothin. I said I came up here to tell you there aint no Tommy Atkins, and he said, Well, Mr. Page wants to see you the minute I said that.

Q. Were those the words that were used?

A. The words that were used, yes.

Q. Do you remember them?

A. Yes, I remember the words of what I told him.

Q. You remember exactly?

A. I remember exactly what I told him.

Q. Then, after all this time you remember the exact words that you used?

A. I went up there to tell him. Frank Long knew there wasn't any and I did too, and I wanted——

Q. Did you use those exact words?

A. I used those exact words.

Q. Absolutely? A. Absolutely.

Q. Told him there aint no Tommy Atkins?

A. Told him there aint none. He knew it and I knew it.

Q. Did you tell him you were going to get out of his way?

A. Told him I came to tell him there aint no Tommy Atkins.

Q. Did you tell him you were going to get out of his way?

A. Yes, told him I was going to get out of his way. He said, Mr. Page wants to see you. He wanted Mr. Page to see me before I went to talking too much about town you know.

Q. How long did you talk to Mr. Long?

A. He got right up and taken me to Mr. Page's office, said Mr. Page wants to see you, and at that time started right out with me to Mr. Page's office.

Q. And you stepped into the next room to Mr. Page's?

A. To Mr. Page's yes.

Q. Now, who did you see when you got in there?

A. I think there were one or two men sitting over there at the table with Mr. Page, I don't know who it was now. Frank Long called him, we didn't go in the office, there is a little railing or gate there and we stopped right there and Mr. Page came up to us.

Q. Mr. Page came across the room?

A. Across the room to us.

Q. What did Mr. Long say when he went in there?

A. When we went in there, Mr. Long said, Mr. Page, this is that Sadie James. I don't know what he meant by saying that like he did: This is that Sadie James.

Q. Did he say that to Mr. Page before Mr. Page came up to the railing or after he got there?

A. No, after he got there, he wasn't talking loud there, because there was some men sitting there.

Q. He wasn't talking loud? A. No.

Q. How many men were in there?

A. I don't know, one or two I guess, I don't know because they were talking with themselves when Mr. Page walked up to us.

Q. The door was open into—what do you call that man's name? A. Lawrence's or——

Q. Lawrence's office? A. Yes.

Q. Was that office open? A. No, we went in that door.

Q. When you say Clarence don't you mean Claude?

A. Yes, maybe it is, I don't know that fellow's name in there.

Q. Did you look in there?

A. No, I didn't look in there. Never seen anybody except these men there with Mr. Page.

Q. Those men were seated over there?

A. Talking with themselves.

Q. Talking in the same office?

A. Yes. We were talking low over here; where we were was quite a distance from where that table was where they were sitting at.

Q. What did Mr. Page say then?

A. Mr. Page said, why hello Sadie I have been looking for you. Just what Mr. Page said.

Q. What else did he say?

A. That is all he said, but I said——

Q. Frank Long talk any while you were in there?

A. That is what I said. Nobody spoke until I talked then.

Q. Frank Long talk any while you were in there?

A. No not then.

Q. He didn't talk any after he introduced you to Mr. Page? A. He said Mr. Page this is that Sadie James.

Q. At any other time that he was in the room did he say anything?

A. I don't know until I got to that—had to get to this other first.

Q. You were there?

A. Yes, Frank Long said nothing else while we were in that room, not that I can speak of at this minute.

Q. Weren't you present, you know what was said and done, don't you? A. Sure.

Q. You remember well, don't you? A. Sure.

Q. Now, I am asking you about Frank Long. Tell me about him.

A. Well, I don't know what Frank Long said right then.

Q. Well, at any time that he was in the room, that is what I want to know. A. I don't——

By Mr. Allen: I think the witness ought to be permitted to answer your questions.

By Mr. Hanford: I want the witness to answer my questions.

Q. I want you to say what he said at any time while you were in that room?

A. He didn't say anything until we got in the hall—Do you want me to say what Mr. Page said?

By Mr. German: We insist.

By Mr. Hanford: I insist upon conducting this examination. Don't tell me how to conduct this examination.

By Mr. Allen: For the record, I objected. I hoped you would be benefitted by it. I state my objection into the record to state now that we object and protest against the argument in the cross examination of counsel.

By Mr. German: I want the record to show that about four or five times during the course of the last half dozen questions I have undertaken to make an objection and counsel persistently asked questions so that I could not have an opportunity.

By Mr. Hanford: I will agree that you may state your objections into the record right now at the proper places.

By Mr. Blakeney: I want the record to show that counsel has not been trying to interpose objections, but has been trying to interpose an apology for the witness.

By Mr. Allen: We except to the remark of counsel.

By Mr. German: The objection that I was undertaking to make was substantially that counsel should give the witness an opportunity to answer the questions that he was propounding.

By Mr. Hanford: Is that the objection, Mr. German?

By Mr. German: Yes, sir, that is what I call an objection. I don't know what you call it.

By Mr. Blakeney: It was merely an apology for the witness, conveying it in that very way, and counsel was merely trying to assist the witness in his usual general manner to answer the questions.

By Mr. Allen: We challenge the statement of counsel and object to it.

By Mr. Blakeney: Well I will withdraw "in a general manner" if you object to that.

By Mr. German: We would like to ask Mr. Blakeney a question into the record: Do you intend to keep up injecting into the record exaggerated conclusions as to the conduct of the witness on the stand?

By Mr. Blakeney: No, sir, I haven't commenced anything of that kind, I don't think I will, don't think I could exaggerate the conduct of this witness.

By Mr. German: I challenge the correctness of counsel's statement.

Q. Now, Sadie, when you went up to Omaha, who did you say you went to see?

A. I went to see Al Walker and I ran across Bertha Black, a white woman.

Q. Do you know Miss Alice Robertson?

A. Did I know Miss Alice Robertson?

Q. Yes?

A. No, not personally. I have saw her lots when she was postmistress at Muskogee, but not to speak to her.

Q. You have seen her in Oklahoma.

A. Numbers and numbers of times.

Q. In Oklahoma? A. Yes.

Q. Did you see her when you were in Portland?

A. No, I didn't get to see her.

Q. How did you know she was there?

A. Because Mrs. Crawley said she was there after they had taken her to see Minnie and Captain Mcnab wouldn't let her.

Q. She was there at the same time?

A. At the same time, but I didn't know it at that minute.

Q. How long did you stay in Portland at that time?

A. Just a week exactly. Got there on a Monday and stayed until the following Monday.

Q. You were waiting for a Mr. Dunlap?

A. No, the detectives had come there and taken that picture away from me then, I didn't want them to have it because I knew there wasn't no Tommy Atkins, and they had gone on a trip hunting him, and Mr. Crawley and Mr. Bartlett and Miss Alice Robertson had gone up there to see if they could see Minnie at Captain Mcnab's.

Q. What did they want to see Minnie about?

A. I don't know, I can't tell you, I don't know. They didn't tell me what they were going up there for.

Q. Then, did you leave Portland first with Mr. Bartlett, or did Mr. Crawley and Miss Robertson leave first?

A. I don't know who left first, I didn't see Mr. Crawley and them when they left, I don't know, I just left with Mr. Bartlett you know and the detectives.

Q. Mr. Bartlett and one of the detectives?

A. Mr. Bartlett. One detective was out of town and another traveled with us to Bedford, Oregon, and waited there until this chief detective came from Spokane, Washington, Mr. Dunlap.

Q. Well, you didn't go straight back to Oklahoma then?

A. No, I didn't, I don't know how long, it was the first of August before I got back in there.

Q. Where did you go from Portland?

A. Straight on back home. You must remember that was about the 17th of July then, you know.

Q. Where did you go, how did you go from Portland back home?

A. Went around by way of San Francisco, that way.

Q. Clear around?

A. Yes, clear around by San Francisco, going to see Mary Hamilton.

Q. You went to see Mary Hamilton?

A. I didn't go to see them, I didn't know exactly where she was, I told them a story, they went to see her and Miss Robertson.

Q. You went back to show them?

A. I didn't go back to show them, they found out through telegrams though we had sent, I wouldn't tell them.

Q. Did you see her when you were on that trip?

A. No, I didn't see her until last winter.

Q. Do you know who did see her?

A. No, I don't know who did see her. They might have saw her, I didn't see her.

Q. Then, from Los Angeles, you come back?

A. Stayed in Los Angeles a short time, four days I was there.

Q. From Los Angeles you came back to Leavenworth?

A. Came back to Denver.

Q. Came back to Denver?

A. Yes, went back to Denver. No, wait a minute. Yes, came back to Denver, Mr. Bartlett went on to Rye.

Q. And then from Denver you came back to Leavenworth?

A. Came back to Leavenworth, and was there just one day.

Q. Was your home in Leavenworth at that time, or was it in Tulsa? A. In both places.

Q. In both places?

A. In both places, I had a great big house there in Leavenworth.

Q. And you stayed there?

A. No, I had given up that house before I started on my trips hunting this boy, making this man.

Q. You did stop there at Leavenworth?

A. When I got back there to Leavenworth then I had no house when I got back.

Q. But you went there?

A. I went there on business, yes, to Leavenworth.

Q. How long did you stay?

A. I stayed one day, got there in the morning, went out to the soldier's home and right back and left there that evening.

Q. Left that night? A. Yes.

Q. Didn't see anybody that day?

A. Didn't talk to anybody about this suit.

Q. And then you went on to Tulsa?

A. Went on to Tulsa.

Q. When you got to Tulsa you went to your mother's house? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And stayed there?

A. Yes, that is where I stayed at, that is where I lived.

Q. Did you go to Judge Williams while you were in Tulsa?

A. No, not then. Oh, yes, I went to see Judge Williams later on, after I got to working for Mr. Page.

Q. You say after you went to work for Mr. Page?

A. Yes, working for Mr. Page, I saw Judge Williams.

Q. When did you first see Mr. Rice? A. Mr. Rice?

Q. Yes?

A. The first time ever I saw him, Frank Long called me up in his office.

Q. Up in his office?

A. That same evening, yes, sir. Frank Long taken me up there.

Q. That was——

A. August 19th, about Wednesday, August 19th, I think it was that day.

Q. What time in the day was that?

A. That must have been about half past four, half past four or maybe five—No it wasn't five, it wasn't that late.

Q. That was when you gave Mr. Rice the list of names?

A. Yes.

Q. That is all you did up there?

A. That is all I did in Mr. Rice's office when Frank Long carried me up there.

Q. Now, Sadie, going back to when Mr. Long took you to Mr. Page? A. Yes.

Q. You say there was no one there except those two men, Frank Long, Mr. Page, and yourself?

A. I don't know whether there was more than two, I am sure there was two men, they sat as far from us as to that wall over there.

Q. Let me ask you, where was this man Claude?

A. I don't know, I never seen Claude.

Q. You didn't see him at all?

A. If he had been there, he would have been in the other room, I didn't see him. Mr. Page and I were standing right here in a bunch, and Frank Long.

Q. Did you see anybody go in that room from the next room? A. I don't know. No. I didn't.

Q. Was Mr. Page interrupted while he was talking to you? A. No.

Q. Well, what did he say to you first?

A. To me first?

Q. Yes?

A. Why, he said hello Sadie I have been looking for you, after Mr. Long introduced him to me.

Q. What did you say to him?

A. I said, Mr. Page I came up here to tell you there is no Tommy Atkins, what I said to Mr. Page.

Q. Told him you were going to get out of his way?

A. Mr. Page I came up here to tell you there is no Tommy Atkins, and before I could tell him I was going to get out of his way he spoke to me.

Q. He spoke to you? A. Spoke to me, yes, sir.

Q. Then, he told you that the Dawes Commission records said there was a Thomas Atkins?

A. Will you permit me to say what he said?

Q. Yes, I want to know?

A. He said, I don't give a damn if there aint, the Government records said so and we will make one.

Q. The Government records say so?

A. The Government Record says so.

Q. Didn't say the Dawes Commission Record?

A. No, he said I don't give a damn if there aint, the Government record say so.

Q. Did he say the Government Records say there is a Thomas Atkins now?

A. Yes, said the Government Records says so and we will make one.

Q. Said the Government records say there is a Tommy Atkins now?

A. He didn't say now, he said that. He said, Sadie, you know what I want. I said I do. He said I want the birth and death of Thomas Atkins showed in Leavenworth, Kansas, can you do it? And I said yes, sir. I said I can get witnesses to swear that hell's an ice box.

Q. Now, did he say anything about the Gipsy?

A. No not——

Q. Not a word? A. Nothing about no Gipsy then.

Q. He didn't say anything about the Gipsy trying to prove that the Thomas Atkins was dead?

A. Not until you all fell down up here in the depositions, that is when he told me that.

Q. Didn't say anything about it then?

A. No, not then. I will finish telling you what he said.

Q. Now, did he say anything about the case down at Sapulpa? A. No, not then? That is later.

Q. Late- on? A. Later on.

Q. He didn't say anything at this time?

A. No, that night in the park we talked a whole lot. I am telling now about the time in the office.

Q. Go ahead and tell everything he did tell you, don't leave out anything?

A. I aint going to leave out nothing. Before he got to that, I said I could get witnesses to swear that hell is an ice box. He said I have been informed through friends of mine in Leavenworth, Kansas, that Dennis Jones is a shrewd man, he has been on the police force, has been a detective, he is a lawyer, a politician and has influence in this case that will help us, can you get him?

Q. Did——

By Mr. German: I object to counsel asking her a question until she has concluded that conversation.

By Mr. Blakeney: The record ought to show that the witness finished it.

By Mr. German: The witness merely paused so that the Examiner could get her exact statement at my request.

By Mr. Blakeney: After counsel made his request, the witness continued the answer and reached apparently the end of it and paused.

By Mr. German: I insist that the question is not finished.

By Mr. Hanford: Let me make a statement in there. This cross examination has been very difficult for the reason that the witness will not answer direct questions with direct answers. She insists upon repeating by rote from beginning to end to bring her to answer a question as to a specific thing. I did ask her to start at the beginning, and when she got to that point I interrupted her and interrogated her further. If she has not finished answering the question, I certainly intend that she shall do so before the examination is finished.

Q. Now, Sadie, then you said to Mr. Page, to show you how I am I can get witnesses to swear that hell is an ice box—that hell is in an ice box? A. No.

By Mr. Allen: We object to that until the witness is given an opportunity to answer the former question?

Q. Well, repeat then that part?

A. What I said—Do you want me to go back to the story or just where I left?

Q. I want you to go back and repeat what you said to Mr. Page about hell is an ice box?

By Mr. German: I object now to that as repetition, and insist now that she be given an opportunity to finish the answer and to complete the statement she made as to what she said in Mr. Page's office.

Q. Tell what you said about that?

A. When Mr. Page asked me?

Q. What you said about that?

A. What he said to me?

Q. What you said to Mr. Page about hell being an ice box?

A. Mr. Page said, Sadie you know what we want, and I said I do.

Q. I don't want that, I want you to tell me what you said to Mr. Page?

A. I said I can get you witnesses that will swear hell is an ice box. He said I have been informed through friends of mine in Leavenworth that Dennis Jones is a shrewd man——

By Mr. Hanford: I will have to give in to you and let her start in at the beginning.

Q. Start at the beginning and tell me what was said?

A. Start at the beginning?

Q. No, no. Sadie, start at the time Mr. Page said hello, Sadie, I have been looking for you?

A. All right, Frank Long said to him, Mr. Page this is that Sadie James. Mr. Page said hello Sadie I have been looking for you; I said, Mr. Page I have come up here to tell you that there aint no Tommy Atkins, and he said I don't give a damn if there aint, the Government records say so, and we will make one. He said Sadie, you know what I want, and I said I do. And he said I want the death and birth of Thomas Atkins there in Leavenworth, Kansas, can you do it? I said I can get you witnesses to swear that hell is an ice box.

Q. Now, Sadie, why can't you tell me that when I ask you about in direct questions?

By Mr. German: I object to counsel interrupting the witness before she had concluded the answer. She had no concluded when he interrupted her. I insist that the Examiner——

By Mr. Hanford: I am asking this witness what I want and not what you want, Mr. German.

By Mr. Allen: We are not talking to you. We insist that the Examiner permit her to answer.

By Mr. Hanford: Why don't you ask the Examiner to rule on your objection.

By Mr. Allen: We have a right to insist upon the Examiner letting the witness answer the question.

The Examiner: Mr. Allen, the Examiner has not at any time refused to permit the witness to answer the question. I simply stated that Mr. Hanford is examining the witness, and it would be saving time it would be better to allow him to examine the witness without interruptions except for objections.

By Mr. Allen: We are insisting now that the witness be permitted to complete the answer that she is giving to counsel's question before he is permitted to ask her another question.

By Mr. Blakeney: I protest to the Commissioner. I just want to say if this rule is adopted, of course you are precluding us from cross examining this witness. If we have got to start her at the first and let her go in a groove and go on down in a groove, of course we could not cross examine.

By Mr. Allen: We challenge the statement of counsel that such has been the conduct of this witness.

By Mr. Blakeney: The—— It is not the conduct of the witness I am complaining about, it is the conduct—it would be the conduct of the Commissioner if he follows your suggestion.

Q. Now, Sadie, the first day that Sadie came to you in Leavenworth, how did she happen to come to you?

A. My husband was up town and some boys was telling him about her, about some Indian woman up there—— They had been telling him about some Indian woman up there two or three times. Bettie had been up in Leavenworth all the month of February.

Q. He saw her on the street?

A. He saw her on the street, he came home and told me he thought—said I saw that seven-year woman here that you and her used to run together, he couldn't call her name, and I said Bettie Mann? And he said yes, and I told him to go and tell Bettie to come down here, I bet she is here on some deal, she didn't know I lived there, so he went up town and she came back with him.

Q. And brought her back? A. Yes.

Q. Then you saw her at your house?

A. At my house, yes, he brought her down.

Q. Then you went with her? A. Yes.

Q. To Dennis Jones'? A. Went to Dennis Jones' office.

Q. Now, what did you tell Dennis when you brought Bettie Mann down there?

A. I introduced him to Bettie and told him that she was a friend of mine and that she was all right.

Q. That she was all right?

A. That she was all right, yes.

Q. What else?

A. That is all. And Bettie said, Mr. Jones, did you ever know an Indian woman here, a woman by the name of Minnie Atkins that worked for the Hyde's? And he said no I didn't know any Indian woman by that name, but I know Banker Hyde, but I don't remember any Indian woman ever working for Hyde by that name; and he said I will tell you what I will do, I will write to Albert Hyde, that is Banker

Hyde's brother in Wichita, and ask him where Banker Hyde is, and I can find out maybe through him. Bettie says——

Q. Now, what did he want to find out from him?

A. Banker Hyde?

Q. Yes? Did he want to find——

A. Where Minnie was. Dennis didn't know her.

Q. He didn't know her?

A. No, he didn't know Minnie, he hadn't ever seen her.

Q. If he didn't know her, why did he want to find out where she was?

A. He thought Bettie was hunting Minnie, that is what he spoke before Bettie finished the conversation, he thought if he found out where Banker Hyde was, Banker Hyde could tell him where Minnie was, that is what he was banking on.

Q. Then, what did Bettie say?

A. Bettie said, I don't care anything about Minnie, she is dead. I want a boy started.

Q. Then, what did Dennis say?

A. Dennis said—— Didn't speak up until Bettie got through.

Q. Then, what did Dennis say?

A. Dennis said, yes, we can do it.

Q. Said we can do it? A. Said we can do it, yes.

Q. Did she tell him to go ahead and do it?

A. By that time Jim Swift and Ben Porter came in and we cut that conversation off.

Q. So you didn't have much conversation then?

A. Not then, I told him, Dennis, I will be back here this afternoon at six o'clock. Bettie was going to have to go.

Q. Do you remember Dennis' words when he told Bettie he could do it?

A. Yes, he said—— Dennis said, I can do it, I can get lawyers and doctors and bankers in Leavenworth to swear that hell's an ice box.

Q. Now, Sadie, going back to Mr. Page's office when he told you that the Government records said there was a Thomas, what did he say then?

A. He said, I don't give a damn if there ain't, the Government records say so and we will make one.

Q. Then, what did you say?

A. Oh, I didn't speak at first. He said, Sadie, you know what we want.

Q. I mean what did you say when he got through?

A. Got through with his conversation?

Q. Yes?

A. He asked me if I knowed what he wanted and I said yes.

Q. No, I am not asking you what he said, but what you said?

A. I told him I could do it, I could get witnesses to swear that hell is an ice box.

Q. Then, what did you say?

A. He said I have been informed by friends in Leavenworth, Kansas, that Dennis Jones is a shrewd man, that he has been on the police force——

Q. He told you——

By Mr. German: I object to counsel asking another question until witness completes——

By Mr. Hanford: Go ahead.

A. Been informed that by friends of min in Leavenworth, Kansas, that Dennis Jones is a shrewd man, that he has been on the police force, he is a lawyer, he has been a detective, a lawyer and a politician, and his influence in this case will help it, and he said can you get him? And I said, Mr. Page, Dennis Jones and Rube Smith——

Q. Just wait a minute, I am just asking you that question. Now, Sadie, did Mr. Page mention the name of Dennis Jones himself? A. Yes, he did.

Q. You didn't say anything about him?

A. No, I didn't tell him, because I didn't think I could get Dennis.

Q. Did he tell you where he heard of Dennis Jones?

A. He didn't say, through friends in Leavenworth, Kansas, I didn't know who the friends were up there.

Q. Friends? A. Friends in Leavenworth, Kansas.

Q. Did he say they told him about Dennis Jones?

A. No, he didn't say that.

Q. Now, what did he say after you told him that you could get Dennis Jones?

A. I didn't finish telling, I didn't get to say what I told him—— I told him I could get Dennis before he said this. I didn't get through with that when he asked me if I could get Dennis.

Q. Before he asked you if you could get Dennis? A. Yes.

Q. Now, after you told him that you could get Dennis, what did Mr. Page say?

A. He told me then, I will have to tell the whole conversation to tell you what he said, because I——

Q. He told you to get him?

A. No, he didn't tell me that evening. He said, tell Dennis to stop making a live man or he will get arrested; and he told me to meet him in the park that night.

Q. Well, didn't he tell you to get Dennis? A. Not then.

Q. Not then? A. No.

Q. Then, he told you to go out to the park?

A. At eight o'clock that night in his park, yes.

Q. In his park? A. Yes.

Q. Then, what else was said after he told you that?

A. He walked out at the door, Mr. Page turned around to go back to the people he was talking to, and Frank Long and I came out in the hall and he said, Sadie, I want you to go up to Ben Rice's office and give him the name of the witnesses you are going to get for us. He taken me up stairs to Mr. Rice's office and Mr. Rice was in there by himself, and he said to Mr. Rice: Ben, this is that Sadie James.

Q. The result of that is that you gave Mr. Rice those names? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is all? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, then, when was the next time that you saw Mr. Rice? A. Rice?

Q. Yes?

A. Never saw Mr. Rice any more until I brought Dennis down from Leavenworth, and that was all in the same room.

Q. That was? A. August 23rd, I believe.

Q. What room was that?

A. That was Mr. Long's room, that one there where the long table is, Mr. Page taken us in there that morning.

Q. Who was in there? A. When I first came?

Q. Yes?

A. We went to Mr. Page's office when I first came and I taken Dennis up stairs.

Q. Who was in this office?

A. Just as we got in, Ben Rice and Frank Long walked in. He taken us in Mr. Long's office, he was in there when we first got there.

Q. Ben Rice and Frank Long were in there?

A. No, they came in behind us, I don't know where they came from.

Q. I am asking you who all were there?

A. In the room with us?

Q. Yes?

A. Mr. Page, Ben Rice, Frank Long, Dennis, and myself, just five of us.

Q. How long were you there?

A. Oh, we were there quite a while before I—we were there an hour I guess or more before dinner time, I guess. I know it must have been before dinner time, I won't say positively it was an hour, it may have been a little longer and it may not have been that long, I won't say the exact time we were in that room.

Q. Was that before or after you went to Leavenworth when you were working for Mr. Page?

A. Oh, I made the bargain with Mr. Page that night in the park, and the next day I made a contract with him and I left that night, Frank Long and I did to go to Leavenworth to get Dennis.

Q. Now, how many times did you see me at that office?

A. How many times did I see you?

Q. Yes? A. I saw you twice.

Q. Twice? A. Yes, twice.

Q. Now, was this meeting there with Dennis Jones before or after you saw me the second time?

A. Well, listen, the second time I saw you up there was after they had hired Dennis, when you and Bettie came up to Leavenworth, Frank Long had you all to come up there.

Q. So they hired Dennis at this meeting when Mr. Page and Mr. Rice, and Frank Long and you all were there?

A. Yes.

Q. So that was the second time that you were at the office of the Gem Oil Company? A. Second time?

Q. Yes?

A. Yes, that was the second time, I had been up there the evening before that.

Q. And it was after this meeting with Dennis Jones that you saw me there?

A. After I had brought Dennis down from Leavenworth?

Q. Yes? •

A. Sometime, must have been over one week after you came back down.

Q. Now, do you know what the day was that you were there in the office with Dennis Jones?

A. That must have been about the 23rd, I think.

Q. The 23rd?

A. On Tuesday morning, because he said he would leave Monday night and I met him at the depot Tuesday.

Q. That was Tuesday, August 23rd?

A. Yes, Tuesday, August 23rd.

Q. Then, about a week after that you were up there again you say?

A. I was up there before that time, but I wasn't—are you talking about on this business?

Q. Yes?

A. Yes, I was up there about a week after that and met you.

Q. That was when you met me there? Now, then where did you see me? A. Where did I see you?

Q. Yes?

A. In that little office of Mr. Long's when he had you and I to meet.

Q. In the office? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say Mr. Page came in there? A. Not at that trip.

Q. I am talking about the time, the second time you saw me?

A. The second time I saw you was after Dennis had been hired.

Q. Where did you see me the second time?

A. Saw you in Mr. Long's office again, saw you both times in there.

Q. Saw me in Mr. Long's office?

A. Both times in there.

Q. Who was in there that time? A. Which time?

Q. The second time you saw me?

A. I walked in there and you and Frank Long were in there by yourself.

Q. You walked in? A. Yes.

Q. Frank Long was there? A. Yes.

Q. I was there? A. Yes.

Q. And you walked in there? A. Yes.

Q. Who else was in there?

A. Not a soul until Mr. Page came in there.

Q. What did Mr. Page say?

A. You were sitting over here, he looked around and said, hello, Hanford, did you get things fixed up at Leavenworth like you wanted to?

Q. What did I say? A. You said yes.

Q. Was that all he said?

A. He said, did you get things fixed up in Leavenworth like you wanted it and you said yes, and he said, you take that to Minnie and tell her—I don't know what it was he meant—and just before you get ready to take depositions at Leavenworth you switch her right back here and take her up to Leavenworth to meet these witnesses, and you spoke up——

Q. Well, he just gave orders to do that? A. Yes.

Q. Just told me what to do? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, did he say depositions? A. No.

Q. What did he say?

A. Take that—he asked if you got what you wanted in Leavenworth and you said yes.

Q. He said just before you take depositions?

A. Yes just before you take depositions—before this, telling you what to do with Minnie. Said before you take depositions in Leavenworth, you switch Minnie right back and take her to Leavenworth and let her see these witnesses in Leavenworth. You said, Mr. Page, suppose Minnie don't want to come over with this Leavenworth dope? and he said if she don't you tell her she won't get another cent.

Q. Then, what did I say?

A. You didn't say another word because Mr. Page switched out. He was about half sore and went out of the door and I followed him, and going out somebody was getting off the elevator and I just let Mr. Page go on in his office and I went on down stairs. That was after I made my contract and I went on to my lawyer's.

> By Mr. Hanford: I move to strike the latter part of that answer, commencing with the words "that Mr. Page went out of the room and he was half sore" as not responsive to the question.
>
> By Mr. German: I will be glad if you will record the fact that you asked her to stop.

Q. Now, Sadie, you say that that was about a week later than August 23rd?

A. I think so if that long, I don't think it was any shorter anyway.

Q. Now about—— That would be about September 1st, then? A. August 20th.

Q. August 23rd, and a week, seven days, would be September 1st?

A. Well, I don't know, I am not saying positive it was that long. I say I think so, I am not swearing the time, I don't know.

Q. Well, Sadie, are you sure that it was not somewhat longer?

A. Well, I am not sure it wasn't longer, and I am not sure it wasn't shorter than that before I met you in that room again. I met you in there on August 20th the first time.

Q. On August 20th the first time?

A. The first time, it was on Thursday, yes, sir, Thursday morning.

Q. Then, the next time you met me was after they hired Dennis Jones?

A. Yes, sir, after they hired Dennis, yes.

Q. About a week?

A. I will say about a week, I don't know whether it was that long or not, but that was the next time I saw you there.

Q. You are sure it was no longer?

A. I don't know, I don't know the time, I don't know. I know I met you in there, but I am not going to say the exact time I met you; I won't say that because I don't know, I haven't figured up the time about when it was when you came, no.

Q. But you recall, your recollection is that it was no longer?

A. No, I am not going to swear it was no longer or no shorter I am not going to swear to that; I said I didn't know when I met you in there but that was after Dennis had been hired.

Q. Well, now, after that day when Dennis was hired, where did you go? A. Where did I go?

Q. Yes?

A. Staid right in there until twelve o'clock, staid right in there until they got through, possibly at twelve o'clock.

Q. How long did you stay in Tulsa after that?

A. Oh, I don't know, I staid in Tulsa for from—very near two weeks until I—— Let's see. After we had hired Dennis until September 10th I think when Frank Long and I went back to Leavenworth; about two weeks after that Frank Long and I made another trip to Leavenworth.

Q. Now, that day you saw me the second time, what were you up there for?

A. The day I saw you in Mr. Page's office?

Q. Yes?

A. I went up there to see Mr. Page and some one was in the room, and he said, Sadie, go in Long's office—he didn't know anybody was in there because——

Q. You went in Mr. Long's office?

A. I went in there and Mr. Long and you were sitting in there.

Q. How long did you stay then?

A. Didn't stay any longer than you got through that conversation. He was sore. You didn't know whether Minnie would do it or not and he flew out at that door and I followed him.

Q. I made him mad?

A. I don't know whether you made him mad. I don't know what he got sore over.

Q. You just staid there long enough to see that and then where did you go? A. I went on home.

Q. Went on home? A. Yes, I came up there to see him.

Q. So then you didn't have anything to say to anybody?

A. I spoke to you and Mr. Long.

Q. Just came in and sat down?

A. I told you I was waiting for Mr. Page, told you Mr. Page told me to come in here and he would be in here directly. I didn't think at that time that he thought you and Mr. Long were in there.

Q. Then Mr. Page came in and talked to me and went out? A. Yes, that was what he said to you.

Q. Did you see anybody in the other office of the Gem Company when you were up there that time?

A. I didn't go in at that time.

Q. In the other office of the Gem Company, Mr. Long's office? A. No, I never saw anybody else there, no.

Q. How long were you in there?

A. I wasn't there but a very few minutes before he came in, not over twenty minutes.

Q. What time of day was it?

A. I don't know, that was before noon, sometime after ten o'clock. You know Mr. Page don't get to his office until late.

Q. Sometime between ten and twelve?

A. Yes, that was between ten and twelve in the forenoon.

Q. Did you see who was in Mr. Page's office?

A. No, some one was talking to him, I didn't know who it was. He said Sadie you go in Mr. Long's room I will be in there directly.

Q. Was it a man or a woman talking to him?

A. I don't know, a man I guess, some one was in there talking to him. I just opened the door, cracked it, and seen him, and he said, Sadie, you go in the other room, Long's room, I will be in there.

Q. You didn't go clear in the office?

A. No, I didn't get clear in there, I just opened the door and he saw me and told me to go in Long's office and he would be in there.

Q. Mr. Page's office, you said was the main entrance to the—to these offices? A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Oil Company's offices? A. Yes.

Q. And he had a desk there over against the window?

A. Yes.

Q. And sat there, and the railing divided off the front part of the office? A. Yes.

Q. And his desk was behind the railing?

A. Yes, a good distance behind that railing.

Q. Now, you went out to the park that night, you say, at eight o'clock?

A. Yes, I got there at eight o'clock, I was to be there at eight o'clock that night?

Q. You got there at eight o'clock? A. Yes.

Q. And Mr. Long took you in the park?

A. Yes, Mr. Frank Long met my husband and I and taken us into the park.

Q. Why was that? A. Why did he meet me there?

Q. Yes?

A. So we wouldn't have to be blundering around through the white people, I guess. He got us a place to sit down, the park was full.

Q. And he took you up in the park?

A. Yes, the park was full of white people and he taken us up to a place where there wasn't many white people passing.

Q. He took you up by the chutes, the roller coaster?

A. Yes, I guess that is what it is. I had never been in there before.

Q. On the right hand side of the roller coaster?

A. No, the chutes was on the left hand side.

Q. So you went to the right hand side?

A. He taken us about as far from the chutes as back there and sat us down here.

Q. The chutes off that way? A. That side, yes, sir.

Q. Then, as you go toward the chutes you leave them on your left—toward the roller-coaster, you leave them on your left and you sat out here?

A. Yes, kind of in front of it, wasn't anyone swinging on it.

Q. Then you sat there on the bench?

A. Yes, I think it was a little bench, chairs or benches one we were sitting on until Mr. Long went off.

Q. Did you see any chairs there?

A. I don't know what we were sitting on, chairs or bench one, I don't know what we sat on.

Q. And Mr. Long went and found Mr. Page?

A. Yes, told us to stay there and he would go and find Mr. Page.

Q. And brought Mr. Page to you? A. To us.

Q. Now, how long did you talk to Mr. Page?

A. Oh, my goodness! Why, we got out there to the park at eight o'clock and I don't guess we left there until half past nine that night because it got to raining and we couldn't get away from there.

Q. Well, how long did you talk with Mr. Page?

A. Talked with Mr. Page from the time I got out there until we left.

Q. About an hour and a half?

A. Yes, sir, about lots of things not pertaining to this trial.

Q. Then it came up the rain and where did you go?

A. Up to that dancing place and we went under that cover and we sat under that.

Q. The pavilion?

A. Well, that is where we sat. Mr. Page taken us over there.

Q. Were there any other people there?

A. No, not under that. They weren't using that that night, the white people were all down there at a kind of—something going on—nobody where we were at all.

Q. Did the white people stay out in the rain?

A. They didn't come up where we were, they were all there under—— Lots of those sheds down there, and they didn't come up there where we were.

Q. All went some place else?

A. Yes, they didn't come up there where we were. The rain didn't last so awful long.

Q. Didn't it last an hour and a half?

A. No, I don't think it rained that long, I don't know how long it did rain, I don't remember whether we left in the rain or whether we staid there until the rain was over, I don't know how long it rained that night, the rain came up while we were there.

Q. You say it thundered and lightninged?

A. No, I don't think it did. It was in the summer, August, just a shower of rain continuously.

Q. Now, in answer to my former question you say it came up thundering and lightning, now you say it didn't; which did it do?

A. I didn't tell you it came up thundering and lightning, I won't swear it was thundering and lightning, I know it was raining.

Q. It rained? A. It rained.

Q. It rained hard?

A. Yes rained pretty hard for a while.

Q. Quite a pour down?

A. I think it was, enough so that we couldn't stay out in the open there, and Mr. Page taken us down and set us up there.

Q. So you say you were there about an hour and a half?

A. Yes, sir, maybe so, I won't swear now that we were there an hour and a half. I ain't going to say no certain length of time we were there, but we were there quite a while.

Q. A long time or a short time?

A. It was quite a long time.

And thereupon, an adjournment is had until 1:30 o'clock, P. M.

And thereafter, and at one-thirty o'clock P. M., further testimony herein was taken as follows:

SADIE JAMES, being recalled, further testified as follows:

Cross Examination by Mr. Hanford.

Q. Well, Sadie, you finally wound up, you made the contract, put the contract on the envelope and took it down and put it in the First National Bank, and you went up to Mr. Long—met you up there the next morning?

A. Frank Long? Saturday morning?

Q. Yes? A. Yes.

Q. He went to the National Hotel and you called him up there? A. After he got in, yes, I called him up.

Q. Then where did you see him?

A. Down in the alley where I was staying at Miss Martha's.

Q. About what time?

A. I don't know about what time in the morning that was. I saw Rube first.

Q. Was there anybody there when you saw Frank Long?

A. Where at?

Q. Down at this place? A. At Miss Martha's?

Q. Yes? A. Miss Martha was there.

Q. Rube wasn't there?

A. No, he had been there and had gone.

Q. Then, who did you see next?

A. I saw Aunt Kate Logan.

Q. Kate Logan?

A. Yes, sir. I told Mr. Long I was going down there and get her, and he said that he would follow along after he thought I had been there long enough.

Q. Did you see Dennis then? A. No, later on.

Q. You went to see Kate Logan? A. Yes.

Q. Then, did Mr. Long follow?

A. No, he came on, I told him where the place was.

Q. And he followed you down there and met you down there?

A. After I had been there quite a little bit, I walked out on the porch, I told him which way to come and he saw me and he was going down Shawnee, and I walked back in the house and I knew he had seen me.

Q. This was in the morning?

A. That was in the morning, yes.

Q. Who was there besides Kate Logan?

A. No one, just Mr. Long and Aunt Kate and I.

Q. No one there? A. No one but——

Q. She was very sick? A. She was very sick.

Q. Was there any one attending her?

A. Yes, Dr. Jackson called, the doctor.

Q. Was anybody in the house besides Aunt Kate Logan?

A. No, after a while Albert came in, Rube Smith's son, he came in later on.

Q. I mean——

A. No, no one there when we first got there.

Q. Did anyone else live in the house with her?

A. Well, I can't tell you that, we were in Aunt Kate's front room, I don't know.

Q. How long were you there before Frank Long got there?

A. Oh, I must have been there a half an hour I expect, I won't say a half an hour, I guess a half an hour.

Q. You told Kate Logan what?

A. I said, Aunt Kate, you know that case Dennis and you are working in—Dennis had told me before that he got Aunt Kate, I hadn't seen Aunt Kate—I said, the man is here now and he will want to talk to you, so she said all right.

Q. So you went to see Aunt Kate the first one?

A. No, Dennis saw Aunt Kate, I hadn't talked with her.

Q. You told her this man was in town? A. Yes.

Q. And he was coming out? A. Yes.

Q. And Frank Long came? A. Yes, he came.

Q. Now, when Frank Long got there was the doctor there?

A. The doctor didn't come until—— You see Mr. Long came first and he went to talk to Aunt Kate and she had one of those coughing spells of hers and we had to let Kate alone and during that time the doctor came.

Q. What did the doctor say?

A. I introduced the doctor to Mr. Long.

Q. What did the doctor say?

A. Mr. Long said to her doctor: I want to get a statement from her, do you think she is able to talk? And the doctor said if she don't have to talk very long it will be all right.

Q. So he talked to her?

A. Not then. Dr. Johnson went on to wait on Aunt Kate, that left Mr. Long and I sitting and talking to ourselves. Mr. Long said, Sadie, coming up I met George Crilly, and in talking to him I found out he was a school mate of my mother and I have hired him.

Q. Then, after the doctor got through attending Kate Logan, then Mr. Long talked to her?

A. About that time Rube Smith's son came in. I said, Albert you go and 'phone to your father and have him come down here and tell him I want to see him. I had made arrangements with Rube that morning when Frank Long got in town, that he was to meet Frank Long.

Q. So Rube Smith came in?

A. Yes, sir, Rube Smith came in.

Q. So you had a conversation with Rube Smith?

A. No, I had had a conversation with Rube that morning when I first got in town, told him about Frank Long.

Q. But Frank Long had a conversation with him at Kate Logan's? A. Yes, sir.

Q. He did talk to Kate Logan?

A. Talked to Aunt Kate, yes.

Q. Did he write down what Kate Logan said?

A. Wrote down what Aunt Kate said.

Q. Did he have her sign it?

A. Aunt Kate couldn't sign it. Albert Smith signed it later for Aunt Kate, Rube Smith's son.

Q. Did she put her mark, did Aunt Kate put her mark on it?

A. I think she did. She was too sick to write, so Alber just took the pen this way and held it up to her and Aunt Kate put her hand on it.

Q. Out her mark? A. Yes, Albert did.

Q. Do you know the name of the notary that took her acknowledgment?

A. I do not. I wasn't there. He went up town and had that done after I left. I left him and Rube Smith there.

Q. He went up town and got a notary?

A. I suppose he did, didn't do it while I was there though.

Q. Kate Logan died a little bit later?

A. She died about three weeks after that—— Let's see. Some time later.

Q. A couple of weeks?

A. No, it wasn't a week, I don't think that Aunt Kate died, because Mr. Long was up there on our second trip.

Q. Was Kate Logan a good woman?

A. She was selling beer down there where she lived, I guess she was.

Q. She was a Catholic? A. Yes, she was a Catholic.

Q. And devout, very earnest? A. Very earnest, yes.

Q. Yes?

A. I don't know, she was selling beer—selling beer there, she and Albert. I guess she was earnest in a way. With Rube Smith's son, they were selling beer there.

Q. At her house?

A. Brought beer out there in a case.

Q. Did you know her before there in Leavenworth?

A. I knew her from a little girl, myself from a little girl, she used to sell clothes around there in town, that was her business.

Q. That was her. business going from house to house selling old clothes?

A. Selling old clothes, second hand clothes. In later years she quit that though and went to running that little place on Shawnee.

Q. But when you knew her in eighty-four and eighty-five she was selling old clothes?

A. Yes, sir, and washing. Her husband he was working.

Q. Did you know Kate Logan in eighty-five?

A. Did I know her in eighty-five?

Q. Or in eighty-four? A. Yes, I knew Aunt Kate then.

Q. Did you know her when Minnie first came to Leavenworth?

Q. Did I know her when—did I know Aunt Kate when Minnie first came there?

Q. Yes?

A. No, I knew Aunt Kate before Minnie came there, know her, yes, I knew Aunt Kate before Minnie ever got there.

Q. Did you know what Kate Logan was doing that year?

A. Oh, no, I wasn't keeping track of her, what she was doing, no.

Q. But she was—— What did you say she used to do besides sell old clothes?

A. Used to do washing and sell second hand clothes, what she would get from the white people she worked out and would sell them to the colored people.

Q. She worked out by the day for people?

A. Yes, she would go to people's house to wash and they would give her clothes and she would sell them, what she couldn't use for her children I think.

Q. Did she ever wash at the house where you were working, what is it? A. Haven's, where I worked?

Q. Yes?

A. No, she didn't wash there, my mother washed there.

Q. What was the name of that house? A. Hyde's.

Q. Yes?

A. I don't know that she ever did wash for the Hyde's.

Q. What was the name of that house just a block from the Hyde's where you worked?

A. Haven's. This side of where Minnie first worked is Haven's. I quit working for Haven's, Minnie was a block this way, and I went down on Third and Arch at Gyan's and worked.

Q. Now, after you saw Kate Logan in Leavenworth, where did you see Dennis Jones?

A. Well, I saw Dennis, went to his office about half past twelve when I got to his office.

Q. Was Frank Long there?

A. No, Frank Long never had met Dennis then. I had—— You know the arrangement was to come and meet Dennis.

Q. Frank Long came to his office?

A. I had 'phoned to him. He told me to call him up when I got this arranged with Dennis.

Q. What time did he come down there?

A. About two o'clock.

Q. You saw Dennis first at his office about half past twelve? A. Yes.

Q. And Frank Long came?

A. About two. That left Dennis and I a long time talking.

Q. You didn't meet Dennis on the street?

A. Oh, no, I met Dennis in his office.

Q. And Frank Long came to his office?

A. From the National, I called him up and he came down there to the office, Dennis' office.

Q. Was that all the conversation that took place between Frank Long and Dennis Jones—at the office that afternoon?

A. At the office, yes, about two o'clock when he came down.

Q. Now, what did you tell Dennis when you went there at half past twelve?

A. When Dennis and I was there by himself?

Q. Yes?

A. I said, Dennis, you know you have made money off of the Gipsy and I have made money off of Hugh Bartlett, well, I have quit working for Hugh Bartlett and gone to working for the Gem, and will you work? Dennis said no I met the head man of the Gipsy through Lee Bond and I got a job—— He didn't call the man's name—and I got a job, and I have just come back from a trip making a live man and I am not going to stop now making a live man for the Gipsy and go to making a dead boy for the Gem.

Q. He said he wouldn't work?

A. When I first went in there he said he wouldn't work. He had never worked for you all then.

Q. When Frank Long got there, did he say he would work for the Gem?

A. I told him my conversation before Frank Long came. That is how come him to work, yes.

Q. When Frank Long came he said he would work—he changed and said he would work?

A. We were there an hour and a half before Frank Long ever came there, and I told Dennis what Mr. Page had told me to tell him before Frank Long got there. I said, Dennis, Mr. Page told me to tell you that if you didn't quit making a live man you will get arrested; and they are working for the Government. And I thought they were.

Q. Then, Dennis did tell you at that time that he would work for them?

A. Yes, when I told him they were working for the Government, he said all right I will work.

Q. Now, you told him Frank Long was coming to see him in the afternoon?

A. Later on when I got to the conversation, I told him Frank Long was in town.

Q. What did you tell him about Frank Long?

A. He said, yes, I will work, what do you think I ought to make out of it, Sadie, and I said, oh, eight or nine hundred dollars, and he said who will I see? and I said Frank Long is here, the secretary of the Gem Oil Company. Frank Long had been there when you all were working up the white case.

Q. That is the first time you had told him?

A. That is the first time they met.

Q. You told him Long was coming to get him to work?

A. Was coming to meet him. I said, Mr. Page told me if I could get you, to tell you he wanted to see you, for me to bring you down there, which Mr. Page did.

Q. And not to make arrangements with Frank Long?

A. I told him not to.

Q. You told him not to? A. I told him not to.

Q. Mr. Page told you to tell him that?

A. Mr. Page said, Sadie, if you get Dennis, you bring him to me, I want to see him and want to talk to him. That is how come me to bring Dennis to Tulsa.

Q. Did Mr. Page tell you that if you got Dennis to work, he would come up to Leavenworth to see him? A. No.

Q. Did you tell Dennis that Mr. Page would come up to Leavenworth to see him? A. No, sir, I didn't tell him that.

Q. You didn't tell him that?

A. No, Mr.—— Dennis wouldn't have had to go down there if Mr. Page would have come up there to see him.

Q. Now, how long were you in Leavenworth at that time?

A. That was on Friday, I left the next day on that twelve-thirty. I got on a big drunk that night you know.

Q. Did you see any other people besides Kate Logan?

A. Aunt Kate, and Rube and Dennis.

Q. And Dennis?

A. Yes, and Frank Long. Hooked up with those three that day.

Q. Did you see any others?

A. No, I didn't talk with any others.

Q. Didn't see any? A. No.

Q. Now, how long after that was it that Dennis went to Tulsa?

A. That was on a Friday I was talking to Dennis. Dennis told Mr. Long he would leave Leavenworth Monday night for Tulsa, provided I met him at the depot. That would throw him in town on Tuesday morning, and I did meet him. It was raining when I met him, raining very hard.

Q. Do you know the day?

A. I guess it must have been Tuesday in August, maybe the 23rd, I don't know, I don't know what day Tuesday would be, but the very following Tuesday coming that I met Dennis at the depot in Tulsa.

Q. Then, you went back to Leavenworth how long after this trip?

A. About two weeks Frank Long and I made the second trip. That must have been about September 10th, I think. I got in there Thursday night, I think it was September 10th.

Q. That was the time that you went to Pilot Knob?

A. Hunting graves, yes. Frank Long and I started on that trip.

Q. And did you get to Pilot Knob?

A. Did I get out to Pilot Knob?

Q. Yes?

A. It was too rainy that day and I couldn't find where the graveyard was, it was an old place there and I couldn't find it.

Q. You came back and went to Mount Munsey?

A. Mount Munsey.

Q. And searched there? A. And couldn't find anything.

Q. And then you went over to Waldron?

A. But not that day.

Q. But you did go over there?

A. Later on the week—— Later on the following week I did go over to Waldron and searched the graveyard there.

Q. That was an old graveyard?

A. An old graveyard where my people used to live.

Q. And then you came back to Leavenworth?

A. Yes, Friday night.

Q. Did you see Frank Long that time?

A. No, I didn't see him any more until I got back to Tulsa. That was on the second trip now, the second trip that is.

Q. Now, did you see any of these other people that you have named on that trip when you were up there?

A. I saw Frank Long and Rube Smith Friday morning when I got in there at Aunt Martha's.

Q. But, did you see any of the other people that you named, witnesses, any of these people?

A. No, nobody but Dennis and Rube and Frank Long on that trip, that graveyard trip.

Q. You put in your time hunting the graveyards searching for them? A. Yes.

Q. And didn't see anybody else? A. No.

Q. And then when you went back to Tulsa did you see Mr. Page?

A. I saw Mr. Page on the first trip in Tulsa and on the second trip too, I called him up over the 'phone.

Q. Well, on the second trip when you went back to Tulsa you saw Mr. Page?

A. Yes, I called him up over the 'phone.

Q. And that is when he told you not to go up there any more?

A. Yes, he said, Sadie, you needn't do that. That is Dennis' job to find the graves up there.

Q. And for you not to go back up there?

A. Yes, he said you needn't to go back that is Dennis' job.

Q. He telegraphed you first?

A. Telegraphed for me to come home—come to Tulsa that he had another job for me, and he did give me another job in this case to go up there for Nancy.

Q. What is your name now? A. Sadie James.

Q. What name did you start out in life with?

A. My maiden name was Sadie Harris.

Q. What was your next name?

A. My name was Sadie Carris.

By Mr. Allen: Mr. Examiner, I desire to suggest for the benefit of the record, that this witness has been on the stand constantly since Monday morning, and that there was a night session Monday night. She was on cross examination by Mr. Hanford all day Tuesday and all day Wednesday up until the present hour, at 2:25.

By Mr. Blakeney: I want to move to strike out Mr. Allen's objection as not being under the equity rules and not being in form provided by the equity rules, and does not state, as I understand it, the facts to be.

Q. What did you say your name was?

A. Before I married, you mean my maiden name first, do you?

Q. Yes, you told that, you needn't to go back and repeat after me. Answer my questions and we will get along better.

A. Carris.

Q. Was that your husband? A. That was my husband.

Q. That was the young fellow you married about thirty years ago, wasn't it?

A. Yes, about thirty years ago.

Q. And how much younger was he than you?

A. He was three years older than I was.

Q. Three years older? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long was it before you divorced him?

A. I heard lawyer Bell saying that he got the divorce.

Q. Do you know how long it was before you divorced him?

A. I didn't get any and I don't know anything about it.

Q. A divorce was granted? A. Not that I know of.

Q. You married a third time?

A. I moved away, lawyer Bell told me.

Q. You thought you had one?

A. I thought I had one, yes, sir, I didn't know it.

Q. You married again, didn't you? A. I married again.

Q. Did you marry again without knowing you had a divorce?

A. I don't know as I did, Lawyer Bell told me that he had got a divorce.

Q. And you married again then?

A. Yes, sir, I married, I didn't care.

Q. Didn't care did you?

A. No, sir, didn't make any difference to me.

Q. Married the second time? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was his name? A. His name was Walter Curtis.

Q. Where is Walter now?

A. I don't know, I didn't keep up with him, Judge.

Q. How long did you live with him, Sadie?

A. Just a very short while, I couldn't tell.

Q. How did you get rid of him? By divorce, or did you run him off?

A. Well, he got it. I got too fast for him and he got it.

Q. You were playing it too strong for him?

A. Playing it too strong for him and he couldn't stand it.

Q. And he got a divorce? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, when was the next time you coupled up, how long after that? A. Oh, a long time after that.

Q. Well, about how long?

A. Oh, let's see. Well, some years afterwards.

Q. Well, some years afterwards, will that do?

A. A great many years afterwards.

Q. What was the next man? A. James Green.

Q. Where is Jim?

A. I suppose he is away off. I got a divorce from that one myself. He was too rough for me.

Q. He was playing it too fast for you? A. Yes.

Q. Who was the next man you tied up with?

A. John Johnson.

Q. Where is John?

A. Well, I can't tell you to save my life.

Q. When did you get rid of him, Sadie?

A. I quit him a good many years ago.

Q. How long ago, Sadie, did you quit him?

A. Oh, that has been about six years ago.

Q. After you left John Johnson then, who was the next man? A. I married Will James.

Q. Will James? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he has been your good and lawful husband ever since?

A. No, he has been my husband ever since, but I had another one.

Q. What is his name?

A. He is up at the old soldiers' home. His name is Lane.

Q. Lane? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many in all, Sadie, have you had in the last few years? A. About seven.

Q. Seven; the Biblical number; Sacred Seven?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, Sadie, when did you first become a crook?

A. Crook?

Q. Yes? A. Judge, I think I was born one.

Q. Born a crook? A. I think so.

Q. You think you are naturally perverted, don't you?

A. I don't see any other thing.

Q. You can't see straight to save your life, Sadie, can you?

By Mr. German: I object to that as argumentative, calling for a conclusion, and an opinion of the witness, and improper cross examination.

Q. Answer the question.

A. I didn't understand it, Judge.

Q You can't be straight to save your life, can you?

A. Oh, yes, at times. Those straight places come in between the crooks.

Q. The crook is usually with you, isn't it?

A. Yes, if there is any money to it, Judge; if I hadn't have been a crook, I couldn't have got in these deals.

Q. Sadie, you will sell out to anybody for money, won't you?

A. No, I can't do that, the law would come to make me quit.

Q. I know, but have you ever been true to anybody in your life at any time?

A. Oh, I think so, I can't exactly call back when I was true, but I think so.

Q. It is away back yonder, isn't it?

A. Well, not so far back.

Q. It is very seldom that you are true?

A. Very seldom. I make a living being a crook.

Q. Being a crook? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you start out being a professional crook?

A. Well, I guess——

By Mr. German: I object to this question on the ground that it is incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, calls for a conclusion and opinion of the witness, this is argumentative and too general, and improper cross examination.

Q. When did you start out to be a crook, Sadie?

A. Crook right?

Q. Yes, a professional crook. Crook right, that is it. When did you start out to be a crook right?

By Mr. German: The same objection.

A. I don't know as I can call that back.

Q. Well, as near as you can, I want to treat you kindly and don't want to be rough.

A. When I started out to be a professional crook?

Q. Yes?

A. Well, I guess right after I first struck Kansas City in ninety-one, I first started out; and I would stop a while and start again, along while ago.

Q. You made up your mind you would live against the law, didn't you? A. I did do it.

By Mr. German: I object to that as too general, argumentative, incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and improper cross examination.

Q. Sadie, when did you first go into a house of prostitution? A. I never have been in one.

Q. Not in your life? A. No, sir.

Q. Never have? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you run in Tulsa what is known as the "Bucket of Blood"? A. That was a road house, Judge.

Q. Well?

A. That wasn't a house; only one living room in that house, and the rest was a gambling house where we sold beer and danced at; that was a road house.

Q. All right? A. I run it.

Q. Did any women come there?

A. Came there to buy beer at night with men, but no place for them to sleep.

Q. When did you start to run what is known as "The Bucket of Blood" in Tulsa?

A. That is the one that you are speaking about?

Q. Yes, when did you start to run that?

A. Well, I commenced selling whiskey in town before I went out there, Judge.

Q. Commenced selling whiskey in town?

A. In town, yes, sir.

Q. You commenced boot-legging in Tulsa before you went out there?

A. I wasn't boot-legging, Creekmore was behind me and I didn't have to boot-leg.

Q. He is a boot-legger, isn't he?

A. Yes, sir, he had the town, I didn't have to——

Q. I know that, but you were selling whiskey against the law?

A. Yes, sir, against the law, but I did it openly, I had the protection of the law.

Q. You did that before you commenced the Bucket of Blood? A. About a year before that, yes, sir.

Q. Now, when did you open the Bucket of Blood?

A. I think about 1910, I believe in 1910.

Q. In 1910? A. No—— Yes, I believe so.

Q. In 1915? A. I believe so, yes, sir.

Q. And you had of course a great many visitors out there?

A. A hundred and fifty to two hundred every night and day.

Q. You were bought?

A. It was my own place, I bought it, bought the property and all, yes, sir.

Q. Well, you—— While you were running that, you had to be armed most of the time, didn't you?

A. I didn't have to be armed most of the time, I carried two pistols some of the time.

Q. Where did you carry them, in your stocking or waist?

A. No, sir, that is too slow, I callired them in a belt, Judge.

Q. You had a six shooter on each side?

A. I had a six shooter on each side; it was a rough crowd I had.

Q. I understand. What kind of pistols, Colts?

A. Too large for me; thirty-eight and forty-one.

Q. You had a pistol on each side all the time?

A. All the time and the house man I had hired there did the same.

Q. How far is that from the center of town?

A. That was outside the city limits, I bought out there. You know where Greenwood is?

Q. I don't know Tulsa very well, how far is that from the center of town?

A. Do you know where Campbell's place is?

Q. No.

A. I bought out there, I bought out their institution.

Q. How far from the Tulsa?

A. A long distance from the Tulsa Hotel.

Q. A long distance out in the country?

A. Three blocks outside of the City Limits, about, yes, sir.

Q. Now, Sadie, you started out in this Atkins case to make money, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir, up in Leavenworth they got money.

Q. And you started out to graft as much as you could, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir, to make as much as I could out of it.

Q. Didn't make much difference who you were serving just so you got the money?

A. Yes, it made lots of difference as to that.

By Mr. German: We object to that question as calling for a conclusion and opinion of the witness, argumentative, and as improper cross examination.

Q. Is that right, Sadie? A. Sir?

Q. It didn't make any difference who the man was you were serving, you were working for the money?

By Mr. German: Same objection.

A. When I started out in the Minnie Atkins case?

Q. Yes? A. No, sir, I wasn't.

Q. You were not playing any favorites, were you Sadie?

A. Oh, yes, I was.

Q. Who was your favorite in the case?

A. I wasn't working for the Gipsy, but the Gipsy was my favorite. I was going to switch it off and make the most money off the Gipsy.

By Mr. German: I object to the question and move to strike the answer on the ground that it is argumentative, too general, and a conclusion of the witness.

Q. You thought you could make the most money out of the Gipsy? A. Yes, sir, but I wasn't working for the Gipsy.

Q. I understand, and when you say that the Gipsy was your favorite—— A. Yes, sir.

Q. You mean that was your favorite goose to pluck?

A. After I got me a man started up I was going to switch him over there, didn't think anybody else had as much money.

Q. You thought they had the most money, a big oil company had the most money? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, Sadie, in all your travels, commencing with the first employment and down to this hour, did you strike an honest man on your travels? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Name one? A. Did I find an honest one?

Q. Yes? A. I found Mr. Buell.

Q. He was honest? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And who else? A. I found Mr. Bartlett.

Q. Who else?

A. Found Mr. Montgomery after I confessed.

Q. That is three? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that all? A. All in the deal that I know of.

Q. Every other man you found in your travels in this deal were crooks?

A. I will take that back. The Gipsy, I told them a lie and I suppose they believed me.

Q. Answer my questions yes or no now. Everybody but Mr. Buell, and Mr. Bartlett, and Mr. Montgomery, that you talked with or had any dealings with, was a crook wasn't he?

By Mr. German: I object to the question as calling for a conclusion of the witness and calling for an opinion of the witness, and argumentative.

Q. Answer the question.

A. Well, I don't know how many more I met; I wouldn't like to say people was crooks that I didn't know.

Q. Everybody connected with this transaction in any way?

By Mr. German: The same objection.

A. You will have to give me time to think over who I met, Judge.

Q. I will give you plenty of time, see if you can find an honest man? A. Another one?

Q. Yes.

By Mr. German: The same objection.

A. You mean connected with the case or just——

Q. Yes, connected with it in any way that you talked to or had any dealings with?

By Mr. German: The same objection.

A. About selling the land?

Q. Yes, in every way else?

A. Of course the Government officers——

Q. Of course they are honest, the Government presumes them to be honest. A. Robinson.

Q. Who is Robinson? A. The detective sitting there.

Q. This gentleman here? A. Yes.

Q. Now, Sadie, was anybody else that you struck that was honest?

By Mr. German: The same objection.

Q. Search your memory and let us know some honest people. A. I can't think of them, Judge.

Q. You left out Mr. Meserve?

A. Mr. Meserve, I didn't know that he was in the land, Mr. Meserve and Judge Holland and Mr. German.

Q. Of course they are lawyers and presume- to be honest; they are rather presumptious but still it is all right;Iam going to presume that. That is all?

By Mr. German: I object to counsel's statement as being argumentative and stating conclusion of counsel—— Well, I will withdraw that objection.

Q. Sadie, tell me who first employed you?

A. In this case?

Q. Yes, in the case, answer that? A. Mr. Bartlett.

Q. Mr. Bartlett? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Bettie Mann came to see you in 1912, didn't she, about the deed? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Yes, she came to you up at the Bucket of Blood?

A. Yes, sir, at the Bucket of Blood.

Q. And there she accosted you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And she said to you that she wanted to put a deed over, didn't she?

A. Yes, sir, her and Harjo wanted to put a deed over.

Q. And they offered you three hundred ($300.00) dollars? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you told them that it was too cheap, didn't you?

A. Too small money for me.

Q. You said you would do it for a thousand?

A. Yes, sir, and I would have done it.

Q. Now, Sadie, the reason that you wanted a thousand, was it because there was a greater risk than you could afford to take for three hundred?

A. Yes, sir, I knew if I got arrested three hundred dollars wouldn't do me no good for a lawyer, yes, sir.

Q. Then, you wanted a thousand because you had in consideration that not only the crime, but the risk you were running? A. Yes, sir, I wanted to be paid in that.

Q. So, when you said you wouldn't do it for three hundred and you would do it for a thousand, you had already got your consent to commit the crime provided the money was sufficient?

A. Oh, I would have did it in a minute if she offered me a thousand, that was my price.

Q. That was the fee on her part to get you to forge the deed to this land, was it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you were perfectly willing to do it if the price had been big enough?

A. If the price had been big enough I would have done it.

Q. You and Bettie talked about that in the Bucket of Blood and you turned down three hundred ($300.00) dollar proposition, where did Bettie go?

A. She came here to Kansas City and got a woman by the name of Minnie Adkins and she signed it.

Q. How did you know she signed it?

A. I told them to come here and they got back——

Q. You know, as a fact, Sadie, don't you, that Bartlett got the forged deed?

A. I didn't know Mr. Bartlett then.

Q. You know that Bettie Mann got a forged deed?

A. Yes, sir, they had told him they knew where Minnie was, but they didn't.

Q. You knew they came to Kansas City?

A. I certainly did.

Q. And got a deed from a said Minnie Adkins?

A. Right here, yes, sir.

Q. You knew that was not the right Minnie, didn't you?

A. I knew it, yes, sir.

Q. And you knew that they had procured and forged it, didn't you? A. I did, yes, sir.

Q. How long after that was it before you saw Bettie again? A. After she came up and got a deed?

Q. Yes?

A. I saw her right soon after she came back with the deed.

Q. In 1912? A. In 1912, yes, sir.

Q. You told her that deed would never stick, didn't you?

A. No, I didn't know whether it would stick or not.

Q. You knew it was a forgery? A. Yes.

Q. You didn't tell anybody about it? A. No, I didn't.

Q. Just kept that to yourself?

A. Bettie and I had been working about fourteen years.

Q. Companions in crime together, is that so?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long had you been companions in crime?

A. About twelve years, I guess, off and on.

Q. Pulled off a great many criminal stunts?

A. I think so. We have done a great many things.

Q. A great many criminal stunts? A. I think so.

Q. After that, you say you were employed by Bartlett?

A. Two years later.

Q. Two years later? A. Two years later.

Q. Now, where and at what place did Bartlett employ you, name the place? A. Why, at the Stafford Hotel.

Q. The Stafford Hotel? A. Yes, sir.

Q. About what time was that, Sadie?

A. That was about March 31, 1914.

Q. March 31, 1914?

A. Yes, sir, because Bettie was there on a Monday and I came down the next morning.

Q. And Bettie came up to see you here in Kansas City?

A. I was living in Leavenworth.

Q. Bettie came to you in Leavenworth, did she?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. She told you she wanted you to help her?

A. No, she didn't tell me, I asked for the job. Bettie didn't ask me.

Q. How did you know Bettie had a job?

A. I asked her, has the white man got any money you are working for, and she said yes.

Q. How did you know Bettie had a job?

A. She was up there trying to make that deed good.

Q. And you assumed in as much as two years before she had a job, that she still had one?

A. I knew she had one when she left down there.

Q. So you said, Bettie has that white man got any money?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Bettie made the proposition there, did she?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was that?

A. She told me all I had to do was to tell him—— I said, how can I get a job, and she said you tell him when you go down there that you know Thomas Atkins and you can get a job, because he would believe me.

Q. Now, was Bettie hiring you at that time to find Tommy or Minnie? A. She wanted to make a Tommy.

Q. Now, let's understand now?

A. Bettie and Harjo both thought years ago that Minnie was dead—searching for Minnie seventeen or eighteen years and thought Minnie was dead, and they were making a boy.

Q. Answer my questions. They were trying to make Tommy? A. Yes, sir, trying to make a boy, yes, sir.

Q. Tommy? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You came then over to the Stafford Hotel in Kansas City? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Bartlett came up here? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What room were you in, do you know?

A. In the hotel there, in the sitting room, I think the second floor in the parlor.

Q. Second floor? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you go straight to the Stafford Hotel when you came here?

A. Yes, sir, I had Bettie's card you know.

Q. And Bettie told you to meet her at the Stafford?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who else was there besides Mr. Bartlett?

A. Nobody in that room but Jim Swift and Ben Porter were up there with Bettie.

Q. I understand. Where did Jim Swift come from?

A. Where did he come from?

Q. Yes?

A. They came from Oklahoma, came up to get another deed.

Q. I understand. Oklahoma boy?

A. Both Oklahoma boys, belonged there.

Q. Darkies? A. No, sir, not negroes, Indians.

Q. Crooks?

A. Indians and whites. Frank Swift's brother and Ben Porter—cousins to Ples Porter. Ben Porter.

Q. They were up at the Stafford when you got there that morning?

A. I didn't see them when I got there that morning.

Q. Who was there when you got there and found Bartlett? A. Nobody but Bettie.

Q. Bettie and Bartlett? A. Yes, sir.

Q. I want you to tell exactly what occurred at that meeting between you and Bettie and Bartlett giving the substance——

A. Bettie introduced me to Mr. Bartlett, I had never saw him before.

Q. Never mind, tell what occurred.

A. He said, did you know Tommy? and I said yes, sir. And he said when did you last see him; and I said I saw him when he was five years old; and I said I used to work close to where Minnie did, and he said I have hired two detectives here Kansas City with Bettie in hunting Tommy; and he asked me what did I want to help find him and I told him fifty ($50.00) dollars. I told him to see where Tommy was. I told him a big lie and I told him I could get on the trail of Tommy; and he told me all the evidence that I got to give it to these detectives and Bettie. He gave me fifty dollars and I went back.

Q. What did he tell you to do with that fifty dollars?

A. I told him I had to go down to some little town in Missouri to find that boy. I was lying.

Q. What did he tell you?

A. He told me all the evidence I could find out in trailing this boy to give it to the detectives and Bettie.

Q. How long did he expect you to go with that fifty ($50.00) dollars?

A. He told me when I needed any more money to let him know.

Q. Did he give you his address, Sadie?

A. Yes, he gave me his address.

Q. What was it?

A. His 'phone number was 619, I think, Sapulpa.

Q. Sapulpa? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was Bartlett, did you know?

A. No, sir, I never saw him before in my life.

Q. Do you know now who he was?

A. I know he is the same man I met.

Q. You worked for him a long time, didn't you, some months? In this deal? A. Yes.

Q. What did he turn out to be?

A. What did he turn out to be?

By Mr. German: I object to that question as calling for an opinion and conclusion of the witness, and as being argumentative.

Q. Don't you know what he turned out to be?

A. No, sir, I don't.

Q. Did he turn out to be a preacher?

A. No, sir, I know he turned me loose.

Q. Did he turn out to be a preacher?

A. I don't know what he turned out to be.

Q. He turned out to be an oil man, didn't he?

A. I guess so, he was one then.

Q. In the oil business? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Living in Sapulpa?

A. Yes, sir, living in Sapulpa.

Q. After he gave you this fifty ($50.00) dollars, he told you to go and find Tommy?

A. He told me to go and find Tommy; I told him I knew where he was.

Q. Did Bettie know you were lying to Bartlett at that time?

A. Bettie knowed, yes, sir. She told me in Leavenworth what to say to get my job.

Q. Answer my questions. You know it. A. Yes, sir.

Q. You knew when you accepted that fifty dollars and started out to find Tommy, that you were lying to Bartlett and deceiving him, didn't you?

A. I had started in with that intention and started in to rob him.

Q. You meant to rob him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You never had heard of Tommy Atkins up to that date, had you? A. Heard of him?

Q. Yes? A. No, and ain't to yet.

Q. Ain't to yet? A. No, sir.

Q. Haven't heard his name mentioned much in the last four months, have you Sadie?

A. The last few months?

Q. Yes?

A. Oh, he is—— Just the last year I heard a lot about him.

Q. But up to that hour now, when you told Bartlett that lie and told him that you would go out and find Tommy Atkins, you had never heard of a Tommy Atkins, had you?

A. No, no, sir.

Q. That is all right? A. No, sir.

Q. Now, after you got that fifty dollars and started out to hunt Tommy, where did you go first?

A. I went back to Leavenworth and saw my workers.

Q. I didn't ask you who you saw, I will ask you that directly.

A. I went home back to Leavenworth.

Q. Wait until I ask you questions? A. All right.

Q. You went back to Leavenworth? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you got to Leavenworth, who was the first man you saw?

A. Dennis and Rube—went to the office.

Q. Who was that?

A. Dennis Jones and Rube Smith, they were waiting for me.

Q. How do you know they were waiting for you?

A. Hadn't I told them I was coming down. I had a meeting with them the night before and I told them I was coming down to see the white man and if I got a job I would come back and let them know.

Q. You met Dennis then?

A. Yes, sir, they were there.

Q. Where was Dennis when you met him?

A. In the office?

Q. Whose office? A. Dennis Jones' office.

Q. Was Little Eugie there?

A. No, sir, that was in the night.

Q. Do you know Eugie? A. Dennis's friend, yes, sir.

Q. Just his friend? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Not his niece? A. No, sir, his wife's niece.

Q. Some family relation?

A. Not so much family relation, no.

Q. A sort of a left handed niece? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You knew Eugie? A. Yes, sir.

Q. A West Indian girl?

A. No, sir, her father is up there.

Q. You knew that?

A. No, sir I seen him lots of times. You are breaking that news to me Judge.

Q. I am glad I found something new for you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You saw Dennis and Rube at his office?

A. Dennis and Rube Smith.

Q. Was Eugie there?

A. No, sir, just Rube, and Dennis and myself.

Q. Now, you tell me what was the first words you said to Dennis, Sadie?

A. I don't know what the first words were.

Q. Search your memory, you have got a beautiful memory?

A. I can't tell you the first one I said to him, I can tell you some of them, can't tell you the first I said to him?

Q. Did you say, good morning Dennis?

A. No, it was night, couldn't have said good morning.

Q. Did you say good evening Dennis?

A. Hello, Dennis.

Q. Hello Dennis, what the hell makes you so late?

A. No, he was there him and Rube both.

Q. What did you say now? A. I can't tell you.

Q. Well, tell me as near as you can now. You said something to him I know?

A. Sure I talked to both of them, that is what I told him. That I went down and met the white man and got a job. I said he has got plenty of money.

Q. You told that to Dennis?

A. Yes, sir, I told that to Dennis.

Q. Now, did you tell Dennis—listen to me and answer my question—did you tell Dennis, that white man has got plenty of money and you and I and Rube will make a Thomas?

A. No, we had done that the night before, Judge.

Q. Well, didn't you tell him again? A. That night?

Q. Yes?

A. No. Dennis told me they got the talk started.

Q. Did you tell him when you got back that night, did you say "I am ready to make Tommy"?

A. No, they got that started the night before.

Q. Answer me. Did you tell him I am ready to make the Tommy? A. No, sir, before that.

Q. Did you ask Dennis if he had any further information? A. No, sir.

Q. What did you say to him, Sadie?

A. I said, Dennis I met the white man and he gave me a job, and Dennis said we got the talk started. We had framed up the night before that.

Q. Leave that out. I will get to that. You said to him, "I met the white man and he has got plenty of money"?

A. No, sir, I said I met the white man and he has got plenty of money.

Q. What did Dennis say?

A. I have got the talk started.

Q. What else did he say? Let's have that whole conversation?

A. What else, I don't know what else was said up there.

Q. Now, Sadie, how long did you stay up there?

A. I stayed up at Dennis's office to eleven or twelve o'clock at night, just him and I. Didn't stay that long when--

Q. I know you had lots of conferences, but how long did you stay that night?

A. I don't know, but in the conversation, Dennis said I have got the talk with the people I know.

Q. What was that conversation?

A. I don't know it all.

Q. Give it to me the best you know how. You were just starting out then on your crusade to find Tommy?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that was the first blow struck right then, wasn't it? A. Right then, yes, sir.

Q. Tell me what was said?

A. That was all that was said that night.

Q. How long did you stay up there?

A. About two weeks.

Q. How long did you stay at Dennis's office that night?

A. I don't know how long I stayed that night.

Q. Rube was there? A. Rube Smith was right in there.

Q. Did Rube Smith say anything?

A. Not that night, he didn't do any talking; might have been talking, but not about that.

Q. You weren't talking about anything else but Tommy, were you?

A. Oh, yes, Dennis and Rube and I talked about lots of things.

Q. Why Sadie, with that fifty dollars in your pocket and with a good prospect ahead of going out there to find Tommy, and that being the opening wedge, you say that you drifted over that and entered into personal conversation about other things?

A. Listen, Judge, that fifty dollars I had, Dennis and them didn't know I had it, they didn't know what I had.

Q. I didn't ask you about what Dennis said, but is that all that occurred that night?

A. About Tommy that night.

Q. Search your memory, because you don't forget things?

A. Not very good.

Q. Tell me what occurred there besides Dennis saying—

A. I got the talk started with people I know.

Q. Well, tell me what else was said, Sadie, put your mind on it? A. No, not that night.

Q. That is all?

A. That is all about that case, yes, sir.

Q. What time did you leave his office that night?

A. I left there, I guess we stayed there about an hour, I hadn't been home, I think about an hour.

Q. What time did you go up there?

A. To Dennis's office?

Q. Yes?

A. Must have been about, I guess it must have been between half past eight and nine, I guess.

Q. And you left there about half past nine or ten?

A. Along in there some place.

Q. Where did you go then?

A. Went to my home. That was at night.

Q. Leavenworth? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where was your home in Leavenworth?

A. At the corner of Second and Cherokee, two blocks and a half from Dennis's.

Q. Two blocks and a half from Dennis's? A. Yes.

Q. Who lived in your place with you? A. My husband.

Q. Who else? A. My daughter and her husband.

Q. Who else? A. A girl named Bettie Smith.

Q. Did you stay there that night?

A. Oh, I stayed there two weeks after that.

Q. Did you stay there that night? A. Yes, at my home.

Q. I am not pursuing your peregrinations; did you stay there that night? A. Yes, sir.

Q. After you got up in the morning then where did you go?

A. Didn't go anywhere except around in town to see people.

Q. Tell me the first person you saw?

A. I don't know the first person I saw the next morning.

Q. Who was the second person you talked to the next morning about it?

A. The next day, I didn't talk to anybody the next day about it?

Q. Not a soul?

A. But in that two weeks' time I talked to dozens of people.

Q. Let that two weeks alone, Sadie. I am trying to treat you fairly, answer my questions. To whom did you talk the next day about Tommy Atkins? A. No one the next day.

Q. Why didn't you? A. Why didn't I?

Q. Yes?

A. There wasn't no Tommy and Dennis and Rube had started the talk.

Q. But you were making one?

A. Yes, I was going to make one but it was Rube's business to do that.

Q. I understand, but you were making a Tommy?

A. Yes, but we didn't start to making one the next day.

Q. You started two nights before that?

A. Yes, but had to get that talked——

Q. You started two nights before, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the second day you never said a word about Tommy, did you?

A. To nobody, Dennis had got the talk started.

Q. Did you see anybody the third day?

A. I don't know as I did. It was about——

Q. Answer that. A. No.

Q. Did you see anybody the fourth day?

A. I don't think so.

Q. Did you see anybody the fifth day?

A. Well, I guess so. Along about—after I had been home about four or five days.

Q. Now, who was that?

A. That was my brother. Do you know what my brother was named?

Q. What is his name? A. Sam Nash?

Q. Were you talking about being a granddaughter of Granny Letcher? A. Who did I tell?

Q. Didn't you call her grandmother?

A. Called her Granny, not my grandmother.

Q. Is that Sam's grandmother?

A. Yes, Sam's, but not mine, he is not my brother.

Q. Half brother? A. No relation at all of mine.

Q. What do you call him brother for?

A. We were raised from children as brother and sister.

Q. Sam Nash is no relation in the world then?

A. Not a bit.

Q. Granny Letcher was no kin?

A. Not a bit in the world.

Q. You called Sam brother, and Granny, Granny?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You talked to Sam the the next day?

A. Not the next day.

Q. About the fifth or sixth day?

A. Along in there some place.

Q. You talked to Sam. Who was present when you tackled Sam?

A. A white woman in the house where he was working.

Q. What was her name?

A. He was working for Mrs. Davis, and I guess it was Mrs. Davis.

Q. You testified it was Mrs. Davis? A. Mrs. Davis?

Q. Who was Mrs. Davis?

A. Mrs. Davis, the white woman he was working for.

Q. Where was that?

A. The south part of town on Vine Street I think, between Second and Third.

Q. What was it, a one story or a two story house, Sadie?

A. I think it was a two story house.

Q. A two story? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did you see Sam, up stairs or down stairs?

A. No, sir, down stairs in the parlor. He was washing windows.

Q. Did you go up stairs where Sam was?

A. He saw me coming in and had to come out. They had a pit dug and I didn't know it, and he came out to get me.

Q. Took you in the parlor?

A. Yes, sir, it was all torn up.

Q. I understand. All I asked you was if he took you in the house? A. In the front of the house, yes, sir.

Q. Where did he take you, in the parlor? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Over next to one of the windows?

A. Next to where he was washing windows at.

Q. The parlor was here, we will say; where was Mrs. Davis at that time?

A. The house runs this way and Mrs. Davis was in another room with folding doors.

Q. What was she doing?

A. Might have been washing silverware at the table.

Q. She was busy? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You went up to Sam, close to him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Nobody heard you?

A. I tried not to. My brother talked so loud I thought Mrs. Davis did, and I left out of there.

Q. What did you say to your brother, in the start, what did you say to your brother?

A. I said, Sam, we have started to tell about a baby being born in Granny's house by an Indian woman that used to work for the Hyde's and there is money in it; and he said, Sadie, I remember Granny keeping Eva and Mary Anthony's baby, and if we start that talk the old people will start to talk and we will get in trouble.

Q. And he talked so loud? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, Sadie, I want you to tell me this: You didn't know Minnie Atkins at all, did you? A. Didn't know her?

Q. At all, did you? A. I did, yes, I did.

Q. Where did you know her? A. I knew her at Hyde's.

Q. You knew her at Hyde's? A. Knew her at Hyde's.

Q. And—— But you never knew she had a baby in Leavenworth, did you?

A. No, I didn't. If she had had one at the negro house I would have knowed it though.

Q. Hold on, you didn't know that Minnie had ever had a baby in the City of Leavenworth, did you?

A. No, sir, because she had it at the white people's house.

Q. You were very familiar with her, weren't you, until about three months before you left? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Intimate with her? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Got her picture? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Running with her every day? A. Oh, no.

Q. Seeing her every day? A. Not every day, Judge.

Q. Every other day? A. Not every other day.

Q. Every few days? A. Several days apart.

A. Known that she had that baby sure.

Q. Any baby at Leavenworth?

A. No, not at Leavenworth.
Q. Any at Leavenworth?
A. That she had at Leavenworth?
Q. In the City of Leavenworth? A. No, I didn't know.

By Mr. German: Do you mean at this particular hearing?

By Mr. Stuart: Since this suit commenced.

Q. Did you ever visit Granny Letcher's house?
A. I lived there.

Q. Did you know her when she lived on Cherokee Street?
A. Yes, sir, before ever she moved there.

Q. And she lived right across from Crilly's barn, didn't she? A. Yes, sir.
Q. And Crilly had a house right next to it called the Seneca or old Chadwick House?
A. I don't know what it was called.
Q. Well, you know there was an old house right next to Crilly's Barn, don't you? A. Yes, I know that.

Q. You know that Brock had a barn in that neighborhood too? A. I think so, I was working for him.

Q. And you were out in that barn sometimes?

A. No, sir, only one colored place down there.

Q. You run with white people then? A. Yes.

Q. You hadn't started with colored people then?

A. No, sir, quit them.

Q. You had the play with white men altogether?

A. Altogether, yes, sir.

Q. You quit—— After you quit around Brock's, you didn't go by the barn? A. No, I never did go there.

Q. But you know where Brock's barn was?

A. Next to George Crilly's down there somewhere.

Q. Where was it, right up against Crilly's?

A. I don't know.

Q. Sadie, how long did you work for Brock?

A. In my life. Never been in Granny's house that I know of.

Q. Never was there? A. That I know of.

Q. Did you know old Aunt Mollie, the fortune teller?

Q. I thought you quit negroes and was running with white people? A. No, I didn't mean that way.

Q. Not that way? A. Oh, no.

Q. Did you know who lived in the house next to George Crilly's barn?

A. No, I didn't, it must have been white people.

A. There are two or three Mary Smith's in Leavenworth. I know two of them.

Q. Name them.

A. One colored woman and one white woman.

Q. Tell us about the white woman?

A. Lived at Sixth Street near Shawnee at that time she lived up on the corner of Miama and Third at that time, Mary Smith; I ran with her sister.

Q. Lived where? A. Corner of third and Miama.

Q. That is a dark woman, Mary Smith, the colored woman? A. No, sir, the white woman, with a negro sister.

Q. White woman with a negro sister? A. Yes, sir.

Q. She lived there? A. She lived there, yes, sir.

Q. Now when you had this little talk with Sam Nash, Sam said to you, Oh I never did know anybody but little Eva— little Edna, or whoever it was, did you tell Sam: Sam we have got to make a Tommy? A. Oh, no, I didn't tell him that.

Q. Did you tell Sam, "I am hunting for a Tommy"?

A. No, I didn't, I told him what I was trying to start and he got to talking too loud for me.

Q. What you were trying to start?

A. Start, saying that this Indian woman had a baby in his grandmother's house, and he refused to do for me what I wanted done.

Q. Then, you did let Sam know that you were going to practice fraud, did you? A. Yes, I did.

Q. And you were trying to get him to help?

A. Trying to get my brother to help me.

Q. Your brother? A. I will say Sam.

Q. Sam said he wouldn't stand for it?

A. He said if we did, the old settlers in Leavenworth would know about it.

Q. I ask you Sadie, wasn't that a put up job too?

A. What a put up job?

Q. What you are telling me now? Is that the truth that you are telling me, that Sam told you he never heard of Tommy Atkins? A. Yes, the truth I am telling now.

Q. Sam told you that?

A. He did. My brother said to me, "I don't know no Minnie Atkins."

Q. Never knew Minnie?

A. Yes, he would have been lying if he said so.

Q. Why didn't he know Minnie if you knew Minnie?

A. Do you know where my brother lived?

Q. Never mind where he lived?

A. I worked with Minnie.

Q. But Sam lived in the town, didn't he?

A. Lived in the town.

Q. How old was he? A. He was about eighteen.

Q. About eighteen? A. Yes, sir.

Q. He was a pretty lively one for a one armed boy, wasn't he? A. Yes, sir.

Q. He was staying around right smart among the ladies?

A. Among the negro ladies, yes, sir.

Q. Somewhat of a lady's man? A. Yes, sir.

A. Moving around town? A. Yes, sir.

Q. But you say Sam told you that he never heard of Indian Minnie?

A. He did, because she never run with any negroes, she didn't. Aint a negro in town that knows her.

Q. Aint a negro in town that knows her?

A. Knows her now since she has been swigged. She is fifty years old now.

Q. She is over fifty years old now. Will you tell the Examiner and these witnesses here that there is not a negro in Leavenworth that ever knew Minnie?

A. I don't believe they ever knowed her until she went to the Fort.

Q. You claim to be the only dark one of the negroes that knew Minnie? A. The only nigger.

Q. The only negro in Leavenworth that ever knew Indian Minnie in Leavenworth? A. The only negro right there.

Q. You will make that statement?

A. Yes, sir, I will make that statement.

Q. And stick to it?

A. And state there is not a negro in Leavenworth. They are lying if any negro in town ever said they had ever seen Minnie Atkins until a year ago, and I will tell him he is lying.

Q. Man or woman?

A. Yes, sir, I don't care who they are.

Q. Drop the negroes and go to the white men?

A. All right.

Q. Was any white man that ever knew Indian Minnis there besides Hyde? A. I won't say that.

Q. Do you know of any white man that knew her besides Hyde?

A. No, sir, not myself. Only heard her speak of two but she might have known a lot of them.

Q. Didn't Dennis tell you the very first time that you located him in the office, Sadie, look me in the face?

A. All right, Judge, but I am sick. This talk about Dennis, about him knowing her.

Q. That talk about Dennis making you sick?

A. Yes, sir, that makes me sick.

Q. When I mention Dennis you get sick?

A. It made me sick.

Q. Is it because Dennis is a crook?

A. Well, Judge, I have been working with him, I know him a whole lot.

Q. You and he put up a whole lot of things?

A. A lot of things from the time he was on the Police Force until I left Leavenworth.

Q. What was the first thing you put up with Dennis?

A. I refuse to tell that.

Q. You are not answering because you would incriminate yourself and be prosecuted? A. I am not going to tell it.

Q. That is barred anyway? A. No, I will never tell it.

Q. You and Dennis put up a job? A. Yes.

Q. In 1889?

Q. Didn't put up no job, lots of things that he broke me in.

Q. You and he were getting the best of somebody in 1889? How many years ago is that?

A. 1889, about twenty seven years, wouldn't it be?

Q. Yes, you are good figurer?

A. Yes, I am a good figurer, I can figure with anybody about when and where it was.

Q. Keep your eye on the coin all the time?

A. All the time on the coin.

Q. Looking for something? A. Looking for something.

Q. All the time got your eye open for the dollar?

A. For the dollar, yes, sir.

Q. That is what you are hunting for all the time?

A. Yes, sir, all the time.

And thereupon, a short recess is taken.

THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Appellant,

No. 254.

NANCY ATKINS, H. A. RIDGWAY, GUARDIAN OF NANCY ATKINS, ET AL., Appellants, vs.
MINNIE FOLK, NEE ATKINS, ET AL., Appellees.

APPEAL FROM THE UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE EIGHTH CIRCUIT.

ABSTRACT AND BRIEF ON BEHALF OF NANCY ATKINS INTERESTS.

The Issues.

The United States of America filed its bill of complaint in the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Oklahoma against Minnie Atkins and her lessees, Gem Oil Company, Charles Page and R. A. Josey, and against Nancy Atkins, an incompetent, and her then guardian, Micco T. Harjo (now H. A. Ridgway, substituted), and her lessees, Robert L. Rutherford and James A. Ferguson, and various other parties whose interests or claims have been eliminated. Subsequently, an amended bill of complaint was filed, which appears, beginning page 1 of the record, and in substance it charges:

That this bill is brought by the United States by the District Attorney for the Eastern District of Oklahoma, by direction of the Attorney General of the United States in its own behalf and in behalf of the Creek Nation of Indians; and it alleges the residence and citizenship of the various parties and the location of the land in controversy. It alleges the history of the allotment of the lands in the Indian Territory, particularly in the Creek Nation; that among others is the 160 acres of land described therein which is the subject matter of this litigation. It was alleged that on the 1st of April, 1899, and prior thereto, said land was a part of the lands belonging to the Creek Nation as public and unalotted domain.

It sets forth the Acts of Congress creating the Commission to the Five Civilized Tribes, commonly called the Dawes Commission, and the duty devolving upon it to make rolls of the tribes and to allot lands respectively to those entitled thereto; and alleges that, under the Act of Congress, no person not a member of one of the civilized tribes, and no member of said tribes who was not living on the 1st day of April, 1899, in the Indian Territory, was entitled to be placed on the official roll of the particular tribe, in this instance the Creek tribe, nor was such person entitled to an allotment or distributive share of the public lands of the Creek tribe, nor was the Commission authorized to enroll or allot lands in the name of any fictitious person.

Then the bill alleges that on the 23rd of May, 1901, the said Dawes Commission, without any application being made by any person and upon its own motion and in an ex parte proceeding, without hearing, listed for enrollment the name of Thomas Atkins, as being a son of a Creek Indian woman by the name of Minnie Atkins, and as representing a citizen by blood of the Creek Nation entitled to be enrolled as such and receive an allotment as other enrolled citizens of the tribe, of the lands of which the Commission was authorized to allot to citizens thereof.

It further alleges that pursuant to said enrollment, subsequently the lands described in the bill of complaint were arbitrarily allotted to Thomas Atkins, as the Commission was authorized to do. Allotment certificate was made and, subsequently, patents were executed thereto by the Principal Chief of the Creek Nation, which were subsequently approved by the Secretary of the Interior and recorded in the office of the Commission.

The bill alleges that the enrollment, allotment and patents were null and void because of false and fraudulent evidence relating to the citizenship in the Creek Nation of the said Thomas Atkins, growing out of the Authenticated Pay Roll of the Creek Nation of 1895, which was used as evidence by the Commission. And it alleges that the name, Thomas Atkins, appears upon said Pay Roll in the family headed by the name of Minnie Atkins, as evidence that Thomas Atkins, in 1895, was a living member and citizen of said tribe and a member of Euchee Town, one of the bands of the Creek tribe; that on the 23rd of May, 1901, the Commission had before it and used as evidence and relied upon said 1895 Pay Roll and believed it spoke the truth; and, without any hearing or further investigation listed for enrollment the name of Thomas Atkins opposite Roll No. 7913; and alleges that said Pay Roll thus furnished false evidence to the Commission upon which it relied in ignorance of its falsity in this, to-wit:

That in June, 1895, the National Council of the Creek Nation, its legislative body, appropriated the sum of $200,000.00, which had been appropriated to the Nation by an Act of Congress of March 2, 1895, for the purpose of making a per capita payment of said sum to the members of said tribe, and for the purpose of making said per capita payment, a Roll, of the tribe was ordered prepared; that the tribe was divided into forty-seven bands, known as towns, and each of said towns had as its chief officer one of its members called the Town King; that at that time and prior thereto, Samuel W. Brown was the

Town King of Euchee Town, to which the defendants, Minnie Atkins and Nancy Atkins, belonged; that it was customary for the Town Kings to give in the names of the members of their respective towns, for the purpose of making up Rolls of the members thereof, and that the Rolls of the various towns, taken together, constituted the Roll of the tribe; that, in accordance with this custom, the said Samuel W. Brown, as Town King of Euchee Town, in making up the 1895 Pay Roll, gave in the name of Thomas Atkins as a living member of said town and tribe, and as a member of the family of Minnie Atkins and, thereby, caused the same to be placed upon the Roll of the members of said town and of said tribe; that in giving this information Samuel W. Brown acted upon false statements of one John Davis, a relative and agent of Minnie Atkins, made to him, the said Brown, that the said Thomas Atkins was at that time a living member of the said Creek Tribe of Indians and of Euchee Town thereof, belonging to the family of Minnie Atkins; that the officers of the tribe, in making up the Pay Roll, were induced and persuaded to and did enroll the name of Thomas Atkins upon the false statements and representations so communicated to them by the said Samuel W. Brown to the effect that the said Thomas Atkins was at the time a living citizen of said nation and town thereof, and entitled to share in the distribution of said money; and the bill averred that in truth and fact no such person as Thomas Atkins, a member of the Atkins family of Euchee Town, was in being at that time, nor was there ever such a person except the father of Minnie Atkins and Nancy Atkins, and that their said father, Thomas Atkins, died more than ten years prior to 1895, as the said Minnie Atkins and Nancy Atkins both well knew; and that the Thomas Atkins, so enrolled upon the 1895 Pay Roll, was a myth and fictitious person, and this the said Minnie Atkins and John Davis well knew at the time, and that the said Samuel W. Brown was ignorant of that fact and believed the false and fraudulent representations made to him, and acted innocently in communicating such information to the officers of the tribe, and that the officers of the tribe engaged in making up the Roll believed said false and fraudulent representation to be true and relied thereon and in such belief and reliance placed the name of Thomas Atkins on said Roll.

That the Treasurer of the Creek Tribe, in the fall of 1895, made distribution in payment of said per capita payment to the members of the tribe in accordance with the Roll, and that Minnie Atkins received and collected from said nation, through the said Treasurer, the sum of $14.40, the same being the amount paid to each citizen, as a payment belonging to Thomas Atkins, and at the time concealed from the tribe and its officers the fact that there was no such person as Thomas Atkins, and did so for the purpose of defrauding the Creek Nation out of the said sum of $14.40, and that said concealment had that effect.

The bill alleged that Nancy Atkins, well knowing that the said name, Thomas Atkins, was wrongfully enrolled, has ratified the fraudulent practice made upon the Commission, as aforesaid, and adopted it as her own, and has sought to take, receive and enjoy the fruits and benefits thereof by asserting and claiming that Thomas Atkins, enrolled opposite No. 7913, had an existence and was entitled to be enrolled as a citizen of the Creek Nation and to have allotted in his name the lands described in complaint.

The bill alleges that Nancy Atkins claims and asserts that she had a son by the name of Thomas Atkins, and that said enrolled Thomas Atkins was her son, and that he died; and it alleges that Minnie Atkins claims and asserts that she had a son by the name of Thomas Atkins and that said enrolled Thomas Atkins was her son, and that he died. Complainant alleges that these and other claims set forth therein are false and then sets forth various and divers conveyances, which affect the land in question. A cancellation of all of them is prayed.

Then other allegations are set forth as a second ground of relief. Briefly stated they are, that the proceedings for the enrollment of Thomas Atkins were ex parte, but as the evidence is so at variance with that allegation, and these same facts in the record have been passed upon by this court in United States v. Wildcat, 244 U. S. 111, commonly known as the Barney Thlocco case, where it was held that the proceeding was not ex parte, we omit from further consideration those allegations.

The complainant further alleges that the land is situated in the oil and gas belt of the Creek Nation, and in a portion thereof known as the Cushing Field, and that the lands are of great value, because of the body of oil and gas thereunder; and alleges that the Gem Oil Company, Charles Page and R. A. Josey, without authority or consent of the Creek Nation, claiming to do so under pretended lease contract, or conveyance, executed to them by some or all of the alleged heirs of Thomas Atkins, have entered upon the lands and are proceeding to prospect and drill therein for oil and gas, and have drilled and removed therefrom, and disposed of for the exclusive use of themselves and of some of the alleged heirs of Thomas Atkins, great quantities of oil and gas, the value of which is not and cannot be known to the plaintiff; and that said defendants have no right, title or interest in and to said lands and oil and gas thereunder, and that the acts of the defendants in so unlawfully entering upon the said lands aforesaid, and prospecting and drilling and taking and removing oil and gas therefrom, constitute a continuous trespass on the lands in violation of the rights of the plaintiff and of the Creek Nation, and the acts constitute a waste upon the estate of the Creek Nation.

The prayer is for a receiver to take possession of the property and to have the various instruments affecting the title set forth therein cancelled, and to quiet the title in the complainant and the Creek Nation (Rec., pp. 1-19).

We omit from reference the many pleadings filed by other parties than those now before the court.

Nancy Atkins, by H. A. Ridgway, her guardian, filed her separate answer. The historical part of the bill is admitted in the main to be correct. She denies that the enrollment on May 23, 1901, by the Dawes Commission, of Thomas Atkins, was an ex parte proceeding, but alleges that the proceedings thereupon on said date was upon the motion and initiative of the Commission, and the members of the Creek House of Kings and House of Warriors. She admits the Commission listed the name of Thomas Atkins, a representative and citizen by blood of the Creek Nation, and admits that said list for enrollment was for the purpose of placing the names upon the Final Roll of citizens by blood of said tribe, then being prepared by the Commission under the Act of Congress. She admits that the Commission arbitrarily and without application being made therefor allotted the lands described in said bill of complaint in the name of Thomas Atkins, as alleged therein, and as the said Commission had a right to do. She admits that the Rolls of the Creek Nation were used as evidence by the Commission, and that among those Rolls was the Authenticated Tribal Roll of 1895, and she admits the name of Thomas Atkins appeared upon said Pay Roll in the family headed by the name of Minnie Atkins; and admits that said Roll shows upon its face that Thomas Atkins was, in 1895, a living member and citizen of the tribe and a member of Euchee Town; and admits that on the 23rd of May, 1901, the Commission had before it and used as evidence said 1895 Pay Roll, and admits that the Commission believed the said 1895 Pay Roll spoke and represented the truth, so far as the question of citizenship of Thomas Atkins was concerned; but she denies that the Commission finally determined the question of his citizenship and listed the name of Thomas Atkins without any further evidence or other investigation being made. She admits the 1895 Pay Roll was material evidence on the question of whether Thomas Atkins was a citizen and member of the tribe in the year 1895; and denies that the Pay Roll was false and fraudulent, as alleged in the bill of complaint. She denies that in the making of the 1895 Pay Roll Samuel W. Brown, as Town King of Euchee Town, acted upon the false statements of John Davis, a relative and agent of Minnie Davis. She denies that the officers of the tribe, in so making up said Roll, enrolled the name of Thomas Atkins upon the false statement and representations made to them by Samuel W. Brown, to the effect that Thomas Atkins was at that time a living member and citizen of the nation. She denies that the said Thomas Atkins, so enrolled on the 1895 Pay Roll, was a myth and fictitious person. She denies that Minnie Atkins caused the name of Thomas Atkins to be placed upon the 1895 Pay Roll for the fraudulent purpose and with the fraudulent intent of enjoying whatever benefit might accrue to her as the sole relative and heir of Thomas Atkins. She denies ratifying any fraudulent acts and practices, as alleged. She admits that she claims and asserts that she had a son by the name of Thomas Atkins and that said enrolled Thomas Atkins is her son, and that he is dead. She denies that said claim is false. Other allegations of the bill are appropriately denied wherein any fraud is charged against her. And she reiterates that she is the mother of the Thomas Atkins enrolled, and that he is dead and that she is his sole heir. She admits that the lands are valuable, and are situated in the Cushing Field; but she says that it is not true that the Creek Nation is the owner of the lands. She says that it is true that the Gem Oil Company, Charles Page and R. A. Josey, without authority and consent of the Creek Nation, etc., have unlawfully entered upon said lands and are proceeding to prospect and drill them. She alleges the due conveyance of these lands to her son, Thomas Atkins; that he died sometime in the year 1902; that he was born and resided during his life in the Creek Nation.

Then she makes her answer a cross-bill against Minnie Atkins, Gem Oil Company, Charles Page, R. A. Josey and the other parties who are made defendants herein, who have been eliminated heretofore. She sets up the various conveyances affecting this land, which she alleges are clouds upon her title, and prays for their cancellation.

Then she alleges that on the 2nd of October, 1912, some person claiming to be or representing to be Minnie Atkins, executed a quitclaim deed to the defendant, H. U. Bartlett, and that afterwards, on the 29th of November, 1912, said H. U. Bartlett executed an oil and gas lease to the defendant, Gypsy Oil Company. She alleges that thereafter the Gypsy Oil Company entered upon and took possession of the lands for the purpose of developing and operating the same for oil and gas, and that thereafter, on the 23rd of July, 1913, she, through her guardian and next friend, who at that time was Micco T. Harjo, instituted a suit in the District Court of Creek County, Oklahoma, to cancel the conveyances from the purported Minnie Atkins to H. U. Bartlett and the lease from Bartlett to the Gypsy Oil Company and to quiet her title to said lands and recover possession thereof; that thereafter, on the 24th of March, 1914, she recovered a judgment in said court, quieting her title to said lands and adjudging her to be the lawful owner thereof, and entitled to the possession. A copy of the judgment was attached, as Exhibit "A" to her cross complaint. She alleges that after the judgment was obtained, the Gypsy Oil Company appealed said action to the Supreme Court of the State of Oklahoma, and perfected its appeal, and executed an undertaking for appeal in the sum of $6,000.00.

She alleges that afterwards, during the month of June, 1914, the defendants, Charles Page and R. A. Josey, with knowledge of the judgment in favor of this defendant, instituted a search for the defendant, Minnie Atkins, for the purpose of obtaining a lease, deed or other conveyance to said lands, and that after considerable search they found Minnie Atkins, and obtained the deed from her and her trustee, heretofore set out in the Government's bill, and so obtained an oil and gas lease, which is set out in the Government's bill. She alleges that the deed and lease were obtained by the defendants, Page and Josey, with full knowledge of her rights, and with full knowledge that she had obtained the judgment set out in the District Court, and that same was pending on appeal, or was about to be appealed. She alleges that the Gem Oil Company is a corporation, but that its stock is owned and it is controlled by the defendants, Page and Josey. She alleges that shortly after Page and Josey obtained said lease, they entered upon the lands in controversy, without her knowledge and consent, and by force and against her will, and against the will and consent of the Gypsy Oil Company, broke and entered the enclosure around said lands and took possession of a portion of them and erected a derrick thereon. She alleges that after they had obtained possession of a portion of said lands, they caused Minnie Folk to bring an action in the District Court of Creek County for the purpose of quieting their title to said lands and for the purpose of obtaining an injunction against the Gypsy Oil Company and Bartlett, restraining them from interfering with the possession of Page and Josey. She alleges that said action was consolidated with other actions pending in said District Court, and alleges the proceedings therein, whereby Page and Josey were given permission to drill a well upon said land upon the express condition and understanding that they should not receive any compensation for the drilling of the well in the event it should be decided later that they were not entitled to the property in controversy. Copy of the order was attached, as Exhibit "B." She alleges that all the drilling upon said land by the defendants, Page and Josey, had been at their own risk and expense, and that all the drilling and other operations upon said land except the first well drilled therein by them, has been done in violation of the order of court.

She alleges further that an agreement had been reached between Page and Josey and the Gypsy Oil Company, by which the Gypsy Oil Company surrendered to Page and Josey the possession of the remainder of the lands, and that they dismissed their appeal pending in the Supreme Court of Oklahoma.

She further alleges that, by order of the County Court of Nowata County, she executed a lease to J. B. White and others therein mentioned, which said lease was assigned to the defendants, Robert L. Rutherford and J. A. Ferguson, on the 28th of September, 1915, and that they are now the owners and holders of the oil and gas rights in the land. She prays for a dismissal of the bill filed by the United States, and that her title be quieted as to all of the defendants except as to Rutherford and Ferguson, her lessees, and that an account be taken of the oil and gas produced from said lands by the defendants, Charles Page, R. A. Josey, the Gem Oil Company and Gypsy Oil Company, and that she have judgment therefor (Rec., pp. 81-93). The record of the proceedings in the Creek District Court, Exhibits "A" and "B" to her complaint, are found at pages 93 to 101.

Robert L. Rutherford and J. A. Ferguson filed separate answer, in which they adopted the answer of Nancy Atkins, and set forth that, as assignees of her lease executed to White and others, they are the owners of the oil and gas in said land (Rec., pp. 101-102).

The answer of Minnie Folk is found beginning at page 64. It is a denial of all the charges against her, that she falsely caused the enrollement of Thomas Atkins. She admits that Brown, as Town King of Euchee Town, in making up the 1895 Pay Roll, gave in the name of Thomas Atkins to the National Council of the Creek Nation, as a living member and citizen of the town and tribe, and part of the family of Minnie Atkins, and thereby caused said name to be placed upon the roll of members of said tribe, "and that, in so doing, said Brown acted upon information obtained from John Davis, a relative and agent of Minnie Atkins, duly authorized by her, to the effect that Thomas Atkins was at that time a living member of the family of Minnie Atkins." She denies that the information so imparted to said Samuel W. Brown by said John Davis was false or fraudulent. She admits that the officers enrolled the name of Thomas Atkins, upon the statements made by said Brown, but denies their falsity (Rec., p. 67).

Charles Page filed separate answer, beginning at page 47, which is, in substance, the same as that of Minnie Folk.

R. A. Josey filed answers stating that he had conveyed all his right, title and interest in the premises to Charles Page, and he disclaimed any right, title or interest in or to the same (Rec., p. 90).

Charles Page filed answer to the cross bill of Nancy Atkins, in which he denied her material allegations. He admits that the Gypsy Oil Company and H. U. Bartlett have released and quitclaimed to him all their right, title and interest (Rec., pp. 107-110).

The Gem Oil Company filed answer that it has conveyed all its right, title and interest to Charles Page and R. A. Josey (Rec., p. 26).

The Gypsy Oil Company filed answer that on the 20th of January, 1915, it relinquished and released to Charles Page and R. A. Josey all its right, title and interest in the land in controversy.

In answering the complaint of the Government, it further alleges that the records of the Dawes Commission showed that Thomas Atkins was a duly enrolled citizen and the owner of this land, and that he was the son of Minnie Atkins, and that a patent had been duly issued to him; and the defendant, being informed and believing that Thomas Atkins had died after allotment, leaving Minnie Atkins as his sole heir, procured an oil and gas lease on said land, their mesne conveyance relating back to Minnie Atkins, paying a valuable consideration, and that they had taken therefrom 4090.74 barrels of oil of the value of $3,556.78, and had expended in producing the same, $15,615.08, and they ask that in an accounting, their expenditures be offset against any charge for their receipts (Rec., p. 23).

In the proceedings in court upon the issues joined many thousand pages of deposition and many thousand pages of oral testimony were introduced.

Judge CAMPBELL, the district judge, filed an opinion, reviewing the case, as presented, and held that the Creek tribe had had its day in court and that the enrollment by the Dawes Commission conclusively determined that Thomas Atkins had an existence and was living on April 1, 1899 (Rec., pp. 130-131). Thereafter, he filed a supplemental opinion and findings, determining the several interests represented by the various defendants. As he stated, these were divided into three groups: those claiming under the defendant, Minnie Folk, nee Atkins; those claiming under the defendant, Nancy Atkins; and those claiming under the defendant, Henry Carter. The court stated the conflicting contentions between Minnie and Nancy, Minnie to the effect that this was her child, and Nancy never had a son named Thomas, and on the other hand that Nancy claimed that this enrolled Thomas was her son and that Minnie Atkins never had a son named Thomas.

The court said the evidence had been carefully considered on the question as to whether or not Minnie Atkins, in fact, had this child Thomas, as she claims, and stated that this question is generally obscured in this voluminous record by much evidence on both sides, which the court finds unworthy of belief, and that the time and space would not be taken to refer to and analyze it, but that after careful consideration, he found that Minnie Atkins had an illegitimate male child, born to her during the early part of June, 1885, at the home of a colored woman, known as Granny Letcher, in the city of Leavenworth, Kansas, and that she named this child Thomas Atkins. The court further found that prior to the compilation of the Tribal Roll of 1895, Minnie Atkins had conveyed information to certain of her relatives in the Indian Territory of the fact of the birth of Thomas Atkins, which information was eventually imparted to the tribal authorities compiling the Roll, and that the name, Thomas Atkins, appearing at No. 213 of Euchee Town on the 1895 Authenticated Tribal Roll, was placed upon said Roll by the tribal authorities compiling the Roll as the child of Minnie Atkins. The court found that this Thomas Atkins, appearing on the 1895 Authenticated Tribal Roll and later on the Dawes Commission Roll is, in fact, the illegitimate child of said Minnie Atkins, born as aforesaid, in the city of Leavenworth, Kansas, in the early part of June, 1885, and is not the child of Nancy Atkins.

The court said that much of the record consists of testimony on the question of fact as to whether Nancy Atkins ever had a son Thomas, as she now claims, and this question is also obscured by much testimony on both sides not considered worthy of belief. That grave doubt is cast upon Nancy's contention by her own conduct during the period when the Dawes Commission was enrolling the members of the tribe and allotting the land, when she manifested a lively interest in her own enrollment and allotment and that of her brother Lee, who died, as she knew, in 1894 or 1895, but in this correspondence with the Commission makes no reference to her supposed son, Thomas, who, if her present contentions are true, had lived until April 1, 1895, and was clearly entitled to an allotment, and whose death was almost contemporaneous with her correspondence with the Commission. He further held, that in view of the foregoing finding as to the identity of Thomas Atkins with Minnie's son Thomas, it became immaterial as to whether, in fact, Nancy Atkins ever had a son, Thomas (Rec., p. 145).

He then determined the issue of fact as to Henry Carter, that he was the son of a negro woman named Adis Carter (Rec., p. 146).

The Government and Nancy Atkins interests appealed to the Circuit Court of Appeals and the case was there determined before Circuit Judges Hook and Carland, and District Judge Van Valkenburg, the opinion being written by Judge Van VALKENBURG, and is found on pages 4996-5004 of the record. The opinion of the court considers primarily the contentions of the Government and decides against them for the reasons therein set forth.

The last paragraph of the opinion, on page 5004. deals with the issue of fact. The court states that, independent of the conclusion reached, as to the law preventing the Government's proceeding further, upon the merits, it could fare no better, and this consideration involved the Nancy Atkins appeal. The court said the record of approximately 5000 pages presents an "irrepressible conflict," and "if any appellate court is ever concluded by the findings of a chancellor upon facts sufficiently substantial to support them, and such is and should be the uniform rule of decision, this case falls peculiarly within that rule." Then the court says that mistakes may have been made and proceeds to point out that, considering the environment, subject-matter and personnel of the witnesses and parties involved, it may be that in these classes of cases exact justice is difficult of attainment, but it was apprehended Congress was fully aware of this situation, as affecting these Indian titles, when it conferred such complete authority upon the Dawes Commission and clothed its decisions with such presumption of verity.

The learned judge discussed the issues that were presented to the court as if they were issues determined by the Dawes Commission, as between the claimants under Minnie and the claimants under

Nancy. The opinion evidently leads to the conclusion that the court thought that this was a review of the decision of the Dawes Commission on findings of fact between Nancy and Minnie. Then the court passes to a compliment to the resident judge and the weight which they should attach to his opinion. It is stated that his findings are amply sustained by the record and should not be set aside by the court, and to attempt a comprehensive review of the evidence would be impractical and serve no useful purpose, and that it was sufficient to say the court had reached the same conclusion as did the trial judge upon the issues of fact (Rec., p. 5004).

The Government and the Nancy Atkins interests appealed to this court.

Assignment of Errors.

The appellant, Nancy Atkins, assigns errors as follows:

I.

The Circuit Court of Appeals erred in not reversing this finding of the opinion of the district judge, to-wit:

> "The court finds that Minnie Atkins had an illegitimate male child born to her during the early part of June, 1885, at the home of a colored woman, known as Granny Letcher, in the City of Leavenworth, Kansas, and that she named this child Thomas Atkins," which said finding is against the weight of the evidence, and supported only by evidence fabricated to fit the description of Thomas Atkins, as a son of Minnie Atkins, in census card #2707.

II.

The Circuit Court of Appeals erred in not finding that Nancy Atkins had an illegitimate male child born to her at Wagoner, Indian Territory, about September, 1890, and named Thomas Atkins, and in reaching the same conclusion as did the trial judge upon the issue of facts in that the trial judge did not determine this issue, deciding that the same was immaterial, whereas the said issue was material and the fact above stated sustained by the weight of the evidence.

III.

The Circuit Court of Appeals erred in not reversing the findings in the opinion of the district judge that Minnie Atkins conveyed information to certain of her relatives in the Indian Territory of the fact of the birth of Thomas Atkins, her son, which information was eventually imparted to the tribal authorities compiling the Roll and that the name of Thomas Atkins appearing at #213 of Euchee Town on the 1895 Authenticated Tribal Roll was placed upon the Roll by the tribal authorities compiling the Roll as the child of Minnie Atkins pursuant to such information, in that said finding concurred in by the Circuit Court of Appeals is wholly without any substantial evidence to support it.

IV.

The Circuit Court of Appeals erred in not finding that the son of Nancy Atkins named Thomas Atkins born at Wagoner, Indian Territory, about September, 1890, was the Thomas Atkins on the Euchee Town list as #213 of the Authenticated Creek Tribal Roll of 1895, in that all the testimony in the record upon the identity of the Thomas Atkins on said roll is to the effect that it represented the son of Nancy Atkins, who was intended to be enrolled by the tribal authorities.

V.

The Circuit Court of Appeals erred in not reversing the finding in the opinion of the district judge and in concurring therein that the Thomas Atkins enrolled by the Dawes Commission was in fact the illegitimate child of Minnie Atkins born in the City of Leavenworth, Kansas, in the early part of June, 1885, and is not the child of Nancy Atkins, in that there is no substantial evidence whatever in the record to support said finding of either the District Court or the Circuit Court of Appeals.

VI.

The Circuit Court of Appeals erred in not finding that the Thomas Atkins enrolled by the Dawes Commission on May 23, 1901, as #7913 on the Creek Roll and described in census card #2707, was the son of Nancy Atkins, in that all the testimony in the record is to the effect that such person was the son of Nancy Atkins and there is no substantial evidence whatsoever that such person was the son of Minnie Atkins.

VII.

The District Court erred and the Circuit Court of Appeals erred in affirming its decree without passing upon the admissibility of the evidence offered on behalf of these appellants by the following witnesses, to-wit: J. E. Newberry, James E. Long, Nolan Williams, Jasper N. Skrimpsher, Thomas Brewer, W. A. McElroy, Walter Posey, Frank Ingles, D. W. Best, R. F. Davis, J. D. McLaren, J. W. Ruble, to this effect:

> "The defendant, Nancy Atkins, offered to prove by each of said witnesses that they lived in the town of Wagoner, Indian Territory, during various years from 1890 to 1900 and that they were personally acquainted with Nancy Atkins, and that they were personally acquainted with a certain boy in said town described by each, called Tommy Atkins; and that it was the general reputation in the town of Wagoner as to who was the mother of said Tommy Atkins; and that it was the general reputation in that community and generally understood in that community that said boy, Tommy Atkins, was the son of Nancy Atkins."

VIII.

The Circuit Court of Appeals erred in not directing that a decree be entered that the land in controversy was the property of Nancy Atkin as the sole heir of her son, the allottee, Thomas Atkins, and that she and her lessees were entitled to a decree quieting their title thereto.

IX.

The Circuit Court of Appeals erred in affirming the decree of the District Court herein.

X.

The Circuit Court of Appeals erred in not deciding that the judgment of the Creek County District Court affirmed by the Supreme Court of Oklahoma finding that Nancy Atkins was the mother of Thomas Atkins, the allottee, and the owner of the land in controversy, and in not finding that said decree was binding upon the defendants in the cross-bill herein.

XI.

The Circuit Court of Appeals erred in not finding and decreeing that the Gem Oil Company, a corporation, and Charles Page and all others claiming by and through the said Gem Oil Company and Charles Page, were trespassers in taking possession of the land in controversy.

XII.

The Circuit Court of Appeals erred in not sustaining the cross complaint of Nancy Atkins and her lessees and directing the District Court to so decree.

As to the Government's Side of the Case.

We are little concerned with the presumptions invoked against the Government, as to the conclusiveness of the findings of the Dawes Commission, which presumptions were sustained by the District Court and by the Circuit Court of Appeals. We contend that on the merits, the facts we present as established, defeat alike the Government's contentions and the claims of Minnie and Page. If we cannot satisfy the court from this record that Nancy Atkins, an enrolled Creek Indian, was the mother of Thomas Atkins, born September, 1890, and a mistake in the descriptive recitals on the card made his mother appear as Minnie instead of Nancy, and that the name Thomas Atkins, as No. 213 on the Euchee Roll of the Creek Tribes in 1895, represented the son of Nancy Atkins, and that with this name as a basic fact, the Dawes Commission on May 23, 1901, found that he was living and a resident of the Indian Territory on April 1, 1899, and enrolled this person, giving him card No. 2707 and issuing census card, Government's Exhibit A-1, which action entitled him to the allotment thereafter awarded to Thomas Atkins, consisting of the tract of land in controversy, we care not whether these presumptions are indulged against the Government's recovery, or whether it is entitled to recover the land for the benefit of the Creek Nation. Should we fail to satisfy the court, as outlined in the above statement, and these presumptions are indulged against the Government, it would result in leaving Page in possession of land obtained by force and fraud, and if they were not indulged, would leave the Creek Nation to recover land which it had allotted to one of its own blood, who was entitled to receive it as his pro rata of the public domain. If we do convince the court of the facts as we herein allege them to be, then these facts defeat the Government on its merits, hence we enter into no discussion of the law of the case as laid down by the District Court and the Circuit Court of Appeals. It is immaterial to the issue we present. There is one phase of it, however, which may make it important, and that one is indicated by Judge CAMPBELL, in his opinion wherein he states:

> "If the evidence should be found to establish the contention that the Thomas Atkins claimed by Minnie never, in fact, had any existence, and it further appeared that Nancy did, in fact, have the child she claims to have had, the fact that Minnie had no such child might lead very strongly to the conclusion that the Thomas Atkins enrolled was Nancy's child." (Rec., p. 144.)

We apprehend that the Government in its brief will present very fully its case so strongly proving that Minnie had no such child, a subject that we are not presenting in this brief, because the establishment of his existence, as claimed by her and as found by Judge CAMPBELL, does not materially affect our case. On the other hand, should the court be convinced that the alleged son Thomas, of Minnie, only existed to fit the census card describing her as his mother, then, as indicated by Judge Campbell, our case will be strengthened by such finding, and in that negative way, we would obtain some benefit from the Government's proving its contention that there is no substantial evidence that Minnie had a son named Thomas. The evidence on this issue takes fully 3000 pages of this record and it is such a collateral issue to our case that we are not reviewing it in an effort to overturn the findings of the two courts which have accepted Minnie's story as true that she did have a son named Thomas, born at Granny Letcher's at Leavenworth, Kansas, in June, 1885; but we are, for the argument's sake, taking this fact as established for the purpose of our contentions, and seeking to demonstrate to the court that neither the name of Thomas Atkins on the Creek Rolls of 1895, nor the name of Thomas Atkins on the Dawes Commission Roll of 1901, represented such a son of Minnie, but, in fact, represented the son of Nancy. If we demonstrate that fact to your satisfaction, it is wholly immaterial whether Minnie, in fact, was the mother of another Thomas Atkins, who was born at Granny Letcher's in Leavenworth, Kansas, early in June, 1885, and who lived his life, if he had one, at Leavenworth, Kansas. And it is likewise wholly immaterial to our contentions whether on this record it is open to the Government to question the findings of fact of the Dawes Commission, on the theory that Minnie Atkins, through her uncle, John Davis, imposed upon Sam W. Brown, and that Sam W. Brown, in turn imposed upon the Creek authorities by having them place upon the 1895 Roll the name of Thomas Atkins; it being contended that in that way knowledge of the existence of her alleged son, Thomas, was conveyed to the Creek authorities and reflected by that name upon their 1895 Roll. If, in fact, we satisfy the court from this record that it was Nancy's son Thomas whose name was upon that Roll and later was enrolled by the Dawes Commission on information as to his residence in the Territory, his existence on April 1, 1899, and as to parentage, age and blood, everything else is irrelevant, especially the error of writing down its description of his mother as Minnie Atkins instead of Nancy Atkins.

The Burden Assumed by Appellants on the Principles Involved.

We are well aware that a heavy burden rests upon the appellants to reverse the concurrent findings of fact of two courts, but appellants have the right to invoke the consideration of this question of fact by this court. The rules governing this court on the consideration of such cases are that the burden is upon the appellant to convince the court that clear and manifest error has occurred.

In a case where the procedure was not unlike the instant one, where the United States brought a bill alleging that a patent was fraudulently procured and sought a cancellation thereof, and on a hearing the trial court found the charges were true, and the Circuit Court of Appeals took a like view of the evidence and affirmed the decree, this court said:

> "The rule is well settled that findings of fact concurred in by two lower courts will not be disturbed by this court, unless shown to be clearly erroneous." (Citing many decisions of this court.)
>
> —Washington Security Co. v. United States, 234 U. S. 76.

Another case in equity brought by the United States to cancel a patent was Gilson v. United States, 234 U. S. 380. The Circuit Court made a finding which was concurred in by the Circuit Court of Appeals and this court stated:

> "Which according to the settled rule will not be disturbed by this court, unless clearly shown to be erroneous." (Citing many decisions.)

In Baker v. Schofield, 243 U. S. 114, this court said:

> "Our consideration of the evidence must be governed by the well settled rule in this court, that when two courts have reached the same conclusions on a question of fact, their findings will not be disturbed, unless it is clear that their conclusion was erroneous." (Citing many cases.)

Page v. Rogers, 211 U. S. 575, is another case in equity where there was a finding of fact by two lower courts and this court said:

> "But the rule is well established that where two courts have concurred in a finding of fact in a suit in equity, this court will accept those findings, unless clear error is shown."

These cases which lay down the rule when concurrent findings will not be reversed conversely state that they will be reversed—where shown to be "clearly erroneous," or where "it is clear their conclusion is erroneous."

We contend there is no substantial evidence whatever that the name Thomas Atkins on the 1895 Tribal Rolls stood for a son of Minnie and that all the evidence tending to prove that fact is demonstrated to be against physical facts and established facts proved by documentary evidence, so that such finding is not only clear error, but wholly without substantial basis.

On the even more vital question of the identity of the person enrolled by the Dawes Commission on May 23, 1901, we contend that there is not even a scintilla that the information conveyed to it related to this supposititious son of Minnie born in Leavenworth, Kansas, June, 1885, and that the finding of the lower court was based on the mistaken theory that the name on the Tribal Roll of Thomas, son of Minnie, effectuated an enrollment of him by the Dawes Commission.

Returning to the question of fact as to the name on the Tribal Roll of 1895:

Our contention is that oral evidence demonstrated to be false or contrary to physical facts is not substantial evidence upon which even a verdict of a jury may rest. At the "Turf Exchange" in Hot Springs, Arkansas, there was an explosion in which many people who were there "playing the races" were killed.

Many damage suits resulted against the Waters Pierce Oil Company, which furnished gasoline to the place and it was alleged that negligence in its delivery occasioned the explosion.

One of these cases went to the Circuit Court of Appeals of the Eighth Circuit and the others went to the Supreme Court of Arkansas. A negro porter named Arthur Harris played the part in those cases which Sam W. Brown and his memoranda book played in this case. If the evidence of Arthur Harris was credited (and it was by a jury in the state court and a jury in the federal court), a case of negligence was made out against the oil company. In this case, if the story of Minnie that she told her uncle John Davis of her son Thomas, and that John Davis listed his name on the strength of her statement to Sam Brown, who was obtaining names of this family for the purpose of being put on the 1895 Creek Tribal Roll, then there would be some evidence that the name of Thomas Atkins on the 1895 Tribal Roll represented Thomas as the son of Minnie.

Notwithstanding that Minnie made many statements and testified frequently, as hereinafter reviewed, absolutely contradicting this story, yet a court might hold it was sufficient to sustain a finding of a jury placed upon it, but when the material part of that story—the connecting link—that John Davis gave the names to Sam Brown in March, 1895, at

Muskogee, and that Sam Brown made a memoranda of it and that memoranda became the basis of listing those names upon the Tribal Roll, is proved to be against the established facts, then such evidence is not substantial evidence which would sustain even a verdict of a jury.

This memoranda book which is Govt. Ex. 32 (Rec., p. 4707), recites it was made in 1895 at Muskogee, and the list was given by John Davis, and the documentary evidence shows that John Davis was at that time and had been for four years theretofore, and was for nearly a year thereafter, in the penitentiary at Detroit, Michigan (Rec., pp. 4986-4990). It cannot be said that this is substantial evidence of the connecting link. Moreover, even aside from this destruction of this story, the King's Roll of the Euchees of 1895 shows from its composition itself that it was not based upon Sam Brown's memoranda, and gives inherent evidence of the falsity of this testimony, which subject is fully discussed in the chapter on the 1895 Roll.

Therefore a much stronger case is made out here than there was in the Hot Springs case that the material evidence was against the established facts. In that case many facts were proved to the satisfaction of the court convincing it that the story of Arthur Harris was against the physical facts and established facts, and his testimony was held not sufficient evidence to sustain a verdict, although it had been credited by the jury.

In the Supreme Court of Arkansas one of the judges was disqualified and a distinguished lawyer of that state, a practitioner for many years in this court, the Honorable JOSEPH W. HOUSE, was appointed special judge, and he wrote a most convincing opinion on the subject of the duty of appellate courts to reverse judgments rendered—on verdicts sustained by evidence demonstrated to be false or demonstrated to be contrary to the physical facts or the established facts.

—Waters Pierce Oil Co. v. Knisel, 79 Ark. 604.

The case in the federal court was determined before Circuit Judges SANBORN and VANDEVANTER, and District Judge PHILLIPS, and the opinion written by Judge PHILLIPS. It was one of the able opinions of that strong jurist, concurred in by the two distinguished circuit judges, refusing to accept evidence of a witness when it was contrary to the facts established to the satisfaction of the court.

—Waters Pierce Oil Co. v. Van Elderen, 137 Fed. Rep. 558.

Certainly no stronger rule can be invoked in this case to sustain the finding of Judge CAMPBELL (adopted without discussion by the Circuit Court of Appeals), than if that finding had been made by a jury. The only allegation which was made by Minnie in her pleadings, and the only evidence which she offered whatsoever in this record seeking to establish that the name of Thomas as a son of hers went upon the Tribal Rolls of 1895, was through her testimony stating that she had told her uncle, John Davis, of his existence, and that of Sam W. Brown testifying that he obtained this name with others from John Davis on a cold day at Muskogee, in the winter of 1895, and wrote it down at that time in his memoranda book; page 76, which constitutes Govt. Ex. 32 here. This memoranda book purports to show it was at Muskogee and in March that a list was given by John Davis of this Atkins family, including Thomas, and when that is demonstrated to be false, certainly Judge CAMPBELL's finding, based upon it, cannot be sustained as based upon substantial evidence; it must necessarily be reversed as clearly and manifestly an error.

If there was any other possible source of information to the tribal authorities than the John Davis-Sam Brown route, this might not be so clear, but when Minnie so often testifies that John Davis and Lee Atkins were the only relatives she told of the existence of her son Thomas, and Lee was proved to have died six months before Sam Brown claims to have obtained the information of this family which he was seeking, and which it was his duty to obtain, the error of it is patent.

The Pay Roll (Govt. Ex. A-2) shows that on September 24, 1895, six months after he claimed to have gotten these names at Muskogee, Sam Brown drew the money due John Davis, and in red ink opposite John Davis' name is written "Detroit," followed by the amount, $14.40, followed by Brown's signature receipting for it; thereby showing that Brown took advantage of Davis' absence to get his money as his town king and relative, and showing that he must have known of Davis' incarceration at Detroit, thereby establishing full knowledge on his part of the falsity of his testimony that on a cold day in the winter of 1895, at Muskogee, Davis gave him this list.

The Contentions of the Appellants.

It is not without an appreciation of the difficulty, especially upon such an extremely voluminous record, that we undertake to show to the court that the finding of fact by the District Court, adopted without discussion by the Circuit Court of Appeals, was clearly and manifestly erroneous. Through it a grievous wrong has been done, and property which the record shows is worth several millions of dollars has been delivered to parties whose possession was obtained surreptitiously, in the night time, through force, by breaking into the possession of the property in controversy. The only testimony of the source of their title, that is, considering the tribal enrollment as the primary source of the title, was established by evidence proved to be purjury; and, moreover, the claims of these parties as heir, and lessees of the heir of Thomas Atkins, as a son of Minnie Atkins, to this allotment as made to him as a son of Minnie Atkins by the Dawes Commission, is demonstrably an impossibility. To put these general statements concretely, we will state them thus:

(a). Betty Mann, a woman crook, whose figures conspicuously in this record, in company with another unsavory character, Micco Harjo (at one time the guardian of Nancy Atkins) obtained a quitclaim deed from some one pretending to be named Minnie Atkins, to H. U. Bartlett to the land in controversy. It is dated the 2nd of October, 1912, and was executed in Douglas County, Kansas (Rec., p. 4731). In the trial of this case it was admitted by both the Government and the Page interests that this deed was a forgery (Rec., p. 322). It was also so alleged by Nancy in her suit against Bartlett and the Gypsy Oil Company in the Creek District Court, and so found by that court. It must be taken as established.

On the 29th of November, 1912, Bartlett executed an oil and gas lease to the Gypsy Oil Company (Rec., pp. 4732-4736).

On the 25th of January, 1913, Thomas W. Green, went on said property, then vacant and unoccupied, under an agricultural lease from Bartlett. Up to that time it had never been improved, tilled or occupied by anyone for agricultural purposes, and had never been developed for oil or gas. Bartlett had a house built upon it in which Green resided, and Green fenced it in the spring of 1913, and broke up the land for tillage, and he lived upon it and farmed it in the years 1913 and 1914, as the tenant of Bartlett. The Gypsy Oil Company started a well thereon on December 25, 1913, and brought it in January 23, 1914, as a 55-barrel well, which in July, 1914, was producing 25 barrels per day. This well was in the Wheeler sand, the Bartlesville sand (the sand of the Cushing Pool) had not, up to this time, been discovered as being upon this property (Rec., pp. 313-325). This well was being operated in July, 1914, in charge of the Gypsy Oil Company, and there was situated upon the land also two 250-barrel tanks to receive the oil being produced. Kinney, an employee of Page, under Page's order, knowing that the Gypsy Oil Company had this well and was producing oil therefrom, and had these tanks thereon, and was in possession of the property, moved a rig of Page's onto the property. He did not consult anyone, merely obeyed Page's orders in doing so (Rec., p. 4161). Green testified (this testimony is undisputed and unexplained), that during the night time of July 4, 1914, when this land was under fence and in his possession and control, as heretofore stated, someone cut the fences and, by daylight of Sunday morning of July 5th, had placed rig timbers on the ground (Rec., pp. 313-326). And within two days were erecting a rig thereon. Two days thereafter, on July 7, 1914, Page and Josey, claiming as lessees under Minnie Atkins, filed a suit against Nancy Atkins, H. U. Bartlett, Gypsy Oil Company and others, and alleged that they "are in peaceful possession under said lease and that Bartlett and Gypsy Oil Company are threatening to dispossess them." (Rec., pp. 4775-4779). The statement that Bartlett and Gypsy Oil Company were threatening to dispossess them was equally as false as the peaceful possession allegations, because they did not learn of the trespass until either the 7th or 8th (Rec., p. 321). Whereas, Page swore to this complaint on the 6th (Rec., p. 4779), which was on Monday following the forcible entry on the place before daylight Sunday morning. Therefore it is apparent that Page's possession of the property began in force and fraud. On the other hand, Nancy Atkins was proceeding through the process of the court to obtain possession of this property. The record of her suit against Bartlett and the Gypsy Oil Company is set forth in this record at pages 93 and 97. It is found, therefrom, that on the 27th of February, 1914, after full hearing the court found that Nancy was the sole heir of Thomas Atkins and the owner of the property in controversy, and that Bartlett and the Gypsy Oil Company were in un*law*ful possession thereof. The case was then continued as to claims of certain other defendants. On the 24th of March came on to be heard the claims of these other defendants and also motions and supplementary motions of Bartlett and the Gypsy Oil Company for a new trial. These matters were then after hearing taken under advisement. This was the status of the case when Hanford, the attorney for Minnie, and Long, the representative and agent of Page in procuring this lease, investigated the entire proceedings of this case and Hanford talked with the judge about it and claims the judge promised him not to enter final decree in it until Minnie could be heard therein, but he says that he thinks it was the next day that the final decree was entered (Rec., p. 3699). And this final decree is shown to have been entered (Rec., p. 95) on the 20th of June, 1914, when the court overruled the motions for new trial of Bartlett and the Gypsy Oil Company, and decided the issues of the other defendants against them, and entered final judgment decreeing that Nancy Atkins was the mother of the enrolled Thomas Atkins, was owner of this property and quieted her title thereto against all of these parties. With full knowledge of all these facts, Hanford wired McNab, Minnie's trustee, then in Seattle, Washington, to execute the lease to Page, which had been drawn before he and Long left Seattle, and which was changed in some particulars by wire thereafter (Rec., pp. 3700 and 3571). McNab promptly responded and, as Minnie's trustee, executed the lease which is the basis of Page's claim herein, on June 24, 1914, in Seattle, Washington, and it was recorded in Oklahoma on the 29th of June, 1914 (Rec., pp. 4738 and 4742). The terms agreed upon were a bonus of $10,000.00 and one-eighth of the production (Rec., p. 3698). Hanford asked for this sum in two checks of $5000.00 each. He wanted one for Minnie and the other for the expenses of the litigation to get possession of the property, including his fees (Rec., pp. 3700-3701). When the two checks were made out, Hanford discovered that one was payable then and the other not payable until July 30th (Rec., p. 3701). A disagreement arose over this, and finally Page and Josey told him the trouble was that they were not satisfied with the identity of Minnie, and Page and Josey wanted Long to go back to Seattle with him and question Minnie further. Finally an agreement was made that he would take this deferred check to McNab, and, if he did not approve that arrangement, Page would pay the other $5000.00 on demand (Rec., p. 3702). While the lease was recorded June 29th and the checks so dated, this disagreement prevented the consummation until July 3rd, because the $5000.00 check was not presented and cashed until that day. (Rec., p. 4950). Long and Hanford left Tulsa for Seattle to get more facts from Minnie (Rec., p. 3577). Long says the purpose of this trip was to go over thoroughly and painstakingly with Minnie her history and further proof of her identity. Mr. Josey was skeptical and was not convinced that she was Minnie Atkins, and wanted more identification (Rec., p. 3577). This was the state of the situation on July 3, when this check was cashed for one-half of the bonus, and Long and Hanford went back to Seattle to satisfy Page and Josey that they had a lease from the right party. But, without waiting to be convinced, they take forcible possession of this property on the night of July 4th, as heretofore stated; and then claim that they are in peaceful possession and seek injunctive relief to protect their trespass against interference from those in possession and against the woman who had established her rights to it in court and not by force in the night time.

(b). The Government alleged in its Bill the name of Thomas Atkins was placed upon the Creek Tribal Roll of 1895 by Sam W. Brown, acting upon information of John Davis, a relative of Minnie Atkins, and in the answer of Minnie Atkins she alleges that the name was placed upon the Tribal Roll through John Davis, acting for her. The Government claims that this was a fraud, in that there was no such person as Thomas Atkins. Minnie claimed it was the truth and that her uncle, John Davis was acting for her in causing Thomas Atkins to be enrolled in the tribe to which he belonged. As will be shown in an analysis of the testimony hereafter made, Minnie Atkins has testified several times that she told her brother, Lee Atkins, and her uncle, John Davis, of the existence of her son Thomas, and that she did not tell her sister Kate Holden nor her sister Nancy nor anyone else in the Indian Territory of the existence of this child. The undisputed evidence is that her brother, Lee Atkins, was killed at Checotah in November, 1894, and therefore he is excluded as a source of information to Sam Brown or any other officers of the Creek Nation, of the existence of this son, as this Roll was not made up until the spring of 1895. Sam W. Brown, then the Town King of Euchee Town, testified that on a cold day of the winter of 1895, at Muskogee, he met John Davis and asked him for the names of this Atkins family, and that John Davis gave him a list of them and that Thomas was included thereon. Brown testified that he entered this list on a memoranda book, which he produced in court, and which is Government Exhibit A 32, found at page 4707. This memoranda begins with the name Ed Schremcher, who was a cousin of Minnie and Nancy Atkins. It is followed by the names of Minnie, Charlie, Susan, Thomas, Mary and Nancy Atkins. Opposite thereto, in the handwriting of Sam Brown is this:

"The list given by John Davis."

Samuel Brown testified that he gave this list of members of the Atkins family to the authorities making up the Creek Roll of 1895; that it was his duty to furnish these names to those authorities and that he did so and that while he knew the adult members of the Atkins family, he did not know the children, and he presented this list as the names of all the living members of the Atkins family (Rec., pp. 214-232). After this case was closed, the District Court permitted it to be reopened for the purpose of receiving evidence that this John Davis, the uncle of Minnie and Nancy, was confined in the Federal penitentiary at Detroit, Michigan, from December 26, 1891, to February 4, 1896, and that he served that full time there at Detroit and was not released therefrom on parole (Rec., pp. 4988-4989). This record evidence is corroborated, if corroboration were needed, by the notation made in red ink upon the 1895 Pay Roll, found in this record following pages 4652, opposite the name of John Davis, the word "Detroit;" John Davis' name appearing on said Pay Roll immediately following that of Nancy Atkins. It is also a significant fact that Samuel W.

Brown receipted for $14.40 due him in that payment (Gov't Ex. A-2). Therefore, this record evidence completely destroys the testimony of Sam Brown and of his memorandum book, that he obtained the name of Thomas Atkins with other members of the Atkins family from John Davis on that cold day of the winter of 1895, at Muskogee, and this is the only connecting link between the supposititious son of Minnie Atkins, Thomas, and the Creek Pay Roll of 1895. This indisputable evidence destroys the whole force of the claim of Minnie Atkins that, through her uncle, John Davis, then the only living depository in the Indian Territory of the fact that she had a son named Thomas, the name of Thomas was placed on the Roll. Therefore, the Thomas Atkins, appearing upon that Tribal Roll must be accounted for in some other way than in the way Minnie Atkins and those claiming under her have accounted for it in this record. On the other hand, is the direct and positive testimony of Ellis Childers. Childers was in 1895 Speaker of the Creek House of Warriors, one of their legislative bodies. He testified that he was called from the House into the Committee Room when the Census Committee was preparing the Roll, by Sam W. Brown, who asked him to aid in identifying three Euchee families. Childers was connected by marriage with the Atkins family and had been a schoolmate of Minnie at Carlisle. He went over the list with the Committee in the presence of Brown and identified two children as the sons of Minnie and stated that Minnie only had two children. They were Charlie and Harvey Harrison. He identified the Thomas on the Roll as the son of Nancy, whom he had known since his birth. Elsewhere in his testimony Childers tells of learning of the birth of a child to Nancy at Wagoner in the fall of 1890, and of subscription being taken to relieve her necessities and of seeing that child about three weeks afterwards and seeing it numerous times for the next four or five years

Samuel Brown testified again in this case, at the instance of Page, after Childers had testified, and did not deny these statements. The Rolls of the Euchee band of 1895 (and there are three of them, which we will hereafter set out and analyze) demonstrate that these Rolls recognized Minnie Atkins as a member of the tribe, and that she had two children. The fact that she had children was evidently unknown when her name was written thereon. Later the words "and 2 children," names of Charlie and Susie were added, and later still, the name of Mary was turned into Harvey, through a red ink change. The notations made upon this Roll by the Dawes Commission, show that this Charlie and Harvey were duly enrolled by the Dawes Commission; and the Rolls further show that Minnie's name was carried forward on a card, and, on investigation, her citizenship was rejected on the ground of nonresidence. Therefore, it is plain that the Rolls establish record evidence that the Creek Nation recognized that Minnie Atkins was, in 1895, a member of the Euchee tribe, and that she had two children; and they further inferentially but irresistibly lead to the conclusion that those two children were Charlie and Harvey, who were duly enrolled.

Therefore, these Rolls prove that the Thomas thereon was not there in right of Minnie, but his name was there contemporaneously with her name and subsequently there was added opposite her name "and two children," and the names of these two children were added to the Roll and, in consequence thereof, properly reached enrollment by the Dawes Commission, as they had in the meantime begun enrollments of the Creek Nation. The identity of Thomas Atkins upon the Tribal Roll depends upon oral testimony as to his identity or circumstantial evidence of it, as the Rolls themselves do not supply it; and it is established by the oral testimony of Ellis Childers, and his testimony on this point is not denied by the numerous persons that he named as present at the time that he caused this name to be placed upon the Tribal Roll as a son of Nancy Atkins, although Childers' testimony is weakened by a discreditable transaction participated in by him and the attorney of the Creek Nation, to which attention will be called in its appropriate place. It is also established circumstantially, but no less certainly, that it was the resident son of Nancy and not the non-resident son of Minnie whom the Tribe recognized as Thomas Atkins.

(c). The undisputed evidence shows that the Thomas Atkins enrolled by the Commission on May 23, 1901, was thought by the enrolling officers of the Commission to be the Thomas Atkins opposite No. 213 on the Euchee Roll of 1895, and the evidence establishes undisputedly that it was an impossibility that the Dawes Commission, or rather their enrollment officers, intended to enroll the supposititious son of Minnie Atkins, the evidence of whose existence was credited by the trial court, as having been born at Leavenworth, Kansas, about June 1, 1885, and who lived his life, if he ever had a life, without the boundaries of the Indian Territory. The undisputed evidence is that John Davis and Lee Atkins, the alleged sole confidants of Minnie in the Indian Territory that she had a son named Thomas, were both dead long before this enrollment.

The record evidence shows that Minnie's two sons, Charlie and Harvey, had, prior to this date, to-wit: on February 19, 1900, been enrolled, and on the census card issued to them, they are described as sons of Minnie Harris, who appeared on the Euchee Roll of 1890 as Mamie Atkins, and this card then stated that she was living in Michigan in 1900 (Gov't Ex. A-33, preceeding Rec., p. 4707). This card described Minnie's undisputed children as quarter-bloods and their father as a non-citizen. There are two census cards of Minnie: one called the old Creek card, made out in 1897 for Minnie and her two sons. This is Government's Exhibit A-31, following page 4706, and lists Minnie Harris, nee Atkins, as a half-blood. The other is her uncompleted card which was finally rejected on account of her non-residence, which is Government's Exhibit A-38, following page 4712, and also shows her to be a half-blood.

The census card of Thomas Atkins, the enrolled person now in question, which is Government's Exhibit A-1, Rec., p. 4652, recites that his father is a white man and his mother is Minnie Atkins, and puts him down as a half-blood, thereby assuming, necessarily, that Minnie Atkins was a full-blood.

Therefore, the records of the Dawes Commission show that, so far as its information went, Minnie was a half-blood. (When we come to analyze the testimony, it will be seen that she so regarded herself and was universally so regarded by her friends and acquaintances.) Therefore the record shows that when the Dawes Commission was enrolling her undisputed children, who had a white father, they properly enrolled them as quarter-bloods; and it seems impossible that when they enrolled another child of hers, also by a white father, that they would enroll him a half-blood. Hence the conclusion is irresistible that the enrollment officers did not intend, in describing the mother of Thomas Atkins to be describing the same woman whom they described as Minnie Harris, nee Atkins, the mother of Charlie and Harvey Harrison. On the other hand, while the testimony indicates that Minnie and Nancy were full sisters, yet they regarded their own blood differently. Thus the census card of Nancy (Government's Exhibit A-44, Rec., p. 4718) describes her as a full-blood.

The undisputed testimony shows that on May 23, 1901, the enrollment officers of the Dawes Commission were at Okmulgee, where the Creek Council was in session, and that they were then diligently seeking to obtain information of all persons who were upon the Tribal Rolls, who had not at that time been enrolled by the Dawes Commission, or their claims positively rejected. These were called "unaccounted for names." The Commission sent for the Town King of each of the forty-seven towns of the Nation, and other prominent and reliable Creeks to give them information. The Town Kings were called before the enrollment officers, and the Rolls of their respective bands were gone over with each King, seeking information of the unaccounted for names. On the Euchee Roll in the Atkins family all had been accounted for except Minnie and Thomas. As seen from Minnie's uncompleted card, her case was under consideration, and they were seeking information as to her whereabounts. Later she was rejected as a non-resident. Thomas was unaccounted for; all the other members of the family were enrolled.

Noah Gregory was then King of the Euchees, and Sam W. Brown was formerly King of the Euchees; and these two men were called before the enrollment officers to give information of the unaccounted for names in the band of Euchees.

Sam Brown was a relative and well acquainted with the adult members of the Atkins family but not with the children. As heretofore stated, Ellis Childers testified that Sam Brown called him before the committee of the tribe in 1895 to verify the names of the Atkins family, and, in Brown's presence, he had Charlie and Harvey identified as Minnie's only children, and Thomas as Nancy's; and Brown went upon the witness stand thereafter, and did not deny the statement.

Therefore, at that time he had had information that Thomas Atkins was Nancy's son.

Noah Gregory testified that he did not personally know Minnie, but had made many inquiries of her and had learned she was a non-resident. He testified that he had known Lee Atkins in his lifetime, and knew Nancy Atkins. He was a neighbor and friend of Colonel and Mrs. Robinson, who had raised Nancy. He tells of making a trip with Thos. E. Holden, who then had Minnie's two children, and Holden told him he wanted to select land for them, but had not done so yet. Evidently this was about the time that Holden was getting the power of attorney from Minnie to select and file for her and her two children, dated April 2, 1900 (Rec., p. 4716). Holden was a neighbor and friend of Thos. J. Way. Mr. Way testified that in 1899 Thos. Holden went to Wagoner and got Thomas, the son of Nancy, brought him to his house and kept him there for some time, and tried to persuade Nancy to leave him there for him and Mrs. Holden to care for him.

He testified that Nancy visited him there, and finally came and took him away from Holden's house.

Mr. Way also testified about Charlie and Harvey Harrison living with Holden, and his intimate acquaintance with these boys; and he gives a definite description of all three of them.

Therefore, it is inconceivable that Mr. Holden, in an intimate conversation with Noah Gregory did not tell him of Thomas Atkins, Nancy's son, as well as tell him about Charlie and Harvey Harrison, Minnie's sons.

As stated, Mr. Gregory was a friend and neighbor of the Robinsons. These were the people who raised Nancy. She left their home when she found herself in a pregnant condition, in 1890. She has testified that when one of the field parties was at Coweta (this was evidently when the field parties were out in 1897) that her uncle, Col. Robinson, and his son came to see her at Wagoner and had a talk with her about enrolling her and her son, and promised to do so. Therefore we have knowledge to the Robinsons as late as the fall of 1897 that Nancy's boy was still living.

While Mr. Gregory, after this lapse of years, cannot recollect what information he gave Mr. Hopkins, the chief of the enrollment officers in regard to the unaccounted for names, he does recall that he discussed with him Minnie and he told Mr. Hopkins that Minnie was a non-resident and that they had been unable to locate her.

Unquestionably from this recent talk with Mr. Holden, who at one time had possession of Nancy's son Thomas, and his relations with the Robinsons, he knew of Thomas Atkins, the son of Nancy; and that he imparted this information to Mr. Hopkins, cannot be doubted for a moment, as it was his duty to do it. As he has stated, he gave him all the information which he possessed at that time. After the lapse of 18 years, it could not be expected that an honest man would remember all of these details. That Mr. Gregory was intimately connected with the enrollment of Thomas Atkins is also indicated by another record in the files of the Dawes Commission. On May 9, 1905, the Commissioner in charge wrote a letter to Noah Gregory stating the Commission had recent information that Thomas Atkins was dead, and that if this was true, that the lands and moneys belonging to the deceased citizen would descend to his heirs, and they enclosed a form of affidavit to be filled out and properly executed by someone, a near-relative preferred, who knew of the date of Thomas Atkins' death, and asked that he obtain it, and return the affidavit to the Commission (Rec., p. 4663).

Undoubtedly this letter was prompted either from memoranda then existing as to Noah Gregory's connection with the enrollment of Thomas Atkins or the memory of the enrollment officers that Mr. Gregory was a proper source of information relating to Thomas Atkins. Moreover, there is another potent fact on the census card of Thomas Atkins, indicating that Sam Brown and Noah Gregory gave the information upon which the enrollment was had.

and that is that his post office address is given as Muskogee. As a matter of fact, this was a mistake, as the evidence shows that the child lived all of his life at Wagoner, except the year he spent at Tom Holden's and the half-year he spent on the Verdigris with Betsy Birney. But Mr. Gregory has testified that when he first knew Nancy she lived in Eufaula, and he afterwards knew her as living at Muskogee.

Sam Brown testified that he knew her sometimes at Wagoner and sometimes at Muskogee. Therefore, it is the natural conclusion that these two Euchee officials, having Nancy associated in their minds with Muskogee, gave that as the postoffice address of her son when they caused him to be enrolled.

The Dawes Commission made inquiry always as to whether the person where enrollment was sought was living in the Creek Nation on April 1, 1899. No person who had died before that date, or non-resident of that date, could be enrolled. They also secured information as to the age, sex, and quantum of blood and parentage, outside of the information given by the Tribal Rolls.

The contention of the Minnie and Page interests is that her son was born of a white father in June, 1885, at Leavenworth, Kansas, and lived there until his death in 1899.

Therefore to sustain that he was the enrolled person, convicts the Dawes Commission of violating the primary duty to only enroll residents. If his mother had been a resident her status might have drawn his citizenship, but she was confessedly a non-resident after 1896, and her claim was rejected on that account. She appears as a half-blood, and her son of a white father would be enrolled as a quarter-blood. This enrolled person is a half-blood, and Nancy appears on the records as a full-blood and her son would properly be enrolled as a half-blood, as Thomas Atkins was enrolled. Minnie's son was 16 years, whereas the person enrolled was 10. Nancy's son was born the last of September, 1890, and was 10 years and 8 months as the date of this enrollment.

Nancy always went under the name of Atkins, while Minnie, in all the numerous records before the Dawes Commission, appears as Minnie Harris or Minnie Harrison; she is so recorded on her old Creek card, on her rejected card and on her sons', Charlie and Harvey's card, and on her power of attorney to Holden to select lands for Charlie and Harvey.

Had the Dawes Commission intended to describe her as the mother, she would have been Minnie Harris, as upon the other cards—not Atkins. This card has but two mistakes upon it: the first name of the mother, Minnie, instead of Nancy, and the post-office. If Minnie's son had been intended, it would have been Leavenworth, Kansas; for Nancy's son it should have been Wagoner; but as Gregory and Brown associated her with Muskogee, it is an explainable error if Nancy's son was intended. If Minnie's son was intended to be enrolled, the card is mistaken as to his age, his blood, the last name of his mother and his postoffice, as well as the fundamental mistake of enrolling a non-resident son of a non-citizen father and non-resident mother.

We have, as briefly as the volumious record will permit, outlined in general the contentions of the appellants, Nancy Atkins and her lessees, and purpose to develop fully the facts sustaining the general statements we have made in paragraphs B and C. We have given the substance of all of the evidence with the appropriate page references for all of the statements made under paragraph A. Before proceeding to take up an analysis of the testimony to support our contentions, we think it would be helpful to the court and illuminating in considering the evidence, to consider the procedure before the Dawes Commission, resulting in the enrollment here in question.

Procedure of the Dawes Commission.

The work of the Dawes Commission culminated in a Roll of citizens by blood of the Creek Nation. This Roll, after being approved by the Commission, was sent to the Secretary of the Interior for final confirmation, and his approval of it fixed the status of the members. The Commission would, from time to time, send forward so much of the roll as was completed for approval. So much of it as pertains to the Thomas Atkins enrollment is found in Government Exhibit A-3, pages 4652-4653.

The roll, so far as this case is concerned, reads as follows:

> Number, 7913; Name, Atkins, Thomas; Age, 10; Roll, 1895; Sex, M.; Blood, ½; Card, 2707. (Rec., p. 4654.)

The Commission was also authorized to make a census of the tribe and performed that function, while preparing the Roll, a card being made out which was called a census card, which contained descriptive matter of the person. The census card in this case is Government's Exhibit A-1, found opposite page 4652. Notations on that card which were recently made after this litigation began, appear in the photographic copy.

We insert herewith a copy of the card as it originally appeared before these later notations were made upon it, and even it contains a stamped statement that was not there as originally made. Mr. Shanafelt, in whose custody the card was, and who produced it into evidence, testified (Rec., p. 153) that the stamped statement: "Date of application for enrollment," was put on the card about three years ago, over the date which therein appears to be written, May 23, 1901.

There were 47 distinct bands composing the Creek Nation. They were called "Towns." Two of them were negro towns, composed of freedmen, and the others of subdivisions of the Tribe, recognized as such, some of which had a distinct language, such as the Euchees. The legislative department of the Creek Nation, The Creek Council, was composed of two houses, the House of Kings, and the House of Warriors, respectively, similar to the Senate and House of Representatives of other legislative bodies. Each of these bands was represented in the House of Kings by a member, called "Town King," and each band was represented by two or more members of the House of Warriors. From time to time the Creek Nation made up Rolls of its membership. They were made by compilation of the Rolls of these bands, and all of those together, constituted the Roll of the Creek Nation.

Mr. Hopkins, the Chief Clerk of the Dawes Commission, has explained very intelligently and fully the work of the Commission in undertaking to prepare the Creek Rolls and to make a census of the Creek Tribe.

The Creek people, led by Chief Isparhecher, were opposed to the allotment of the lands in severalty and naturally did not facilitate the work of the Dawes Commission, whose duty it was to make a Roll of the Tribe and a census of the people. In the fall and early winter of 1897, the Commission undertook to make a census and made appointments at different places in the Nation, and advertised that they would be there for the purpose of taking the census, expecting the people to come in and make application for enrollment, but only a small portion of them did, and they found that the information that they obtained from the relatives and officials of the Tribe was incomplete and unsatisfactory, and the enrollment was discontinued about Christmas, 1897, until such time as they could procure the Rolls of the Creek Nation. In the latter part of 1898, or early in 1899, the Commission was enabled to obtain the Rolls of the Creek Nation, and then began making the census and Rolls (Rec., pp. 182-187).

When the Commission had out its field parties in 1897, they made out census cards, which were called in this record, "Old Creek" cards. The information was less than that called for in the later form of the card, but they were retained and much used for information afterwards. The Government's Exhibit A-31 is one of these. This is the old Creek card of Charlie and Harvey Harris and Minnie Harris, nee Atkins.

The Dawes Commission opened a Land Office at Muskogee on the 1st of April, 1899, and, at its office there, conducted the work of enrollment and of makin the census. The practice was to take applications for adults and for their minor children or children in their care, and the application was not considered for an adult unless it was personally made, or reasons given such as sickness, old age and blindness, preventing personal appearance of the applicant. There were numerous Creeks who went under the name of "Snakes," who were opposed to the allotment and would have nothing to do with the census or with being enrolled. Their attitude and the general difficulty of obtaining accurate information from the people, rendered the work slow and difficult. This condition continued until the spring of 1901. After they obtained the Rolls, their effort was to enroll for allotment all names appearing thereon, who would otherwise be entitled to enrollment. They did not enroll anyone simply because his name was on the Tribal Roll, but they accepted the Tribal Roll as a recognition of citizenship by the Tribe.

In addition to that they would have to have information that the party was living up to the 1st of April, 1899, and a resident of the Creek Nation, and had not, for any other reason, forfeited or lost his right to enrollment. They could not make, from the Tribal Roll, such a Roll as the law directed them to make and only used the Tribal Roll as a recognition of citizenship in the Tribe.

In March the Commission prepared a list of those who were upon the Tribal Rolls and were, up to that time, unaccounted for; that is, had not been ascertained to be dead or enrolled or finally rejected. They sent to each Town King and to many of the Town Warriors the list of unaccounted for names belonging to his town, and asked them to give information in regard thereto. The Creek Council met at Okmulgee in the Capitol there on the 3rd or 4th of May, 1901, for the purpose of considering and ratifying the treaty, which it was thought would carry with it an approval of the Roll then in process of making by the Dawes Commission.

In order to facilitate its work, the Dawes Commission, or rather Commissioner Bixby, in charge of a clerical force, opened an office in the Capitol at Okmulgee on May 6th, for the purpose of completing the rolls and being on the ground where they could be in touch with the members of the House of Kings and House of Warriors, and other officers of the Creek Nation and obtain as much information as possible concerning the Creeks entitled to enrollment. Mr. Hopkins went there as the Chief Clerk in charge of the work under Commissioner Bixby. With him were Mr. Merrick and Mr. Hastain, who did most of the enrollment work. Mr. Leiber also did some of it, and at times they were assisted by Mr. Beall and Mr. Beavers, who wrote some of the cards. Mr. Bixby, Mr. Hopkins, Mr. Merrick and Mr. Hastain have all testified fully as to this procedure.

The treaty was ratified on the 25th of May. The work of enrollment was then supposed to be completed. There were 2500 Creeks enrolled during that month. During the last three days there were four or five hundred enrolled each day, so Mr. Merrick testified (Rec., p. 3456).

After the Commission opened its office at Okmulgee, it changed its practice of requiring personal applications. In addition to getting what information they could, they sent out teams and wagons to bring in people who were unable to come, or who had no other means of transportation. The United States Marshal also assisted in bringing them in. While this was going on, they were also receiving personal applications, as well as applications through officials of the tribe. The procedure would be about as follows: A Town King or other tribal officer would come in and sit down with the enrollment clerk. They would take the Roll of his particular town and follow down the names there and where there was no notation on the roll that the party had applied for enrollment or been enlisted for enrollment, the inquiry would be made as to who this party was and who knew him, whether he was living, whether he was in the country, and what had become of him. If there was no information that the party was dead, or had left the country, the name would be entered on a card with additional information as could be obtained at that time. In many instances friends and relatives would be sent for to complete the information (Rec., pp. 186-195). To facilitate this work at Okmulgee the clerical force took the Tribal Rolls and wrote down on a separate card each name which had not been disposed of. These cards contained the tribal enrollment and number on the particular town roll of the tribe (Rec., pp. 3458-3459 and Rec., pp. 239-243).

There is a difference in recollection between Mr. Hopkins and Mr. Merrick as to whether the cards on which these names were written were in the form of the census card. Mr. Merrick says they were, and contained the name and number of the unaccounted for person and his tribal enrollment and this would be completed upon obtaining full information regarding it, or left blank, if no information was obtained, and notations made as to rejection, where the evidence called for that course (Rec., pp. 3459, 3463, 3464). Mr. Hopkins stated that a census card was not started even on personal application until the person was found on the Tribal Roll and identified by some Creek official as the person described on that card. This is immaterial as to the issues here, because Mr. Merrick, who wrote this card, testifies that, from its appearance, it was completed at one writing (Rec., p. 3454). All data relating to a person was kept together until final consideration and there was much difficulty in getting the names of parents. This was due in some cases to illegitimacy and other cases to insufficient knowledge or memory of the party giving the information (Rec., pp. 202-206). These old Creek cards were referred to for information but not used as a basis for final enrollment. Two boxes of them were carried to Okmulgee to facilitate the work there (Rec., pp. 3459-3476). In all of these proceedings and at the final session at Okmulgee, the Creek Nation was represented by Mr. McKellop, its attorney, and a Committee from the Council delegated to see that only persons entitled to enrollment were enrolled, and to aid the Commission in making a complete Roll (Mr. Bixby, Rec., pp. 4645-4646). Most of the information given to the Commission during May was in the form of verbal statements to the enrollment officers by the Creek Kings, Warriors and officers, and reliable people (Rec., pp. 198-199 and 3461-3462).

At the date of this enrollment, May 23, 1901, two days before the treaty was ratified, all of the members of the Atkins family had been enrolled except Minnie and Thomas. Charlie and Harvey Harrison, Minnie's sons, had been enrolled on February 19, 1900, (See their card, Government's Exhibit A-33.) Nancy had been enrolled on December 21, 1900. (See her card, Government's Exhibit A-44.) An examination of these census cards shows that they contain two numbers. Thus, Nancy's card No. is 2022 and her field card No. is 2032. Charlie and Harvey have card No. 1655 and field No. 1659. Thomas Atkins' card (Government's Exhibit A-1) has card No. 2707 and field No. 2774. The explanation and application of these numbers is interesting and important. The lower number is the number entered upon the enrollment card known as a field number of the Dawes Commission's, and entered upon a card when an application was made for enrollment. (Mr. Hopkins, Rec., p. 204.) Mr. Merrick states that these cards all contain two numbers, and when they went to Okmulgee they had several hundred of them numbered in advance, that is, so far as the lower number, or field number, is concerned, it being the number which ran consecutively. The card number was given at the time the schedule was prepared, and the applicant given an enrollment number, the enrollment number and the card number being the two numbers that appeared on the approved Roll. Thus in the Roll heretofore copied in this brief, it shows that Thomas Atkins' Roll number is 7913 and his card number 2703, but his field number, which was the Dawes Commission number, was 2774.

There was issued to the Clerk of the Land Office a certificate that the name of Thomas Atkins (Roll No. 7913), age 10, appears on the Creek census card of the Creek Nation, field number 2774 (Rec., p. 4655). Thereby the three numbers are brought together in the Dawes Commission records, and through them, the complete identification of the party may be found. The field number, in this case, 2774, is the one that runs throughout the records of the Dawes Commission, and these later numbers only appear at the time of the final enrollment. Mr. Merrick testified that he wrote the 2707 on this card also, but he did it when he was making a final schedule sometime after the enrollment (Rec., p. 3470).

Now turning to the Creek Pay Roll and the Creek Authenticated Roll, it will be seen that there are many numerals written opposite each name. This is explained as follows:

Mr. Hopkins says that this is the field number of the Dawes Commission, which is entered on the records when application was made for enrollment, and it is this number that is written down opposite these names on the Tribal Rolls by the enrollment officer of the Dawes Commission, when he gives a field number to a name (Rec., p. 204).

Now turning to the Pay Roll and the Authenticated Roll, Govt. Ex. A-1 and A-30. Thus opposite Nancy is her field number 2032; opposite Thomas is his field number 2774. Opposite Charlie and Mary, changed in blank to Harvey, is 1659, the field number of the joint card of Charlie and Harvey. It will be noticed that Minnie Atkins has a field number opposite her name, 3718 on the Pay Roll Card, Govt. Ex. A-37, page 4712. It has no card number, as it was not completed by her enrollment.

All data gathered about a person was kept together and finally passed up to Mr. Bixby, with the card, for final consideration (Rec., pp. 201-208).

Neither Mr. Hopkins nor Mr. Merrick have any personal recollection of the information received in regard to Thomas Atkins or the Atkins family. Mr. Hopkins states that he has now no recollection of any of the cases considered by him, excepting the unusual ones (Rec., pp. 213-214). Neither Mr. Hopkins nor Mr. Bixby did any of the clerical work. They received information, prepared the data, and Mr. Merrick and Mr. Hastain, sometimes assisted by the other gentlemen named, wrote it up; and at the time this enrollment was made, no personal applications were required and hundreds of Creeks who never appeared, were enrolled on data furnished to Mr. Bixby and Mr. Hopkins, or some of the enrollment clerks (Rec., pp. 3459-3460). But this was done in the presence of the Attorney of the Creek Nation and the Committee representing it. The testimony was not taken down except in cases where the Creek Attorney objected and contests arose (Rec., p. 3462). Whenever a name, under consideration, was questioned, then a thorough investigation was had (Mr. Bixby, Rec., p. 261. Mr. Hopkins, Rec., p. 708). Mr. Merrick states, from an examination of the card and his knowledge of the procedure at the time, that both the Authenticated Roll and the Pay Roll of Euchee Town were consulted and used, and that the data as to parentage, blood and age, and possibly sex of Thomas Atkins, was made from information received verbally at the time (Rec., pp. 3465-3471). The card gives the post office address as Muskogee, and he says that this could have been obtained in either of two ways: One, from the person who gave the information as to parentage, age and degree of blood, and the other by reference to the old Creek card of his mother, Minnie Atkins, which gave his address as Muskogee (Rec., p. 3468). Mr. Merrick's attention was then called to the old Creek card of Minnie's (Govt. Exhibit A-31) and he was shown that on it Minnie appeared as a half-blood and Thomas' father as a white man, and the enrolled Thomas, now under consideration, was described as a half-blood; and then Mr. Merrick stated that, evidently, the data covering Thomas Atkins' mother, who was enrolled by him, was obtained from some other source than this old Creek card of Minnie's (Rec., p. 3476). Mr. Merrick stated: "Evidently, the informant so told either me or Mr. Bixby, or someone that the mother was a full-blood." (Rec., p. 3478.) But he says that, undoubtedly, this card, Exhibit A-31, was referred to; and that someone examined it at the time this enrollment was made (Rec., pp. 3874-3879).

Turning to the testimony of Noah Gregory, page 234, and he tells of talking with Mr. Hopkins about the unaccounted for names in Euchee Town, and that he told him the last he had heard of Minnie was that she had gone to Colorado, and he did not know whether she was living; said that he had tried to find out if she was living, but had not been able to locate her. He also said that he had information that two of Minnie's children were living with Tom Holden. He testified to talking with Holden about them. These children had been enrolled long before Mr. Gregory was having this conference with Mr. Hopkins and hence they were subjects of inquiry as were Minnie and Thomas.

This old Creek card also contains that same information Mr. Gregory possessed, as it states the children were children of Minnie Harris, nee Atkins, who had abandoned them; and they were living with Thos. E. Holden of Muskogee District. If this card was examined by Mr. Merrick, or whoever passed upon this enrollment, the mother of this boy would have been written down Minnie Harris, nee Atkins, as it was upon that card if the same woman was intended as appears upon it—the mother of Charlie and Harvey.

Mr. Merrick says the fact that the census card of Thomas was in his handwriting is not conclusive evidence that any person appeared before him personally because persons appeared before Mr. Bixby and Mr. Hopkins and gave information sufficient to enroll parties and a memoranda of that information was made by them, with the necessary data to fill out a card and that memoranda given to him or Mr. Hastain to fill out the card (Rec., p. 3468). Mr. Merrick was asked if they intended to enroll Thomas Atkins as the son of Minnie Atkins, and his answer was this:

> "Well, as it appears, Minnie Atkins being given as the mother, but, primarily, the Tommy Atkins is the one that appears on the Euchee Roll No. 213." (Rec., p. 3479.)

All that they put on the Roll itself was the name, age, sex and blood (Rec., p. 3479).

We desire to emphasize the statements of Mr. Merrick that the data on this card as to parentage, blood, age, postoffice of Thomas Atkins was not obtained from information given by parties whom they regarded as reliable, on the 23rd of May, 1901, to either Mr. Bixby, Mr. Hopkins, or himself; and that in the consideration of the case, before enrollment was made, all of the cards on file in this family could be examined, as well as the Tribal Rolls. Furthermore, the Pay Roll was then before them, upon which appears the field numbers of the cards of the other members of this family, so that there was no difficulty in ascertaining from the Pay Roll itself the cards to look to for the information, and it was the procedure of the Commission to obtain this information. It is true that Mr. Merrick says that in these last few days it was enrolling from four to five hundred people a day, and it is not possible that they could have given extended investigation at that time, and in the haste of such work, naturally, mistakes occurred, and it was an easy mistake to write down the mother of this boy as one sister, when the other sister was intended. If this theory of a mistake is accepted, then there was only one error in this census card and that was describing the first name of the mother as Minnie; whereas, these mistakes occurred if the alleged son of Minnie was intended to be enrolled: First, as to the last name of the mother. While technically she was Minnie Atkins, as she had never been married yet, as seen, she appeared upon these records in four different records before them as Minnie Harris, the mother of Charles and Harvey Harris, and hence, if her son was intended, he would have been described as the son of Minnie Harris. Second, if her son was intended and he was born at the time and place found by Judge CAMPBELL, he would have been described as 16 years old instead of 10, whereas, if Nancy's son was intended, 10 was the correct age, as he was born September, 1890. Third, if the son of Minnie was intended, having a white father, he would have been enrolled as a quarter-blood, whereas, Nancy was enrolled as a full-blood and her son, born of a white father, would properly be enrolled as a half-blood, as this one was. Fourth, if a son of Minnie was intended, his postoffice address would have been Leavenworth, Kansas, whereas, the real postoffice address of Nancy's son was Wagoner, but as she had been reared near Muskogee and Sam Brown and Noah Gregory, representatives of the Euchees, both associated her with Muskogee, in locating her son there, they fell into a natural error.

Wherefore, we submit that the procedure of the Dawes Commission indicates that it was the son of Nancy and not the son of Minnie who was enrolled. They were proceeding systematically and in a proper way with both record and oral evidence before them to enroll these parties, and, according to that procedure, they could not have enrolled the son of Minnie as ten years of age, a half-blood, postoffice Muskogee, and Atkins as the surname of the mother; and to enroll him fundamentally violated their primary duty to enroll only living residents of the Creek Nation.

The 1890 Roll.

In order that the court may properly grasp the facts in the discussion, we copy so much of it as includes this family, taken from Government's Exhibit A-29, second page after record page 4706:

1 ✓ Eddie Schremehers, 507

2 ✓ Fred Bowers, -107 Thos. & Mary

3 Mamie Atkins, 3718 (2 children.)

4 ✓ Nancy Atkins, 2032

✓ 1 ✓ Lee Atkins, DIED PRYOR TO APRIL 1, 1899. 643

✓ John Davis. (19)

The Dawes Commission, on May 23rd, 1901, enrolled the Thomas Atkins in question as a 10-year-old boy. They had information at that time which convinced them that the person whom they were enrolling was of the age of 10 years, and hence it is incomprehensible to think that they would go back to the 1890 Roll to find upon it a child who was not born at that time. Mr. Hastain testified that as the Census Card showed that the person being enrolled was of the age of 10 years, that it proved that the enrollment officer had gotten the name from some other source than the 1890 Roll (Rec., p. 247). In ruling on questions put to Mr. Hastain in this connection, Judge CAMPBELL said: "Of course, it is evident to anyone that this (was) made in 1901, enrolling a child whose age was given as 10 years, enrolled a person who could not in any event have been on the 1890 Roll" (Rec., p. 241). It is therefore evident that in finding that the name of Minnie's son got on the Tribal Rolls, Judge CAMPBELL was not finding that he was upon the 1890 Roll, but, on the contrary, that the Commission was not enrolling a person who was upon that Roll. This ruling of itself is sufficient to limit the inquiry to the 1895 Roll. It would seem that this was a sufficient answer to the proposition that the 1890 Roll is not a question in this case; but in the Circuit Court of Appeals, the learned counsel for Page devoted many pages to argue that Minnie's son Thomas was on the 1890 Roll and that he had obtained his tribal status thereby. The Page interests, in their argument in the Circuit Court of Appeals, at page 254, stated that the Roll of 1890 was clear and showed Minnie Atkins to have a son named Thomas. At page 281 of that brief, they quoted Sam Brown as testifying that the "Thos. and Mary," appearing over the words "2 children," could not have referred to the father and mother of Minnie and Nancy, who were named Thomas and Mary, but they did not quote his statement made in the same connection that the "Thos. and Mary" appearing upon the typewritten copy of this Roll in evidence was added after the Roll was made up and adopted by the Council (see his testimony, Rec., p. 218). Not only were misleading arguments made, but the facts were not correctly stated in that brief. We call attention to page 27 of their brief, "and right opposite the name of Minnie Atkins are the words 'Thos. & Mary, 2 children'." An examination of the record printed above makes a very different reading: "2 children" are inserted right after the word Minnie Atkins, and written above these words are the names "Thos. & Mary." The only testimony on the subject is that of the Government witness and the Page witness, Sam Brown, that the "Thos. & Mary" now shown on that Roll were not upon it when the Roll was adopted in the Euchee Convention, and not upon it when the roll was adopted by the Creek Council. Having made these arguments in the court below, it is fair to assume that the same arguments will be made in this court and we are therefore inviting the attention of this court to the exact bearing of the 1890 Roll on the issues of this case.

The first name is Eddie Schremcher, the son of Newt Schremcher and the son of a sister of the mother of Minnie and Nancy.

The second name is Fred Bowers. He is not explained in the evidence, but the explanation of his right to be on this Roll is found in the examination of Government's Exhibits relating to the rejection of Minnie on the ground of her non-residence. The testimony of Fred Bowers was taken in that hearing, and he testified that he was a first cousin of hers (Rec., p. 4714). Under the rule, as explained by Mr. Hopkins (Rec., p. 204), of listing descendants of a common female ancestor, he was properly in this group. Next to him follows Mamie and next, Nancy. These names complete this family group. The next name is that of Lee Atkins, their brother, who is given No. 1, as if another family group, whereas he should have been in this family group. Opposite the name of Minnie is this addition: "& (2 children)" and written over this parenthesis are the names, "Thos & Mary." No numbers appear to those names Thos. & Mary, as they do to all other names on the Roll.

Mr. Shanafelt, the clerk in charge of these Rolls, testified that in every instance the Creek Rolls, which he had examined, showed that the names are arranged in groups and given a number from 1 on to the end of the family group (Rec., p. 168). The truth of this is illustrated in the King's Roll of Euchee Town (Gov. Exh. A-28, p. 4706). On it the family group was originally written with five names and a number given to each. Afterwards, opposite the name of Minnie was written "2 children," and to the right-hand side under these words was added, "6. Charlie Atkins. 7. Sussie Atkins." Thus these names being added to the Roll, they were given numbers. The "Thos. & Mary" on this 1890 Roll, having no group numbers, prove that they were not part of the group on the Roll; but this is not a subject left to deduction.

We have heretofore referred to the testimony of Sam W. Brown, and invite your consideration to it in full. He said that there was a mass meeting of the Euchee people in 1890 at which they took the census and that Noah Gregory was Town King then and he presided over it, and he (Brown) was the clerk of it (Rec., p. 215). The convention was held on the Square Ground on Snake Creek, and the purpose was to make a true census and enable them to draw their money (Rec., p. 217). He recalled that Minnie Atkins and Nancy were placed on the roll. He was asked if anything was said of Minnie having children. He stated that Tom Holden, the husband of Minnie's half-sister, Kate Holden, was present, but that Holden did not say anything at first. Then Jackson Barnett, a neighbor, said: "Thomas knowed something about Minnie having children" (Rec., p. 217). Then Holden got up and said she had two children. He (Brown) then said it wouldn't do to leave them out. If they were not in the country, they had better enroll them and if the Council wouldn't accept them, they would have to cancel them, and so they were enrolled: "Mamie & 2 children" (Rec., p. 217). No one made any statement of their names. He says it was error to have her name Mamie on this Roll; that her right name was Minnie, and it should have been so written. He says that the names "Thos. & Mary" were not written above the word "2 children" at the convention. He was a member of the House of Warriors and in the Council when this Euchee Roll was ratified as prepared by the Euchee people. He says the "Thos. & Mary" were not on the Roll ratified by the Council, and he does not know how their names got there (Rec., p. 218). This is every syllable of evidence, so far as we know, in this record bearing on the subject of these names on the 1890 Roll. This was not the Original Roll which the Dawes Commission had before it, but a typewritten copy of it, and a carbon copy of that typewritten copy, the latter being used as the original (see Rec., pp. 212 & 251, 252).

It is quite important to bear in mind that Tom Holden gave the information that Minnie had two children, because the record shows from Minnie's own statements that his wife, her sister Kate, did not know of the existence of her son Thomas.

In her statements at Kansas City, she was questioned about correspondence with her sister over her children Charlie and Harvey, who were living with her sister when she left Muskogee in 1895. She was asked if Kate ever wrote her about these children and was then asked if they wrote her about Tommy, and she said: "They didn't know nothing about Tommy. I didn't tell them anything about Tommy" (Rec., p. 4069).

On the copy of the 1890 Roll also appears numbers on the right-hand side, made with blue pencil, following each name, except the names of "Thos. & Mary." It is explained at some length elsewhere that these numbers represented the field numbers of the Dawes Commission. Turning to the 1890 Roll is found opposite the name of Eddie Schrimcher, 507, and opposite Fred Bowers, 107, which are, doubtless, the field numbers on their census cards. Opposite Mamie is 3718, which is the field number of her rejected card (Gov. Exh. A-37, Rec., p. 4712). Her case did not progress to the point of getting a card number, as she was denied enrollment. Opposite Nancy's name is the number 2032. Turning to Government's Exhibit A-45, page 4718, and it is seen that this is the field number on her census card. The next name is that of their brother, Lee Atkins. There is no field number for him, because there is notation showing that he was dead. There are no field numbers for "Thos. & Mary," which were evidently interlined and no part of the roll itself. Turning to the census card of the enrolled Thomas Atkins, Government Exhibit A-1, page 4652, and it is seen that the field number is 2774. If his name had been on the 1890 Roll, opposite "Thos." would have been written 2774. Turning to the 1895 Rolls, and it is seen that on the Pay Roll opposite Thomas Atkins' number 213, Government's Exhibit A-2, second page after 4652, is the number 2774, and on the Authenticated Roll of 1895, Government's Exhibit A-29, second page after 4706, opposite Thos. Atkins is 2774.

Mr. Hopkins testified that he found no notations made on this sheet of the enrollment of either the "Thos. & Mary," whose names are written above this parenthesis (Rec., p. 205). There are other reasons that the name of Thomas as Minnie's son was not on this roll. In her Kansas City statement in conference with her counsel and lessees, Minnie told about getting a letter from her brother Lee, which was evidently about 1894, saying that he had found out where she was and asking her to visit him. She was asked this question: "Had you written to any of the folks at (in) the Territory? A. No, I didn't want them to know." (Rec., p. 4061.) In further corroboration of this, we call attention to a letter of Mr. Hanford's. He was Minnie's attorney from the beginning of her lease transaction with Mr. Page. He subjected her, in company with Mr. Long, to a most searching inquisition of her past. He took her to Leavenworth to refresh her memory in meeting old acquaintances and visiting old scenes. In further search of information, he went to Boston to see Charles Peterkin, with whom Minnie had lived several years, and who was, presumably the father of her children, Robert Lee and Alice. She admitted in her Kansas City statement that she lived openly with him at Fort Logan (Rec., p. 4060). After Hanford's visit to Peterkin, he wrote Peterkin a letter, dated March 2, 1915 (Gov. Exh. A-84, Rec., p. 4784), and we quote therefrom the following:

> "Minnie was very much amused when she learned that I had gone to you for information regarding the birth of this child. She had previously told me that you had no knowledge of the matter and that she had scrupulously kept the matter from you and from everyone else that she was connected with after the child's birth. The child was born in the town of Leavenworth before she ever got acquainted with the Army post. She was quite a character about Leavenworth for a couple of years, and after she got away from there she stayed away, in so far as she allowed other people to find out.
>
> "It was at that time that she started her system of keeping her past a complete mystery to all who knew her." (Rec., p. 4784.)

Thus it is seen that after months of indefatigable questioning of Minnie, Mr. Hanford stated that she kept her previous life at Leavenworth and the existence of Tommy a profound mystery to her family and all who had known her.

Then how is it possible that his name could have appeared upon the 1890 Roll, or the 1895 Roll? The evidence shows that both Robert Lee, who was born and died at Leavenworth, and Alice, who was born and died at Fort Logan, went under the name of Peterkin, were baptised and buried under that name, and, as Minnie was openly living with Peterkin at Fort Logan, Colorado, it is quite possible that the rumors of these two children reached her relatives in the Indian Territory and that her brother-in-law, Tom Holden, evidently with some reluctance, stated in the Euchee Convention in 1890 that Minnie had two children. That he did not hear it from her, we have her repeated statements. And that the existence of her son Thomas was not known to his wife or any of her relatives we have her repeated statements. These children could have referred to no other than Robert Lee and Alice, because if Tommy existed, the knowledge of his existence was kept from all of her relatives, and her son Charlie was not born until May, 1891, according to her statement (See record page 3997), which is confirmed by the census card (Gov. Exh. A-33), dated February, 1900, wherein he is listed as nine years of age.

There is another undisputed line of evidence in the record that established that the Dawes Commission did not enroll the "Thos" whose name, as we have shown, was written upon the 1890 Roll after it had been adopted. If it should be conceded, for the sake of argument, that Minnie had a son Thomas, and, if it should be conceded, also, for the sake of argument, that that Thomas' name was written upon the 1890 Roll, yet her condition is not bettered in this case, because all the evidence on the subject is in accord, proving these facts; that all of these rolls were before the enrollment officers of the Dawes Commission whenever a name was under consideration for enrollment, and that upon the census card of the enrolled person notations were made of the rolls upon which his name appeared. Thus, take Nancy's card, Government's Exhibit A-45, page 4718, under the head of "Tribal Enrollment," is the 1890 Euchee Roll and a note thereunder, "also on the 1895 Roll." The same is true of Minnie's rejected card, Government's Exhibit A-37, page 4712; it shows in tribal enrollment the 1890 Euchee Roll, also a notation that she was on the 1895 Roll. Take Government's Exhibit A-33, preceding page 4707, census card of Charlie and Harvey Harrison, under tribal enrollment is given the 1895 Euchee Roll and a notation that they are on the Euchee Pay Roll of 1895. Take the census card in question, Government's Exhibit A-1, record, page 4652, and it shows that Thomas Atkins was on the Euchee Roll of 1895 and also on the Authenticated Roll. These references are not incidents, but followed a settled rule of the Commission, which was to place upon the census card the notations of all of the tribal enrollments of the enrolled person.

Mr. Merrick, the enrollment clerk, who wrote the Thomas Atkins card, testifies that the evidence of tribal enrollment in this case was taken from the 1895 Pay Roll, and that they also went back to the Authenticated Roll of 1895 for identification; and he calls attention to the fact that the field number of this card, 2774, was written down on both of these rolls opposite the name of Thomas Atkins, and that upon the Authenticated Roll his name appears Thos (Rec., pp. 3465-3466).

Mr. Shanafelt, the custodian of these rolls and cards, testifies that the custom in making these census cards, was to place on them references to each roll upon which the person's name was found, when it was identified on more than one roll (Rec., p. 167).

It is evident that Mr. Merrick and Mr. Hastain wrote most of these census cards at the session of the Commission in Okmulgee, in May, 1901. And Mr. Hastain testifies that, if the person enrolled was on both the 1890 and 1895 Roll, the 1890 Roll would appear at the top under Tribal Enrollment, and down below, it would be indicated that his name was also on the 1895 Roll (Rec., p. 246). This card of Nancy's and the others heretofore referred to, were in strict accord with this rule, as stated by Mr. Hastain. He said it was customary to refer in every case to both the 1890 and 1895 Roll, where the party was on both (Rec., p. 247).

Mr. Hastain also stated that the enrollment in May, 1901, of a person as of the age of ten years would indicate that the enrollment officer had gotten the name from some other source than the 1890 Roll (Rec., p. 247).

Mr. Hastain again stated that, irrespective of age, had the person enrolled been on both the 1890 and 1895 Roll, the notation of such would have been on the card and it was not on this card of Thomas Atkins.

According to all of the gentlemen engaged in the work, these rolls were there for their information and whenever a name was identified upon both, it appeared upon the census card and the fact that the 1890 Roll is not noted on the Thomas Atkins card, is proof positive that the Commission did not enroll a person whom it identified as being upon the 1890 Roll. On the contrary, their action amounted to a declaration that this person whom they enrolled was not on the 1890 Roll, or else a notation of that roll would have appeared upon the card, and the field number would also have appeared upon the Rolls themselves.

Therefore it is submitted that there is no evidence, whatsoever, that the Thomas Atkins enrolled, whether the son of Minnie, or whether the son of Nancy, had a tribal enrollment in 1890. If he had such, that tribal enrollment was not identified by the Dawes Commission, and it did not intend to enroll, when it did enroll Thomas Atkins, any person who was upon the 1890 Roll. Their action affirmatively shows that they were enrolling a person who was only upon the 1895 Pay Roll and the 1895 Authentic Roll. Hence all the speculation as to what the "Thos. & Mary" on the 1890 Roll meant is of no moment in determining the issues here.

The Tribal Rolls of 1895.

D. M. Hodge served as King or Warrior continuously since 1868. He remembers the making up of the 1895 Roll. The list of each town was made up by its King, or Warrior, and submitted to a committee of the counsel to investigate, and the committee reported to the council, which acted upon the report and adopted the final roll. Very great care was exercised by kings and warriors in the council in making up the Roll. The Roll was confined to members by blood alone, adopted citizens being cut out (Rec., pp. 3663-3665). George Clinton, a full-blood Euchee, a warrior of that town, referring to the 1895 Roll, said that Sam Brown, the Town King, went out and talked to all the families he could find to get the names to go on that roll and then took the list to the House of Warriors (Rec., p. 1719). Sam Brown testified he was King of the Euchees in 1895, and had the making up of the Roll (Rec., p. 219) He testified that before the 1895 Roll was made up the Creek Council passed an act that any one outside the limits of the Creek Nation could not get the payment for which the roll was being made (Rec., p. 231). This 1895 Roll was for a payment shortly to be made. The council requested that it be made, and there was a meeting of the people, that is of the heads of the families, and they would give him the names of themselves and their families. Some Euchees were left out for lack of information, and he had to go out and hunt up others (Rec., p. 219). After the convention of his people, in 1895, on a cold day in Muskogee, he met John Davis and asked him for a list of the remnant of the Atkins family, and Davis gave it to him, and he put down the names given him by Davis in a book (Rec., pp. 219-221).

He presented in open court his memoranda book, and the Government introduced page 76, which is as follows (Rec., p. 4707):

He says that he gave these names to the census committee; and the committee asked him and Noah Gregory and John Buck about the Euchee list, and that the committee reported to the council and the council adopted the report of the committee (Rec., p. 221). Referring to the list claimed to have been given him by John Davis, he says that he knew Ed Schremsher, Minnie and Nancy Atkins, but did not know the other names on that list which Davis gave him. He knew of no Thomas Atkins in the Euchees. The father of Minnie and Nancy was named Thomas Atkins, and he had been dead long before this roll was made, and he was a Coweta, not a Euchee. His only information about the Thomas Atkins on the list which he says Davis furnished him was that he was a part of this Atkins family. Davis did not go over the names with him, and made no statement to him as to what kin any of those parties were to the others (Rec., pp. 224, 225, 227, 228, 230). In her deposition at Seattle, Minnie stated that she had her uncle, John Davis, put Tommy on the Tribal Roll (Rec., p. 3997), but the probative value of this statement is weakened by her testimony given on this trial when she stated that she knew nothing of her own name or that of Tommy, Harvey or Charlie being on the Roll when she went to Okmulgee, when she collected for four (Rec., pp. 3912, 3913, 4088). It is further destroyed as at war with the physical facts, that John Davis was in the Detroit penitentiary from 1891 to 1896. This roll was made between the meetings of the council, the regular meeting being in October, 1894, and a special meeting to act on the roll being in May, 1895 (Rec., p. 2646). According to the testimony of Brown, the name of Thomas Atkins got on the roll through him, and he obtained it from John Davis, at Muskogee, on that cold day in the winter of 1895, as he says it was after the meeting of his people to make up this roll which was approved in May, 1895. If his testimony was true, then the name might have stood for the son of either Minnie or Nancy, if either or both had a son, as Davis gave him no information of the relationship of any of the persons on the list furnished him, and he did not know for whom that name stood. But his story is not true. It is a fact, proved by record evidence, that John Davis was in the penitentiary at Detroit, Michigan, from December, 1891, to January, 1896 (Rec., pp. 4988-4990). Therefore, this name on the roll must be accounted for from some other source than John Davis and Sam Brown's book purporting to contain information from John Davis, at Muskogee in 1895. As John Davis was the only possible source of information that Minnie had such a son, if she had such, necessarily that information did not get to the Creek authorities. Minnie testified that John Davis and her brother, Lee, were the only persons in the Indian Territory to whom she confided the existence of Tommy (Rec., p. 3973). And also see her Kansas City statement (Rec., pp. 4056, 4069, 4075). Ellis Childers testified that Lee Atkins died before 1895 (Rec., p. 2648). The testimony of Sid Johnson (former chief of police of Fort Smith, at one time a special officer of the Express Company) is that Lee Atkins was killed at Checotah in November, 1894 (Rec., pp. 4430-4432). Mr. Johnson gives the circumstances by which he fixes the date, and they unquestionably establish the fact. The name of Lee Atkins is not on this 1895 Roll (Rec., pp. 4706-4707). There can only be one explanation of that, and that is that he was dead. He was a well known man in the nation. The proof of his death prior to the making of the roll necessarily excluded him as a source of information. That leaves the other source of information to have been John Davis, the only other person whom she claims to have told of the existence of her son. Both the Government and Page, in their pleadings and evidence, commit themselves to the Sam Brown-John Davis route for Minnie's son, Thomas, to have gotten on the Euchee Roll. After the case was closed, evidence was introduced by permission of the court which established the fact that John Davis was in the penitentiary continuously at Detroit, Michigan, from 1891 until 1896 (Rec., pp. 4987-4990), thereby absolutely destroying the testimony of Sam Brown and his memoranda book, stating these names of the Atkins family were given by John Davis, and that he passed those names thus obtained from John Davis on to the Creek Council. The Pay Roll shows John Davis' name on it and opposite it "Detroit" and the receipt of his $14.40 by Sam W. Brown on September 24, 1895 (Rec., pp. 4706-4707).

In view of these facts established by the records, the mantle of charity cannot be thrown around Sam Brown and his testimony ascribed to a mistake of memory. His memoranda book (Gov. Exhibit 30, p. 4707) is manufactured evidence for this case.

On behalf of Nancy was introduced Ellis Childers, who was closely in touch with this roll, being Speaker of the House of Warriors at the time the 1895 Roll was made up. Childers says there was $200,000 to be paid out to the Creeks, and this Roll was made up for the purpose of distributing it among them. It was the custom for each town to make up its own Roll. Some of the towns held meetings for this purpose and some did not, but left the Roll to the kings and warriors to prepare. After being prepared by the town, or the king and warriors, it was submitted to a committee of the council for investigation, and on the report of the committee the Rolls were authenticated. The regular session of the council was held in October of each year, but an extra session was held in May, 1895, to consider the roll in process of making. A committee of six from the House of Kings and twelve from the House of Warriors was appointed to take these various town Rolls and pass on them. Childers appointed a committee of twelve from his body. The committee called the Town Kings before them, and sometimes the warriors, and if they did not get satisfactory information as to the various names, they called in other people who would have information of the persons inquired of. The kings or warriors would tell the committee to call such and such a person who lived near the person inquired of, and who might have the information, and that person would be brought in to obtain the information from him (Rec., pp. 2645-2647). Sam Brown called him out of the House to go before the committee to help him verify three families of Euchees who lived near his section of country. They were two of the Childers families and this Atkins family, into which some of his relations had married (Rec., pp. 2647, 2648). Childers was well acquainted with this family; in fact, had known them all of his life, and went to school at Carlisle with Minnie. He was also acquainted with their relatives, knowing John Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Robinson, and Sauce Childers, with all of whom he had frequently talked regarding the family. He knew of the adults, but not the children, and did not know the names of the children. He knew that Minnie had two sons, and he knew from reputation in the family that she had these sons and no other child, and knew from family reputation as well as from his own knowledge (which will be hereinafter referred to), that Nancy had a child (Rec., pp. 2648, 2649). When he went before the committee the chairman asked him if he knew this Atkins family and he told him that he did. The chairman then called off the names of this family on the list which he had and explained who each name was intended for. Childers recognized the names, at least some of them, on the Authentic Roll, of this family, as the names which were read to him by the chairman of the census committee. He identified Ed Schremsher as the son of Newt Schremsher. Childers next identified Minnie as the daughter of Thomas Atkins. He knew her well and had gone to school with her. He did not know the names of Minnie's children, but he knew she had two, and he identified Charlie and Harvey as her children. He does not remember the name of Alice. The name of Thomas was explained to him as that of Nancy's child, and he had that on his mind at the time, and identified him as such, and he identified Nancy as a daughter of Thomas Atkins and sister of Minnie (Rec., pp. 2649-2652).

Here is the direct and positive statement of this witness that he appeared before the census committee of the Creek Council while the Roll was in process of making, and that he identified the Thomas Atkins No. 213 thereon as the son of Nancy Atkins. He based this identification on the general reputation in the family and on his knowledge of the fact that she had a child whom he supposed to be this child when he was told by the committee this name represented her child. Childers stated that the members of the committee were present when he was before them and also recalled that John Phillips, the committee clerk, was present; and he stated in his cross examination that Mrs. Brison, formerly Mrs. McKellop, whose husband had been the clerk of the House of Warriors, had in her possession in Muskogee the minutes of the proceedings of the council, which he had that day examined (Rec., pp. 2663, 2664, 2685). If his testimony was not true he furnished the names of persons present, calling those of two, Brown and Phillips, and giving the source where the Government or the Page interests could obtain the names of the committee. He afforded the opposing sides every opportunity to contradict his testimony, if it was not true, and the hearing of this case continued for weeks after Childers testified, and no one was put on the stand to contradict this testimony, but on the contrary, the Page interests placed Sam Brown on the stand again, he having theretofore testified as a witness for the Government. Both the Page interests and the Government questioned Sam Brown as to matters occurring at the payment in September, 1895, and as to other matters, but did not question him as to Ellis Childers' statement that he had called Childers before the census committee, and that in his presence Childers had identified Thomas Atkins as the son of Nancy, and had identified these other members of the Atkins family, as well as two other families of Euchees.

It is true that Childers' testimony is weakened by a statement which he made to Mr. Allen, attorney for the Creek Nation, while he was employed by Mr. Allen, ostensibly as an interpreter. It is evident that the real purpose of his employment was to work up the case against Nancy Atkins, and to bring her before the Creek authorities, and to obtain this statement from him. We refer to Mr. Childers' testimony, pages 2686-2693 and 2673, and Mr. Allen's at pages 2793-2796, to establish this conclusion. This statement was submitted to Mr. Childers, he admitted having made it. The first part of the statement is practically a repetition of his testimony given at Sapulpa about the birth of Nancy's baby at Wagoner in September, 1890, and her being in a destitute condition, and a collection being made for her and of his visiting her later and seeing the child in bed with her; and then he made the statement that his understanding was that it died very shortly after its birth (Rec., pp. 2669-2671). He was asked if that was true, and he said: "They got that out of me." "Q. But it was the truth, wasn't it? A. They prepared it and I signed it. Q. It was truth? A. I guess I'll have to stay with it." (Rec., p. 2678.) He testified here that he saw the child with Nancy for a year or two, and learned he was named Tommy, and the last time he saw him he was 2 or 3 years old (Rec., p. 2642), and at Sapulpa prior to this statement, he had testified substantially the same. The only real difference—and, of course, it is a material difference—from his testimony theretofore given, is that the child died shortly after birth.

Then Judge Stuart asked him how with this fact in his mind he had an idea in 1895 that this Tommy on the roll was Nancy's Tommy, and he replied that he didn't know of any of the children except the two of Minnie's; that he knew Nancy had a child, and he did not give it much consideration, and verified Tommy as Nancy's child (Rec., p. 2678).

On cross examination by Mr. Allen, he stated, as he had several times before, that in 1895 he did not know the name of Nancy's child, but knew she had a child, and when the committee told him that the name of Thomas was meant for her child he approved it (Rec., p. 2665).

Childers stated in redirect examination that he had told numerous parties that he did not think Tommy Atkins, the son of Nancy, was entitled to be enrolled, and that that statement was based on his belief that he had died before the land office opened on April 1, 1899, but he had not stated to anyone that he was not entitled to be on the Tribal Roll of 1895, as he was entitled to be there, or he would not have been there (Rec., p. 2688).

Childers had known Nancy all her life. He was a schoolmate of her sister's. He was an educated Creek and was the Speaker of the House of Warriors for years and treasurer of the nation. Mr. White had sent him to bring Nancy to Sapulpa when she testified before Judge Stanfield, when she repudiated her testimony given in the office of Bartlett's attorneys, where she had testified that her child was a girl and died at its birth. He at that same time testified of the birth of Nancy's boy and of knowing him for several years, and gave in his testimony a description of his personal appearance (Rec., p. 2689). At one time, when it was thought that Page was trying to take Nancy out of the state, Mr. White had her to go to Ellis Childers' home, and she lived in his home for about a month. His association with her was therefore intimate, and he was in a position to influence her.

The Creek authorities, knowing these facts, employed Childers, ostensibly as an interpreter, and put him to working up evidence against Nancy (Rec., pp. 2673-2682), then have him to try to bring Nancy before them privately (Rec., pp. 2793-2796), and when that failed and her attorneys produced her before them, secured a private interview between Childers and Nancy, seeking to have him influence her, then take this statement from him, then dismiss him as interpreter. This transaction is thoroughly discreditable to the Creek attorney and certainly not creditable to Ellis Childers.

The first time he stated his knowledge of this child and of its living several years was in open court, where he was vigorously cross examined by opposing counsel on this subject. The next time he made it was an ex parte statement to his employer where he stated in effect to the contrary of what he had sworn. The next time that he made a statement on the subject was again in open court where he was subjected to a severe cross examination by Judge Stuart, Mr. German and Mr. Allen, and he stuck to his story, notwithstanding the contradiction of it in the statement made to his employer. On the Sapulpa testimony being put before him as to the fact of the boy's existence for several years after his visit, he stated that was true (Rec., pp. 2689-2691).

So much of his testimony which reached to the identification of Thomas, as a son of Nancy, as the person enrolled by the Creek Council, is wholly without contradiction after the fullest opportunity to do so.

The learned counsel for Minnie and the Page interests will doubtless argue here as they did in the Circuit Court of Appeals that Sam Brown was simply mistaken in saying that he got this information from John Davis, but that he did get this information from some reliable source. It was the duty of Sam Brown, as King of Euchee Town, to obtain the names of all of these Atkins people, but if he got the name through any other source than that of John Davis, it could not have been intended to have been the son of Minnie, because John Davis was the only possible source of information of the existence of Minnie's son Thomas, according to her testimony. We have the right to anticipate here that the learned counsel for the Minnie and Page interests will be consistent and argue here, as they did in the Circuit Court of Appeals, the force of this testimony. And, in order that we may accurately state their position and properly answer it, we quote from their brief in the Circuit Court of Appeals, on pages 278 and 279:

> "Much stress has been laid by learned counsel upon the proposition that Sam Brown testified that he procured the names of Minnie's children from John Davis at a certain time and that the evidence in the case shows that he could > not have procured it from John Davis because John Davis, at the time Sam says he procured the information from him, was in the penitentiary.

>
> "We think that Sam Brown was mistaken about procuring this information from John Davis, although the Government thought and alleged in its pleadings that Sam Brown did procure this information from John Davis and it was not discovered that he probably did not procure it from John Davis, until near the end of the trial. The attorneys who represented Minnie Folk, Page and others made no objection to the introduction of the penitentiary record showing John Davis in the penitentiary, because if it was of any benefit to the Nancy case, she was entitled to it. But it seems to us that this is a 'tempest in the teapot.' We cannot understand how this matter can affect substantially the result reached in this case by Judge CAMPBELL, the trial judge. It must be remembered that this proof that John Davis was in the penitentiary was before him and it must be assumed that he found that Sam Brown might be mistaken as to the source from which he acquired his information as to Minnie's children."

But this theory to rehabilitate Sam Brown as a source of information outside of John Davis is not sustained by any evidence whatsoever, and we invite consideration of the composition of the rolls themselves. These rolls in and of themselves prove that after Minnie was listed, the tribal authorities learned of her having two children and that they entered them on the roll and then added, apparently, what they thought were their names, Charlie Atkins and Sussie Atkins; the latter was carried forward as Susie, then changed to Susan, then converted by red ink change on the Pay Roll to Harvey; Charlie's name being carried forward as Chartie. Finally these two names, representing Minnie's two sons, are enrolled on the census card No. 1655, field No. 1659, Government Exhibit A-33, and this field number appears on both the Authentic Roll (Gov. Exh. A-30, Gov. Exh. A-2) opposite their names, or on the Authentic Roll opposite Mary, which was on the Pay Roll turned to Harvey. We contend that these rolls demonstrate that Sam Brown's story is false in the whole and not merely false in the one point, which is admitted, that he got the names from John Davis.

Three Rolls were made in 1895, the primary one, the Tribal or band Roll was made by the people in convention, or the Town King assisted by the Warriors. For convenience of designation we will call it the King's Roll. This Roll was submitted to the council after passing the Census Committee, and the Roll, as adopted by the council is called the Authentic Roll. The Pay Roll was drawn from the Authentic Roll, supposed to be a literal copy, with arrangement for receipts of payees, witnesses to signatures, etc. It is upon the Pay Roll that the red ink changes were made in names, presumably from information derived during the payment, correcting errors upon it. These Rolls were introduced by Mr. Shanafelt, the Clerk of the Land Office, in charge of them (Rec., p. 153). What is herein called the King's Roll was introduced as "1895 Tribal Roll, Euchee Band Creek Nation." (Gov. Exh. A-28, opposite page 4706 of this record.) The Authentic Roll was introduced as "Census Roll Euchee Town," Government's Exhibit A-30, third page from record page 4706. The Pay Roll is Government's Exhibit A-2, second page after record page 4652.

The King's, or Tribal Roll, of 1895.

(For King's, or Tribal Roll, of 1895 (Rec., p. 4706) see insert herewith.)

An examination of this photostatic copy clearly shows that as written originally it reads as follows:

1. Ed Schremcher
2. Mamie Atkins
3. Thomas
4. Mary
5. Nancy Atkins

And then was added after the name of Mamie, "2 children" and a bracket opposite Thomas and Mary:

"6. Charlie Atkins
7. Sussie Atkins."

Some of Minnie's history as developed in this testimony accounts for these additions and unquestionably proves that the added names represented what was thought to be her whole family, and through these additions her two sons Charlie and Harvey trace their enrollment.

Minnie came to the Indian Territory sometime prior to the payment which was made on the Roll in September, 1895. Her own testimony leaves it quite uncertain when she did come to the Indian Territory. She says that she was here at that time about one year. She stated twice that she was in the Indian Territory when her brother, Lee Atkins, was killed. The date of that is elsewhere fixed as November, 1894. At other times she says that she came in 1895 (Rec., pp. 3913, 3987, 4064, 4087, 4088).

She testified in answer to questions by Judge CAMPBELL, that she heard that there was a payment going on at Okmulgee, and she and a girl friend rode out from Muskogee to Okmulgee, just for fun, she said. When there, she decided to go in and see who were getting money, and there was a man there with a book, and he shoved the book over to her and she saw where Harvey and Charlie and Thomas and herself were on the book, and she said: "I am down here for some money, and you will have to pay me," and they did (Rec., p. 4088). This is important in showing that the changes made upon the roll were made before Minnie went to the payment. In other words, none of the changes that were made in the original roll from the way the names finally appear on the Pay Roll were made at her instance or with her knowledge. She testified that when she came to Muskogee, that her brother Lee Atkins did not meet her at the train as she expected, and she inquired for Miss Alice Robertson and went out to her house with her children Charlie and Harvey and spent that night and the next day with Miss Robertson. Then she stated that the payment was not long after her arrival there (Rec., p. 4064). As the date of that payment is fixed at September 24, 1895, it is improbable that her statement that her brother, Lee, was still living when she came there, was true.

Miss Alice Robertson was a well known citizen of the Indian Territory and of Oklahoma when a witness in this case; and since that time she has attained deserved eminence as a member of the National House of Representatives. Miss Robertson had known Minnie all her life and was instrumental in having her sent to Carlisle School, and was a teacher there while Minnie was a pupil. She was employed by the Gypsy Oil Company to go to Seattle and meet Minnie and ascertain if she was really Minnie Atkins of this Atkins family, and she did so, and in Seattle identified her as the woman whom she had known from childhood. Miss Robertson said that she did not see Minnie from the time she left Carlisle until the late summer of 1895, in Muskogee, Oklahoma. She came to her house in Muskogee with two children, and told her that she had quarrelled with her husband, whose name was Sergeant Peterkin. The children were small, one carried in arms, and the other about two years older, and their names were Peterkin. She didn't remember the sex of the children. Minnie stayed at her house for a few days (Rec., pp. 293-296). As Miss Alice Robertson is quite certain of the date and as it conforms to Minnie's statement that she came to Muskogee a short time before this payment in September, it is quite clear that it must have been sometime in the year 1895 when she came to the Indian Territory from Colorado, and that fact throws light on the 1895 rolls.

An examination of the picture of the King's Tribal Roll, the one which Sam Brown was required to prepare for the Creek Council, shows in its original form it had but five names upon it. It shows that after the name of Mamie Atkins is written, probably in a different handwriting, certainly with a different pen and at a different time than when the original was written, the words: "& 2 children." The spacing between these families shows that the space for the Atkins family was no more than was occupied by the five names first placed there. Evidently after this list was made up, the two names appearing to the right hand side, separated by a line from the first list, and numbered following the original numeration, which ended at 5, 6 and 7, are the names Charlie Atkins and Sussie Atkins, which were added. Whether they were added at the time the words "& 2 children" were written after the name of Mamie Atkins, or at a later date, is a matter of surmise and of no importance. The important fact is that it was ascertained by those in charge of the Roll that Mamie Atkins had two children, when they did not know that fact when the original Roll was made out. These are clearly additions, and doubtless were superinduced by the fact that Minnie had recently come to the Indian Territory accompanied by two small children, as testified to by Miss Robertson.

The next step in making the Creek Roll was the adoption of the King's Roll by the tribe, and it then became the Census Roll. It is called in this record, the Authentic Roll. The photostatic copy of it is found on the third page following page 4706.

There are two sets of numbers to this list. The first, the consecutive tribal number, and the second, the inner or family number. In the copy these inner numbers are dim, except the last one, which is 7, shows quite plainly.

Govt. Exh. A-30, Rec., p. 4706 (third)

This list is the same as the King's Roll in every particular, except the order of the names, which begins with the name of Ed Schremcher, their cousin, who was the head of this family group. The next follows, Mamie Atkins, and opposite her name is "& 2 children." A line seems to be drawn through that, and immediately following her name are the names of Chartie and Susie, the two names which were evidently intended to be the two names added to the King's Roll, which appear there as Charlie Atkins and Sussie Atkins, numbered 6 and 7. They are now placed next under Mamie's name and precede Thomas, and are 3 and 4, whereas, in the King's Roll, Tommy's name followed Mamie. Thomas here is Thos. Following his name is Mary and following her is Nancy, this ending that particular family; and the next family beginning as in the King's Roll, with John Davis. The next step in the compilation of the rolls was the copying of this Authentic Roll, which became the Pay Roll. It was supposed to be an exact copy of the Authentic Roll, with the proper places following the names for the signatures of the payees and of witnesses and dates of receipt, etc. This Pay Roll is Gov. Exh. A-2 and is the second sheet following page 4652. A comparison of it with the King's Roll is a little difficult, owing to the fact that many changes have been made on the roll in red ink. They, however, have been explained by witnesses in a great many instances, who have deciphered them with a glass before the court, and there is no dispute over these facts, as we understand it. So far as relates to this family, it is as follows:

The Pay Roll.

(For Government's Exhibit A-2 (Rec., p. 4652 [second]), see insert herewith.)

This Roll has the consecutive numbers and the family numbers as the Authentic Roll, and on it they are plain. The family numbers begin with Ed Schremcher and run to 7, as in the Authentic Roll. There is no change in Ed Schremcher's name.

The next name is Mamie Atkins, which by red ink has been changed into Minnie. The next name is Chartie. The next is Susie. This was changed to Susan by red ink and later by another red ink change, into Alice. The next is Thomas, which is spelled out here, but abbreviated on the Authentic Roll as Thos. The next one is Mary. A red ink change converted that to Harvey. The next is Nancy (Rec., p. 2654).

Sam W. Brown testified, as heretofore noted, that John Davis, on a cold day in Muskogee, in the winter of '95, gave him a list of the remnants of the Atkins family. He was asked by the Government attorney if he made any record of the names that Davis gave him at that time. He said that he took a list. He was asked what he put the list down in. He answered, "I had a little book." "Q. I will ask you whether this is the book? A. That is the book." (Rec., pp. 219-220.) Then he proceeds to give the names, as shown there. The Government put page 76 of that book into evidence, which is Government's Exhibit A-32, record page 4707, hereinbefore printed.

Brown was questioned by Page's counsel in regard to this book. He was asked if he was anxious to see that each Indian was entitled to payment, got it, and he said that that was his business, and that he kept this book for that purpose, and that he kept it correctly. He says that this book is mostly made up of the Euchee list, but there were some accounts on it, he says that were made out at that time. He was asked if he noted on the book each time that an Indian claimant got his money, if he marked it "paid," and he said he put a "Pd" on the book when the money was paid by the Creek Nation to the people, there shown on his memoranda book (Rec., pp. 226-227).

Then later, but evidently in this connection, the defendant, Page, put into the record page 8 of this book, which was Defendant's Exhibit B-1, record, pages 231-232. A photographic copy of this is found preceding page 4937. This page is evidently a copy of the Pay Roll as originally made, before the red ink changes were made upon it. The order of the names is the same as the Pay Roll and the arrangement is the same.

Attention is called to the fact that the third name appears here as Charlie and there is no cross to the "l," which apparently converted the Charlie of the King's Roll into "Chartie" on the Authentic Roll and the Pay Roll. Thomas is spelled out here, as it is in the Pay Roll, and not abbreviated into Thos., as it is on the Authentic Roll.

An examination of the preceding family, as well as this family, on page 8 shows it is an exact copy of the Pay Roll. Now, the truth is that this is evidently a memoranda book in which Sam Brown copied the Pay Roll and had it at the payment, which he attended, where he collected money and made these notations of "Pd," as the various citizens collected their money, and by whom paid. He has written across this Atkins family "Minnie Atkins," as if she got all of the money of the seven members of it, including Ed Schremcher and Nancy.

Now, he brings in another page of that book, page 76, which he claims is the list given him by John Davis, and which he swears became the basis of the King's Roll of this Atkins family, and finally the Authentic Roll. In this list, which we assert is a manufactured list, for the purpose of this case, page 76 of his book, gives the name Minnie Atkins, written plainly. Charlie is written plainly. Susan is written plainly. This name first appeared on the King's Roll as Sussie and on the Authentic Roll as Susie and on this it is Susan.

Now, it is impossible that, with this book written so plainly before them, that Minnie would have been copied into Mamie, Charlie into Chartie and Susan into Susie. The arrangement and order of names is also different from what appeared on the King's Roll. As heretofore shown, that originally had only five names and Charlie and Sussie were added as 6 and 7; this memoranda book's order of names has Charlie and Susan following Minnie, and that transportation pushed the other three names farther down the list. The space on the King's Roll was for only five in this family, as originally entered. Sam Brown's page 76 list has seven. If it was the basis of the King's Roll, space would have been made for all seven to have appeared consecutively. Clearly the King's Roll was not made from this page 76 of his book, as he swears it was.

While these changes are immaterial, so far as the enrollment of the individuals were concerned, they are material in showing how the Rolls were constructed and showing that the story that Minnie got her alleged son Thomas on the Roll through this memoranda given to Sam Brown in March, 1895, by John Davis or anyone else, is not the truth. It is inherently false on its face. And the record evidence, showing the impossibility of obtaining this information at that particular time and place from John Davis, demonstrates that this evidence is made for the purpose of manufacturing a case which does not in truth exist, in favor of Minnie. It is absolutely clear that these seven names, arranged differently on his memoranda book, than on the King's Roll, could not be the basis of this family group, spaced for five only, and when three of the names are spelled differently.

While upon the subject of the changes in the Roll, attention may now be called to the red ink change on the Pay Roll opposite the Susie which was finally turned into Alice. A bracket is drawn to the right of that name and the following one of Thomas Atkins, and opposite that bracket is written "error of 1." This matter was examined carefully before the court, and Judge CAMPBELL stated the way the original record was written, as it appeared to him, after these changes, upon minute examination of it in open court (see Rec., p. 2655). It seems that the word "error" was written over the words "of 1." Whether any importance can be attached to these later day unexplained changes, or not, we cannot tell, we are merely stating the facts to the court. The presumption, however, it that the error referred to the enrollment of the name of Alice in this list, as her name is not enrolled. There was no Sussie, no Susie nor Susan in this family, and the only Alice was the daughter of Minnie, who died in Colorado in 1889, and who was called Mabel.

Unquestionably the Creek authorities recognized a Thomas Atkins in 1895 as a member of this Atkins family. He is on the King's Roll, the Authentic Roll and the Pay Roll, without change or correction.

The King's Roll as first written consists of five members of this family group, 1, Ed Schremcher, 2, Mamie Atkins, 3, Thomas Atkins, 4, Mary Atkins, 5, Nancy Atkins. There is no signification to be attached to the relative positions of the names. The Page interests argued to the contrary in the Circuit Court of Appeals, but such argument is without any basis to support it.

Mr. Hopkins, Chief Clerk of the Dawes Commission, whose intimate knowledge of these Rolls makes his statement authoritative, says that the relative position of names in a family group gave no indication of the relationship of the parties (Rec., p. 199). He explained the composition of these Rolls. The family was listed on the mother's side; very frequently they took the oldest member, male or female descendant of the common mother of the particular family and put that name first as the head of the family and followed it with the different descendants of the common ancestor, but there was an exception, a dependent parent or grand-parent, or an incompetent, was listed last so that the head of the family would draw the money for him (Rec., p. 204).

This family was properly listed in that way.

Ellis Childers testified that Ed Schremcher (this name is usually spelled in the printed record, Skrimsher) was a son of Newt Schremcher and a cousin of Minnie and Nancy (Rec., p. 2657). His father, Newt Schremsher, was one of the witnesses on behalf of Nancy. He testified that his first wife, who has long been dead, was a Euchee and an aunt of Nancy (Rec., pp. 2523-2525). She was a sister of the mother of Minnie and Nancy. Their father, Thomas Atkins, was a Coweta. Hence, Ed Schremcher as the oldest male, or descendant of the oldest line, was preporly at the head of this list and Nancy, an incompetent, was properly last.

Hence there is no significance to be attached to the fact that Thomas' name followed Mamie and preceded Nancy's on the King's Roll as originally made. If there were anything to this argument of the relative position of a name, it would work out an absurdity under the facts in this case. To the King's Roll was added the names of Charlie and Sussie, as 6 and 7, following Nancy, who was 5. According to this argument then Charlie and Sussie would be children of Nancy. Mr. Hopkins' explanation of the construction of the Rolls shows that no information is given by the position of the names, other than as to the first and as to the last.

Returning then to the consideration of the King's Roll as first written with the five members of this family, it will be noted that those five names occupied the space for the family group and when they were entered it was evidently thought that this was the entire family, as the spacing indicates this, and when the additional two names were made they had to be written on the right-hand side thereof. Of the five original names, Ed Schremcher is accounted for; Mary is disposed of as erroneous and the space occupied by her name was eventually taken by that of Harvey, and that name was by red ink changed, after the Pay Roll was adopted, into Harvey. That leaves Minnie, Thomas and Nancy for consideration. The father of these women was named Thomas. He died about 1877 (Rec., p. 228). He was a Coweta, and Sam Brown, who was the King, and supposed to have made this Roll, so testified, and that under no circumstances would his name have been on a Euchee Roll (Rec., p. 229).

That narrows for consideration whether Thomas was the son of Minnie or the son of Nancy, and at the expense of tediousness we will review the testimony bearing on this enrollment.

Minnie stated that after she left Leavenworth about 1886 that she never wrote to inquire about Tommie and that she never heard anything of him until she was at Fort Wayne, near Detroit, Michigan, which was in 1899 or 1900, when she got a letter from there stating he was dead (Rec., pp. 4025, 4083, 4084).

In the trial of this case Minnie testified that she told her brother, Lee, and her uncle, John Davis, and no other relative about Tommie (Rec., p. 3973). As her uncle was sojourning in Detroit during the preparation of this Roll and for several years prior, and her brother dead some time prior to it, they could not have communicated his existence if he had one, to the Tribal authorities.

More significant however than any of her sworn statements is her statement made to the conference in Kansas City, participated in by her attorney, Mr. Hanford, Mr. Page and Mr. Josey, her lessees, and their attorney, Mr. Rice, and a history of it is important.

Mr. Page testified in his direct examination that when he and Mr. Josey obtained her lease, they agreed to pay her $10,000.00 as a bonus, but they put Mr. Hanford off with $5,000.00 until she was better identified and the second check was made due and payable July 29, 1914, and the second check for $5,000.00 was not paid when it was due, because in the meantime Minnie had come on to Tulsa and had "Told us some stuff that on checking it up we found that it was not true, and we was considering very seriously of throwing it up and not going any further with it." (Rec., p. 3877.)

The occurrence which so dissatisfied Mr. Page, appeared later in his testimony. All questions of doubt had been removed as to Minnie's identity on her arrival in Oklahoma, by her relatives, Sam W.

Brown, Mitchell Wadsworth and Bill Robinson, who identified her (Rec., p. 3891). On July 26th or 27th, a few days before her $5,000.00 was due and after this identification, she testified at Sapulpa that Thomas was born to her at the Sisters' Hospital in Leavenworth, Kansas (Rec., pp. 3890-3893). This testimony Mr. Page found was false, and this is what Mr. Page said: "It kind of rattled us a bit," and made him want to quit (Rec., p. 3890).

What reconciled Mr. Page to going on according to his story, was this: they took Minnie to Leavenworth and then to Kansas City and had people meet her and refresh her memory and then took her to a lawyer's office and got her statement admitting that she had a baby at Granny Letcher's. After he got this admission he said he did not pay any more attention to it and paid her the $5,000.00. He says they thought they got the facts there, although Mr. Rice, his attorney, said: "There is something yet I believe she is holding back." (Rec., p. 3877.)

Mr. Page fixes this as September 29th, when this money is paid (Rec., p. 3888).

Minnie's account of the statement is interesting. She said Mr. Hanford, her attorney, had her go to Leavenworth to show him where Tommy was born and Mr. Long took her over to Leavenworth and they met people and people knew her as soon as they saw her and then they went back to Kansas City. In Kansas City she met with her attorney, Mr. Hanford, and Mr. Page and Mr. Josey and their attorney, Mr. Rice, and Mr. Long, Mr. Page's representative, in a lawyer's office, where she made the Statement (Rec., p. 3962).

In answer to questions from Nancy's counsel, she said that before she made this statement she had been to Leavenworth twice. That she had talked to a great many people there with her counsel and that she was doing the best she could to remember the facts.

She said that in the conference in making this statement she was trying to answer all she could remember and answer truthfully (Rec., p. 4042). After putting some questions to her as to whether she had made the statements then read to her, it was suggested by her counsel that the whole statement go into the record on the admission of her counsel that those statements were made by her at that time (Rec., p. 4043). This Statement is called the Court's Exhibit A, and is found in the record at pages 4044-4084. It commenced on September 29, 1914, the day she was paid the $5,000, and not being completed, was adjourned to 1:30 on September 30th, when it was then finished.

Considering her environment, the object of the meeting and the suggestive questions put to her and the statements made by her, we submit that it is convincing that Minnie never had a son Thomas born at Granny Letcher's, or elsewhere, but for reasons heretofore stated we are not, for the purpose of this argument, combatting that alleged fact, but are combatting the theory that the name Thomas Atkins on the Tribal Roll or the Dawes Commission Roll was a son of hers, and hence we particularly call your attention to so much of this statement as bears on those issues. The first part of the statement gives her life history in the Territory and then tells of going to school at Carlisle and then going to Leavenworth and her life there. It indicates she was leading a loose life at Leavenworth, running around and frequenting the resort of Granny Letcher, a negro woman, and then going to Granny Letcher's to give birth to her child, which she says was born in the winter of 1885 at that place (Rec., p. 4055). She said she stayed in Leavenworth until Tommy was a year old, then went to Colorado (Rec., 4056). She tells of the birth of her daughter Alice, who was called Mabel, and her death at Fort Logan, Colorado, and of her taking up with Harrison and having two children by him, Charlie and Harvey (Rec., p. 4061).

She was asked how she came to go back to the Territory and she said that her brother Lee found out where she was and wrote to her he would like to see her and wanted her to come and visit him. She was asked if she had written to her folks in the Territory and said: "No, I did not want them to know." (Rec., p. 4061.) She says Harrison gave her the money for the trip.

She says she had not heard from Granny Letcher about Tommy after she left and never heard anything from him until she heard of his death at Fort Wayne, Michigan.

It is later established that she was living then with the 7th Infantry after it returned from the Spanish-American War in 1899; she says when she went to Muskogee she went to the home of Miss Alice Robertson (Rec., p. 4064). She tells of later leaving her children, Charlie and Harvey with her half-sister, Mrs. Holden; she was questioned about letters about her children from her relatives and was asked: "Did they write to you about Tommy?" Ans. "They did not know nothing about Tommy; I did not tell them anything about Tommy." (Rec., p. 4069.) She said: "Nancy did not know nothing about me having Tommy." (Rec., p. 4070.) While she was at Fort Wayne, near Detroit, she got letters from someone asking for money for Tommy, and shortly afterwards this same person, whose name she did not recall, wrote to her that he was dead, and that Granny Letcher was dead; later in the statement she said the first letter was from Granny Letcher. She says these are the only letters she received from Leavenworth after she left there and she did not answer them (Rec., p. 4073). She said that while she was at Ft. Wayne she received a letter from Tom Holden about Charlie and Harvey. This is the letter which evidently produced her power of attorney to Tom Holden to select and file for lands for herself, and Charlie and Harvey; it is dated April 2, 1900 (Rec., p. 4712), which is referred to in her Statement (Rec., p. 4069).

When she left Detroit she went to Vancouver Barracks; then to the Philippines; then back to Vancouver Barracks (Rec., p. 4073).

The next day the inquisition was resumed and this occurs:

Q. "Can you remember now who it was that wrote you for some money for Thomas?
A. No, I never can remember the name.
Q. Did you know the person that wrote to you?
A. She just wrote as a friend would be writing to a friend, but I can't remember.
Q. Well, was she somebody you knew?
A. I must have known them, or they couldn't have known my name, you know.
Q. Well, do you remember now that the letter was from someone you knew?
A. Well, it was from someone I knew, and someone that knew about Tommy, or they couldn't have wrote to me.
Q. Who knew about Tommy besides your uncle? Have you any idea of anybody that knew about Tommy of your folks besides your uncle?
A. No, I didn't tell them much about them.
Q. Did you tell Nancy?
A. No, Nancy don't know anything, and Nancy can't say she does, because she don't." (Rec., p. 4076.)

Referring to getting lands for Charlie and Harvey, this occurs:

Q. "Did some of the letters that you got from your relatives tell you that or did you write and ask them?
A. I wrote and asked them to put them on for land.
Q. Did you tell them to put Tommy on, too?
A. No, I didn't speak of Tommy.

Q. Why didn't you?

A. Well, I will tell you why I didn't speak of Tommy. You see after I spoke about Harvey and Charlie, I think that's after I got the letter about Tommy being dead. See?

Q. That's all right, and you thought that Tommy wouldn't be entitled to an allotment, and because Alice didn't get any money, you figured that Tommy wouldn't be entitled to anything, he being dead?

A. Yes, that's the way I figured it for myself, you know." (Rec., p. 4079.)

This significant statement occurs at record page 4082:

"Mr. Page: Did you ever get Tommy's deed for his land?

A. No, I don't think so.

Mr. Page: Did you write a letter to anybody telling them to be sure and enroll Tommy and the other two boys?

A. No.

Q. Now, she wrote a letter telling them about Harvey and Charlie, but because Alice didn't get any money, she figured that Tommy wasn't entitled to any land, because he was dead. How old was Harvey and Charlie when you took them down to Muskogee from Fort Logan?

Then follows at page 4083, a patent, but unsuccessful effort to make her say she wrote to put Tommy on the Rolls.

Pages 4083 and 4084 show a persistent effort to make Minnie fix dates which she said she could not do, and to make her say that she got the letter about Tommy's death before she wrote about putting Charlie and Harvey on the Rolls. They finally by such suggestions, get a statement or rather she adopts their statement that she left Fort Wayne in the summer of 1900, and that about a year before that she got the letter about Tommy's death, but right in the middle of these statements is this statment of hers:

> "Well, I just can't say whether it was before or after; but I know I got the letter that Tommy was dead; but I can't say whether I got this letter afterwards about Harvey and Charlie, or not." (Rec., p. 4084.)

If the court accepts Judge CAMPBELL's finding of fact that Minnie had a son named Thomas born to her at Granny Letcher's early in June, 1885, as we doubt very much if this statement is read in its entirety, unquestionably it establishes these facts, which are material facts to the issue that we are presenting:

1st. She left Leavenworth when the child was a year old, which would be 1886, and never heard from him or about him until 1899 when she heard he was dead.

2nd. Undoubtedly this statement established the fact that she told none of her relatives in the Indian Territory of Thomas' existence, unless it was her uncle, John Davis, and he was in the penitentiary during the preparation of these Rolls, and unless it be her brother Lee, and he was killed in November, 1894, before the preparation of the 1895 Roll was begun. At the time this was prepared in 1895, according to her own testimony she had not heard anything of this supposed son of hers for a period of nine years. It is inconceivable that she would be having him placed upon the Roll, even if there was any possible source for this information to have been conveyed to the Tribal authorities.

In these various statements she referred to talks with her uncle, John Davis; but the record shows that he was continuously at Detroit from December 26, 1891, to February 4, 1896 (Rec., p. 4988). Hence those statements are necessarily false.

Therefore the demonstrated facts in this record are that Minnie told no person whatsoever who could have communicated to the Tribal authorities the fact of the existence of this son Thomas of hers and therefore Judge CAMPBELL's finding of fact that prior to the compilation of the Tribal Roll of 1895, Minnie Atkins had conveyed information to certain of her relatives in Indian Territory of the fact of the birth of Thomas Atkins, which information was eventually imparted to the Tribal authorities compiling the Roll (Rec., p. 145), is totally without any evidence whatsoever to support it.

This is not a mere case of being against the preponderance of the testimony; it is not a case of some evidence to support it, but it is a finding totally without any evidence of any fact whatsoever to support it, in view of the demonstrated facts in this record.

On the other hand, there are 35 witnesses testifying to the existence and the continued life for a period of 10 or 11 years of a half-blood Creek boy at Wagoner, Oklahoma, who by general reputation in that community was known as the illegitimate son of Nancy Atkins and was called Thomas Atkins. Some of these witnesses saw him as a nursing baby at her breast before she was sent to the penitentiary in December, 1890. Others contributed to her necessities when he was born; others knew him at various periods of his life. All described him with more or less definiteness; some knew him up to his death; several contributed to a public subscription taken by the Mayor Hall of Wagoner, for his burial. The negro preacher who officiated at his funeral has testified. The venerable Newt Schremcher, whose first wife was an aunt of Nancy, knew him well; he traded at his store and he knew him until he was 8 years of age, and described him as a person apparently half white and half Creek. Some of these witnesses were prominent men; two of them had been sheriffs; one of them a postmaster; one an editor and one a wholesale merchant. Several merchants and farmers, and several peace officers, some of them white people, some Indians, and some negroes. Some were illiterate and had criminal records. Others were men and women of the highest standing in their community, and with the exception of Mary and J. B. White, they were all disinterested witnesses. If there was no testimony in this record directly connecting Nancy's son Thomas with his enrollment on the Creek Roll in 1895, the evidence of these 35 witnesses would of itself be sufficient to satisfy the court that this boy was enrolled in the family where he should have been enrolled.

It is in evidence that every effort was made by the Creek authorities to get upon this Roll every resident Indian of Creek blood living in the Indian Territory at the time of its compilation, and also in evidence that it was against their rules to allow anyone to be upon that Roll who did not reside in the Indian Territory; this is testified to by Sam Brown, King of Euchee Town, whose duty it was to compile this Roll (Rec., p. 231).

It is a far cry to assume that Minnie's son Thomas, whom neither she nor anyone else related to her had heard of for nine years, who was living, if at all, at Leavenworth, Kansas, and had never been in the Indian Territory in his life, was upon the 1895 Roll, instead of assuming as the court should, that Nancy's boy whose existence and right to be upon that Roll was so thoroughly established was the one enrolled. In addition to this is the positive testimony of Ellis Childers, that he was called upon to appear before the Census Committee when this Roll was in compilation to identify, or as he expressed it, to verify, the names thereupon as properly being thereupon and he verified and identified Thomas thereupon as the son of Nancy.

While his testimony is weakened by a contradiction upon another material statement, yet it is not contradicted on this point, although he named the parties and witnesses who were present at the time, and neither the Government nor the Page interests saw fit to contradict it, notwithstanding the fact that they put Sam Brown on the stand after Childers testified, and Brown did not dispute the part that Ellis Childers said he had played in this at the instance of and in the presence of, Sam Brown.

We respectfully submit that it is thoroughly proved by all the evidence that the only person Thomas Atkins upon the 1895 Roll could have represented was Thomas, the son of Nancy, who was then living at Wagoner in the Creek Nation and could not by any possibility have been this suppositifious son of Minnie, whom it is now claimed was living at Leavenworth, Kansas, at that time.

The Identity of the Thomas Atkins Enrollment by the Dawes Commission.

Disregard all the evidence the Government adduced to the effect that Minnie had no child named Thomas Atkins, and disregard the almost irresistible conclusion that her son, Thomas, was fabricated to fit the census card recital that Minnie was the mother of Thomas Atkins, and consider the facts contended for by her to be established, which are, that she came to Leavenworth from Carlisle on July 11, 1884, and worked for the Hydes until October. Then she went to the Grodevants and worked there until September, 1885, except an interval in June, 1885, when she went to Granny Letcher's, at which place and at which time she gave birth to Thomas Atkins. This is the testimony credited by Judge CAMPBELL, that this son was there born in June, 1885.

The Grodevant expense accounts establish the fact that she worked for them from October, 1884, to September, 1885, and the Staffords testified that she worked for them from September, 1885, until the summer of 1886, when she was then discharged on account of her pregnant condition. The records and undisputed testimony in regard to Robert Lee Peterkin establish that he was born July 31, 1886, and died August 10, 1886. She left Leavenworth, according to Peterkin (and her testimony in the main agrees with his) in March, 1888, and joined him at Fort Logan, Colorado, and the records obtained at Fort Logan establish that her child, Alice or Mabel, was born there on August 4, 1888. Therefore, by the rule of exclusion, any son born to her at Leavenworth other than Robert Lee Peterkin, must have been born in 1885. Mrs. Mattie Cobb, who comes nearer fixing the exact date of the birth of this supposititious child than anybody else, states that he was born on either the last day of May or the first day of June, 1885 (Rec., p. 3164). According to Minnie's present testimony, she left Leavenworth when Tommy was about two years old (Rec., p. 3912), in charge of Granny Letcher, and that she never heard of him any more until some time probably a year before she left Fort Wayne, which would place it in the summer of 1899, when she got a letter from some one whom she does not remember stating that he was sick, and later a letter stating that he was dead, and these letters were from Leavenworth (Rec., pp. 3945, 3972, 3975).

According to Henry Carter, he was the son of Minnie, born at Granny Letcher's; lived there several years, and was taken to the country by old man Carter, and there lived until he was a grown man, and he then went to the Indian Territory, looking for his mother.

According to Sam Nash and Walter Banks, this child was born to Minnie at Granny Letcher's, as near as they fix the date, in corroboration with Minnie's present history, and he lived there with Granny Letcher until he was eleven years old, when an unknown mulatto woman came there, representing that she came from his mother, to take him to his mother, and carried him away, and that he was never heard of again by them. Many witnesses on behalf of Minnie have Thomas Atkins living at Granny Letcher's at various times in various years from 1885 to 1900. Of course, these witnesses are in conflict with witnesses on behalf of Carter, and with Sam Nash and Walter Banks, and we are not at this time discussing that conflict, but certainly in any view of this testimony, it must be taken as established that if Minnie had such a son, he was born about the first of June, 1885, and lived his life in Kansas, unless Sam Nash and Walter Banks' story is true, that he spent the remainder of his life after 1896 in some unkonwn place, or may yet be living.

He certainly did not live in the Indian Territory, as no one ever heard of him there.

In her numerous appearances upon the witness stand, Minnie always declined to give the name of the father of her son, Tommy, until her last appearance in this court, when she stated that his father was a white man, and his first name was Lee, and his other name she did not remember (Rec., p. 3911). She testified that she told her uncle, John Davis, and her brother, Lee, of his existence, and no one else in the Indian Territory (Rec., p. 3973). They were both long dead before the Dawes Commission enrolled Thomas Atkins on May 23, 1901.

Miss Alice Robertson tells of her visit to her when she came to Muskogee. She represented herself as the wife of Sergeant Peterkin and that her two boys with her were named Peterkin (Rec., p. 295).

Minnie went under the name of Peterkin in Leavenworth, after she took up with Peterkin. She introduced Peterkin to her friends, the Hamiltons, as her husband (Rec., pp. 356, 365). She was received as a patient in the Sisters' Hospital under that name (Rec., p. 481), and two of her children were buried under that name (Rec., pp. 483-491). She was called Minnie Peterkin after she went to Fort Logan (Rec., p. 352), and she admitted on cross examination that she went under the name of Peterkin (Rec., p. 3927). After she and Peterkin went their separate ways, she took up with Bev Harrison, a beef contractor, and went under his name thereafter until she married Folk in 1907. The records of Dawes Commission heretofore referred to, give her name sometimes as Harris, and sometimes as Harrison. Sadie James, who searched the country over for her, testified that she never went under the name of Atkins after she left Leavenworth (Rec., pp. 734-735).

Minnie testified that she is of mixed white and Indian blood (Rec., p. 3923). In her Kansas City statement she said her mother was a white woman and her father a Creek. (Court's Ex. A, Rec., p. 4045.) Her record at Carlisle school describes her as a half-breed (Rec., p. 333). Her incomplete census card describes her as a half-blood; the census cards of her sons, Charley and Harvey, show that their father was a white man, and that she, their mother, was a half-blood, and they were quarter-bloods. Miss Alice Robertson, who knew her from infancy, describes her personal appearance while at Carlisle as that of a half-blood (Rec., p. 294).

In her testimony at Sapulpa, Nancy testified that she was an Indian; that her father was a full-blood, and her mother mixed Creek and Euchee, and that she, Nancy, was enrolled as a full-blood (Rec., p. 2783). Her census card, Government's Exhibit 44, shows that she was enrolled as a full-blood (Rec., p. 4718). The evidence indicates that Minnie and Nancy were full sisters (although Charley Bailey testified he understood they were half-sisters). It is not important which was correct as to quantum of blood, but it is important that these women regarded their own blood differently, one regarding herself as a half-blood and the other regarded herself as a full-blood. Their father and mother died within a year of each other when Minnie was about twelve and Nancy five or six years younger. Minnie was raised by her uncle, John Davis, until she went to Tullahassee Mission, where she spent about two years and then went to Carlisle and spent about two and a half years. Then she went to Leavenworth, and since that time followed the army.

She has always lived with white people, unless it be that for a year or two she was an inhabitant of Granny Letcher's negro resort in Leavenworth. Nancy was raised by her aunt, Mrs. Robinson, at Muskogee, and resided with her until she discovered herself in a pregnant condition in 1890, and then, to save disgrace of her family, she left the Robinsons and went to Wagoner and took up her abode with negroes. She has almost continuously lived with negroes since that time, and her present guardian is a negro, but there is no evidence to show that she associated with negroes before she left the Robinsons. She stated that the father of her child was a white man (Rec., p. 2576). Sheriff Ruble, who knew Tommy in the later years of his life, described his appearance as Caucasian and Indian, and nothing else (Rec., p. 4429). J. N. Schrimpsher (whose first wife was Nancy's aunt), who knew the boy well when he was about five or six years of age, testified that from appearance he was half Indian and half white (Rec., p. 2525). Mr. Way, a very intelligent gentleman, who has lived among the Indians for many years, and who was an intimate friend and neighbor of the Holdens, and who knew Tommy when he was six or seven years old when he was at Holden's and remembers him distinctly, describes his appearance as that of a half-blood Indian. He was questioned by counsel and the court as to his recollection of his appearance, and his testimony is certain and positive that this boy had the appearance of a half-blood (Rec., pp. 2599, 2607). M. McElroy, an intelligent business man who knew Tommy all his life, thus describes him: "He always appeared to me to be an Indian and white child. Had tolerable light hair" (Rec., p. 2574).

Many of the other witnesses testified to the same effect. Some of them thought that he had some negro blood in him, but all of them said that his hair was straight and most of them described his hair as being quite peculiar in color, unusually light for an Indian; Nancy testified that his hair grew darker as he grew older. This light hair and an Indian mother could spell only one thing, and that was, white father. Therefore, the information that would be conveyed to the Dawes Commission concerning this boy based on his appearance, on Nancy's statement, and her early associations, would prove that he had a white father, and her own opinion of her blood and that of the records before the Dawes Commission would call for the Commission writing her down as a full-blood, and this would mean that her son would be enrolled as a half-blood, which was the case. The evidence of all of the witnesses who testified to personal knowledge of the birth, life and death of Nancy's son, located him as living at Wagoner, in the Creek Nation, for the whole period of his life, except two intervals, one, when he spent a year or less with the Holdens, and the other when Betsy Burnie moved to the Verdigris for six months, and all of these places were in the Creek Nation, and he was therefore a resident of the Creek Nation all of his life.

The date of the death of Minnie's supposed son Thomas, if it ever occurred, is based solely upon Minnie's recollection of a letter that she received while she was at Fort Wayne, from some one whom she does not remember, telling of his sickness, and later from the same person, telling of his death. An examination of her Kansas City statement will show that she was very vague and uncertain as to when these letters were received, but by much help from counsel and parties then present, she was persuaded to fix those letters as having been received in the summer of 1899. Mr. Long and Mr. Hanford, who were then keenly alive to fixing him as living on April 1, 1899, and dead after that date, interrogated Minnie closely and frequently on this point in their conference with her when they went to Seattle for the purpose of gathering information from her after Page took her lease. Her first statement to Long was that it was 1900 or 1901 (Rec., p. 3923). In this record there are three theories about the son's existence; one that he turned into Henry Carter; another that he left Leavenworth in 1896, with an unknown mulatto woman, and has not been heard from since, and the other that he lived in Leavenworth—some of the Page witnesses say, as late as 1900 (Rec., p. 3292). Delaney and Doidge knew him there last in 1897 and Alva Adams and Dennis Jones in 1898.

We are for the present not in the least concerned over which, if any, of these theories be the truth, for the point that we are now making is that if any of these theories were true, the Dawes Commission did not enroll Thomas Atkins No. 7913, as the son of Minnie, and the person described on the census card of Thomas Atkins was not a son of Minnie.

The establishment of any one of these theories as the truth regarding Minnie's son, Thomas, would by the same token establish that he was not the person enrolled by the Dawes Commission as No. 7913, as the facts thus established would be at war with the facts found by the Commission, for they had to find that he was a living resident of the Creek Nation on April 1st, 1899.

The testimony of the many witnesses who testified as to the death of Thomas, son of Nancy, fix that event as occurring not earlier than the spring of 1899, and not later than the spring of 1902. Nancy fixes his death in the spring of 1900. None of these witnesses had any fixed data from which to connect their recollection of this event other than Thomas Brewer, and he fixes it from circumstances connecting his death in his mind with fixed events, but he was uncertain whether the fixed events were 1899 or 1900 (Rec., p. 2557). Some of the witnesses refer to it as occurring in what was known as the "dry year," but there is a difference of opinion as to whether that was 1899 or 1900. So many witnesses fix his birth as occurring a few months before Nancy went to the penitentiary, which is established by the records to have been December, 1890, that there can be no serious question but what her son was born in 1890, and no serious question of the accuracy of her statement that it was in September, as Ellis Childers fixes the date of seeing her and her new-born babe from a pasture payment which carried him to Wagoner on the 1st day of October, 1890 (Rec., p. 2640).

Nancy never went by any other name than Atkins, whereas Minnie was for years known as Minnie Peterkin, and thereafter as Minnie Harris or Minnie Harrison, and apparently abandoned the name of Atkins except once when she drew $57.60 from the Creek Nation in September, 1895, when she signed her name as Minnie Atkins; as her name was on the roll then as Minnie Atkins, she was taking no chances in signing it otherwise. Sam Brown and Noah Gregory, Euchee Kings, were before the Dawes Commission at Okmulgee in May, 1901, and they both knew that Minnie had abandoned the Creek Nation and moved out of the country, and both of them unquestionably told Mr. Hopkins or Mr. Merrick this fact, and Gregory remembers specifically of so telling Mr. Hopkins (Rec., p. 234). They both knew that Nancy was living in the Creek Nation, Brown saying that he sometimes heard of her at Muskogee and sometimes at Wagoner, and Noah Gregory saying that he thought she lived at Muskogee.

In the cross examination of Nancy it developed that W. M. Robinson, her uncle by marriage, and her cousin, Ed Robinson, called on her where she was working at the Barnard Hotel at Wagoner and asked her if she wanted them to attend to the business of enrolling her or did she intend to do it herself, and she told them she didn't understand it and would rather for him, her uncle, to attend to it for her, and he said all right, and all that he needed was authority from her for him to do so. Then she told him: "Here is me," and said, "Is that all?" "And I hesitated a while, and he said to me pretty soon, 'Where is that boy you had down there with you to aunt's?' and I laughed and said, 'Well, he is around here somewhere.' He said, 'Didn't you tell us that was Minnie's boy?' And I said, 'Yes, but I was just joking with you; that is mine.' That is what I told him." Then he told her that he would get them all on the roll. He was supposed to look after her allotment, too, but did not do it. She said this referred to the enrollment being had at Coweta and tells of going there to see if the Robinsons had enrolled her (Rec., p. 2736).

This proves that this was one of those enrollments before the field parties in 1897 which enrollments were abandoned as testified to by Mr. Hopkins (Rec., p. 186).

Doubtless Mr. Robinson did as he promised, but these enrollments being ineffective, there had to be subsequent proceedings to obtain enrollment.

She also tells of filing for herself in June, 1901. This referred to filing for allotment of land and not for enrollment. She had been enrolled since December, 1900, and when she went before the Commission on June 11, 1901, according to the weight of the testimony, her boy had been dead for more than a year. She says since spring of 1900. Whether she could select for him after his death, or whether he was entitled to an allotment, dying before allotment time, she did not understand (Rec., p. 2737).

In her deposition given in the office of the attorneys for Bartlett she stated that her aunt, Mrs. Robinson, told her that she had enrolled her (inserted at page 2788 of this record).

This indicates that the Robinsons fulfilled their promise to Nancy, but these field enrollments were dropped and the process started anew after the Commission obtained the Tribal Rolls, hence this enrollment was futile.

She testified in this trial also that her uncle, Robinson, promised to enroll both her and her son (Rec., p. 2736). If Robinson had not done so, doubtless the Government would have here produced the files of the Coweta enrollment to contradict this statement.

The knowledge of Colonel and Mrs. Robinson of Nancy's son, Thomas, is an important factor in considering the enrollment before the Dawes Commission in another connection. Noah Gregory testified that he knew them well (Rec., p. 236), and as Town King of the Euchees it was his duty to ascertain the members of his clan and furnish information of them to the Commission, which he did. Mr. Hopkins stated that in a majority of cases of enrollment of minors that the minor's name would be entered on the card with the parent, or where a separate card was made for the minor there would be a reference by number to the parent's card so that the name could be transferred to the other card.

Mr. Lieber testified in the rush work at Okmulgee in the last three days this procedure was not followed (Rec., p. 256). But Mr. Hopkins says that under this usual practice where the children were practically without anyone to care for them, no such notation would appear (Rec., p. 191). Certainly this was the case with Nancy's son. The fact that he was without anyone to care for him induced the Holdens to go to Wagoner and bring him to their place in 1899 (Rec., p. 2594). Sheriff Ruble testified that Nancy left Wagoner about 1897 (Rec., p. 4428), and other witnesses said that she was thereafter sometimes in Wagoner and sometimes in Nowata (McElroy, Rec., p. 2572). White said that she moved away about 1898 or 1899 (Rec., p. 2748).

It was also about this time that Bettie Burnie, with whom the child lived, moved from Wagoner to Verdigris and stayed there six months (J. B. White, Rec., p. 2744).

Mr. Lieber says that under the statute the card was required to show with whom a minor was living, and that the only defect in the census card in this case is that it fails to show with whom Tommie was living, which should have appeared upon it (R., p. 266). But he says that if the Commission had been satisfied that the boy was entitled to enrollment, and could not get information as to whom he was living with, they would have enrolled him (Rec., p. 266). The history of this boy, spending his life with Bettie Burnie, a negro woman not related to him with whom Nancy lived most of the time, but wandered backwards and forwards from Nowata to Wagoner in his later years, and Bettie herself moving away from Wagoner for a time, and she not being the legal guardian, and the boy not having a fixed abode with his mother, would leave his case just such a case where the residence would be left blank, and no custodian be put down for him, and no cross reference to the parent, according to the practice of the Dawes Commission. Therefore, the census card, in this case applied to the son of Nancy, is made out exactly as it should have been made out by the Dawes Commission following its practice in enrolling similar cases, had they known all the facts relating to Nancy's son.

It is noteworthy that his residence is left blank but the postoffice address given as Muskogee—as elsewhere discussed this was doubtless due to information given by Noah Gregory or Sam Brown who associated Nancy with Muskogee, but as she was irresponsible, the boy's status was not fixed with her, but left, on his own responsibility, the supposed postoffice of his mother given as indicative of where he could be located.

In considering the practice and usage of the Dawes Commission, this fact incidentally developed, is worth considering.

According to the system of the Commission in handling deeds the two deeds to Thomas Atkins, one for the homestead and the other for the allotment, should have been in the jacket marked "Thomas Atkins," or in the files of undelivered deeds, but they were not found in either place. When this land attracted attention, search was made for the deeds, and not being found, it was assmed by the Creek attorneys and authorities that as they were not in the land office that they had been delivered. Mr. Bruff, a special agent of the Department of Justice, was put to work on this case, and he made a general search of the records of the land office, and found these deeds in the Nancy Atkins jacket (Rec., p. 174).

It may well be inferred that the officers of the Dawes Commission in their earlier work on this enrollment and allotment, when the facts were fresh in their minds, placed the Thomas Atkins deed with the papers of Nancy Atkins, evidently believing that he was her son and they properly belonged there.

Govt. Ex. A-42 (Rec., p. 4717) and also her card (Rec., p. 4712) shows that the name of Minnie Harris was listed for enrollment on April 24, 1901, on Creek Card, Field No. 3718; the name of said person appearing on the 1890 Roll of Euchee Town. The session of the Dawes Commission especially devoted to finding the unaccounted for names began at Okmulgee May 6, 1904, and continues there until the treaty was ratified, May 25, 1901.

Therefore Minnie was listed for inquiry prior to that meeting at Okmulgee, and long before Thomas was listed, because his field number is 2774, nearly 1000 numbers intervening before hers was made out.

Therefore the inquiry as to him was not dependent on any relationship to Minnie as his enlistment for inquiry was independent of her and long prior thereto.

Unquestionably both names were under inquiry at Okmulgee, in May, 1901. The card itself made out before this meeting gives her name as Minnie Harris, her tribal enrollment, Euchee 1890, and also No. 210 on the 1895 Roll (when it appears first Mamie, then Minnie Atkins), and it referred to her old Creek Card which stated that she was in Ft. Logan, Colorado, in 1894. Her rejected card also notes "Thos. E. Holden of ......, Indian Territory, may identify" her (Govt. Ex. A-38, Rec., p. 4712).

Thus we have her connected up for inquiry to the man whom she had given power of attorney to select lands for herself and two sons, Charlie and Harvey, without mentioning Thomas; and concerning him and his wife, Minnie positively stated that they knew nothing of Tommy (Rec., p. 4069).

Mr. Gregory, the Town King who was before Mr. Hopkins in May, 1901, discussing Minnie, had gotten information of her and her two sons, Charlie and Harvey, from Tom Holden (Rec., p. 234).

Again this evidence connected up to the Dawes Commission at the time of this enrollment leads to no other conclusion than that it was not intended to enroll Thomas as the son of this woman. There was no possible source of information it then had that she had a son in Leavenworth, Kansas, named Thomas. If they had information of the non-resident son and enrolled him, why did they not enroll his non-resident mother?

Her application was there equally with Thomas and equally under consideration. There was more reason for enrolling her because she was born and reared in the Territory and had been back for a year or two about 1895 and had drawn money from the tribe then, but as Minnie was rejected for non-residence, why should not non-residence have defeated her son who was never in the Territory in his life, if he ever had a life?

Mr. Hastain said that if the Commission had information that the mother of this 10-year-old boy was a non-resident of the Creek Nation and had no information as to whom he was living with, his name would not have been sent up for approval (Rec., p. 248). Certainly they had information that Minnie was a non-resident of the Creek Nation and she repeatedly stated she had heard nothing of her son Thomas from the time she left Leavenworth in 1886 or 1887, until she got a letter from an unknown person while she was in Detroit, from Leavenworth, that he was dead. Clearly there was no source of information open to the Commission to determine with whom this son of hers was living, and this is but another reason to show that they did not intend to enroll her son. Every one born prior to April 1, 1899, had to be shown to be living on that date to obtain enrollment; children born after that date of enrolled persons could come in (Rec., p. 3471).

The Commission enrolling a ten-year-old child was required to know he was living on April 1, 1899. They could not have gotten that information from Tom Holden who was referred to as source of information on her card, as to Minnie, because his step-son said he got a letter from Minnie in 1898 or 1899, from Detroit, asking him to enroll her and her two sons, Charlie and Harvey, and did not mention Thomas, and he tried to do so but lost the letter and told his step-father Holden about it (Rec., p. 4598).

Hence Holden would have told them that this woman was living at Detroit, Michigan, and had two sons who had already been enrolled and he held a power of attorney to select their lands and it is impossible to assume that the Commission intended this woman as the mother of the enrolled person.

We ask a review of the different pieces of evidence received by the Dawes Commission outside of the tribal rolls, which they received as shown by recitals on the Census Card, and a seriatim consideration of each as applied to the evidence supporting Nancy, contrasted with the evidence supporting Minnie:

1. That Thomas Atkins was living April 1, 1899, Mrs. Miller fixes his death as occurring in the spring of 1899, according to her best recollection (Rec., p. 4424). This is the earliest date fixed by any of them. Thomas Brewer, a responsible business man, engaged in the cattle business near Wagoner for many years, moved into Wagoner either in the year 1899 or 1900, he could not recall which, but he remembers that the year he moved there was the "dry year," and that Thomas Atkins and some other boys had been getting milk from his cows, but owing to the drouth he had disposed of his cows except some for family use, and he remembered Tommy from this circumstance as living at that time. He knew him well, and had known him for some years (Rec., p. 2557). Sheriff Long remembers circumstances which places his death in the year which he thought was 1901 (Rec., p. 2447).

Frank Engles, a building contractor, living at Wagoner from 1890 to November, 1901, said he knew Tommy from the time he was about a year old, toddling around with Nancy until about a year and a half before he left Wagoner (Rec., pp. 2558-2560). This would make his death about the spring of 1900, as testified to by Nancy (Rec., p. 2699).

John T. Beard, a merchant in Wagoner, knew Nancy and her boy from the time the boy was two or three months old until his death, which he recalls as 1901 or 1902 (Rec., p. 2478). John Ford, an intelligent negro, who lived in or about Wagoner for many years, was well acquainted with Nancy and the Burnies and knew Tommy from his infancy, and remembers his death, which he fixes as about 1899. He contributed twenty-five cents for his burial (Rec., p. 2506). J. L. Dyer lived near Wagoner and was well acquainted with Nancy and Tommy, and knew Tommy from the time he was a few months old, prior to Nancy's going to the penitentiary, and he saw him frequently up until about 1901, when he died, and his impression is that he was nine or ten years old when he died (Rec., p. 2520). Kirk Turnbo knew Nancy and Tommy, and remembers that W. U. Hall, mayor of Wagoner, took a collection for Tommy's burial. The boy was about ten or eleven years old at his death (Rec., p. 2531). W. A. McElroy, formerly in the cattle business near Wagoner, and who was in Wagoner a great deal, said he knew of Nancy's having a child born back of Davis & Jones' store, and a collection being taken for her benefit at that time, about 1890, and he saw the child off and on from that time until he, McElroy, left Wagoner in 1901. The last that he remembers seeing Tommy was about 1899, and he was apparently 7 or 8 years old (Rec., pp. 2572-2573).

J. B. White, one of the lessees of Nancy, lived at Wagoner for five years from 1895, and worked in Davis & Jones' store. He knew Nancy and Tommy well all the time he lived there, and he saw Tommy until about 1900 (Rec., p. 2748).

We have somewhat tediously reviewed some of the material evidence proving that Tommy Atkins was living April 1, 1899, as this testimony is important, not only to prove this fact, but that his existence was well known in that community, and as his death occurred certainly, according to all the testimony, not earlier than April 1, 1899, and probably a year or two years later, it is reasonable to assume that this information possessed by a whole community, could have been and doubtless would have been conveyed to the Dawes Commission. The testimony shows it was extremely diligent in gathering the information of all of these unaccounted-for Creeks, and it is not possible that such well known information as this could have escaped their searching investigation. Contrast this state of the evidence regarding Nancy's son with it regarding Minnie's supposititious son. His existence on April 1, 1899, resting on Minnie receiving at Fort Wayne, two letters from an unremembered friend, one telling of his sickness and one of his death, at a date sought to be fixed as the summer of 1899. No contention has been or can be made that the information possessed by Minnie's witnesses, who testified to Tommy living at Leavenworth until 1900, was conveyed to the Dawes Commission, but if it had been conveyed, it would have destroyed his right to enrollment on account of his non-residence.

2. That Thomas Atkins was a resident of the Indian Territory. The same witnesses who proved Nancy's son's birth, life and death, all testified to his residence in the Creek Nation. Any information concerning him conveyed to the Dawes Commission would necessarily carry with it this fact and fulfill one of the essential requirements to his enrollment just as certainly as any information concerning Minnie's supposititious son, Thomas, would have carried information of his continued non-residence in the Creek Nation and would have destroyed any right to enrollment.

3. Minnie Atkins was put down as the mother on the Census Card. We have elsewhere argued that the Commission could not have intended putting down as the mother of Thomas the same woman whom they put down as the mother of Charlie and Harvey Harrison, because: (a) She went under the name of Minnie Harris or Minnie Harrison; (b) she was a half-blood, while the mother of Thomas was a full-blood; (c) she was a non-resident of the Indian Territory, and minor childen of non-residents were not enrolled without their location in the Territory being definitely known, such as the cases of Charlie and Harvey Harrison. The reference to Number 213 on the Euchee Roll of 1895, clearly shows that the Commission was intending to enroll a son of one of this Atkins group, and they could not, for the reasons given, have intended to enroll a non-resident son of non-resident Minnie and of a non-citizen father. It must be assumed that they intended to enroll the son of one in this group, and Nancy was the only other one who could answer the description. And as they wrote "Atkins" instead of "Harris," evidently it was Nancy that they had in mind, and merely made a mistake as to the first name. The surname "Atkins" was the more controlling thought, for it was the family to which they were looking. When 500 or 600 names a day were being enrolled, it was easy to commit such an error. It was a slight error to confuse the first names of these two sisters, but it would have been a grievous error had they enrolled a non-resident of the Indian Territory whose mother was also a non-resident and whose father was a white man. Furthermore, had they been intending to enroll this supposititious son of Minnie, they made further errors as to age, blood and postoffice address.

4. Thomas Atkins was a male. This was based on information, or inference from the name.

5. Thomas Atkins was ten years old. The testimony of Nancy (Rec., p. 2698), is that he was born September, 1890. The testimony of the following witnesses, which may be found at the following pages, corroborates her:

R. F. Davis, 1204; J. K. McClaren, 4408; J. H. Anderson, 4415; J. E. Newberry, 2419; John T. Beard, 2475; Charles Bailey, 2428; J. L. Dyer, 2519; Frank Engles, 2558; W. A. McElroy, 2568; Ellis Childers, 2640.

Taken in connection with the record of Nancy's conviction in federal court, December 23, 1890 (Rec,. p. 4821), there can be no doubt whatever of the approximate date of Tommy's birth. This is corroborated also by the testimony of many witnesses who describe Tommy as they knew him in later years, and from his appearance, and age given from his appearance, at the time that they knew him, which shows that this date was correct. We refer especially to Sheriff Long, Sheriff Ruble, Thomas Brewer, Mrs. Miller, J. N. Schrimpsher, M. J. Phillips, W. C. Smith, D. W. Best, J. M. Preston, M. I. Sullivan and J. B. White. Therefore, when the Dawes Commission described Thomas Atkins as a ten-year-old boy on May 23, 1901, they correctly described Nancy's boy, who would have been ten years and eight months of age.

In striking contrast to this accuracy of description of Nancy's son, is the inaccuracy of it if it was intended to apply to Minnie's supposed son who Judge CAMPBELL found was born in June, 1885, which would make him at the date of this enrollment a few weeks of sixteen years. Certainly if the Commission ascertained the facts, and we must assume that they did, the court must know that they intended to enroll the ten-year-old son of Nancy, and not the sixteen-year-old supposed son of Minnie.

6. The father of Thomas Atkins was a white man. Nancy told J. M. Preston that her son, Tommy, was a white man's child (Rec., p. 2576). Several of the witnesses described the appearance of the child as of mixed-blood, and some of them thought he had negro as well as white and Indian blood in him. Engles described him as always dirty, ill-kept and ragged (Rec., pp. 2558-2561). This fact, and the further fact that he lived with negroes, doubtless gave rise in the minds of some that there was negro blood mixed with the white and Indian. All of them described him as straight-haired and said that his hair was light. Engles described his hair as brownish yellow, dirty color (Rec., p. 2561). Brewer described his hair as molasses color (Rec., p. 2547), and so did a number of other witnesses. Mrs. Miller said he was Indian and white, with some appearance of negro, and that his hair was a yellow molasses color, "kind of sandy." "We call them dishwater blondes." (Rec., p. 4426). Nancy says that his hair was quite light in his early years, but grew darker as he grew older. So did some of the other witnesses. Almost every witness who describes him calls something noticeable about his hair. It was unquestionably much lighter than would be expected of one with an Indian mother, and could mean but one thing, and that was, that he had a white father.

The unqualified opinions of such men as Sheriff Ruble, Mr. McElroy, Mr. Way and Mr. Schrimpsher that he was half white and half Indian would be such information as would call for the Dawes Commission to enroll him as a half-blood, his mother appearing as a full-blood, which they did. On the other hand, it was impossible to have enrolled Minnie's son of a white father as a half-blood, as she appears as a half-blood herself on her cards and that of her sons, Charlie and Harvey.

7. That the mother of Thomas Atkins was a full-blood. As heretofore stated, Nancy regarded herself as a full-blood, and Minnie regarded herself as a half-blood, and the records of the Dawes Commission carry each of them respectively according to their respective claims. As heretofore seen, Mr. Merrick was emphatic in stating that Minnie's old Creek card was consulted when this enrollment was made. With that card before their eyes containing the statement that Minnie was a half-blood, and the information then before them that Tommy's father was a white man, it is impossible to assume for a moment that the Commission was intending to write down a white father and a half-blood mother and produce a half-blood son. Therefore they were not intending this woman when they wrote "Minnie Atkins." Nancy's enrollment record and her census card and her own claim of full-blood answers the description of the mother of Thomas being a full-blood.

8. That the postoffice address of Thomas Atkins was Muskogee, Indian Territory. Sam Brown knows that he gave what information he had of the unaccounted Euchees to the enrollment clerks at Okmulgee in May, 1901, but does not remember whether he was asked about Thomas Atkins, or not, but says if he was, he told them all that he knew (Rec., pp. 225-226). He knew that Minnie did not continue to live in the Indian Territory after the 1895 payment (Rec., p. 223). He knew that Nancy did live in the Indian Territory, sometimes knowing of her at Wagoner and sometimes at Muskogee (Rec., p. 231). If he had been called upon to give her address he was as likely to have given Muskogee as Wagoner.

So far as this record shows, the last word spoken to the Dawes Commission at Okmulgee regarding the Atkins family is when Noah Gregory told Mr. Hopkins that Minnie had gone to Colorado, and he did not know whether she was living, and that they had tried to find out if she was living, but had not been able to locate her (Rec., p. 234). Her sons, Charlie and Harvey, had been enrolled in February, 1900 (Gov. Exh. 33), and they were, therefore, not on the list of unaccounted for Creeks. Mr. Gregory was well acquainted with the Robinsons, and Nancy's testimony shows that they knew of her son Tommy (Rec., p. 3735), and Gregory was well acquainted with Tom Holden.

Right here is unquestionably the explanation of the postoffice address of the census card of Thomas

Atkins, as Muskogee. Mr. Gregory was at that time King of Euchee Town (see testimony of Larry Brown, Rec., p. 1712, and George Clinton, Rec., p. 1718). Mr. Hopkins testified that in March the Commission sent to each Town King (also to many Warriors) a list of the unaccounted for names on their respective town Rolls (Rec., p. 194). He further testified that at the session at Okmulgee when this enrollment was made, these Town Kings were all sent for and he describes in full the procedure of getting information from them and on the information obtained from them, the Warriors and other reliable parties, large numbers were added to the roll in those last few days (Rec., pp. 198-210). This list sent out by the Commission was evidently the one referred to by Mr. Gregory when he was summoned to Okmulgee to give information (Rec., pp. 233-234). He testifies to being before Mr. Hopkins with his list of Euchees and that he gave all the information that he possessed of the unaccounted-for ones of his tribe. He was there to supply this information and testified that he gave all which he then possessed. He says he was called to Okmulgee by the Dawes Commission in May, 1901, "To help them enroll the names and to correct the roll and compare them with the roll I had" (Rec., p. 233). He relates an anecdote which Mr. Hopkins told him at this time, and remembered that Mr. Hopkins was suffering with a severe cold (Rec. p.234). He remembers distinctly that Minnie Atkins was discussed when her name was reached, and he told Mr. Hopkins when he last heard of her she had gone to Colorado, and that they had tried to find her (Rec., p. 234). He told of a trip he made to Muskogee in company with Tom Holden, Minnie's brother-in-law, and Holden had told him of Minnie's sons, Charlie and Harvey, living with him and his desire to file for them, but had not done so yet (Rec., p. 234). This was evidently before he secured the power of attorney of Minnie to file for them (Rec., pp. 4712-4715).

Minnie stated to her attorneys and associates in Kansas City that she never told her half-sister, Kate (Mrs. Holden), anything about Tommy (Rec., p. 4069).

It must be remembered that this man, Tom Holden, is the same man whom Mr. Way testified went to Wagoner and there got Nancy's son, Thomas, and brought him to his home and kept him there for some time until Nancy came and took him back (Rec., p. 2591). No one can read Mr. Way's testimony and fail to be convinced that Tom Holden had Nancy's boy, Thomas, there at his home for some time. Mr. Way described this boy as half-blood in appearance; is positive that his name was Thomas; gives his apparent age and a personal description of him which fits in entirely with that of the many Wagoner witnesses. Here we have this man who had charge of this boy for a while, and who sought to lift him from the low level in which his mother had left him, telling of caring for Minnie's boys, Charlie and Harvey, and his intention to select and file for them, to Mr. Gregory. It was Mr. Gregory's duty, as King of the Euchee tribe to know these people, and he evidently did so, for he appeared before Mr. Hopkins with a Roll of the unaccounted-for ones and compared it with the Tribal Rolls. There could be no doubt but what Mr. Holden, in discussing this family, told him of Nancy's boy, whom he had sought to rear and care for. Mr. Gregory knew both Lee Atkins and Nancy Atkins personally, but had no personal acquaintance with Minnie, but knew of her and knew her boys, Charlie and Harvey (Rec., pp. 235-236). He had made inquiries of her, and unquestionably had made inquiries of Nancy and what children, if any, she had. He knew Lee Atkins was dead long before the enrollment, and was asked where Nancy lived, and replied: "She used to live here in Muskogee, when I first knew her she was in Eufaula" (Rec., p. 235). He was asked if he was acquainted with Minnie's immediate family outside of Nancy and Lee, and he said that he knew John Davis, Minnie's uncle, and "old lady Robinson, William Robinson's wife; that she was an aunt of hers. I knew her well" (Rec., p. 236). She was the aunt who raised Nancy, and the uncle who offered to enroll her and her son. As these people were well known to Mr. Gregory, doubtless they imparted this information to him, whose duty it was to put these names on the Tribal Roll and on the Dawes Commission Roll. Mr. Gregory, naturally, after a lapse of sixteen years, did not remember what information he gave the Dawes Commission as to the individual members of his tribe.

He was there for the purpose of giving information and gave all he possessed (Rec., p. 237).

It must be remembered that this name, Thomas Atkins, No. 213, was one of the names discussed by Gregory and Hopkins at the very time of this enrollment, and unquestionably Mr. Gregory was, at least, one source, if not the sole source, of information to the Dawes Commission of the Thomas Atkins on the Euchee Roll. The Government put on the stand Larry Brown (Rec., p. 1712). Chicken (Rec., p. 1714), and George Clinton (Rec., p. 1716), Euchee Warriors, who were also at Okmulgee during this session of the Commission there. None of these men knew this Atkins family. They and Gregory and Brown were the only Euchees at Okmulgee so far as this record shows. Sam Brown was there at the same time Gregory was before the Dawes Commission and for the same purpose; he disclaims any knowledge or information of Thomas Atkins' parentage. He knew that he was one of the children of the Atkins family, but did not know which one was his mother (Rec., p. 230).

From Mr. Gregory's intimate touch with the Robinsons and with Tom Holden, it is properly deducible that he told Mr. Hopkins that this Thomas Atkins was a son of Nancy, and as he remembered Nancy's last residence was Muskogee, therefore, the postoffice on this census card of Nancy's boy is put down as Muskogee. Nancy had been raised by the Robinsons near Muskogee, and lived there until 1890, and Mr. Gregory associated Nancy with it and in that way Muskogee, instead of Wagoner, appears as the postoffice on this card. Charlie and Harvey, Minnie's sons, had been enrolled long prior to this and the postoffice of one is put down as Tulsa and the other as Wagoner; Charlie was living near there with Charlie Bailey. Therefore, there is no chance of a confusion in the records with one of these boys. Mr. Gregory is positive that he never heard of Minnie having any children other than Charlie and Harvey. Therefore, the conclusion is irresistible that this unheard-of sixteen-year-old quarter-blood non-resident son of Minnie could not have been intended by the Commission as the person enrolled on information given by Mr. Gregory or Sam Brown or any of these other Euchees. Every reasonable presumption is that the information given by Mr. Gregory was intended for Nancy's son. Such information as Mr. Holden imparted would have fitted exactly with the description of Nancy's son, as shown in the census card, except the first name of the mother. Considering the fact that the Commission was enrolling five or six hundred names a day, it is quite easy to see how the name of Minnie, instead of Nancy, was written before the surname of Atkins, in describing the mother of the person intended to be enrolled.

Read Mr. Way's testimony (commencing at page 2591), describing the boy at Tom Holden's house, who was Nancy's son, and read the description on the census card of Thomas Atkins, and excepting the given name of the mother, it is an accurate description of this boy. Undoubtedly, Mr. Holden gave information of this boy to Mr. Gregory on the trip which they took together to Muskogee, when they were discussing this family, it is unreasonable to believe to the contrary and it must not be forgotten that Minnie stated positively that she never told Mrs. Holden of the existence of her son Thomas (Rec., p. 4065). Therefore, Mr. Gregory could not have had information of Minnie's son through the Holdens and as the Holdens were shown to know Nancy's son, Thomas, and the Robinsons shown to know of him, there cannot be much, if any, doubt that Mr. Gregory was informed of him through them, and he put him on his list as Nancy's son and gave that information to the Commission, and that was the basis of the enrollment.

In confirmation of our deduction that Noah Gregory was the informant of the Dawes Commission of the existence of Thomas Atkins, the son of Nancy, there is found a letter in the records of the Dawes Commission to him. This letter is dated May 9, 1905, and states that the Commission was informed that Thomas Atkins was dead and sent him a form of affidavit of death and stated it was desired that he cause it to be filled out and properly executed by some person knowing the facts, a near relative preferred (Rec., p. 4663). So far as the record showed, this letter, written four years after the enrollment of Thomas Atkins, was the first attention which the Commission gave to this allotment. Information came to the Commission that Thomas Atkins was dead, and, in pursuance of its duty to locate the heirs of Thomas Atkins, the Commission writes to Noah Gregory. Evidently some member of the Commission handling this matter remembered that Noah Gregory was the informant, or else there was some record showing that Noah Gregory was in touch with the enrolled person. This matter was much fresher in the minds of those who handled this enrollment at that time than it was at the time when they testified, and most likely Mr. Hopkins, or Mr. Merrick, or Mr. Bixby, may have had personal recollections then that it was on information conveyed by Noah Gregory that this enrollment was made, and therefore, this letter went to him seeking needed information as to the heirs of the person enrolled on Mr. Gregory's statement.

When this matter was fresher in the mind of Sam Brown than when he testified in this trial, he was before the Commission on October 25, 1904, on the still pending investigation of Minnie Harris' citizenship. While this citizenship proceeding was under the name of Minnie Harris, it refers to Minnie Atkins. This is evident because it was under her field number, 3718, which appears opposite her name on both the 1890 Roll and the 1895 Pay Roll.

Brown testified then that he was Minnie's second cousin and that he did not know whether she was living or dead; she was out of the country, but was back here and drew money at a payment, which he thinks was the payment made by Judge Moore; he is somewhat hazy as to whether it was the $14 payment or the $29 payment, but thinks it was the latter, which would be the 1890 payment, but he is mistaken about that, as Judge Moore was the paymaster of the 1895 payment, when Minnie drew money on September 24, 1895, as shown by the Pay Roll, and when Brown was present. He said that she drew her money and some of her brother's money, and left the country and did not return. While somewhat hazy in his recollection, the outstanding facts in his mind were that Minnie got money, which did not belong to her in 1895 and left the country and had not been back here since (Rec., pp. 4716-4717).

Brown testified in this trial that he was before the Dawes Commission in May, 1901; he told them whatever he then knew about Thomas Atkins (Rec., p. 225). Brown asserted in his testimony several times that he did not know who the Thomas in this family was, only that he was a member of the Atkins family, but he let go unchallenged the testimony of Ellis Childers to the effect that in 1895 when the Creek Roll was being compiled that he (Brown) called Childers before the Census Committee to assist in making up the Roll of this Atkins family, and that in Brown's presence he identified, or as he expressed it, "verified" the Thomas Atkins on that list as the son of Nancy.

It is quite probable that Brown told these enrollment clerks in May, 1901, of this statement of Childers made in his presence when this Thomas Atkins went upon the Creek Roll.

The fact that he associated Nancy with Muskogee as much or more than he did Wagoner, could also account for the fact that Muskogee appears as the postoffice of Thomas Atkins, which would be a natural mistake if they were intending to enroll Nancy's son. It is quite certain he could have given them no information which would enroll a non-resident son of Minnie.

It is a patent fact that the Commission intended to enroll Thomas Atkins on the Euchee Roll of 1895, on information obtained on May 23, 1901. Mr. Merrick, the enrollment officer who wrote this Census Card, says that this outside information obtained at the time the enrollment was made, consisted of information given to him or Mr. Bixby or Mr. Hopkins by some Creek King, Warrior or other reliable person, to the effect that this child was a son of Minnie Atkins, as it appears upon the card, and that his father was a white man and that his mother was a full-blood, or else he would not have been written down as a half-blood; and that he was a male, although that may have been inferred from the name, Thomas; and that he was 10 years of age; and that his postoffice address was Muskogee; and that the other information contained in the Census Card was obtained from the 1895 Pay Roll and the 1895 Authentic Roll (Rec., pp. 3465-3480). Therefore, the question for consideration is, from what source was this information obtained upon which this enrollment was based? Most of the enrollments at that time were being made upon the information from the Town Kings, checking up the list of the unaccounted for names, and from such other persons, Creek Warriors, officers or anyone else who had knowledge of any of these unaccounted for names upon the Tribal Rolls.

This review of the testimony of the information of the then Town King, Noah Gregory, and the former Town King, Sam W. Brown, shows that this information could not have been obtained from them, if this was a son of Minnie who was enrolled; but, most likely would have been obtained from them, if it was the son of Nancy who was enrolled.

We now invite your attention to the consideration of whether any of the relatives of Minnie could have conveyed this information, or misinformation, to the Dawes Commission on May 23, 1901. John Davis was released from the Detroit penitentiary in February, 1896 (Rec., p. 4988). In her Kansas City conference an effort was made to "refresh" Minnie's mind to the effect that she saw her Uncle John before she went to the payment at Okmulgee in September, 1895, but this effort was not successful. Her statement leaves John Davis entirely out of the payment (Rec., pp. 4064-4065). She did not indicate, as she might have done, that he had an excellent reason for not being there, but she does say that he was not there and that he was not killed until after the payment (Rec., p. 4064). Mr. C. W. Turner, a merchant of Muskogee, knew the Euchee, John Davis, and says he was killed after 1895. He could not fix definitely the date, but he was certain that it was before 1900 (Rec., p. 4369). This fixes the fact that he was dead before this enrollment on May 23, 1901; and hence he could not have been a source of information to the Dawes Commission of Minnie's son, Thomas. Mrs. Robinson, the wife of Col. William Robinson, was the aunt of Minnie and Nancy, and raised Nancy. Nancy left their house the summer of 1890, because she was in a pregnant condition and did not want to bring disgrace to this family (Rec., p. 2698). She testifies to Col. Robinson's visiting her at Wagoner, and he asked her if she wanted him to enroll her and her child, which she admitted to him was there with her, and she asked him to do it, and he promised to do it. She says that the enrollment that she was speaking of was being held at Coweta (Rec., p. 2736). This enrollment at Coweta was unquestionably by one of the field parties that Mr. Hopkins spoke of being sent out into the Creek Nation in the fall of 1897, and that their efforts to make a Roll, being unsuccessful, that these Rolls thus started were abandoned. This is only important in showing that the Robinsons had knowledge of Nancy and her child. And there is no evidence that they had knowledge of Minnie and her alleged child, but on the contrary, it is the testimony of Ellis Childers that he was well acquainted with the Robinsons and spent nights at their house, as he was with other members of this family; and that he knew there was a family reputation that Minnie had only two children, Charlie and Harvey, and that Nancy had a boy (Rec., pp. 2647, 2648, 2662). Therefore, the Robinsons could not have been a source of information to the Dawes Commission either directly or indirectly that Minnie had a son named Thomas.

Mrs. Kate Holden was a half-sister of Minnie. Her husband was Thos. E. Holden, and she had a son by a former marriage, named Mitchell Wordsworth. In her Kansas City conference Minnie stated repeatedly that she had not written to her relatives in the Indian Territory of the existence of Tommy, and specifically stated that Mrs. Holden and Nancy knew nothing of his existence (Rec., pp. 4061, 4069, 4070, 4076). Mitchell Wordsworth testified that his Aunt Minnie wrote to him from Detroit in 1898 or 1899 to enroll her and her sons, Charlie and Harvey, and did not mention Thomas (Rec., pp. 4598-4601). On April 2, 1900, Minnie executed a power of attorney to Thos. E. Holden to select lands and file for herself and her sons, Charlie and Harvey, and did not mention Thomas (Rec., p. 4712). Therefore, if any of the Holden family were before the Commission on May 23, 1901, necessarily, there would have been no information to the Commission from this family that Minnie had a son named Thomas, or any other child than these two who had lived with them and concerning whom she wrote to her nephew.

Fred Bowers appeared on August 25, 1904, before the Commission on the still pending investigation of Minnie's citizenship, and he testified that she had not been in the Territory for something like four or five years before the Land Office opened (which was April 1, 1899); that she had been in the Territory at that time about two years and prior to that period had been out of the Territory seven or eight years. He thought she lived in California (Rec., p. 4714). Therefore, this cousin could not have given information to the Commission of the existence of her son Thomas, because he knew that she was a non-resident and there is no indication that he knew of the existence of this child; and if he had, his non-residence, coupled with that of his mother, would necessarily exclude him from enrollment.

Sam Brown also appeared in this same investigation, which is heretofore referred to, and he there mentioned Ed Schremcher, her first cousin, and Tom Bowles, as possible sources of information (Rec., p. 4716). Bowles' name is not otherwise mentioned in the record as a relative or in any other connection. Ed Schremcher's name appears on the head of the house, according to the Tribal Rolls. In her Kansas City statement, she was asked if she knew Ed Schremcher, when she was being questioned in regard to the payment in 1895, and she answered: "Well, they spoke a whole lot about him and I suppose I do." But she said he was not at the payment (Rec., p. 4066). Clearly, he was not sufficiently in her confidence to have informed the Commission of the existence of her son Thomas.

There is no question that her brother Lee died in 1894.

We have set down here in this review every relative shown on the Tribal Rolls who would likely have had information of her, and everyone whom the evidence has disclosed, and the state of the record concerning these relatives unquestionably precludes the possibility that any of them could have given the Dawes Commission information which Mr. Merrick says that this Commission possessed on May 23, 1901, that the person then enrolled was a son of Minnie and the other qualifying facts which would have produced this enrollment. It is submitted that this evidence conclusively establishes the fact that no possible information or misinformation could have been conveyed to the Dawes Commission that the Thomas Atkins enrolled on May 23, 1901, was her son; nor that he was a resident, nor that he was living April 1, 1899, and therefore the deduction is irresistible that it was a mere error of the first name of the mother in writing upon the census card as Minnie Atkins instead of writing Nancy Atkins.

The opinion of Judge VAN VALKENBUGH, writing the opinion of the court below (Rec., p. 5004), leaves the inference that the writer of the opinion was under the impression that the census card recital that Minnie was the mother amounted to a finding of the Dawes Commission to that effect, and he referred to the fact that Congress had invested that Commission with complete authority and clothed its decisions with presumptions of verity. If we are right in our surmise that this is the meaning of the opinion, this may account for the error of the court below in affirming the decree on a mistaken theory that this census card recital was a judgment of the Dawes Commission. The recitals of this census card are nothing but hearsay evidence between adverse claimants. They are not judgments or findings of fact in any respect so far as rights of parties claiming title to the land held under an enrolled person. This court held that recitals on an Indian census roll, which was made pursuant to an Act of Congress and directions of the Secretary of the Interior were mere hearsay and not even admissible as evidence.

—Hegler v. Faulkner, 153 U. S. 109;

to the same effect:

Dickson v. Luck Land Company, 242 U. S. 371.

The courts of Oklahoma have, necessarily, had before them many times the probative value of recitals on census cards such as the one now at bar. The Act of Congress of May 27, 1908, made the enrollment records conclusive of age and quantum of blood for the purpose of determining right of alienation, but confined its own operation to questions arising under the Act and not to independent or related questions.

—Cornelius v. Yarbrough 44 Okla. 375;
Charles v. Thornburgh, 44 Okla. 379.

This Act, which made enrollment records conclusive as to age and quantum of blood did not establish those records as rules of evidence.

—Phillips v. Byrd, (Okla.) 143 Pac. 684.

These enrollment records, including the census card, are purely hearsay evidence outside of their one province.

Scott v. Brakel, 43 Okla. 655;
Charles v. Thornburgh, 44 Okla. 379;

Jackson v. Lair, (Okla.) 150 Pac. 162.

Elsewhere in this brief we have discussed the case of Nancy Atkins against Bartlett and the Gypsy Oil Company, which resulted in a judgment finding that Nancy was the mother of the Thomas Atkins enrolled May 23, 1901, and he was dead, and that she had inherited the land in controversy from him, and that Bartlett and the Gypsy Oil Company were holding under a forged deed. This decree is set out in this record at pages 93 to 97. Bartlett and the Gypsy Oil Company appealed to the Supreme Court of Oklahoma. Nancy's counsel moved to dismiss the appeal on the ground that it presented a moot question, as the forgery had been admitted, and Bartlett and the Gypsy Oil Company could claim nothing. And the court sustained them and said:

> "The fact that she recovered upon the theory that she and not her sister Minnie is the > the mother and sole heir-at-law of the original owner of the same establishes her relation and right as such as against such other parties to this case, and as against no one else."

>
> —Bartlett v. Atkins, (Okla.) 169 Pac. 1076.

Mullen v. Short, 38 Okla. 388, was an earlier case between contesting claimants under an enrolled person. The party recovered on the evidence against the recital of the census card.

Therefore, it is unquestionably the law in Oklahoma that these recitals in a census card have no sanctity as a finding of the Dawes Commission or of anything else. They are mere hearsay evidence, except for the purpose for which Congress makes them efficacious, which is to fix the age and quantum of blood for the purpose of alienation. The Circuit Court of Appeals of the Eighth Circuit has had this subject before it in Malone v. Alderdice, 212 Fed. Rep. 688.

That case was decided prior to the Act of 1908, making the enrollment records conclusive as to age and blood for the purpose of alienation; it is a consideration of the force and effect of recitals in a census card, in that particular instance the recital of the age, made under the Act of 1898, requiring the Dawes Commission to make a census of the Creek Nation. Judge SANBORN for the court said:

> "As well might it be claimed that the Commission's description on its rolls of a male as a female would conclusively adjudge that he was without right to marry a woman, or that > the recital of the ages of minor heirs as a matter of description in the record in a probate court of the administration and distribution to them of the estate of their ancestors would conclusively adjudge the time when their respective minorities would cease. This was not the purpose or the effect of this provision of the Act of 1898.

>
> "It was limited in object and in result to the making of a description of the persons enrolled for the purpose of their identification and not for the purpose of the final adjudication of the extent and limits of their disqualifications by reason of their respective ages or otherwise."
>
> —Malone v. Aldridge, 212 Fed. Rep. 668.

If the Dawes Commission made an adjudication, and that is really the substance of the whole claim of the Minnie and Page interests, that Minnie was the mother of Thomas Atkins, it likewise made an adjudication that he was 10 years of age, and that he was a half-blood. If he was Minnie's son, these adjudications were wrong. If he was Nancy's son, the so-called adjudication that he was Minnie's son was evidently wrong. In fact, none of these matters are adjudications. They are mere descriptive matter of the person enrolled. They contain the information or misinformation gathered by the Dawes Commission at the time that they made the enrollment which they wrote out upon the card to identify the enrolled person. While it appears that they had information that he was a half-blood; that he was 10 years old; that he was a son of Minnie; yet, as expressed by Mr. Merrick, the enrollment was "primarily intended for the Tommy Atkins that appears on the Euchee Roll No. 213" (Rec., p. 3479). His tribal status being fixed by that Roll, if the other qualifying facts were found by the Commission, that is, that he still was in existence until April 1, 1899, and resided in the Indian Territory on that date, he was entitled to enrollment, irrespective of his age, sex, blood or parentage. His tribal enrollment gave him his tribal citizenship, and the other qualifying facts appearing, he was entitled to enrollment and his description is only useful in identifying the person whom they intended to enroll as No. 213.

Attention is called to the fact that Judge CAMPBELL's opinion finds, with some particularity, that Minnie was the mother of Thomas Atkins, born at Granny Letcher's in the early part of June, 1885, in the city of Leavenworth, Kansas, and then finds that prior to the compilation of the Tribal Roll of 1895, Minnie had conveyed the information to certain of her relatives of the fact of the birth of Thomas Atkins, which information was eventually imparted to the tribal authorities, and that the name of Thomas Atkins, appearing No. 213 of the Euchee Band on the 1895 Roll was placed upon said Roll as the child of Minnie pursuant to such information. But the court made no finding whatever explaining how this Thomas Atkins, which he finds was the son of Minnie on the Tribal Roll, got upon the Dawes Commission Roll, other than that he was upon the Tribal Roll. The testimony of Mr. Merrick, who made out the enrollment card, as well as that of Mr. Bixby, the Commissioner in charge, Mr. Hopkins, the Chief Clerk, Mr. Hastain and Mr. Leiber, the other enrollment clerks, are positive that no one was enrolled merely because his name was upon the Tribal Roll, and that in addition to that fact there must have been independent information conveyed to the enrollment officers, outside of the fact that the name was upon the Tribal Roll, of the continued existence of the person and his residence in the Indian Territory. And, moreover, they all testified that age, sex, blood and residence and post office address was always obtained from information outside of the Tribal Roll; and yet Judge CAMPBELL'S opinion, at page 145, after finding that Minnie's son got on the Tribal Roll, makes no further finding as to how Thomas Atkins got upon the Dawes Commission Roll, other than that he was on the Tribal Roll. In other words, Judge CAMPBELL wholly missed the force of the testimony of Commissioner Bixby and these other gentlemen named, as his opinion indicates that he was under the belief that when he found the fact that Minnie's son was the one on the Tribal Roll, that that fact, necessarily included the fact that the same person was enrolled by the Dawes Commission because he was on the Tribal Roll; whereas the undisputed testimony of all these gentlemen is that the fact which he has found was alone wholly insufficient to put any name upon the Dawes Commission Roll, and that no person was ever enrolled merely because he was on a Tribal Roll, that in addition to that fact the other qualifying facts were found before anyone was ever enrolled.

It is confidently submitted that any finding of fact that the Dawes Commission intended by this enrollment to enroll the person now claimed to be Minnie's son, born in Leavenworth, Kansas, in June, 1885, and living there, and his death in 1899, is clear and manifest error.

A History of the Land and Litigation.

In order to grasp the full significance of the testimony in this case, particularly the testimony against Nancy, it is necessary to obtain its bearing in relation of the prior litigation as well as this litigation.

The time this allotment was made was prior to the development of oil in Oklahoma and the land was considered of little value and the allotment was an arbitrary one and not selected by the allottee or any one in his behalf. So far as this record informs us, the first person to become attracted to this land as oil land was H. U. Bartlett. His connection with it is very remarkable, to put it mildly.

In stating the facts regarding the history of this land in the litigation it is necessary to quote from Sadie James and Betty Mann as they were important factors in it, but we do not quote their testimony as furnishing the truth upon any proposition. It is probable that each of them can, upon occasion, tell the truth, but we are not quoting them as telling the truth, but merely as affording connecting links in the chain of events otherwise established. Sadie James says that Betty Mann and Micco Harjo procured the forged deed of a Minnie Atkins to Bartlett and said that Betty told her that J. B. White was going to make some trouble about it (Rec., p. 514).

Sadie's account of the forged deed is found at Rec., pages 552-553.

It must be remembered that this Micco Harjo was Nancy's guardian and was the central figure in the conspiracy of Bartlett to obtain the forged deed to this property and later to intimidate and bribe Nancy into supporting it.

Betty Mann says that she was in the bank at Lawrence, Kansas, when the forged deed of a Minnie Atkins was executed to Bartlett and that the woman named Minnie Atkins who signed it was found by Micco Harjo and two negroes (Rec., p. 1076).

She says she got $100 for her part in it (Rec., p. 1077).

We call attention to this deed in the record, dated October 2, 1912 (Rec., p. 4731) with Micco Harjo's name upon it as a witness.

To show the absolute corruption of Micco Harjo and that he necessarily knew that the woman who signed that deed was not Minnie Atkins there is found in the record a letter from him dated March 1, 1913, to the superintendent of the Carlisle Institute seeking trace of Minnie Atkins after she left Carlisle (Rec., p. 4864).

Betty Mann says that her first employment by Bartlett was to get the deed at Lawrence, Kansas, and his next employment of her was sending for her at Kansas City and directing her to go to Nowata and bring Nancy to Sapulpa, which she did at the time Nancy gave her deposition in the office of Bartlett's attorneys (Rec., p. 1090).

Bartlett took possession of this land under his forged deed on the 23rd day of January, 1913, and began improving the property, fencing it and having houses built upon it. See the testimony of Green (Rec., pp. 314 and 315).

Bartlett executed an oil and gas lease to the Gypsy Oil & Gas Company on the 27th of November, 1912 (Rec., pp. 10, 11).

The Gypsy Oil Company started a well on December 25, 1913, and struck oil January 23, 1914. They continued development until Page took forcible possession on the night of July 4, 1914 (Rec., pp. 314, 315).

The next in sequence of events to Bartlett's interest in this land was that of J. B. White. He was employed by Davis & Jones as a collector. He was well acquainted with Nancy Atkins and well acquainted with her boy Tommy and described him when he first knew him as apparently five or six years old, very dirty, and looked like a mixed Indian and white. He missed Nancy from Wagoner about 1898 or 1899.

He usually saw the boy in company with Betty Burney's children, who were negroes. He knew Betty Burney well. Betty Burney moved to the Verdigris and spent about a year there.

In 1913 the oil development in the Cushing field was going north from the developed wells, which would bring it towards this Atkins land. Several times when he was on trips away from home he would be asked if he knew Tommy Atkins. He was an old-timer in that country, and people would make inquiries of him. When he first heard these inquiries the development was from five to seven miles from the Atkins land (Rec., pp. 2747-2749).

He mentioned several parties who made inquiries of him, among others Bartlett, who asked him and several others who were together if they knew Thomas Atkins or his heirs. It was a common occurrence at that time for inquiries to be made of Thomas Atkins. He did not tell parties inquiring what he knew of Thomas Atkins but went to investigating on his own hook to ascertain if the Thomas Atkins he knew at Wagoner was the one inquired of and whether he had died before allotment. He went to Muskogee and investigated the census cards of this family (Rec., p. 2765).

He wrote to Jones, a friend of his at Wagoner, about him, and not getting a reply, looked up Charlie Bailey, who had formerly worked for Davis & Jones, and went to see Charlie Bailey, who was then living at Sand Springs. His object was to see if he was right about Tommy Atkins and what became of him, and Charlie Bailey told him that he had died. He then went to see Nancy at Nowata and had a conference with her and her guardian, Micco Harjo. He desired to obtain a lease from Harjo as her guardian. He was told that Nancy had already made a lease to Ellis Hammett and associates, but he was told that it was a commercial lease and probably would not be approved and if it was not approved Harjo told him that he would let him have a lease. This lease was dated April 15, 1913 (Rec., pp. 10 and 11), and there is disclaimer of Hammett and his associates in this record of any interest therein. This lease was not approved and Harjo notified White of it and White went to Nowata and applied for a lease to the County Court and after due advertisement he bought the lease and it was approved. This lease is dated May 27, 1913 (Rec., pp. 10, 11), and is the lease under which White, Ferguson and Rutherford are claiming under Nancy.

White's first step was to bring suit in the name of Micco Harjo, as guardian of Nancy, against Bartlett and the Gypsy Oil Company. This suit was filed July 23, 1913.

White discovered on a trip to Lawrence, Kansas, that the Bartlett deed was a forgery (Rec., p. 2754). This suit was set for trial February 26, 1914.

White was notified to appear at the office of McDougal & Lytle, Bartlett's attorneys at Sapulpa, on February 9, for the taking of depositions. He had not seen Nancy from the time her lease was approved until she appeared there (Rec., p. 2755).

In order to connect events it is necessary to turn back in the order of events to get light upon this appearance of Nancy in McDougal & Lytle's office. Prior to her appearance there she made a statement at Coffeyville, Kansas, to a lawyer representing Bartlett. This is brought out fully in her testimony before Judge Stanfield. Mr. McGraw, Bartlett's attorney, read from that statement, the purport of which was that she denied that she was the mother of Thomas Atkins (Rec., p. 2777).

She explains in her testimony that statement. She says that Micco Harjo was offered money to take her out of Oklahoma and that he was moving to Portland and was to take her along with him. Harjo told her that he could get hold of $500 if she would do what he wanted her to do, and she asked what it was for, and he told her that Bartlett was there and offered him $500 if he could get her to deny the child, and said that they would not have anything to do but to get clean out of it, and it would be better for her and better for him. And he told her that this is getting to be a big lawsuit and there will be more lies sworn about this, and she would be liable to get into the penitentiary and she had better take his advice. She told him that the penitentiary was a place she did not want to go if she could keep out of it. He told her Bartlett was here and wanting to see her and he came there and talked to her and she told him that she would get clean out of it because she hadn't any money to spend on it. Bartlett gave Harjo $10 for expenses to meet him in Coffeyville. He made the appointment to meet them the next Monday. When they got to Coffeyville, Kansas, she was met by McGraw, Bartlett's lawyer, and made a statement there about the child, denying Thomas Atkins as her child. The statement was to the same effect as her testimony later at Sapulpa (Rec., pp. 2706, 2708, 2714, 2727).

She says that Bartlett never offered her a cent; that the offers came through Micco Harjo. That she had had him appointed as her guardian when she sold her homestead (Rec., pp. 2714-2715).

The Coffeyville episode was in August after the suit of Harjo in her behalf had been filed on the 26th day of July, 1913 (Rec., p. 2714).

Turning again to Betty Mann, it is seen that she testified that Bartlett sent for her when she was in Kansas City to go to Nowata to get Nancy and take her to Sapulpa, and that she did so and took her to her own home there (Rec., p. 1090).

Nancy states that she was not at Nowata, but at Coody's Bluff when a big automobile came up, sometime in February. In the automobile were Betty Mann and Bartlett's son, Elward, and a colored man named Vass Grissom and his bull dog. Vass sought her out and told her that Betty Mann was there wanting to see her and that there was big money in this if she would tell the truth about it. He said he was offering $2,000 and that would be her part of it if she got out of it. Soon Betty came, but she did not pay much attention to her as she knew her record. Nancy told her that she did not have sufficient clothes to go to Sapulpa and Betty told her that she would get clothes; that H. U. Bartlett was at Sapulpa and wanted to see her, and Nancy said, all right, and got into the car and went with them. When they got to Nowata they picked up Harvey, Minnie's son, also Mr. Whitehead, Bartlett's brother-in-law. She met Charles Rogers there. (It is elsewhere shown that he was Betty's paramour.) Charles Rogers commenced talking to her about Minnie and she told him that she didn't know whether Minnie was living or not; that she was under the impression that Minnie was dead. They went on to Sapulpa and went to Betty Mann's house. That was Thursday night, and they did not go to the office until the following Monday. Bartlett came to see her Friday morning after she got to Betty Mann's. He asked if she needed money. She told him no, but he gave her $5 for spending money (Rec., pp. 2700-2701).

On Monday she went to Mr. Lytle's office with Betty Mann's brother. Bartlett's son was there. Mr. Lytle wanted her to say that her child was a girl because they had framed up that way, and that if she said her child was a boy that she would go to the penitentiary and the best thing she could do was to claim that her child was a girl. They talked with her a few minutes and Bartlett's son gave her $4 more and Betty Mann told her that Bartlett was to give her $2,000 for her to deny the child, and that if she didn't she would go to the penitentiary. It was said that Bartlett was claiming that the boy was Minnie's and the best thing she could do was to admit that her child was a girl if she did not want to go to the penitentiary.

Then her deposition was taken. Mr. Maxey was there representing Mr. White, and she testified to the effect desired by Betty. She says that that testimony was false (Rec., pp. 2700-2705, 2723).

She says that she has never gotten anything out of it (Rec., p. 2714).

After she gave this deposition they wanted witnesses to support her statement, to prove that her child was a girl. She said she could pick up the witnesses if they would go over to Wagoner with her, and Harvey Harrison and Bartlett's son and Betty Mann went with her to Wagoner. The first place they went was to see Eliza Barnett, who appeared as a witness under the name of Eliza Sterling.

Eliza had not seen her for many years, but recognized her. "I says, 'Eliza, I come down here to ask you one question to see if you know,' I says, 'You remember my baby and your mother waiting on me, don't you?' She says, 'Yes.' I says, 'Listen good what I ask you, so you won't make no mistake if you ever have to testify in this case. Now do you remember that this child was it a girl or boy?' was the very question I asked her. And she looked up and looked around and Mr. Bartlett was standing there and Betty was standing there. And she says, 'Nancy, your child was a boy.' 'Now,' I says, 'are you right sure it was a boy?' and before I could say anything else to Eliza, Betty Mann says, 'You know good and well it was a girl.' I says, 'Well, now, that is what they want you to swear it was a girl,' I says, 'remember'."

Mr. Bartlett asked her then to get one more witness and I says, "I have found Angeline Moody" (Rec., pp. 2708-2709).

Then she tells about a similar visit and conference with Angeline Moody, Henry Kidd and others (Rec., p. 2709).

It was arranged that these parties that she saw there were to be at Sapulpa February 26.

Turning back in the order of events to the testimony of Mr. White. He says as soon as she testified in McDougal & Lytle's office that she was put in a car and left town. He was satisfied from her manner of testifying and her refusal to answer Judge Maxey's questions that she was telling a falsehood and he sent Ellis Childers to bring her to the trial (Rec., pp. 2756-2766).

He saw Ellis Childers bring her to the hotel where they kept her concealed until the trial, but he did not talk to her and did not know what she would testify. "I had taken a shot on it." (Rec., p. 2766.)

Mr. Gresham, one of his attorneys, talked to her before she went on the stand (Rec., p. 2767). In the trial his lawyers and Bartlett's got into a squabble and Bartlett's attorneys sought to introduce her deposition. His attorney, Judge Maxey, objected, as they did not show any reason why Nancy was not present, and Bartlett went on the stand and swore that they had used all energy they had to get Nancy, that she was out of the county and would not come. Then Judge Maxey told the court that she was there. The judge asked him if he could produce her and he sent Mr. White to the hotel for her and he brought her into court (Rec., pp. 2767-68-69-70).

It is interesting to turn to her testimony given under these circumstances. It is found beginning at pages 2774-2784.

When she was produced, Mr. Gresham asked that the defendant produce her testimony, which the court required (Rec., p. 2774). She was then examined by Mr. Lytle. She stated that she had given birth to a child, and in answer to the question, what kind of a child, boy or girl, said, "Supposed to be a boy, I guess."

Mr. Lytle asked how long it lived and she said, "Ten years," and Mr. Lytle then announced that they were entirely taken by surprise by this evidence, as the court could see from the evidence heretofore given in the deposition, and asked leave to cross examine, which was permitted (Rec., p. 2775). Then she was questioned about her appearance in the office of McDougal & Lytle on February 9 and that she there testified her child was a girl, and she admitted she had given such testimony. She says her testimony then given was false. She was asked if the next day she did not see Eliza Sterling and Angeline Moody. She said she did, but that they did not remember that her child was a girl. Then she told about the birth of her son. She admitted that she made the statement to McGraw at Coffeyville, Kansas, to the same effect as her deposition. She said she had given these statements and given her deposition because she was told there was good big money in it for her and that Harjo had got her to deny the child and to assert that it belonged to Minnie Atkins. That Harjo was the cause of it. She supposed that Bartlett paid him for it; that that was what he was out for. She does not know that Bartlett paid him (Rec., pp. 2766-2777).

She tells about Harjo going West because he got money on her land and also on some other matters that made it necessary for him to leave (Rec., p. 2782).

Then the court asked her to tell the truth about it and she said in reply to a question of Mr. Gresham that Thomas Atkins was supposed to be her son. The court told her she must answer and she said he was (Rec., p. 2783).

Then when Mr. McGraw questioned her about the answer that Thomas was supposed to be her son, she said that he was her son, and gave the names of Bob Delozier and Harry Burney, who knew that Thomas Atkins was her son (Rec., p. 2783).

Her deposition, which was set forth in this record, follows, beginning at page 2785:

On cross examination Nancy was asked about what Ellis Childers told her when he came to carry her to Sapulpa. Ellis told her that she was wanted in Sapulpa for this same case (Rec., pp. 2730-31), and he said, "You want to go and fix that because you might get into trouble." And Ellis did not say anything more about it, took her to the St. James Hotel, and the next thing came the test and she went on the stand.

Mr. White did not talk to her about it, no one discussed with her the effect of swearing one time that she had a girl and the other time that it was a boy (Rec., pp. 2719-2720).

The record shows that Eliza Sterling and Angeline Moody had already testified what Nancy and Betty Mann had suggested, that her child was a girl and born dead, and notwithstanding Nancy's repudiation of this, the Government has used them as witnesses again in this case to the same story that they testified at Sapulpa. It has put no testimony upon the stand in contradiction of Nancy's story of her procurement of their testimony. Bettie Mann does not deny it, and even if she did, it would carry no weight. Bartlett's son was not placed upon the stand; Vass Grissom was not placed upon the stand; Harvey Harrison was not placed upon the stand. The absence of these parties who could have contradicted Nancy if she was not telling the truth is a confession that she could not be successfully contradicted by them.

The next thing in sequence of attention to this land is that of Mr. Page. Mr. Long, his representative, testified that in February or March, 1914, this land was looking good as prospective oil land, and he looked up a Thomas Atkins in the army and Nancy's claims and dismissed both of them.

In May, 1914, Charles Rogers put him in touch with Betty Mann and he employed her to find Minnie Atkins, and he knew that she was already employed by Bartlett to find her and he offered her more than Bartlett did to have her turned over to him if Betty found her. In response to her summons from Seattle in June, he went there, found that she and Sadie James, either or both, had discovered Minnie and he began negotiations with Minnie and Captain McNab for her, and Mr. Hanford was employed by Captain McNab as his attorney to represent Minnie's interest. The result was that he brought Hanford back with him to Oklahoma, and he, acting for Minnie, made the lease for Captain McNab, as Minnie's trustee, with Page (Rec., pp. 3497-3510).

It is significant that early in his dealings he got in touch with Micco Harjo at Portland. And he gave him information about Bartlett and the Gypsy Oil Company's activities (Rec., pp. 3525, 3576).

The deed of trust of Minnie to McNab was made June 13, 1914. And the McNab lease of Minnie's interest to the Gem Oil Company (Page and Josey) was made June 24, 1914 (Rec., pp. 10-11).

It appears in the testimony of Mr. Hanford that before he made this lease that he went to Sapulpa and examined the record of Nancy's case against Bartlett and the Gypsy Oil Company, talked with the judge about intervening for Minnie and learned that the judgment was rendered in favor of Nancy the day after the date of the conference with the judge.

And he also went to Muskogee with Mr. Long and examined all the census cards of this family (Rec., p. 3699).

Two days before Page took forcible possession of the land, to-wit, on July 3, 1914, Minnie brought suit in the Creek District Court against her own sons, Charlie and Harvey Harrison, and the unknown heirs of Thomas Atkins. It is significant that in this suit she did not name Nancy, who had just won a suit against the parties in possession as the known heir of Thomas Atkins. This complaint was sworn to by Mr. Hanford. It contains the allegations that Minnie's alleged son, Thomas, died in the year 1901 or 1902 (Rec., pp. 4786-4789).

On July 7, Page brought suit against Nancy to quiet his possession which he had taken forcibly two nights before. His complaint contains the same allegations, sworn to by Mr. Page that Minnie's son died in 1901 or 1902 (Rec., pp. 4775-4779).

Mitchell Wadsworth, her nephew, testified that she wrote him in 1898 or 1899 to enroll Charlie and Harvey, but did not mention Tommy. She made a power of attorney to her brother-in-law, Tom Holden, on April 2, 1900 (Rec., p. 4468), empowering him to secure the rights of her sons, Charlie and Harvey Harrison, and did not mention Tommy. In the face of these facts it is rather difficult to explain these allegations in her complaint and Page's complaint that her son Thomas lived until 1901 or 1902.

Another episode in regard to Nancy is the appearance of Sadie James at Nowata in September, 1914. She tells of Page employing her to handle Nancy, and offered her a thousand dollars to get a confession from her and steal her from her guardian (a negro named Ridgeway had in the meantime been appointed her guardian), to take her to Kansas City and deliver her to Long, where her deposition would be taken, and then they were to take her to Seattle to live with Minnie (Rec., pp. 648-649).

She went to Nowata and learned that Mrs. Yarboro, a dressmaker, was a friend of Nancy's and could get her to do anything. She tells of a conference with Mrs. Yarboro in which Mrs. Yarboro wanted to be appointed a guardian for Nancy and would buy Nancy a home next to hers. Mrs. Yarboro wanted assurance of Sadie's story, and Sadie called up Page from Mrs. Yarboro's house under the name of Whittaker. The Government made an exhibit of the telephone bill showing the call of Whittaker to Page, September 25, 1914. (Government's Exhibit "A" 107, Rec., p. 4289.)

Mrs. Yarboro heard Sadie's end of the conversation with Page. She told Page that the party was ready to go and that he must meet her that night at Tulsa. (See Mrs. Yarboro's testimony, page 2748.)

Sadie tells a long story about meeting Page when she went back that night and he was not willing to pay her the amount of money that she wanted and the matter was dropped. And the next day she got a message from some unknown person at Nowata not to go back there, that she would be arrested for trying to kidnap Nancy (Rec., p. 669).

Mrs. Yarboro had become alarmed and asked Nancy who would protect her and Nancy told her to call Mr. White and to call him at Coweta. She did so, and put Nancy in a back room at her house until White came and took her away (Rec., p. 2744).

This telephone bill also shows her call on the same day to White (Rec., p. 4289).

White testified to getting the message and going in the night time to Nowata and finding Nancy in a back room at Mrs. Yarboro's and taking her to Ellis Childers (Rec., pp. 2756-2757). She stayed with Childers for three weeks (Rec., p. 2775).

Nancy's testimony as to what she terms the "frame up" of Bartlett to defeat her suit against him, by employing her guardian to corrupt her and cause her to swear falsely, is corroborated at every possible angle. Not a witness was called to contradict it in any particular. With painful detail and particularity she went into every circumstance relating to it; named the persons connected with it, and not a single one of them was placed upon the witness stand in contradiction of her. Her story is entirely consistent with the conduct of Bartlett and the conduct of Page in this case. Bartlett was holding under a forged deed from another Minnie Atkins, which his employee, Betty Mann, had procured, in conjunction with Micco Harjo. Finding himself defeated in his litigation to hold the land under that, he employed Betty Mann to find the real Minnie Atkins, and Page bought her up and got her to find Minnie for him; thereby, in the language of this class of people, "double-crossing" Bartlett. When Page admitted on the witness stand that he had employed Sadie James and Betty Mann to work up evidence for him in this case, and that he was fully aware of their characters before he employed them, he had invited suspicion to be cast upon every act which he has done, and when Bartlett, acting through the same instrumentalities, corrupted the guardian of this incompetent woman, the story Nancy tells needs no corroboration to prove the utter rottenness of those holding the titles against her, regarding the methods through which they procured them and sought to protect themselves. It is a black chapter in the oil history of Oklahoma.

Nancy Atkins Was the Mother of Thomas Atkins.

The Government alleged that there was no such person as Thomas Atkins, or if such a person, that he was not the son of Nancy Atkins. Minnie Atkins and the Page interests allege that Nancy Atkins had no son named Thomas Atkins and that the enrolled Thomas was Minnie's son, a subject elsewhere discussed.

Nancy Atkins asserts that she was the mother of Thomas Atkins, born at Wagoner in September, 1890, and died there about 1900, and that he was the Thomas Atkins enrolled by the Dawes Commission on May 23, 1901.

Upon the issue joined as to the existence of a son of Nancy named Thomas there were sixteen witnesses produced by the Government and three by the Page interests to sustain their contention, and thirty-five introduced by Nancy to sustain her contention.

Of the witnesses introduced by the Government one was a white man and fifteen were negroes; of those introduced by the Page interest two were Indians and one negro; of those introduced by Nancy on this issue there was one white woman, twenty-four white men, five negroes and five Indians. Two of the negro witnesses supporting her, Richard Burney and Bob Delozier, each had bad criminal records. They, however, were brought in intimate contact with Nancy at her home and that of her son, the residence of Betsy Burney, the mother of Richard Burney, and Bob Delozier was an associate of that family. One of the other negroes was the minister who conducted the funeral of Thomas Atkins. Two others were men of respectability and of responsible positions. The white woman, Mrs. Miller, was a woman of standing and owned the property where the Burneys lived, and in that way came in touch with the Burney family and with Nancy and her son Thomas. Of the twenty-five white men, most of them were men of standing and prominence in the community. Two of them had been sheriff of the county; one of them a newspaper editor, quite a number of farmers, a building contractor, a large number of merchants, one postmaster, several stock dealers, the president of a wholesale grocery company, and one of the Indians, Ellis Childers, had been Speaker of the House of Warriors and Treasurer of the Cherokee Nation. Some of the witnesses on behalf of Nancy were ignorant, some old and forgetful of dates, but most of them were men of intelligence and of affairs, and evidently from their occupations were leaders in the community where they lived. On the other hand, practically all the testimony against Nancy came from ignorant negroes and showed upon its face unreliability and inconsistencies, and part of it evidently testimony framed up to meet the occasion through the machinations of Bartlett and Page.

Much of the testimony against Nancy consisted of inconsequential statements made or claimed to have been made by her to the effect that she had no child such as she now claims, and when it is remembered that the child was an illegitimate and that Nancy sought to deceive her own family regarding his existence it is not strange that she made such statements as some of these witnesses claim that she did.

A careful analysis of all of this testimony is considered necessary, and to aid the court in doing so, it is herewith abstracted, making it as brief as the importance of the testimony will permit.

Testimony Against Nancy:

1. The deposition of Elnora Mayshack, formerly Elnora Williams, was taken by the Government (Rec., p. 2163).

It will be noted that Nancy Atkins was not represented at the taking of this testimony and the Government and the Page interests were represented and both were interested in bringing out the testimony against Nancy. Elnora was living in Portland, Oregon, when this deposition was taken. She said that the was forty-eight years old, a former citizen of the Cherokee Nation and knew Nancy Atkins at Wagoner in 1890. She said Nancy had been living with her mother and her for about six months before the 1890 payment. She said that Nancy had a child, not in her house, in a tent, and that she was with her when the child was born; it was born in the morning and died in the afternoon. She said she knew Nancy four years after that and that Nancy had no other child. To the best of her recollection the child was buried in the grave yard and Monday Barnett officiated. She says that this child was born not over two years before the last payment that the Creeks got money (Rec., p. 2167). This evidently referred to the 1895 payment, and, therefore, the child to which she refers, if Nancy had such a child, was born not earlier than 1893, and could not have been the Thomas Atkins that thirty-five witnesses identified and whom it was proved was born in 1890.

Some attention should be given to the fact that the next witness taken at the same time and at the same place was Micco Harjo, the unfaithful guardian of Nancy, who absconded from Oklahoma for frauds against Nancy and other people.

In this connection we call attention to the telegram of Mr. Long to the Gem Oil Company, dated July 17, 1914, sent from Portland, Oregon, telling his company to take the deposition of Mrs. A. M. Mayshack of Portland. who was with Nancy when her baby was born, who said it was a boy but died after birth and was buried in Wagoner (Rec., p. 3526).

It will be seen by reading this deposition that it was carefully concealed that this child was a boy. As touching both this witness and the next one, Micco Harjo, attention is called to the telegram of Mr. Long to the Gem Oil Company, dated July 13 from Seattle, in which he said he went to Portland to see a man and that man was Micco Harjo whom he sought there (Rec., p. 3525).

The next telegram from Mr. Long to his company of July 16, 1914, is from Portland, in which he stated that Bartlett was there and Sadie James was there (Rec., p. 3525).

Thus it is seen that the contaminating influences of Sadie James and Micco Harjo were at work in Portland at the instance of Mr. Long, and the testimony of this negro woman is easily accounted for.

2. The deposition of Micco Harjo (Rec., pp. 2167-2178), like the preceding deposition of Elnora Mayshack, was taken without Nancy being represented there, and the direct and cross examinations were conducted by those inimical to her interest. He had known Nancy ten or twelve years and was appointed her guardian as an incompetent, and had lived in Nowata. He stated that Nancy was first visited by Claude Weldon seeking a lease from her, and she told him that her child was a girl, but after White came to see her that White told her that he had all evidence to show that the child was a boy, and after that Nancy said that her child was a boy. He said that she said that the child was a boy because she wanted to get money out of it. He says that she got drunk frequently and made some of these statements to him while she was drunk.

The substance of his testimony is that she first claimed that her child was a girl and afterwards claimed that it was a boy named Tommy Atkins (Rec., p. 2173).

He admits that he saw Long in Portland but didn't see Sadie James, but heard that she was there (Rec., pp. 2175-2176).

He admits that while at Tulsa one time Bartlett gave him $25 because he needed some money (Rec., p. 2176). It must be remembered that this is the Bartlett that Nancy was suing for holding the land under a forged deed that Micco Harjo procured for him.

He admits that he was afraid of prosecution for his conduct in this matter, and that he left Nancy at Coffeyville when he came West. This confirms Nancy's testimony elsewhere considered in this connection wherein she told of the attempted bribery of her by Bartlett and Micco Harjo and the procuring of her statement at Coffeyville, and the plan to carry her to Portland with Harjo, but she refused to go and returned home from Coffeyville.

3. Eliza Sterling (Rec., pp. 2979-2989) was the next witness produced by the Government. She says she lived at Wagoner twenty-nine years. She was a daughter of Mandy Barnett, a midwife. She knew Nancy Atkins at Wagoner, and says that she gave birth to a child at Elnora Williams' house (this is Elnora Mayshack). She says that her mother was with Nancy when the child was born. She says Elnora Williams was a colored woman. She says the child was a girl and was born dead and that Elnora Williams was there and is positive that Nancy gave birth to a child in Elnora Williams' house. She says it was a story and a half house and the child was born downstairs. She tells of Nancy being sent to the penitentiary while she was at Wagoner. She says that Nancy lived with her part of the time. She says Nancy had no other child than this one. She says this baby was born in the fall of 1889. This is a four-years' difference between her testimony and that of Elnora Mayshack on the same subject. Then she changed her testimony when attention was called to her testimony given at Sapulpa in which she stated the child was born in 1890 (Rec., p. 2185).

In another chapter we have presented the facts regarding this woman whose testimony Nancy procured to sustain the "frame-up," as she expressed it, that was being conducted by Bartlett and Micco Harjo.

John Ford, a negro well acquainted with Nancy and the Burney family and all these other negroes at Wagoner, testified that Eliza Sterling did not live in Wagoner at the time this child was born. That she was living between the Verdigris and Arkansas river about ten or twelve miles from Wagoner (Rec., p. 2511).

4. Angeline Moody (Rec., pp. 2190-2195) was seventy-two years old; had lived in Wagoner twenty years; knew Nancy Atkins and knew her parents; she stated that Nancy was the mother of one child; that it was born in Elnora Williams' house; that she was present at the birth. She says Mandy Barnett, a midwife, was the mother of Eliza Sterling. She says that Nancy's child was a girl, and it was born dead and was buried at the corner of the house. She admits that Nancy and Betty Mann came to see her and says that Nancy told her that she came for her to go and say that she knew that she had one child and that it was born dead, and they wanted her to tell the court that it was not her child they were trying to make her claim (Rec., p. 2192).

This admission strongly confirms Nancy's account of the procurement of this witness at the instance of Bartlett and Betty Mann. She admits she got $15 for going to Sapulpa and testifying.

She testified that she had lived at Choska and had a place there and her husband sold it in 1892 to Lipscomb and after that they moved to Wagoner and this child was born after she moved to Wagoner (Rec., pp. 2194-2195).

John Ford testified that Angeline Moody was not living in Wagoner at this time and he did not know where she lived at that time. There were very few negroes there and he knew them all (Rec., p. 2507).

This statement of Angeline Moody fixes definitely from a known event and date that she was not in Wagoner until two years after the birth of Nancy's boy Thomas, and absolutely destroys the force of her testimony, and this fact is confirmed by the testimony of John Ford. It is possible that Nancy may have had another child under circumstances described by these women and the Mayshack woman, about 1893, which their testimony indicates, but it is more probable that it is manufactured testimony, as claimed by Nancy.

5. Henry Anderson (Rec., pp. 2195-2208), another of the negroes that Nancy claims was in the "frame-up" and whom she also claims was one of the witnesses against her when she was sent to the penitentiary. He knew Nancy and saw her in a family way and afterwards was told that she had a baby and it was born dead. That this occurred at Elnora Williams' house, and he learned it and found Ellis Harris digging a hole to bury the child, and this man told him it was Nancy's baby. He saw Nancy for five or six years after that and she had no other child. He admits that he was a witness against her in the case where she was sent to the penitentiary for taking a letter of Neosho Burney instead of Betsy Burney (Rec., p. 2198). He says the only boy about town named Thomas Atkins was a negro boy, a son of Dick Atkins, who lived about ten miles from town. He says Dick Atkins was Nancy's half-brother.

This negro is thoroughly discredited by two responsible witnesses as well as by the testimony of Nancy that he was part of the "frame-up" at Sapulpa.

W. C. Smith (Rec., p. 2607), a druggist at Wagoner, testified that he moved to Wagoner and went in the drug business there in 1898 and Henry Anderson was the porter in his drug store. A woman poorly clothed, with a little yellow-headed kid running around with her, probably three to five years of age was frequently in his store, and he asked his porter, this Henry Anderson, who she was and he told him that it was Nancy Atkins and her kid (Rec., p. 2608).

Mr. J. B. White, one of the defendants, testified that he knew Henry Anderson, and when he was investigating this case and procuring witnesses that he had a conversation with Anderson and Anderson told him that he knew Nancy had a child and that it was a boy and it was named Tommy. He prepared an affidavit for him to sign, setting forth the facts that he had told him. Anderson refused to sign it unless he gave him $100 then and $300 when the case was over (Rec., p. 4506).

6. Dora Smith (Rec., pp. 2208-2211): She testified that she lived in Wagoner from 1894 till 1895, and she was well acquainted with Nancy Atkins while she was there. They were good friends. She was taking care of her sister Minnie's two little boys. Nancy told her once or twice that she was the mother of a child but that it was dead. She never told her that she had a boy living.

7. Patsy Willer (formerly Overton) (Rec., pp. 2211-2220): She went to Wagoner in 1887. She was well acquainted with Nancy Atkins. She tells of Nancy having a baby and Mandy Barnett attending her. She seemed to have derived all her information from what Mandy Barnett told her to the effect that the child was a boy and had died at the time of its birth (Rec., p. 2213). She says the child was born at Barnett's and not at Elnora Williams'.

John Ford testified that Patsy Overton did not live at Wagoner at this time (Rec., pp. 2511-2512).

John was cross examined very vigorously as to his knowledge of these negroes in Wagoner, and showed an intimate acquaintance with them and with their affairs.

8. Henry Kidd (Rec., pp. 2220-2223): The only thing in his testimony is that Nancy and Betty Mann came to him on the street with their lawyer and said she had never had but one child and it was a girl and born dead; turned to her lawyer and said that Mr. Kidd would tell the truth. This is exactly the way Nancy tells the occurrence and Kidd's testimony amounts to nothing. He tells about a negro Thomas Atkins, son of Dick Atkins, living near Wagoner.

9. Lula Smith testified (Rec., pp. 2223-2229), that when she was twelve or thirteen years old, she worked in the hotel with Nancy Atkins, and says that Nancy once told her that she had a child but it was dead, either that it was born dead or died shortly afterwards. She never knew any boy around there by the name of Thomas Atkins. She never heard of Charlie and Harvey Harrison, Nancy's nephews, being there with her, and never saw any child or children with her. She had a remarkable memory, to say the least of it, to recall a casual conversation had more than a quarter of a century before, when she was twelve or thirteen years of age.

10. Martha Hardridge (Rec., pp. 2233-2235): She is forty-four years old. Lived in Wagoner since 1891, and worked with Nancy in the Bernard Hotel in 1891, and run together for about eleven months.

Nancy told her that she had given birth to a child that was born dead. She said that Nancy stayed at the Burneys a good deal of her time and that Joe Burney was around with Nancy a good deal. She says that Joe Burney was five or six, or seven years of age in 1891 (Rec., p. 2235). It will be seen in the examination of a good many witnesses that the Government and Page interests sought to confuse the Thomas Atkins described by the witnesses as being constantly with Nancy with this Joe Burney, a son of Betsy Burney, in whose family Thomas lived. The testimony of Martha Hardridge, and there is considerable more besides hers to the same effect, that Joe Burney was from five to seven years of age in 1891 effectually disposes of that theory. He must have been at least five years older than Nancy's son, and there is no possibility of his being confused with the infant that many of these witnesses saw Nancy carrying around with her some before she went to the penitentiary in 1890, and some when he was a very small child after she came back from the penitentiary.

11. Patsy Jenkins (Rec., pp. 2235-2241): She lives at Choteau; she does not know how far it is from Wagoner. She testified she was living on Brushy Creek about thirteen miles from Wagoner and Nancy came to live with her there. She is well acquainted with Nancy Atkins. Nancy came and stayed with her about twenty years ago when she was living in the country on Brushy Creek. She brought two boys with her, the oldest named Charlie, the youngest Harvey. While Nancy was living with her at one time she told her that she had a girl baby and it was born dead. Nancy told her that these boys were her sister Minnie's children; said her sister had gone away and left these children. She says that Nancy and these boys stayed with her from one fall until the next spring, as near as we can understand her very confused testimony.

Charlie Harrison, the eldest of Minnie's children, testified (Rec., pp. 4532-4534) that he had never heard of a negro woman named Patsy Jenkins or Patsy Overton and that he never lived a while with his Aunt Nancy at this woman's house about thirteen miles from Wagoner. That he and his brother did not live at any such place from one fall until the next spring. He lived with his Aunt Nancy in Wagoner about one month when he was seven years old and Harvey was five, and after that Charlie Bailey took him and he lived with him.

12. Sarah Coats (Rec., pp. 2241-2244) says she has known Nancy about twenty-three or four years; got acquainted with her in 1891 or 1892 when she was working at the Bernard Hotel, at Wagoner, and she was working at McNally's in the same town. They saw each other frequently. She lived in Wagoner until 1895. She knew of Nancy going to the penitentiary. She says she knew her before she went to the pen and knew her after she came back. She knew the Burneys and the other negroes in town. She says Nancy mostly associated with the colored race. She did not know any colored boy or Indian boy around Wagoner called Thomas Atkins. She did not know Nancy before she went to Wagoner. She fixes her time of going to Wagoner as 1891.

The record shows that Nancy was sent to the penitentiary December, 1890, and was confined there until July, 1891. This witness did not come to Wagoner, in her repeated statements, until 1891, yet she says she knew Nancy before she went to the penitentiary and knew her after she came back from the penitentiary, yet never knew her before she went to Wagoner.

13. Charlie Harrison (Rec., pp. 4528-4535): He stated that he was twenty-seven years old. That after his mother brought him and his brother to Oklahoma he stayed one summer and one winter with his Aunt Kate Holden and was then taken to Wagoner with his Aunt Nancy and stayed there four weeks. While he was at his Aunt Kate's there was no boy there named Thomas Atkins. He says he knows Mr. Way, the postmaster at Haskell, and he knew him when he was a kid. He had a ranch about three miles from Uncle Tom Holden and was well acquainted with Mr. Way while he was at his aunt's. He says there was no other child there when he and his brother were there and his Aunt Nancy did not come there while he was there. That he never had a brother named Thomas that he ever knew of. (This, of course, is very applicable to the other chapters in this discussion, but it may not be amiss to repeat it here.)

He says that when he was at his Aunt Nancy's she did not take care of any other boy; that he and his brother Harvey were the only ones she was taking care of when he was there. His mother had not written to him until four years ago. She did not write to him when he was staying at his Aunt Kate's or at Wagoner. He did not see his Aunt Nancy from the time he left her home. Before he was taken to Charlie Bailey's, Jim Childers got his brother Harvey away from Nancy and took him to raise.

There is no value to his testimony other than the negative value that he had no recollection of Nancy caring for any other child than he and his brother when he lived with her four weeks in his early boyhood. It is worth commenting upon in connection with the testimony of Jim Childers to which reference will next be made.

14. Jim Childers (Rec., pp. 4300-4312): He is a three-quarters Creek and the brother of Ellis Childers. He was married in 1895 and then moved a mile and a half south where his father lived in the country northwest of Wagoner. He knew Nancy Atkins from 1890 when he moved to Wagoner. When he first knew Nancy she was in a family way and she was living with the Burney family. He never knew of her having a baby other than her condition disappeared. He worked in Davis & Jones' store at Wagoner in 1894. He knew of no boy around Wagoner named Thomas Atkins except Dick Atkins' son, who often came into Wagoner. He saw this boy with Nancy two or three times. Dick Atkins and Nancy claimed to be half-brother and sister. He says this negro Thomas was four or five years old when he knew him, which was in 1894, but the brothers and sisters of this boy were placed upon the stand and their testimony showed that the boy was five years older than Jim Childers states. He knew of Nancy having Charlie and Harvey Harrison and he took Harvey and kept him. At that time he didn't appear to be taken care of at all; did not have hardly any clothes. Nancy sent for him and when he went to her she told him that she had a couple of boys that belonged to her sister; that she was not able to take care of them and make a living for them and wanted him to take Harvey and a gentleman in the country was going to take Charlie, sometimes called Lee, and the other man was Charlie Bailey, who was going to take Charlie Harrison. He took Harvey home with him, he was then four or five years old, and kept him until 1898, and turned him over to his Aunt Kate Holden. It was after he was married, 1895, that he took Harvey to his home. Nancy was living at Eliza Barnett's house and he took Harvey from that place. Nancy was sick in bed at the time. There wasn't any other child in the room than this little boy, and he saw no other child there (Rec., p. 4310).

Childers' testimony plainly shows that he did not think that Nancy had any other child, either Charlie or any one else that she was caring for at the time that he took Harvey from her, and Charlie testifies that he was there at that time. The fact that Nancy was then living with the Barnetts may readily account for the fact that Charlie did not remember or probably did not know of her son Tommy, who always lived with the Burneys.

15. T. Howard Morton (Rec., pp. 4298-4300): This is the only white man used as a witness against Nancy. He moved to Wagoner in 1891 as an employee of Davis & Jones Mercantile Company. He knew Nancy Atkins, but did not know of her having any boy by the name of Thomas Atkins, or any other child. He knew the negro Thomas Atkins, son of Richard Atkins, who lived about ten miles northwest of Wagoner. He was ten or twelve years of age when he died. His father hauled wood into town and this boy came with him a few times. He never saw the boy with Nancy Atkins. He knew Charlie and Harvey Harrison. Does not know whether they ever lived with Nancy or not. Certainly there is no probative value to be given to anything which he has testified to.

16. Ananias Atkins (Rec., pp. 4398-4401): He is a son of Dick Atkins and had a brother named Thomas Atkins. His brother Thomas died in the fall of 1898, ten miles northwest of Wagoner. His brother Thomas went frequently to Wagoner during the time they lived ten miles from there, as the family traded there. He knew Nancy Atkins. His father claims she was his half-sister. His brother was thirteen years, three months and some days old when he died. His brother Thomas lived at his father's house all of his life. He would go to Wagoner and he knew him to stay as much as three days at a time with some other member of the family. His brother was buried a mile and a half from his home, ten miles from Wagoner. His father was a well-to-do man. He and his brother Thomas were full brothers and they were one-eighth Indian and seven-eighths negro. He admits that his hair and general appearance is that of the African race.

17. Mary Atkins Wilson (Rec., pp. 4401-4404): She is another member of the Dick Atkins family, being a sister of Ananias and the deceased Thomas. She admits that she was African and that her brother Thomas was of the negro race. Her testimony is substantially that of her brother. The testimony of these two members of the left-handed Atkins family proves conclusively that the effort to confuse the negro Thomas with the Thomas enrolled is unavailing. The negro Thomas was a typical negro in appearance; was dead before April 1, 1899; was thirteen years old when he died in the fall of 1898, and was, therefore, born in the summer of 1885, and was five years older than Nancy's son Thomas.

And hence the impossibility of confusing this negro with her son when many witnesses testify to seeing her nurse him in 1890 and carrying him around in '91 and '92 when he was hardly able to walk, with this husky negro who was then six or seven years old.

The Page interests called two witnesses against Nancy.

18. Cheney Trent (Rec., pp. 4179-4189): She is another one of Dick Atkins' children. She had seen her brother Thomas in Wagoner with Nancy. Her father hauled wood to Wagoner, and the boy would frequently go with him. She said that her father was a drinking man and that Nancy drank with him, and Nancy sometimes came to their house to get whiskey. He would bring her in the wagon from Wagoner. She only knew Nancy two years before her brother Thomas died, which would make it 1896. This family of Atkins were enrolled in Arkansas Town, which is one of the negro towns of the Creek Nation. None of them were ever enrolled as Euchees (Rec., p. 4189).

19. Anderson Childers (Rec., pp. 4292-4298): He was acquainted with Nancy and Minnie; understood they were sisters, but did not know whether they were full sisters. He was acquainted with Dick Atkins and his son Thomas. They lived two miles of his place northwest of Wagoner. He first knew this negro Thomas Atkins about 1890 when he was five or six years old and was in Wagoner with his father. He died in 1898. He saw this negro boy with Nancy twice in Wagoner at Davis & Jones' store when this boy was seven or eight years old. He saw Nancy with Lee and Harvey (Lee is the one called Charlie in the record). He said he saw these boys around Wagoner with Nancy very often about '92 or '93. This shows how thoroughly unreliable this testimony is. There is some confusion in the record as to whether Minnie came to Oklahoma in 1894 or 1895. There is no question, however, that it was not earlier than the summer of '94. Miss Alice Robertson tells of her arrival as later in the summer of 1895.

There is no dispute over the fact that Charlie and Harvey were with Nancy only a short time and that was after Minnie had left them with her sister, Kate Holden, and they had remained there a year or more and Mrs. Holden brought them to Nancy. There is some controversy as to when Minnie left this country. Most probably is was in '95, although there is some testimony on her part that it was later. It is impossible for these boys to have been at Wagoner with Nancy earlier than '97 or '98, and yet here is a witness testifying that he saw them with Nancy very often in '92 or '93. And he can't be excused on the ground of ignorance like most of these negro witnesses whose ideas of dates are very vague unless there is some fixed event to determine it. He appears to be a man of intelligence and education from his testimony and gives definite facts from which he fixes his dates. Therefore, the most probable explanation of his testimony is that it is manufactured, and the fact that it is produced by the Page interests instead of the Government lends color to that theory. It is really unimportant, and it is strange to say why it is produced as it has but little bearing upon any issues in the case.

This is all of the testimony against Nancy except a few stray statements by Sadie James and Betty Mann which we have not taken the trouble to abstract as they have no corroboration, and, of course, are unworthy of belief coming solely from such sources. Mitchell Wadsworth, son of Mrs. Holden, testified that he did not know of a Thomas Atkins, Nancy's son, being at his mother's house for a time, and he is corroborated in this by Mr. Way, who said Mitchell was in the penitentiary during that time (Rec., pp. 2591-2601).

Evidence Supporting Nancy:

1. Nancy Atkins (Rec., pp. 2697-2743): Nancy testified she was forty-five years old, a Creek citizen; lived all her life in the Creek Nation. Her aunt, Mrs. Robinson, raised her at Muskogee. She found herself in a family way and, not wanting to bring disgrace on her family, she went to Wagoner and her child was born in September of that year. She worked at different hotels and restaurants in Wagoner. The child was born at Elnora Williams' house and was a boy and lived until 1900. She had worked at the Brown Hotel part of the time and knew Frank Engles while she was working there. Frequently had her child with her there. She kept the child mostly at Betsy Burney's. She was at the burial of this child. Old man McHenry officiated at the graveyard. When her child was three or four months old she was taken to Fort Smith and from there sent to the penitentiary at Detroit, Michigan, for eight months, and served six and one-half months and got back to Wagoner on the 2nd of July.

Government's Exhibit "A" 104 (Rec., p. 4821), is the judgment of conviction of Nancy Atkins for taking letters from the mail in the Indian Territory. It is dated December 23, 1890, and contains a sentence of eight months in the House of Correction, Detroit, Michigan.

She had left her child with Betsy Burney when taken off and found him there when she returned.

We have heretofore summarized her deposition in the office of Bartlett's attorney and her testimony before Judge Stanfield in the trial at Sapulpa. Both the deposition and that evidence is inserted in this record and found at pages 2775-2792. We have also set forth her testimony regarding the procurement of the evidence of Eliza Sterling, Angeline Moody, and Henry Kidd, and will not repeat it here. We have also referred to the attempted kidnapping by Sadie James and her protection by Mrs. Yarboro and Mr. White. Mrs. Yarboro's testimony corroborating hers is found at pages 2744-2746, and Mr. White's, pages 2747-2772. She says that she named her child Tommy. She did not know there were so many Tommy Atkins. Had she known there were so many boys in the Atkins family named Tommy, she would not have named him that. In answer to a question from the court who told her to look directly at him, she stated he died in the spring of 1900. She thinks he was about nine years old when he died. When she talked to these darkies with Betty Mann, Betty wanted them to say it was a girl and she fell in with that action. Her sister Minnie left her children with their half-sister, Kate Holden, when she went to Colorado. Her sister Kate brought them to her and she kept them for a few months, then Charlie Bailey took one and Jim Childers took the other one. At one time when she was at Nowata the Holdens got her son Tommy and took him out there. They said he was running around. She heard he was out there and went there. She saw Tom Way when she was out there. She left him there at Kate's and he stayed there probably a year, then went back to Betsy Burney's. She said that he was about her color; that he was small and had light hair, but as he grew older his hair got darker. His hair was straight and became black. He was a puny child and small for his age. This is the substance of her direct examination.

She was put through a severe cross examination by Mr. Allen, Judge Stuart, Mr. Hanford, and was questioned frequently by the court, but her testimony was in no wise weakened by this cross examination, and many corroborating facts were given by her. She says she was at Kate Holden's more than once when Charlie and Harvey were there (Rec., p. 2716).

She did not go to her sister's for Charlie and Harvey. Kate came to her and told her that Minnie had left these children with her and went away and Tom didn't want them and she could not take care of them and promised to send money for their support. Kate's son, Mitchell Wadsworth, was in trouble and had been scouting, and she wanted money to go to Fort Smith; she thinks he was in jail there and she let her have some money. She did not want the children.

She says that Joe Burney was about four years old when her baby was born (Rec., p. 2722). She said when her boy Tom was at Kate Holden's Charlie and Harvey were there, and there was no boy there named Edmund Bear. We have heretofore set out her testimony relating to the visit of her Uncle Robinson and his son to her, and her conversation with them about enrolling her and her son Tommy. This evidently referred to enrollment before the field parties, as she told of going to Coweta afterwards, where the enrollments were being held. She gives a rather amusing account of the way she was brought into court at Sapulpa after Bartlett's side had represented that she was not in the State of Oklahoma, and the lawyers being surprised at her testimony when she repudiated her deposition and testified in answer to Judge Standfield's questions that she had a child named Tommy Atkins who lived to be about ten years of age (Rec., pp. 2731, 2732).

She says that Eliza Sterling did not come to her during her confinement. She said that Dora

Smith and Betty Overton were two colored women that she hardly ever went with. She says that Ellis Childers came to see her when her baby was about three weeks old and it was in the bed with her. She says that Aunt Angeline Moody never saw her baby. She says that Henry Anderson and the other negroes swore her liberty away in the trial charging her with purloining a letter. Her homestead was sold for $333.20 and Micco Harjo, her guardian, got all of it except $75. He used it for his family and himself and left on account of this and other crooked things he did (Rec., p. 2737).

Her sister Minnie had a boy whose middle name was Lee. He was named Charlie Lee and she wrote her before she had her child of having a son named Lee (Rec., p. 2738). Evidently this refers to Minnie's child, Robert Lee Peterkin, who was born in 1886 and not Charlie Lee Harrison, unless Nancy had her dates mixed. In Minnie's Kansas City statement she said after she left Leavenworth she wrote none of her friends (Rec., p. 4061—see also Hanford's letter, Rec., p. 4738), and as Robert Lee was born there and died there, it is quite likely she wrote her sister of him before she left Leavenworth. It may be remarked here that Minnie had no hesitancy in telling her family about her other illegitimate children. She wrote Nancy of Robert Lee and brought Charlie and Henry back to the Territory in 1895, but not a word of Thomas. Even her son Charlie testified that he never heard of having a brother Thomas (Rec., p. 4528-4535).

2. Ellis Childers (Rec., pp. 2637-2696): We have abstracted Mr. Childers' testimony upon other points and now call attention to his testimony relating to his knowledge of the existence of Nancy's son Tommy. There was a pasture payment at Wagoner on the first of October, 1890. He said that we (evidently referring to his father and other members of his family and himself) had considerable pastures for which they received money and paid out money to people who lived among or near the pastures. While at that payment Saus Childers stated that Nancy Atkins was sick; she had a baby and she lived in a tent and if she was not taken care of she was going to die. Saus' wife told the same story and he (Ellis) suggested getting up a subscription to help her. Saus got him to write out the subscription paper and he did so at the table where they were making this payment. Saus gave $5 and his father gave $5, and all together they raised seventy odd dollars, and it was brought to him and he told Saus and Mary they could attend to it. His mother and some other woman were there and looked after it and reported they had taken care of her, and got clothes and cleaned her up and paid Betsy Burney to take care of her and moved her into Betsy's house. Betsy was an old colored woman who lived in Wagoner. A short time after this he owed some money to Betsy for her pasture, and went to her house to pay her. This was about ten days after the subscription. He saw Nancy at Betsy Burney's and talked to her. He saw her baby in the bed with her, which was a boy they afterwards claimed was her child but he did not know it was the same child. After this time, a year or such a matter, he saw Nancy with the child, and he heard that it was named Tommy Atkins, and the last time he saw Tommy he was a good sized kid running around, a year or two old. Saw him with Nancy, and that frequently as he grew older. Saw him around Davis & Jones' store when he was two or three years old. He did not recall him sufficiently to give an accurate description of him. Knew that he was an Indian. He naturally thought he looked like one. He had seen Nancy in a pregnant condition before the first of October when he was at the pasture payment. He never saw her in that condition but once. He knew that she was sent to the penitentiary for violation of postal laws and this child was born before she was sent to the penitentiary. She was convicted of taking a letter ostensibly for Betsy Burney when it was addressed to Neosho Burney.

We have heretofore referred to Mr. Childers' statement made to the Creek attorney conflicting with the testimony here given and the testimony which he gave at Sapulpa, but he reiterated upon the stand the truth of the testimony here given.

3. R. F. Davis (Rec., pp. 1202-1208): He is president of Muskogee Wholesale Grocery Company. He is the son of Mr. Davis of Davis & Jones' Mercantile Company. They did business in Wagoner and he worked in his father's store about two years. He was there from, as near as he can remember it, from '89 to '91. He knew Nancy Atkins well. She was around the store frequently. He saw her in a pregnant condition. He afterwards saw her child when it was large enough to walk. The child was a light yellow color. He does not remember the name of the child, but is quite positive it was a boy. Said she was in the store every day and don't remember whether he saw her carrying it in arms or not; probably he did. He thinks the boy was old enough to walk around when he saw him last. He never heard that the boy of Nancy was anybody else's child. He remembers of Nancy being convicted and sent to the penitentiary, but does not recall whether it was before or after the birth of the child.

4. J. B. Newberry (Rec., pp. 2418-2427): He is 65 years old and lived at Wagoner since the 27th of March, 1890. When he first went to Wagoner he boarded at the Barnard Hotel. Nancy Atkins worked at the hotel after he went there. In the summer of that year he noticed that she was in a pregnant condition. Afterwards he learned that she had a baby; was so told by Dr. Bryant, who attended her. He saw her about a month after that. He knew her boy around Wagoner who lived at Betsy Burney's. He was very dark; rather yellow, and ragged and dirty. Nancy sometimes lived at Betsy Burney's, sometimes at other places. He saw her at Betsy Burney's very frequently but doesn't remember what this boy was called.

5. Charles Bailey (Rec., pp. 2421-2443): He resides at Sand Springs. He went to Wagoner in 1888 and lived there till '97. He became acquainted with Nancy Atkins at Wagoner but had known her at Tullahassee Mission and at Col. Robinson's place prior to that. She worked around at different places at Wagoner and afterwards lived with a colored woman by the name of Betsy Burney. He was working at Davis & Jones' Mercantile Company. He recalls seeing her in a pregnant condition but does not recall when it was. It was in 1888 or 1890 she had a child born back of the Davis & Jones store in a tent. A colored woman came in the store and asked for some groceries for her, telling him that she was sick, had a child and did not have any money and he let her have what she wanted. She was moved from this tent into Betsy Burney's house. He saw the child when it was a month or two old. He saw the child frequently for several years. He afterwards learned of it being dead. And the child was a boy called Tommy Atkins. He knew Charlie and Harvey Harrison, Minnie's sons. He took Charlie Harrison and raised him, became his guardian.

He would judge that Nancy's boy Tommy was five or six years old when he last saw him. He would not call this boy a negro but he ran around with negro children. Betsy Burney moved away from that place for a while.

He did not know Eliza Sterling at Wagoner. He knew these other negroes who figured in the case. He knew of Nancy being sent to the penitentiary after she had this baby. He only knew of her having this one child. He did not know Charlie and Harvey stayed with Nancy. Mrs. Holden brought Charlie to him. He describes the personal appearance of both Charlie and Harvey.

6. James E. Long (Rec., pp. 2445-2457): He lived near Wagoner from 1896 until the year before he testified. He met Nancy about a year after he went to Wagoner. She had a child that looked like a mulatto. He was then six or seven years old he judged from his size. He saw him for four or five years. He would see him with Nancy and with another woman by the name of Maggie Martin. Nancy lived in the negro town of Wagoner. He saw Nancy and the child together in the summer of 1897, 1898. He was city marshal in 1897. He recalls it was in the very dry year that he was called upon to contribute to the burial of Nancy Atkins' little boy. He gave fifty cents for it. This boy was called Tommy.

He had Nancy in charge in the police court several times. She was well known in the community. She was a police court character. She associated with negroes and Indians. The boy was rather brown with chocolate colored hair and brown eyes. Resembled white and Indian more than he did negro, but had a mulatto color. His hair was straight. They called him mulatto on account of his color. He heard Nancy and the other people call the boy Tommy Atkins. He heard Nancy refer to him as her boy. In addition to being marshal he was the Deputy United States Constable working for the commissioner in 1900 and was elected sheriff of Wagoner county and served in the city council. He was convicted of embezzlement in office but afterwards a new trial was granted and the case was dismissed.

7. Richard Burney (Rec., pp. 2457-2465): This witness is the son of Betsy Burney. He remembers Nancy being brought to his mother's house when she had a baby and does not remember how old the baby was as he was a kid himself. He saw the child constantly until he left there and it was a good sized child then. He was pretty badly mixed white and yellow. The boy was called Tommy Atkins. He was hauled in a wagon to his mother's house when he was a baby with his mother. Doesn't know that the baby was a month old. Old man Saus Childers brought Nancy and the baby to his mother's house. He carried Nancy on a cot. He was then about twelve years old. He knows that Nancy was sent to the penitentiary at Fort Smith and the baby was left in his mother's care while she was in the penitentiary. He does not know how long she was gone. His mother moved from Wagoner to Verdigris for a time. This witness is ignorant, has hazy idea of dates, and had a criminal record, but no one can read his testimony without being convinced of its truth and it fits in with the testimony of so many reputable witnesses that it cannot be doubted.

8. Nolan Williams (Rec., pp. 2465-2473): He is a negro employed in herding cattle for Winfield Scott, a large cattle man, and was foreman of his ranch. He lived in the vicinity of Wagoner and did his trading at Davis & Jones' store and got acquainted with Nancy Atkins. He knows that she had a child with her that she said was hers. When he first saw the child it was a year or two old. When he first saw it she was looking for the child and he had a conversation with her in which he said it looked like a little girl but she said it was a boy and called him Tommy. He saw the child frequently for about three years after that time. It looked like Indian and mulatto. His hair was a little bit light. She was called "Crazy Nancy." He said that both Nancy and old man Burney told him that this child was Nancy's child.

9. John T. Beard (Rec., pp. 2475-2486): With the exception of two years he has lived in Wagoner for twenty years. He was a hardware salesman and worked with Dunlap and Taylor, and Davis & Jones Mercantile Company. He was in business for himself awhile. He went to Wagoner August 4, 1887. He was an engineer on the railroad and got acquainted with Nancy Atkins the latter part of 1889 or 1890. Wagoner was then a small place; had only 150 or 175 inhabitants. In 1890 or 1891 he noticed she was in a pregnant condition. He knew of her giving birth to a child as town talk, and he knew of her being sent to the penitentiary. He did not recollect which event occurred first. He saw the child when it was two or three years old. She was carrying it in her arms. He talked to her of the child and she said it was her's and she called him Tommy. In 1897 and 1898 he worked for Mr. Schrimscher. Mr. Schrimscher extended Nancy credit during the week from $1.50 to $2. She washed and would pay on Saturday nights and during the week she would send this little boy to make purchases. He then appeared to be seven or eight years old. This continued for a year or two. Nancy came with the boy a great many times. He remembers that W. U. Hall, mayor of Wagoner, took up a collection for the burial of Tommy Atkins. He says that Nancy lived with a negro named Bet Burney most of the time. He would call the boy kind of bright mulatto looking boy. His hair was light but later on as he grew older his hair grew darker. At the time of his death he remembers seeing a funeral procession and it was about 1901 or 1902. He said that no one was buried back of Betsy Burney's house. He never heard of such a thing. Nancy's boy was the only Tommy Atkins he ever heard of around Wagoner. There was one event that he recalled that fixed the matter in his memory and that was that when Nancy was pregnant the boys accused Uncle John Newbuerry being the father of the child. He was working for the Iron Mountain Railroad at the time and she lived right across the track from where he was working. His testimony at Sapulpa was read to him and some minor matters he stated that he had not testified as the testimony read; none of these are material. On the whole his testimony bears out his testimony as given there.

10. M. I. Sullivan (Rec., pp. 2486-2493): He has lived in Wagoner since 1892 except five years from 1895 to 1900. He was acquainted with Nancy Atkins. She was living on the west side of town and had a child who was two or three years old when he first saw him. The child was large enough to be toddling around, and he saw him in his place of business with his mother. He talked to her about him and asked her if he was her kid and she said yes. She was in his place of business most every week, sometimes two or three times. He was in the retail mercantile business. He was there for two or three years and saw her and the child constantly, probably every week. He doesn't remember what the child looked like and doesn't recall his name. In 1892 Wagoner had a population of two or three hundred. His association with Nancy was from 1892 to 1895. Nancy was a peculiar woman. She was slat-sided, half cock-eyed and scrawny; she was a by-word in the town with the boys. She was a peculiar woman that would make anybody remember her. She had this kid with her, claimed it, and told him that it was hers; carried it around with her. She was not married. The only time he ever saw her boy was when she was carrying him along with her.

11. A. Grant Wasson (Rec., pp. 2493-2499): He lived five miles from Wagoner and lived in that neighborhood twenty-nine years. In 1889 and 1890 he was living in Wagoner. First got acquainted with Nancy Atkins in '89. He remembers that she had a child that she claimed was hers and his name was Tommy. He was probably two years old when he first saw him. The first time he saw him he was with some negroes, and one of them was the worst that he had ever seen and used some very bad language and he asked Nancy if those were her children and she said none of them only Tommy, this little boy there, and she pointed him out. He saw him often from then until '95 or '96 and he moved out of town. He was four or five years old when he last saw him. He looked like he was mixed between Indian, negro and white and had kind of white looking hair. They called him a white-headed negro. He was mostly dressed in rags. She said the child was a boy.

12. Andrew Jackson (Rec., pp. 2500-2505): He lives five miles southeast of Wagoner and lived in neighborhood forty-seven years. He lived in Wagoner at different times. He knew Nancy Atkins; knew she had a boy. He was light-headed and had kind of mulatto looking hair. When he first saw him he was three or four years old. The first time his attention was called to him he came near running over him and stopped his horse and asked Nancy if this was her kid, and she said, yes, and he told her she had better keep him out of the road. After that he saw the child about Davis & Jones' store. He was in the town probably once a week. He remembers the contribution being taken up to bury him; not certain in what year, probably 1902 or 1903.

13. John Ford (Rec., pp. 2505-2519): He is a negro and lived at Wagoner from 1887 for about 20 or 25 years. He got acquainted with Nancy Atkins; knew of her being in a pregnant condition, he thinks about 1889. She was living in a tent back of Davis & Jones' store when her child was born, and he saw it two or three days later at Betsy Burney's in bed with her. He gambled at the Burney place and saw the child frequently there when he was shooting craps. He saw her there for about a year and then he moved twenty-five miles away and would be back to town and saw her for a number of years. The boy had an Indian look; kind of yellow hair, looked sandy. He was not a white child. Last time he saw him he appeared to be eight or nine years old; that was about 1899. He was in town at one time and heard that he was dead and they were taking a contribution for his burial; he gave twenty-five cents. The boy was called Tommy Atkins. He did not know of Nancy having any other child.

We have heretofore referred to his telling of some of these negro witnesses living in Wagoner and others not living there at this time.

He had seen this baby nurse at Nancy's breast. He learned that it was afterwards a bottle baby (Rec., p. 2511).

14. J. L. Dyer (Rec., pp. 2519-2523): He lives three and one-half miles from Wagoner; lived there since December, 1889. He first met Nancy in the winter of '90. He remembers that she was in a pregnant condition but does not recall whether it was in '90 or '91. He remembers she was sent to the penitentiary but does not recall what year and that she was gone seven or eight months and that she had a child before she went to the penitentiary. It was about three months old when she was convicted. He saw her carrying the child when it was two or three months old. It looked like a white child; it had right white hair, or bluish looking streaks, was not black. It was called Tommy. He saw the child around for nine or ten years. He heard that it was dead. He never saw him after he was nine or ten years old. He saw the boy in Schrimscher's butcher shop when he was five or six years old or older. He was convicted of being an accessory to a train robbery and got a new trial and was acquitted. He saw Nancy with the child when he came into town lots of times. He was in town very frequently. She lived with a woman named Burney, but he does not know how long she lived there.

15. Joseph Newton Schrimscher (Rec., pp. 2523-2527): He was seventy years old, a Creek Indian. Lived at Wagoner from 1890 for twelve years. Nancy Atkins was a niece of his first wife. It is elsewhere shown that Ed Schrimscher, whose name appears first on the Euchee Roll of the Atkins family was his son, and was a first cousin of Nancy. Nancy had a boy with her that she told him was her son and his name was Tommy Atkins. He was in the butcher and merchandise business and she traded at his store. Sometimes the boy would be with her and sometimes he would not. Sometimes she would pay for what she got and she made an arrangement to send her boy to get what she needed, meat or something of that kind, and she frequently sent him for her supplies and this continued for a year or two. The last time he saw the boy he was about eight years old. He doesn't know what became of him. He knows that Nancy was a Creek and Euchee and her boy looked like a half-blood Indian. His first wife was Nancy's aunt and he knew all the family. The first time Tommy came to his store he looked to be about seven years old, and he saw him until he was eight, but not afterwards. The boy's hair was black. This confirms the testimony of Nancy and many other witnesses that the boy's hair was first light but grew black as he grew older.

16. Foil M. Brady (Rec., pp. 2527-2529): His mother was a Creek and his father a Cherokee. He lives four miles west of Wagoner. He first met Nancy Atkins about 1889. About 1890 or 1891, the date of the Indian payment of $29, he saw her with a boy crawling around at the McNally Hotel, where she was dishwasher. Nancy told him that it was her boy and that his name was Tommy Atkins. He told her that she should have named him Shawnee; that her father's right name was Shawnee Atkins. He knew her father. He was back there about a month later and saw Nancy at the Brown Hotel and asked her how her boy was getting along and she said he was dead. According to his story the boy was three or four years old when Nancy said he had died. This old Indian probably got his dates mixed. It is not strange that Nancy told him about her boy being dead as she told all sorts of stories to her family. The fact remains that she had a boy about four years old which she claimed, to this old acquaintance of her father, to be her son, named Tommy.

17. Kirk Turnbo (Rec., pp. 2529-2737): He lived in Wagoner or in that vicinity since 1899. He met Nancy Atkins shortly after he went to Wagoner. She was quite a peculiar woman. The first time he saw her she was hollering for this boy that he learned was Tommy Atkins. She was inquiring, "have you seen anything of my boy Tommy?" They lived with old Betsy Burney. He remembers when they made up money to bury him. He did not know just what time it was, but it was about 1902. The boy was small, kind of weasened looking. He judged him to be ten or twelve years old when he died. He remembered W. U. Hall was the mayor or marshal at the time he was raising contributions for his burial. He told him he was making up the money to bury Tommy Atkins, old Nancy's boy. He saw the boy very often. Sometimes he would be with Nancy, his mother, sometimes he would not. He saw her with a lot of other children. She was taking care of him. His hair was inclined to be sandy when he first knew him. He has served as Deputy United States Marshal.

18. Walter Posey (Rec., pp. 2537-2539): He has lived in the neighborhood of Wagoner since 1891. He knew Nancy Atkins since then. He has seen the child with her that she said was hers. The first time he saw her was at Davis & Jones' store. He saw the child with her a few times, but mostly at the Burney's. When he first saw the child he was four or five years old. He remembered him because he was white headed. His hair was like a baby's, and he was called Tommy Atkins. He asked Dick Burney whose it was. The last time he saw him was 1900 or 1901. He was apparently about ten years old. He saw him with Nancy many times. He thinks he had blue eyes. He would call him a mixed-blood. It looked like he had Indian in him. His hair was kind of sandy.

19. George Williford (Rec., pp. 2539-2545): Lived at Wagoner about thirty years; got acquainted with Nancy Atkins at the McNally Hotel twenty-two or twenty-three years ago. He saw her in a pregnant condition. Afterwards he saw her with a child called Tommy. He was two or three years old before he saw him.

20. Thomas Brewer (Rec., pp. 2545-2557): He is a Cherokee and first cousin of Mr. Brewer, the postmaster of Muskogee, and has lived most of his life half way between Wagoner and Muskogee. He lived at Wagoner for five years beginning either 1889 or 1890. He got acquainted with Nancy when he was trading at Davis & Jones' store and knew her a year or two before he moved there. She had a child and the boy told him that he was Nancy's boy. He does not remember whether Nancy ever told him that he was her child only he knew that the kid told him that he was Nancy Atkins' kid. He was a good large kid going around with the negroes when he first knew him. He looked like a mulatto; he was a sort of molasses kid, he wasn't white and he wasn't negro. He went by the name of Tommy Atkins. He died in the dry year which he believes was in 1901. He would not be positive of the date. He passed by his house every day going to town. He was buying cattle and trading around. He remembers the boy came to his house for milk as he had quite a lot of cattle. He must have been six or seven years old, but he could not say what his age was. He was not noticing Nancy and does not know whether she was living there when he died or not. He did not attend the funeral and just knows the people said Tommy Atkins was dead and he never saw him again. They said he was dead there in the house but he did not go to see him. He doesn't remember whether this was the Burney house or not.

21. Frank Engles (Rec., pp. 2557-2566): He is a building contractor. Lives at Sapulpa and lived at Wagoner from December, 1890, until 1900 or 1901 when he went to Sapulpa. He met Nancy some five or six months after he went to Wagoner. She had a small boy with her when he first saw her; that he saw her carrying him in her arms and afterwards leading him around. Probably a year old when he first saw him. Just beginning to walk. He was a dirty looking kid; was kept in awful shape; could hardly describe him. He had worked at the Brown Hotel; hardly a month out of six years that he was not doing work there, doing some repair work and building additions to it. Nancy lived in a little servant's house and did work there and had the kid with her. She did laundry work and scrubbing the kitchen and dining room. Then he put in a butcher shop across the street from Schrimsher's and she used to come up there quite often and bring the kid with her and he would give her meat and things to help out; she was a pitiful character and he helped her in such ways as he could.

He knows that he saw the child for five or six years and the last that he remembers of seeing the child was about a year and a half before he left Wagoner. The child was a boy. He was dark; as he remembered him he was always dirty. His hair was kind of brownish yellow, dirty color. He had the appearance of an Indian. He did not know who his father was. He does not recall his name. He remembers Nancy call him son, honey and loving names.

22. W. A. McElroy (Rec., pp. 2567-2575): He was in the cattle and pasture business and had been in Wagoner a great deal. He knew Nancy Atkins before she went to Wagoner.

About 1890 he was at Davis & Jones' store and a collection was taken up for her benefit and it was stated that she had a child born back of the store, but he didn't see her or the child then. Afterwards he saw the child with her which he understood was hers. He saw the child off and on until he left there about 1901. He would take it to be seven or eight years old the last time he saw it. He understood the child's name was Tommy Atkins. That he was called that around Betsy Burney's, who lived back of Davis & Jones' store and he was around there frequently. He saw the child around there before he learned his name. He was known among the boys as Tommy Atkins. That was in 1896, 1897 and 1898 and that was the first time that he knew his name. Doesn't know whether Nancy was living there or not, but he saw her at Burney's frequently and it was his understanding that the boy lived at Betsy Burney's. He has seen Nancy at Wagoner, Coweta, and Muskogee. The last time he saw Nancy was about 1899. The boy's hair was tolerably light; doesn't recall about his eyes. He thinks he was seven or eight years old in 1899. He saw the child on the streets with Nancy. One of the Childers took up a collection for Nancy in 1890 when it was stated that she had given birth to a child and it was reported she was in a destitute condition. His recollection of the appearance of the child is hazy. The child appeared to be an Indian and white with tolerable light hair.

23. J. M. Preston (Rec., pp. 2575-2582): He lived in Wagoner twenty-three years. Went there in 1893 or 1894. He was a building contractor, at that time and was working in the lumber yard. First saw Nancy Atkins about 1894 or 1895; she had a child appeared to be from five to seven years old, light complected; had what he would call molasses hair a little bit wavy. Saw him in the yard back of Davis & Jones' store. His mother called him Tommy. He talked to Nancy about him. She said that he was her child. He asked her who his daddy was and she said, "Well, you might know, that he was a white man's child." He saw him around for about a week. He was not a healthy child; might have been small for his age.

24. D. W. Best (Rec., pp. 2582-2587): He lived in Wagoner since 1895. Knew Nancy Atkins since she was there. She had a child supposed to be hers. He was a swarthy little fellow, did not know whether he should be called mulatto, negro, or Indian, but would say he was a white child. He was four or five years old when he first saw him, possibly older. His mother was with him. He saw him frequently from time to time about 1896 up to 1900. He was told that he was dead to the best of his recollection in 1899. Appeared to be between nine and eleven years old.

On cross examination he tells the incident of first meeting Nancy and her boy Tommy, as he was called (Rec., p. 2585). He says the boy was mulatto colored. His hair was light.

25. T. J. Way (Rec., pp. 2591-2596): Mr. Way lives at Haskell, Muskogee county, and is postmaster there. He is a farmer and in the cattle business. He has lived in the Indian Territory thirty-six years and has lived in the neighborhood of Haskell twenty-one years in the cattle business there. He knew Tom Holden and Kate Holden, his wife, who lived about three-quarters of a mile from his place. He knows that they had Charlie and Harvey Atkins and Tommy Atkins at their place. First there was Charlie and Harvey and later Tommy. The Holdens told him that Charlie and Harvey were Minnie Atkins' children and they were there eight or ten months or longer before he saw Tommy there. He saw Nancy Atkins there only a short time. He had a conversation with Tom and Kate Holden with reference to the child Tommy who they told him was the child of Nancy. About 1899, as he remembers it, Tom Holden came and borrowed his buggy from him and said he wanted to go to Wagoner to get little Tommy and he asked him who it was and he said it was Nancy Atkins' child. He understood she was not taking any care of him and he took his buggy and went over there and brought the boy to his home. He was over there a few days afterwards and asked who the boy was and was told that this was Nancy's boy. He talked with Tom and Kate about it at different times. After Tommy had been there quite a little while Nancy came there and he was at the Holden's and Tom Holden told him who she was, that she was Thomas' mother and introduced him in the Indian way to Nancy, and he deviled with her and told her that he wanted to buy the boy; that he wanted an Indian boy, his oldest boy was about a year old and named Tommy and deviled with her about the boy being named Tommy, and joked with her. She stayed there a few days and then went away. Kate Holden told him that she was there to take the boy away; they wanted to keep him there, she would not take any care of the boy. After that he does not recall how long, she came and got him. His child Tom was born on the 5th of July, 1898, and he thinks he was about a year old when this incident occurred (Rec., pp. 2594-2595). He says that Charlie and Harvey had been there for two or three years. They had been there possibly a year before Tommy came.

Kate and Tom Holden had no children. They talked about these boys a good deal. He did not know that Nancy had ever taken care of these boys at Wagoner. He had never heard of this negro family of Atkins, but he knew Lee Atkins, a brother of Nancy. He thinks that Nancy stayed at the Holdens eight or ten days and that Tommy had been there two or three months when she came. She did not take the boy with her when she left. He thinks Tommy and Harvey were about the same age and Charlie a little older than Tommy. He said that when Tommy was brought there he had on a long shirt and Tom Holden said nobody was paying any attention to him. He was asked if it was not a fact that the child he brought from Wagoner was in fact Charlie and said it was not, and asked if it was not Harvey and he said it was not. Then he was asked what kind of a looking boy Tommy was and he said he was an Indian boy, but his hair was not very dark. His hair was not as dark as an Indian's. He was not a full-blood Indian. He would take him to be a half-breed Indian, taking into consideration his skin, eyes and hair. Charlie's hair was not as black as a full-blood. He did not think either of the boys were full-bloods. Then he draws a comparison, at the instance of the counsel, between the color of the hair of these three boys and the men in the court room which could not be followed here.

In answer to questions from the court he said the boy looked like a half-blood Indian. That he was familiar with the Indian features and characteristics; had lived among them for many years. The boy had the appearance of being six to eight years of age at this time; seemed to be an Indian boy. The three boys did not look much alike. Charlie and Harvey did not resemble each other as much at brothers usually do. He was asked to describe Nancy Atkins and he gave a description of her. He described her as pigeon-toed and cross-eyed. The court asked him if he could recognize her in the court room. In the court room at the time were two white ladies and Nancy, and Mr. Way recognizes her as Nancy, although he had not seen her for many years. He thinks that Tom and Kate Holden gave him a family history of the child, but does not recall it now. He knows that he is not confused about these boys.

Kate Holden had been married to a man named Wadsworth before she married Tom Holden and had a son named Mitchell Wadsworth and he knows him very well. At the time referred to when Tommy was there he was not at home, as he was in the penitentiary.

Mr. Way states that he heard talk about this case and he told the parties to whom he talked that the Government was making a mistake in trying to prove that there was no Tommy Atkins, because he knew that there was. He knew that he lived in this community, but knew nothing of his enrollment (Rec., p. 2601).

Mr. Way was cross examined by all of the adverse counsel in detail; in every way they tried to break the force of his testimony but of no avail. It absolutely destroys all theories that there could have been a confusion in the minds of the people in Wagoner with Nancy's son Tommy and Charlie and Harvey Harrison as he knew all three of the boys and saw them all together at Mr. Holden's residence and gave minute descriptions of all of them. He was an intimate friend of the Holdens and with them constantly, being their near neighbor and they talked to him freely about these boys and their family history. We want to emphasize in this connection this fact, that Noah Gregory, Euchee King, was before the Dawes Commission in May, 1901, when this enrollment was made with the list of the Euchees and talked with Mr. Hopkins, the chief clerk, over all of the unaccounted for Euchees and Thomas Atkins was one of these. Mr. Gregory tells about havng made a trip previously to this time with Tom Holden, and Tom Holden was telling him about having Charlie and Harvey Harrison with him and his desire to file for them. Through Mr. Way we have a picture of Tom Holden and his interest in these boys and it is inconceivable that at the time that he talked to Mr. Gregory about Charlie and Harvey, that he did not likewise, inform him of the condition of Nancy's boy Tommy then living in destitution without anyone to care for him. It was Mr. Gregory's business as head of the Euchee clan to keep informed as to all the members of his tribe and make lists of them, and doubtless he did so on the information received from Mr. Holden and the other members of his family.

26. W. C. Smith (Rec., pp. 2607-2609): He was a druggist at Wagoner; moved there in 1898. We have heretofore called attention to his testimony wherein he stated that Henry Anderson his porter in his drug store told him that the woman and child that he saw in the drug store was Nancy Atkins and her kid. He saw them for two or three years, off and on from that time. She was in his store frequently; sometimes had this boy with her. He heard that the boy was dead two or three years after he first saw him, and never saw him after he heard that report. The boy's hair was kind of yellow. It was not kinky, was kind of curly. He had a sallow complexion. He was probably four or five years old when he first saw him.

He knew Charlie Lee Harrison. He was not the boy that he saw with Nancy. He does not know Harvey; he understood there was another one of these boys, but the only one he knew was Charlie, the one who was raised by Charlie Bailey.

27. Bob Delozier (Rec., pp. 2616-2625): This is one of the negro witnesses who has a bad criminal record, but he lived in the negro community and was brought in intimate contact with Nancy. He said that she was living in a tent back of Betsy Burney's house when her child was born. He saw it the next morning when he was sent there by Childers to carry her something to eat. He saw the child there with her. He had seen her in a pregnant condition before this time. He saw the child for about nine years after its birth. The child died when it was about nine or ten years old. He was buried northwest of Wagoner where the graveyard is now. He helped dig the grave. An old darky named Monday Barnett conducted the ceremony; he doesn't remember whether Sam McHenry was there or not. (It appears from McHenry's testimony that Barnett conducted the services at the house and he at the grave.) He doesn't remember whether Nancy was at the grave or not. Knows that Nancy was arrested and taken to Fort Smith when the child was about three months old. Betsy Burney took care of it while she was away. Then it just lived first one place and then another with the colored people. He has seen it with Nancy.

28. Samuel McHenry (Rec., pp. 2636-2637): He is a negro preacher seventy-eight years old. In about 1901, although he is hazy at to the date, he was asked to attend the funeral of a boy that was said to be Nancy Atkins' boy. Monday Barnett was his pastor and he notified him. He was working at the depot, but he attended the funeral at the graveyard. There was there Monday Barnett, Bob Delozier, E. G. White. He doesn't remember whether Nancy was present or not. Rather thinks she was, but is not certain. He officiated at the grave. He is a Baptist preacher. Monday Barnett told him that it was Nancy's child, but he had no conversation with Nancy.

29. J. B. White (Rec., pp. 2747-2752): Mr. White is one of the defendants here and his testimony regarding his connection with this case has already been referred to. He moved to Wagoner in the spring of 1895. He left there about 1902. He was collecting for Davis & Jones. He got acquainted with Nancy Atkins as she was frequently at Davis & Jones' store, and lived a good deal of the time at Betty Burney's. He did not remember of seeing her boy until he commenced working for Davis in 1896. He saw him with Nancy and saw him playing around the streets with the Burney boys and they often got in his buggy. Nancy told him it was her boy. He was scolding the boy for getting in the buggy and Nancy told him to get out of there and go away. He asked whose boy it was and she told him it was hers. He was then five or six years old and was ragged and dirty. He was so dirty that it was hard to tell what he was, but he looked to be both Indian and white. His hair was light, but as he grew older it grew darker. He saw the boy up until 1900. He missed Nancy from Wagoner about 1898 or 1899. Betsy Burney moved out to the Verdigris one spring and stayed there untill fall and moved back to Wagoner.

30. J. K. McClaren (Rec., 4406-4414): He is a farmer and stock raiser. He lived at Wagoner from 1885 to 1891. He worked in Davis & Jones' store in the winter time and on the ranch in the summer. He was just a boy then. He knew Nancy Atkins when he left Wagoner in 1891. He was then seventeen or eighteen years old. She lived back of the store with some darkies named Burney. She stayed with some darkies by th name of Williams, but she didn't seem to stay at any one place very long. She worked at various hotels. She had a child and it was right little when he first saw it, which was about 1890 or 1891. It was too young to talk. It was in dresses and he could not say whether it was a boy or a girl, but he saw it on numbers of occasions, he was living right close by his place and was in and out of the store. It was constantly with her except when she was at work. He has seen her many times coming to the store with the little fellow. They lived not over a couple of hundred yards from the store and he would see it with the Burney children. It looked like it was pretty badly mixed blood; not kinky hair, but stringy; looked like a mixed Indian and white. He supposes he knew at one time whether it was a boy or a girl, but he doesn't now remember. He doesn't know about Nancy being sent to the penitentiary. He left there in the spring of 1891 and might have seen her there after that time. His last distinct recollection of the child it was probably a year and a half old, not to exceed two years old.

He described the Burney children and their different ages. He left Wagoner in the spring of 1891, but he was back there during the summer of 1891 and worked on a ranch ten miles from town. He was back at different times until fall when he went to Pine Bluff, Arkansas, and was not there much after that, but was there off and on later.

31. J. H. Anderson (Rec., pp. 4414-4417): Lived six miles east of Wagoner. Had lived there since 1883. He left Wagoner to go to Coweta in 1892. He knew Nancy Atkins a year or two before then. He saw her with a small child that she said was hers about 1890. It was probably two or four months old. It was nursing at the breast. He remembers Nancy going to the penitentiary and saw her after she got back. While she was gone the child was left with Betsy Burney. After she came back he saw the child with her. He came back from Coweta in 1903. He never saw the child any more. He has seen Nancy since. She told him the child was dead. He said he knew Dick Atkins and his boy, Thomas Atkins, and that the child he was talking about, Nancy's boy

Thomas Atkins, was a different child altogether. He doesn't remember the name of Nancy's child. He says it was a kind of mixed-breed looking child. Might have been white, Indian and colored from its appearance. It was a brownish yellow, hair was light. Dick Atkins' Tommy was dark skinned and kinky headed and was a negro child. He was a different child from the one he has described as Nancy's child. Dick Atkins' child must have been five or six years older. He knew Charlie and Harvey Harrison, one that lived with Charlie Bailey, the other with Jim Childers. Neither of these was the child that he had seen with Nancy. They were different boys altogether.

On cross examination he goes into the description of these different boys.

32. M. J. Phillips (Rec., pp. 4419-4420): A newspaper editor, he lived at Wagoner in October, 1892. Until 1894 he lived on the west side close to Davis & Jones' store. He knew Nancy Atkins. She had a child then that looked like it was three or four years old. He tells of first meeting Nancy and a child which Nancy claimed was hers and after that time he saw them frequently until he moved in the other part of town two or three years later; then he would meet them occasionally. The child was rather dark and had rather light hair. It was a peculiar looking child; its hair was stringy. It looked like an Indian, negro and white. The last he remembers of seeing the child was in 1894 or 1895. He was apparently about four years old. This boy was called Tommy.

33. Mrs Lizzie M. Miller (Rec., pp. 4422-4426): She is fifty-seven years old. She moved to Wagoner in 1897 and lived there about sixteen years. She knew Nancy Atkins there; she was staying with a family named Burney; she had a child there with her called Tommy. She bought the house where the Burneys lived and some lots and rented the house to the Burneys. They would be frequently behind with the rent and she would give them washing to help on the rent and in that way would frequently be there. She was running the McNally Rooming House. She saw Nancy and this child around there. The child died. She went there to get her rent and found that the child was dead and they had taken him to bury him. She knew the child had been sick there for some time before he died. He was a scraggy looking boy. Could not say how old he was because he was so skinny. She thought he was Indian and white. She would judge him to be about seven and a half or eight years old, but he might have been older. She thinks it was the spring of 1899 that he died. He was nearly white. She knows that he was Indian and knows his name was Tommy Atkins. She knew the boy out at Charlie Bailey's that was claimed to be his brother or something, but she did not know of the relationship. She says that the boy's hair was kind of light and kind of molasses color. She would call it yellow molasses hair. It was kind of sandy. "We call them dishwater blondes."

34. J. W. Ruble (Rec., pp. 4427-4429): He is sheriff of Wagoner county and had lived in Wagoner since December, 1896. He was engaged in the drug business. He is acquainted with Charlie Harrison, or Lee, as he is sometimes called. Known him most of his life; been living with Charlie Bailey at Wagoner. He is slightly acquainted with Harvey Harrison, his brother. He knows Cheney Trent, but no other members of the Atkins family. He knows Nancy Atkins and has known her since 1896 or 1897. He has not seen her at Wagoner since 1897. He was acquainted with the boy that was with her in Wagoner. He was a little chap, five or six years old, going around with her. This boy would come with Nancy to the store, he could not say how many times, but a number of times, for a period of one to seven months. He would see them together every two or three days. Saw the boy when he was not with her and got acquainted with him. He was five or six years old, and was a sandy-headed boy, a few freckles, very dirty child playing with negro boys, and never heard his name. This boy who associated with Nancy and whom he describes was neither Charlie nor Harvey Harrison. From his appearance it would have been impossible for him to have been a brother of Cheney Trent. This boy was Caucasian and Indian; Cheney Trent was a negro. He saw no indication of any other blood in this boy than Indian and white.

35. Augustus Davis (Rec., pp. 4593-4598): He has lived at Wagoner since 1893, in the second-hand business. He knows Charlie Harrison and saw him in the court room as a witness in this case. He has known him since he was seven or eight years old. He is an Indian boy in appearance. He knew Nancy Atkins when she lived at Wagoner. He saw a boy with her once; had seen the boy several times before playing around with negro children. He was called Tommy Atkins. This was a year or two after he had first seen him he was in the store with Nancy. He was a sandy complected boy; his hair was sandy or red. He was very dirty. His opinion is that he was white and Cherokee, Indian anyhow. He could not see any negro in him.

He learned through Mayor Hall that he was dead and he did not see him any after he learned that. The boy that he saw in his place of business and elsewhere was not Charlie Harrison. The boy that he saw at Charlie Bailey's was a different boy.

Judge Campbell's Mistake as to Nancy's Testimony.

In Judge Campbell's opinion, page 145 of the record, he stated:

> "Grave doubt is cast upon Nancy's contention by her own conduct during the period when the Dawes Commission was enrolling the members of the tribe and allotting the land, when it is considered that she manifested a lively interest in her own enrollment and allotment and that of her brother Lee who had died as she knew in 1894 or 1895, but in this correspondence with the Commission makes no reference to her supposed son Thomas, who, if her present contentions be true, had lived until after April 1, 1899, was clearly entitled to enrollment and whose death was almost contemporaneous with her correspondence with the Commission."

However, he decided that it was immaterial as to whether, in fact, Nancy also had a son Thomas, and made no finding of fact upon it, other than to cast doubt upon her testimony, as quoted, for the reason stated.

The learned judge was not only mistaken as to the facts testified to, but wholly so as to the effect of the correspondence. The correspondence referred to is found at record, pages 4718-4725. The first letter is dated June 25, 1901 (Rec., p. 4718).

The birth of Nancy's child is fixed by several circumstances aside from the memory of parties, as occurring some months before she was sent to the penitentiary in December, 1898, and is fixed from memory of Nancy and several other witnesses, as born in September of that year (Rec., p. 2698). Nancy testified that he died in the spring of 1900 (Rec., pp. 2696-2699). There is considerable difference in the recollection of the many witnesses who testified on this subject, as to the exact date of the death of Nancy's son Thomas. They had no fixed event to fix it by, and were dependent upon memory, and it varies according to their recollection, from 1899 to 1901; but the weight of the testimony sustains Nancy's recollection that it occurred in 1900. Many of them have no recollection of the year and spoke of him as being 9 or 10 years old when he died. Mrs. Miller places it earlier than any others, and her recollection of it was that it was the spring of 1899 (Rec., p. 4424). Mr. Engle's recollection would fix it as the spring of 1900 (Rec., p. 2699). Sheriff Long thinks it was in 1901 (Rec., p. 4447). John Ford thinks it was in 1899 (Rec., p. 2606). Mr. McElroy left Wagoner in 1901 and the last he remembers of seeing him was in about 1899 (Rec., p. 2572). Mr. White saw him until 1900 (Rec., p. 2748). Mr. Dyer thought that he was 9 or 10 years old when he died (Rec., p. 2520). Mr. Turnbro thought he was 10 or 11 when he died (Rec., p. 2531). An event which probably fixes it more definitely than anything else in the record is what is known as the "dry year." Quite a number of witnesses said that Tommy died in the dry year. A few of these, as stated, thought that was as late as 1901 or possibly 1902, but Mr. Brewer fixes it definitely as either 1899 or 1900, because he moved to Wagoner in one or the other of those years and he knows it was not later than 1900, and he knows it was the "dry year" in which he moved there, and he knows that that was the year that Thomas Atkins died, and he tells the circumstances of Tommy and other boys getting milk from his cows, but, owing to the drought, he disposed of his cows except some for family use (Rec., p. 2557). This fixing of his death in the dry year fixes it as not later than 1900 and thus sustains Nancy's own recollection and of Mr. White and of several other witnesses. Therefore, we can take it as established that the great weight of the evidence, considering the weight as that which has the most reason for it, is that this child died in the spring of 1900 at the very latest. Therefore, Judge CAMPBELL's first error was in saying that his death was almost contemporaneous with her correspondence with the Commission.

Before considering the correspondence, we invite your attention to the fact that every time Nancy appeared presonally before the Commission, that she signed her name by a mark (Rec., pp. 4726, 4728, 4729, 4730). Therefore, it is apparent that the correspondence to which your attention is now invited was written by someone other than Nancy herself, as she was evidently an illiterate. Her first correspondence is a letter dated June 25, 1901, directed to the Dawes Commission, requesting them to send her by return mail a statement of her filing papers, as it would be some time before she received her filing certificate, and added that she desired the numbers of her land (Rec., p. 4718). She testified that she filed June 6, 1901 (Rec., p. 2737). She missed the date but a little, as her application (Rec., p. 4727) is dated June 11, 1901. This was making application for a given tract of land of 161.34 acres which she desired as a home, and which she offers to accept as her final allotment. Therefore, this letter is merely requesting the Commission to send her a statement of her filing papers and the numbers of her land.

The next letter, and this is evidently the letter which Judge CAMPBELL had in mind, is dated July 29, 1901 (Rec., p. 4719). It is directed to the Dawes Commission and asks them to inform her as to the necessary steps to take in filing for her brother Lee, who was about 37 years old when he was killed at Checotah in November, 1898. (She was wrong as to the date. It is established that he was killed at Checotah in November, 1894.) The letter also stated that she had a sister Minnie Atkins, who went to Colorado two years ago last June and that she had received a letter from her, but that she had heard nothing from her since. She asked if she could file for her before it was too late. She again asks that they send her filing papers by return mail, as she was anxious to receive them and stated she filed on the 11th of June.

We see nothing inconsistent whatever in her attitude in seeking to get her brother and sister on the Roll, if it were possible, with the fact that she did not in this letter mention her son Thomas. He had then been enrolled since May 23, 1901. While Nancy says in this letter that she wanted to "file" for her brother and "file" for Minnie, evidently, what she meant was to get the name of her dead brother on the Roll and get the name of her absent sister on the Roll. She certainly stretched the "long bow" in saying that Minnie had only left two years before, which would have been in 1899, and no one claims that she was in the Indian Territory long after the payment in 1895. Mr. Needles replied to this letter, August 9, 1901, in which he told her that her brother, having died prior to April 1, 1899, would not be entitled to enrollment. Thus it is seen that he construed her question as relating to enrollment, not to filing on lands. In reference to her sister's enrollment, Mr. Needles used the term "enrollment," not the term "filing," which Nancy had used, as he clearly understood that she was inquiring as to the enrollment of her sister, not filing for lands. He quoted the Act of Congress, requiring the enrollment to be confined to those who had removed to and in good faith had settled in the Nation in which they claimed citizenship (Rec., p. 4720). Then he stated that her certificate of selection would be mailed to her ninety days from the date of her application. Nancy did not understand the language of the Act of Congress and she wrote to the Commission on August 15th in reply to Mr. Needles' letter, and explained to him that Minnie was born in the Indian Territory and had lived there all her life until a little less than three years ago when she left temporarily for her health. Nancy was certainly stretching the blanket for the benefit of Minnie, as to her residence in the Territory. She thought that from the quotation from the Act of Congress, she must have moved into the Indian Territory, when she was explaining that she was born there. Certainly there is nothing inconsistent in this regard to her position with reference to her own son. He had been enrolled three months prior to this effort to get her sister upon the Roll. Mr. Needles replied to this letter by quoting another section of an Act of Congress (Rec., p. 4722), and this seems to have closed the incident. Her next letter is written April 6, 1903, evidently by a different person from the one who wrote some of the others. The Dawes Commission had theretofore been spelled "Daws" and now is is spelled "Does," whereas the letter of August 15th was evidently written by a different person than the others, as it is not nearly so illiterate. This letter asks what is going on down there for the Creeks? Are the deeds to be sent out, or not? She had evidently heard some disquieting rumors and said it might be from a "crazy Snake" and wanted information. Mr. Needles construed it as a question as to the delivery of deeds covering her allotment and replied that they would be ready within the next eight weeks (Rec., p. 4724).

We have tediously gone through these letters, because Judge Campbell attached importance to them. There is only one which could have weight, the one of July 29th. It was an effort to get recognition for her brother Lee Atkins, who had been dead for some years. There was no question then of the recognition of her son Thomas, as he was already enrolled, and when she wrote this letter it was after she had been before the Commission to obtain her own allotment on June 11th, and, presumably, would know that he had been enrolled. Or, it may have been that she did not know he was enrolled and was trying to ascertain the status of Creeks who were dead and, instead of asking about her illegitimate child, she asked the question about her brother. Her reference to Minnie simply shows that she was trying to get her non-resident sister on the Roll and believed that because her sister was a Creek by blood and had been recognized by the tribe, she ought to be on the Roll. There was no question of non-residence of her son and this was a totally different question from the one concerning the dead Creeks.

Judge CAMPBELL in the quoted excerpt from his opinion, confused the enrollment and the allotment. The enrollment was one thing and the allotment was another. The enrollment was an act performed by the Dawes Commission. The allotment was the awarding of the land to the enrolled person, either on his own selection or a selection made arbitrarily by the Commission itself.

Now, Judge CAMPBELL stated in his opinion that Nancy manifested a lively interest in her own enrollment and allotment. There is absolutely no evidence of her interest in her own enrollment at all. She was enrolled on December 21, 1900. (See her card, record, page 4718.) This was more than a year and a half before this first letter was written. The only evidence in the record of her enrollment is her own testimony wherein she told of her uncle, Mr. Robinson, coming to Wagoner and asking her if she wanted him to enroll her and her son, and that the enrollment was then going on at Coweta (Rec.,

p. 2736). As we have heretofore pointed out, this was evidently one of the field parties that was going through the country in the fall of 1897. She went to Coweta and found that she had been enrolled after her uncle had left. In her deposition given in the office of Bartlett's attorneys, inserted in this record (Rec., p. 2788), she stated that her aunt, Mrs. Robinson, told her that she had enrolled her. This is every word, so far as we know, in the record in regard to her enrollment. The Robinsons had promised to attend to it for her and she knew that they had gone to Coweta for that purpose and she learned that they had done so at that place, but, doubtless, she did not know, as explained by Mr. Hopkins, in his testimony, that these enrollments by field parties in 1897 had been abandoned by the Commission and new Rolls started after the Commission got the Tribal Rolls in 1899 (Rec., p. 186). She stated in the trial here that she filed on June 6, 1901, for her allotment and that Thomas had then been dead since the spring of 1900 (Rec., p. 2737). She was asked if she understood then whether she could select for him or whether his being head prevented him getting an allotment, and she said she didn't understand these matters (Rec., p. 2737). The "lively interest" which Judge CAMPBELL thought that she showed in her own enrollment and allotment and that of her brother Lee, was confined to writing one letter to the Commission as to the status of her bother Lee, and in going before the Commission in June, 1901, to select the land which she desired for her home; and she stated that she did not understand whether she could select for her dead son or whether he, being dead, got any allotment.

When it is considered that this woman is an incompetent and illiterate, signing her name by mark, we feel that the learned judge measured her conduct in this respect by too rigid a yard stick. The question of rights of dead Indians has been the source of much litigation in the state and federal courts in Oklahoma. Learned lawyers have differed on this subject. Courts have differed; dissenting opinions have been filed where these questions have been involved; and to impute knowledge of them to this woman and require her to draw nice distinctions between allotments and enrollments, between a brother dead before enrollment and a son dead after enrollment, is something which could not be expected of her. But as we see this correspondence, it only means that she was desiring to get upon the Roll the name of her dead brother, if he was entitled to be there, and the name of her non-resident sister, if she was entitled to be there; and as her son was already upon the Roll, and as she had been upon the Roll for a year and a half before this correspondence occurred, there is nothing inconsistent with her inquiries regarding her dead brother and absent sister with the position which she has assumed throughout this litigation.

She has consistently claimed that she was the mother of Thomas Atkins, that he was born at Wagoner in September, 1890, and died there in the spring of 1900. If there is any fact which can be weighed against her in this correspondence or her dealings with the Dawes Commission at all, it is the fact that in June, 1901, she filed for her own homestead and did not at that time file for her son. We doubt if there were many lawyers in the Indian Territory at that time who would have known whether they would have had a right to have filed for a dead son under the same circumstances, at the time when Nancy filed for her own homestead.

General Reputation in Wagoner.

We ask consideration of the rejected testimony of the general reputation in Wagoner that Tommie Atkins, a boy who was born, lived and died there, was a son of Nancy Atkins. The subject is so fully presented by Professor Wigmore that we copy at length his discussion of it:

> "May not neighborhood-reputation be often sufficiently trustworthy to be received in evidence of certain other facts of family history likely to be notoriously canvassed and hence to become known with a sufficient degree of accuracy? In communities of more primitive conditions, where social life continues stable amid constant and fixed surroundings, the neighborhood-reputation is unquestionably of some value. Such was formerly the almost universal state of things in England, on the Continent, and in the United States. Such is still the state of things in rural communities almost everywhere (except in our newly-settled regions) and notably in the small towns of New England and the South. That it has ceased to exist in the metropolitan communities does not indicate that neighborhood-reputation, where it arises, is less trustworthy; it merely indicates that amid the isolated individualism and kaleidoscopic changes of the metropolitan horde no neighborhood-reputation is likely to exist. Moreover, the frequent migrations of American life have in one respect made reputation-evidence even more necessary than in stable communities as a source of knowledge; for in countless families the only means of knowledge for them of the career of the migrated members is the reports brought back, at times, of the fate or fortune reputed to have overtaken them in the distant community where they took up a new home. * * *

"Such evidence was once in England considered orthodox enough; and its use has been vindicated, on grounds of policy and of principle, by many American courts, as admissible in certain classes of cases:

"1821, Mills, J., in Birney v. Hann, 3 A. K. March. 326: 'From the sayings of the parents or members of the family, courts progressed at last to the admission of the general recognition or reputation of the heirship by others. It is admitted that it is difficult to lay down any precise rule on this subject. The kinds of evidence which are calculated to prove the consanguinity or affinity of one person to another are various, and all may be proper after a lapse of time.* * * '

"1834, Catron, C. J., in Flowers v. Haralson, 6 Yerger 496: 'Reputation of pedigree is the result of the public mind, founded upon actual knowledge of the whole community; and experience and knowledge in the nature and habits of man teach the unerring certainty of the public knowledge and conclusion in relation to family history. Individuals may fail in their investigations of particular facts; but where marriages, births, and deaths are the facts to be learned, human curiosity saves us the trouble and expense of proving the occurrences by witnesses present or by the hearsay of those who were, or of the family connection. No individual investigations or testimony can generally be equal in certainty to the curious' scrutiny; and if secrecy be attempted, public curiosity sets on foot an anxious search for the truth. General reputation of such facts is not only competent, but highly credible.'

* * * * * * *

"1875, Cooper, C., in Carter v. Montgomery, 2 Tenn. Ch. 227: ' * * * This sanction of neighborhood-reputation has not been universal. It is illustrated in many rulings; but there is still in many other courts an entire refusal to accept it. There are certain classes of facts for which it is entirely appropriate; there are others for which it may not be. The matter is one in which it should be left to the discretion of the trial court to admit such a reputation wherever the meagreness of other evidence, or the difficulty of obtaining it, renders it desirable to accept that which is offered. On no one point is there a general agreement in the rulings. They may be grouped according as they deal with the admissibility of reputation as evidence of legitimacy or the opposite; of relationship, to a family or to an individual, or of birth, or of death or its place or time, or of race-ancestry (i. e., whether slave or free, whether white, negro, or Indian), or of sundry facts of family history'."

—2 Wigmore on Evidence, section 1605.

In Secrist v. Green, 3 Wallace, p. 744, this court said:

> "It is competent to prove death and heirship by reputation.

In Ewell v. State, 6 Yerger (Tenn.) 364, the court said:

> "The rule that the best evidence the nature of the case admits of shall be had, and that hearsay is not equal to knowledge of the fact and generally incompetent, has its exceptions, grounded partly in necessity, and partly on the probability that common repute is true in certain cases. The exception has become a general rule of evidence where the fact of marriage, the state and condition of the family, or the relationship of its various members is sought to be established."

In the case of Fuller v. Saxton, 20 New Jersey Law Rep., p. 61, the court said:

> "The tract was known as far back as the memory of witnesses could reach as the Kemp tract, and I think the evidence of Mr. Armstrong, one of the commissioners, that Grace Kemp was reputed to be the daughter of Daniel Coxe, was competent and legal and entitled to weight, though he could not trace such reputation to the family."

While the cases differ on this subject yet the reasoning of Professor Wigmore and the courts supporting his view of it is so cogent that it should prevail in the interest of truth. No better illustration of the necessity and value of it could be found than in the instant case. Tommie Atkins was born in 1890 and died about ten years later, and lived his life in the little town of Wagoner. This trial was had about twenty-seven years after his birth and seventeen years after his death; Wagoner was then only a small town of a few hundred inhabitants. A neighborhood-reputation in such a community would be as near verity as family reputation in older and more densely populated communities. Family reputation of relationship is always admitted, even by the most technical courts.

Mr. Engles said that Nancy was a well known character in the community; she was sent from that community to the penitentiary for purloining some one else's mail and left a nursing baby and returned about seven months later and took up the care of it, and the child from that time for several years was constantly seen in her company. She worked in hotels and restaurants and she and the child lived with a negro family, who had cared for it in her absence, and the child was constantly with her except in the later years of his life, when Nancy was backwards and forwards from Wagoner to Nowata. When the child was born a subscription of clothes, food and money was taken for Nancy and when the child died the mayor of the town took a public subscription to pay for his burial. Though these parties lived a lowly life in the community, yet these events made their lives well known to that community.

A general reputation of their relationship established in such community certainly is as reliable as such reputation in a family connection. Those courts which reject this evidence, accept similar evidence based on general reputation in a family connection. No one under the facts in this case can doubt the reliability of the reputation in Wagoner of this relationship between Nancy and Tommie. The basis of general reputation is that the consensus of opinion is the truth. Another reason in this case which makes this testimony admissible, irrespective of the rule announced by Professor Wigmore and sustained by the courts in the cases cited: It is thoroughly established that the Dawes Commission accepted information of the status of the Creeks from reliable parties who gave them information. Mr. Bixby, Mr. Hopkins, Mr. Merrick and other officials of the Commission have testified that the Commission sought this information from Kings, Warriors, prominent Creeks and other reliable citizens, and even sent out and brought in people who had information of unenrolled-for Creeks. They were enrolling these unenrolled-for Creeks on information derived from any source which the Commission considered truthful and reliable.

Suppose that Sheriff [illegible], or former Sheriff Long, or Mr. Hughes, Mr. Brewer, Mr. McKinney, or any of a dozen other prominent citizens of Wagoner had been before the Commission and gave this information regarding Tommie Atkins. Can any one doubt the result? Assume that one of these gentlemen appeared before Mr. Hopkins on May 25, 1901, and told him that he knew a boy in Wagoner named Tommie Atkins, apparently a half-blood Indian, and that the general reputation in that community was that Nancy Atkins was his mother, and he was an illegitimate child. Mr. Hopkins would at once turn to the Nancy Atkins record and find that she was duly enrolled as a full-blood Creek, a member of Euchee Town, listed as No. 216 on the Euchee Town Roll of 1895. He would find on that same Roll and in that same family group Thomas Atkins, No. 213, and that Thomas Atkins was not enrolled and all of the other members of that family were enrolled except Minnie and the notation showed that she was a non-resident; unquestionably on this showing Mr. Hopkins would make a memorandum for the enrollment of Tommie Atkins and Mr. Merrick would have written it up. We have elsewhere argued that most likely this enrollment was made on information given by Noah Gregory and Sam Brown, who were before Mr. Hopkins on that date, but assuming that he did not get the information from them, but from some one of the many dozen citizens of Wagoner who would have testified to the relationship of the boy Tommie Atkins and Nancy Atkins based on general reputation in that community. Certainly this would have been sufficient to have enrolled him, with the other connecting facts presented. If this information was sufficient to the purpose of enrolling him before the Dawes Commission, certainly it was competent evidence in this hearing as a possible and probable basis for the enrollment under inquiry. We insist that under the sounder and better rule of the law the testimony is essentially competent and tends to prove the truth of the matter under inquiry, but should the court not care to commit itself to the rule so forcibly presented by Professor Wigmore and adheres to the more technical rule of confining such testimony to reputation in the family, yet under the facts here this testimony should be admitted because the enrollment of hundreds of Creek Indians rested on information given by third parties and the existence of a general reputation that Thomas Atkins was the son of Nancy Atkins was a sufficient basis for enrollment, and therefore the fact that such reputation existed should have been received.

Nancy offered to prove by the following witnesses, to-wit: Charlie Bailey, Nolan Williams, J. E. Newberry, James E. Long, Jasper N. Schrimsher, Thomas Brewer, W. A. McElroy, Walter Posey, Frank Engles, R. F. Davis, J. K. McClaren and J. W. Ruble, in substance the following: That each of these witnesses was well acquainted with Nancy Atkins and well acquainted with a child, in Wagoner, which each witness described, and each of these witnesses testified there was a general reputation and general understanding in the community of Wagoner as to the relationship between Nancy and this child called Tommie Atkins, and each testified he was well acquainted with that reputation. Then with each witness the proof was offered that the general reputation and understanding in that community was that Nancy Atkins was the mother of said child, Tommie Atkins.

This testimony was excluded, the court rendering an opinion declining to follow Professor Wigmore (Rec., p. 2444).

After Mr. Merrick had testified to the effect that the Dawes Commission in enrolling Creeks at Okmulgee in May, 1901, had taken information conveyed to the Commission by Kings, Warriors and any other reliable persons, then we again offered to introduce this testimony. Mr. J. K. McClaren was then upon the witness stand. Attention was called to the latitude indulged by the Commission in making its enrollment and the argument then made that in view of the basis of enrollment that this testimony should be admitted. The court again declined to admit this testimony (Rec., p. 4409).

These rulings are assigned as errors.

Brief of Nancy Atkins' Interests in Reply to the Government Brief

---

ERROR AS TO PROCEEDING OF THE DAWES COMMISSION

The learned counsel for the Government fell into an error as to the procedure of the Dawes Commission in the enrollment at Okmulgee. At page 5 they say that when the Commission enrolled Thomas Atkins it had adopted a rule whereby it listed for enrollment the names appearing on the 1895 tribal roll concerning whom nothing definite was known. This is true, but for inquiry. For convenience in getting information, in March, these lists were sent to the Town Kings for an investigation and to be reported on at the final session at Okmulgee.

At page 17, they say the Commission took the 1890 and 1895 payrolls and made a card for the unaccounted for names and that personal appearance of the member or of his family was not required, and at page 18 state: "If they had information that any name was not entitled to enrollment, they did not put it upon a card, otherwise they did." The exact converse of this was the case. These cards were never closed until reliable information outside of the rolls that the person lived until April 1st, 1899, and was a resident of the Creek Nation on that date, was received. In our first brief is a chapter entitled: "Procedure of the Dawes Commission." Therein we fully abstracted the evidence on this subject with proper page references and on this exact question beginning at page 60. So that there may be no question of the accuracy of our statement we refer you to the testimony of Chairman Bixby, Volume 1, Pages 274-275. He stated that the main and essential thing was ascertaining that the person was living on April 1st, 1899, and was a resident, and that the rolls were not accepted as evidence of these facts. He is quite certain that no one was ever enrolled without satisfactory information derived from reliable sources given to him or some of the enrolling officers and he further stated he had a splendid staff of officers for this work and that they worked intelligently and diligently and that he conferred constantly with them over the information received, and that no card was released until he approved it. Upon practically the same state of record in U. S. vs. Wildcat 144 U. S. 11, Mr. Justice Day speaking for the court said: "That the Commission never arbitrarily listed any name; that no name was listed solely because it was on the tribal roll of 1895, but some particular evidence was required outside of that roll." We have in our first brief abstracted the evidence fully showing that no one living in the Indian Territory in 1901 had ever heard of Minnie's son. Therefore, it was impossible that reliable information of his existence on April 1, 1899, and residence in the Indian Territory on that date could have been conveyed to Chairman Bixby or to any of the enrolling officers. If the claim which Minnie now presents had been presented to the Dawes Commission it would have defeated the enrollment of her son on the ground of non-residence, as her own enrollment was defeated on that ground, and on the further ground that there is not even now any evidence that he was living on April 1st, 1899, at Leavenworth, or anywhere else. All of the testimony on that subject rests in a letter from an unremembered friend at an unremembered date that he died at Leavenworth, Kansas. If Judge Campbell's theory that his name got on the tribal roll from information of his existence from Minnie's relatives, this would not have been sufficient for his enrollment and would have had to be supplemented by further reliable information that he lived in the Creek Nation on April 1st, 1899. Furthermore, had a child existed such as is now claimed and had the information of his existence been imparted to the Commission he would not have been described in the census card as a half-blood, age ten years, post office at Muskogee, Indian Territory. He would have been described as quarter-blood, age sixteen, post office at Leavenworth, Kansas. On the other hand in the chapter entitled "The Identity of the Thomas Atkins Enrolled" beginning at page 125 we have set out in much detail the evidence, demonstrating, as we believe, that the information conveyed to the Dawes Commission which caused this enrollment was of Nancy's son, Thomas, who met the requirements of residence in the Creek Nation, and of being alive on April 1st, 1899; and filled the description in the census card as to blood, age, surname of mother, and post office address.

AS TO THE TESTIMONY AGAINST NANCY

At page 54 and 55, the Government brief sets out the evidence against Nancy, mainly relying upon Elnora Mayshack, Eliza Sterling, Angeline Moody, Henry Anderson and Micco Harjo. The Page interests in their brief likewise stress the testimony of these disreputable negroes and of the unfaithful guardian, Harjo. In our reply brief at page 21 we have a chapter entitled "Analysis of some of the testimony against Nancy." In it we have shown by apt record references contradiction of these witnesses by reputable witnesses and the inconsistencies of their testimony with each other and with admittedly established facts; so that we do not believe that any court would attach much, or any importance to it, if standing alone; but when this testimony is contradicted in every essential by thirty-five witnesses, most of them the foremost citizens of the community, such as sheriffs, town marshals, postmasters, editors, wholesale and retail merchants, building contractors, farmers, and cattlemen, we cannot believe it amounts to "dust on the scales."

Both the Government and the Page briefs quote largely from Micco Harjo. He was Nancy's guardian, appointed to sell her homestead and stole the proceeds from her except seventy-five dollars which he graciously gave her. He admitted that while conducting a lawsuit for her against Bartlett he received twenty-five dollars from Bartlett. It is established and not denied that he and Bettie Mann procured for Bartlett a deed from a woman falsely impersonating Minnie Atkins. His name actually appears on the forged deed. Nancy's testimony is not contradicted that he, through offer of bribes on the one side, and through threat of the penitentiary on the other, induced her to make false statements and to swear falsely in the suit brought by him in her behalf against Bartlett, by denying that she was the mother of Thomas Atkins. In this suit it was alleged by Harjo, the plaintiff as her guardian, that she was the mother of Thomas Atkins deceased, and that Bartlett was claiming the land under a lease from Minnie and it was alleged that Minnie was not the mother of Thomas. During the pendancy of that suit the forgery of Bartlett's lease procured by Bettie Mann and Harjo was discovered and proved. Shortly before this trial, Bartlett, working through these two crooks, Harjo and Bettie Mann, induced Nancy to go to Sapulpa and to stay in hiding in Bettie Mann's house there until notice was served on her lessee, White, to take her deposition. They then had her carried by Bettie Mann to Bartlett's lawyer's office and her deposition there taken, wherein she repudiated her son and was then whisked out of town. When the case in Creek County came on in order to admit this deposition, Bartlett took the stand and swore that he had made diligent search for Nancy and that she had left the country. Mr. White decided as he expressed it: "To take a chance on her," and had her brought into open court, and before Judge Stanfield she told the whole story, and won her case against Bartlett on the ground that she was the mother of Thomas Atkins, notwithstanding Eliza Sterling, Angeline Moody, Henry Anderson, and the other procured negro witnesses, told their stories like they told them here. It is surprising that the Government in the trial of this case should have used these witnesses procured by Bartlett to defeat Nancy when he was seeking to sustain his forged deed; but the Government did so. In view of the great number and high grade of nearly all of the witnesses introduced by Nancy establishing the birth, life and death of her son, Thomas, it is surprising that the Government would now seek to present the evidence of these discredited witnesses as worthy of a moment's consideration.

CONFUSION WITH THE NEGRO THOMAS

At page 55, the Government seeks to account for the testimony of these reputable witnesses who knew Nancy's son on the theory that they saw a negro, Thomas Atkins, with her and it is this negro, Thomas, to whom they are referring in their testimony. The record establishes that this negro, Thomas Atkins, presumably a left-handed cousin of Nancy was five years older than her son; was typically negro in appearance; was seven-eighths negro and one-eighth Indian and he died in the fall of 1898. He was the son of Dick Atkins and lived eleven miles from Wagoner, and sometimes accompanied his father there and two or three witnesses on a few occasions saw him with Nancy. This is the substance of the evidence on this subject. The Page interests likewise sought to escape the force of the testimony on behalf of Nancy in the same way. In our brief in reply to the Page brief, we devoted a chapter to this subject beginning at Page 13, wherein we abstracted the evidence which thoroughly and conclusively refuted this possibility. The testimony of Mr. Way alone would be sufficient. He was a neighbor and friend of Thomas and Kate Holden, and Thomas borrowed his buggy to bring Thomas Atkins, the son of Nancy and nephew of Mrs. Holden to Holden's house where he stayed several months. Mr. Way fixed positively the time he met this boy and Nancy at Mr. Holden's house as the summer of 1899, nearly [illegible] year after the death of the negro, Thomas. (R. page 2594-2595.) It will be seen from the examination of this chapter that some of the witnesses saw Nancy's son nursing at her breast at a time when the negro, Thomas would have been five years old. Others saw him continuously from his birth for periods of from one to ten years thereafter. Others saw him for the first time after the date of the death of the negro, Thomas, and knew him off and on, over various periods until his own death.

A review of this testimony absolutely destroys the theory which has been advanced in the effort to escape the undoubtedly established fact that Nancy Atkins had a son born at Wagoner, in the Creek Nation, in 1890, who lived there until his death the date of which is variously stated by the witnesses from the summer of 1899 to the summer of 1901.

REPLY TO BRIEF IN BEHALF OF THE MINNIE ATKINS INTERESTS

BRIEF RESUME OF NANCY'S CONTENTIONS

In view of the fact that the position of Nancy Atkins' interests is so misunderstood and misstated in the brief filed on behalf of the interests of Minnie Atkins, we feel that it may be helpful to have a brief resume of Nancy Atkins' contentions.

Judge Campbell's decision has three errors in it, as we contend:

First, the finding that Minnie had a son Thomas, born at Granny Letcher's, June 1, 1885, in Leavenworth, Kansas. On this point there is a great conflict in the evidence. It is so voluminous and the question is so incidental to the controversy that we have not presented it at all, have not even reviewed it, and, for the sake of the argument, we are trying this case as if this were the truth. We apprehend that the Government's brief will vigorously combat the correctness of this finding, and certainly there is a vast mass of testimony which will sustain the Government in its contention; but we are not presenting that and are little interested in it other than candor compels us to state that we do not believe her story for a moment. She told so many conflicting stories in regard to it, and her Kansas City Statement is so convincing that it was not the truth, but wholly fabricated, that we are reluctant to admit it even for the sake of arugment, but we are thus presenting our case.

Second, we contend that a fundamental error of Judge Campbell was in finding that Minnie Atkins had conveyed information to certain of her relatives in the Indian Territory of the birth of Thomas Atkins and that this information was imparted to the tribal authorities compiling the Roll, and that the name Thomas Atkins, appearing at 213 of Euchee Town on the 1895 Roll, represented her child, pursuant to such information (R. p. 145).

We think the evidence demonstrates:

(a) That the only testimony, connecting such son of hers with this Roll, has been destroyed, as in conflict with physical facts and established records, and can have no probative value whatsoever. In brief, these facts were as follows:

Minnie testified that she told her uncle, John Davis, and her brother Lee of the existence of this child, and no one else in the Indian Territory, and Lee Atkins died in 1894.

Sam Brown testified that he obtained from John Davis at Muskogee a list of the remnant of the Atkins family and used this list, given to him, to compile the Euchee Roll, and exhibited a book containing the list, as given him, which is copied in our brief at page 86. Brown testified he did not know Thomas Atkins, whose name was on that list. After the case was thus made, record evidence was introduced showing that John Davis was in the Detroit penitentiary from 1891 to 1896 (R. pp. 4988-4990).

Therefore, this concocted story is demonstrated to be perjury.

(b) The Rolls, themselves, prove that the Thomas thereon was not a child of Minnie. The facts thereon are briefly these:

Ordinarily, the Roll shows no relationship within the family. It is made up of different families grouped together, but does not show the relationship of one to the other within the group. The Tribal or King's Roll of 1895 was thus made up of five members of this Atkins family; the Roll properly spaced to hold these five and no others. They were Ed Schremcher, Mamie Atkins, Thomas Atkins, Mary Atkins and Nancy Atkins. Thereafter was added opposite the name of Mamie Atkins "& 2 Children" and either then or subsequently was added to the side of the family group two others, numbered 6 and 7, Charlie Atkins and Sussie Atkins. This Roll is copied opposite page 100 of our brief, and shows for itself.

The conclusion is irresistible that Thomas was not placed thereon as a son of Mamie Atkins, but was placed were independent of her and as a member of this family; and that later information, acquired by the compilers of this Roll, caused them to add, opposite her name, that she had two children. Thomas could not have been one of these, and, presumably, they were Charlie and Sussie, added after the original draft, thereby demonstrating on the face of the Roll that the Thomas thereon was not intended to be one of her children, who were added, evidently, on later information obtained, that she had two children.

Third, Judge Campbell's further fundamental error was in finding that the Thomas Atkins, appearing on the Dawes Commission Roll, was the illegitimate son of Minnie Atkins, born in June, 1885, at Leavenworth, Kansas (R. p. 145). The undisputed and uncontradicted testimony of Commissioner Bixby, Chief Clerk Hopkins, and Enrolling Clerks Merrick, Hastain and Lieber is to the effect that no one was ever placed on the Dawes Commission Roll merely because his name was on the Tribal Roll, but that independent information was always obtained outside of the Tribal Roll as to the existence on April 1, 1899, of that person and of his residence in the Indian Territory. There is absolutely not a scintilla of proof in this record, offered on behalf of Minnie Atkins, that such information as this could have been conveyed to the Dawes Commission, or was conveyed to it, but, on the contrary, all the testimony shows that whatever information was before the Dawes Commission was to the effect that Minnie was a non-resident, was not entitled to enrollment and was not enrolled; and that none of the parties who were before the Commission ever heard of her alleged son Thomas; therefore, there could neither have been information or misinformation given to the Commission on this subject justifying a finding that the Dawes Commission wittingly enrolled such son of hers; on the other hand in our brief beginning at p. 125 it is shown that the Dawes Commission unquestionably considered the person they were enrolling was this son of Nancy's and a mere clerical error occured in writing down the given name of the mother.

In the original brief in this case, we have not presented to the court the question as to whether or not Minnie Atkins had a child named Thomas at Leavenworth. The trial court made a finding to the effect that she had such a child.

On page 6 of their brief in this case, appellees say they believe that if this court goes into the evidence it will conclude that Nancy's claim is fraudulent and that her conduct and testimony show it to be fraudulent, and that the court will find that she never had a son, and that her only child was a girl, which was stillborn.

We can make a counter-assertion in all sincerity.

If the court will read the testimony of Minnie Folk, nee Atkins, beginning in Volume 5 of the record, page 3910, and her testimony taken in the form of a deposition, Volume 2, page 1304, and will then read the testimony of the following persons, to-wit: Mr. C. S. W. Dassler, a lawyer of Leavenworth, Kansas, whose compilation of the Kansas Code is well known in the southwest, which testimony begins in Volume 2 of the record, page 1462; Charles Peterkin, a soldier, and the father of one of Minnie's children, in Volume 1 of the record, page 420; Mrs. Laura E. Hyde, the lady for whom Minnie worked when she first went to Fort Leavenworth, Volume 1, page 341; of Cornelia G. Stafford, wife of Major Stafford, for whom Minnie worked just before one of her children was born, Volume 1, page 444; Major John Stafford, Volume 1, page 450; Julia Grodevant Foy, Volume 1, page 482; Frank J. Grodevant, Volume 1, page 388 and 397, and Miss Alice Robertson, now Congresswoman from this district, Volume 1, page 290, and Volume 2, page 1102, the court will be convinced without reading the huge mass of testimony in the case, that Minnie Atkins never had any such child, and this conviction will be strengthened rather than weakened by reading the testimony of F. B. Long, who was Page's agent throughout all this affair, Volume 5, page 3497. He corroborates Sadie James in too many particulars for his conduct to be sustained with honesty of purpose. Sadie James' testimony begins at page 510 of Volume 1. We would like for the court to read the testimony of this admitted criminal negro woman and then compare it with the testimony of F. B. Long.

But it is not at all necessary to a decision in our favor that the court should make any finding as to whether Minnie Atkins had a child at Leavenworth, Kansas, named Thomas Atkins.

As pointed out in our original brief in this case, Minnie Atkins stated positively that nobody in the Indian Territory ever knew of or heard of her son Thomas, except her brother Lee, and John Davis, and no witness was produced who claimed to have heard of her child except through John Davis.

S. W. Brown, who claims to have put Thomas on the Roll, stated that he got his information from John Davis and made a list of the names given by Davis. He had never heard of the alleged child from any other source. It is hown from the records of the penitentiary at Detroit that John Davis was there at the time of the enrollment, and at the time that Sam W. Brown claims that Davis told him gave him the list, so Brown's statement is untrue beyond peradventure, and with his testimony out, there is not a scintilla of proof showing that anybody in the Indian Territory could have put the name of the alleged child of Minnie on the Rolls. For Lee Atkins was dead long before the Rolls were made and it is not claimed that he ever told anyone of the existence of the alleged child of Minnie's.

DECISIONS OF TWO COURTS ON THE FACTS

It is stated at brief page 3, that it is a settled doctrine and practice of this court never to change or modify judgments on the facts of a case when those judgments have been rendered by two courts passing upon the same question and reaching the same result. If this were true, then the Act of Congress authorizing appeals in such cases is "Keeping the promise to the ear and breaking it to the hope," but this is not the rule. The rule is thus stated by this court: That the decision on facts twice passed upon by the lower courts in chancery cases will not be disturbed, "Unless shown to be clearly erroneous," or "Unless clearly shown to be erroneous," or "Unless it is clear that their conclusion is erroneous." (Washington Security Co. v. U. S., 234 U. S. 76; Gilson v. U. S., 234 U. S. 380; Baker v. Schofield, 243 U. S. 114.)

We have assumed the burden of demonstrating that clear error was committed by Judge Campbell in the District Court, (the Circuit Court of Appeals merely accepted his opinion without discussion of the facts), that a son of Minnie, named Thomas, and not a son of Nancy named Thomas, was on the Creek Tribal Roll of 1895, and subsequently was enrolled by the Dawes Commission, and further was wholly without any substantial evidence whatever to sustain it.

We are little concerned in this discussion whether Minnie ever had a son Thomas or not; the points that we are stressing before this court are that even if it be conceded that she did have, that it was not her son that was on the Tribal Roll and it was not her son who was enrolled by the Dawes Commission, and upon these points we insist there is absolutely no evidence which can be accepted in any court to sustain the decision.

EFFECT OF THE DECISION OF THE DAWES COMMISSION

In the discussion of the testimony concerning Nancy, page 97, of the brief, the counsel contend that there was a burden upon Nancy to overcome the findings of the Dawes Commission; they argue the question as if the interests of Nancy were seeking to impeach for mistake or fraud the patent issued as a result of the act of the Dawes Commission in enrolling Thomas Atkins. In this connection they quote from the opinion written by Mr. Justice Van Devanter in the case of Ross v. Stewart, 227 U. S. 530, which aptly sums up the presumptions indulged in support of the action of officers to whom the law entrusted proceedings resulting in a patent. In that instance Townsite Commissioners were authorized to issue patents under given facts. How such an argument can be made in this case is incomprehensible, but it is apparent that such argument must have been made in the court below, because the opinion of the Circuit Court of Appeals indicates (at Record page 5004) that the writer of it considered that the case of Nancy was an attack on the decision of the Dawes Commission; whereas Nancy's whole case is claiming under the decision of the Dawes Commission in enrolling Thomas as a member of the Creek Tribe. That decision is her muniment of title. To the Dawes Commission was committed the power of determining membership in the Creek Tribe of Indians as a basis of partition of the lands of that Tribe, and was constituted a quasi judicial tribunal for this purpose, and no other.

As this court stated in the case of U. S. v. Wildcat, 244 U. S. 111: "For this purpose it (Congress) determined to divide the lands among those living on April 1, 1899. and constituted a tribunal to investigate the question of membership and consequent right to share in the division. We think the decision of such tribunal, when not impeached for fraud or mistake, conclusive of the question of membership in the tribe, when followed, as was the case here, by the action of the Interior Department confirming the allotment and ordering the patents conveying the lands, which were in fact issued."

For these purposes the decision of this tribunal is conclusive, except for fraud or mistake, but the argument is here made, and seems to have been accepted by the Circuit Court of Appeals, that statements on the census card are also decisions of the Dawes Commission and impervious to attack, except for fraud and mistake. The same opinion (the Wildcat case) in reviewing the Acts of Congress on this subject stated: "It was provided that the Commission should make such rolls descriptive of the persons thereon, so that they might be identified thereby, and the Commission was authorized to take a census of each of said tribes, or to adopt any other means by them deemed necessary to enable them to make such rolls," (p. 117).

The Roll itself gives only the number, name, age, and tribal roll from which the name is taken, the sex, the blood and card number (R. p. 4654) and (quoted in our brief at p.56).

A subsequent Act of Congress made the age and quantum of blood fixed on the Roll as conclusive. This court has construed this Act in each of these instances: U. S. v. Ferguson, 247 U. S. 175, and in Gilcrease v. McCullough, 249 U. S. 178. In each instance the purpose and effect of this provision of the Act of Congress is defined by this court. In the preparation of the census and in compliance with the provision of the Act that the Commission should make the Roll descriptive of the persons thereon so that the enrollee be identified, the Commission adopted a form of census card containing the descriptive matter which the Commission thought to be the proper means of identification.

The census card in this case is found at page 57 of our brief. It calls for the name of the enrolled person and his age, sex, blood and tribal enrollment. These are the matters which constitute the Roll and are identical thus far with the Roll. The tribal enrollment calls for the year, town and number. In this instance it was the 1895 Roll of Euchee Town and his number thereon 213. It is also in evidence that whenever the name appeared on more than one roll it was written on the census card, as in this case he appeared on the Authentic Roll of 1895 and is so noted on the card.

Next follows the tribal enrollment of parents, and under that head is a sub-head for the father and sub-head for the mother and the respective tribal enrollments of each. In this instance the father had no name and no tribal enrollment and was written down "White man."

The name of the mother was written down as "Minnie Atkins" and the tribal enrollment "1895 Euchee Town."

An examination of the card shows this is purely descriptive matter seeking to identify the person enrolled. It cannot be a judgment that his father was a white man, nor that his mother was Minnie Atkins. Yet such is the purport of the argument found at page 97 and throughout the brief, and such seems to be the thought of the writer of the decision of this case in the Circuit Court of Appeals.

Therefore, it seems that both the argument of the counsel and the decision of the Court of Appeals are based on the proposition that the Dawes Commission had made a finding of fact that Minnie Atkins was the mother of Thomas Atkins, and that such decision cannot be impeached except for fraud and mistake. Nothing is so far from the law of the case. To illustrate the absurdity to which this argument would lead, if the contentions of Minnie are true and the statements of fact on the census card are accepted, then her son cannot be the person enrolled, because the adjudicated (?) facts do not fit him. There would be an error in the age of the enrolled person. Judge Campbell finds that Minnie's son was born at Granny Letcher's in Leavenworth, Kansas, on June 1, 1885. Therefore he was 16 years of age when the enrollment was made in May, 1901, by the Dawes Commission, yet they write down the enrolled person as 10 years of age.

Minnie appears on the card of her sons Charlie and Harvey and on her own rejected card as a half-blood. Therefore her children of a white father would necessarily be quarter-bloods. Yet in this enrollment the Thomas Atkins enrolled is put down as a half-blood. Certainly under the Act of Congress, quantum of blood and age are more important matters than the name of the father or the mother, because they are made conclusive. Yet these mistakes occurred, if Minnie's claim is to be sustained, whereas if Nancy's claim is sustained, these statements are accurate: Nancy regarded herself as a full-blood and was enrolled as a full-blood. Her evidence and that of more than thirty supporting witnesses established the fact that her child, Thomas Atkins, was born in September, 1890, and was therefore a 10-year-old child entitled to enrollment at the time it was made. Moreover, another descriptive matter called for in the census card is the residence and Post Office address. The Post Office is put down as Muskogee, Indian Territory, whereas if the son of Minnie was intended, it would have been Leavenworth, Kansas.

Moreover Minnie was going under the name of Harris and her children were enrolled as the children of Minnie Harris, nee Atkins. Therefore if these descriptive matters on the census card are to be regarded as judgments, the judgments are against them identifying the child now claimed to be Minnie's. But none of these matters are judgments.

The only judgment is that Thomas Atkins was a member of the Creek Tribe entitled to be upon the final roll and participate in the partition of lands of that tribe. Our brief at page 166-168 refers to the leading cases on this subject.

Really this principle is controlled by the two decisions therein referred to of this court: Hegler v. Faulkner, 153 U. S. 109; Dickson v. Luck Land Co., 242 U. S. 371. The former case holds such recitals to be hearsay evidence. In the latter case the court had before it an allotment to a mixed blood Chippewa Indian; the allotment had been made to him and both parties claimed under his allotment, and a patent was issued thereon. The Act under which the allotment was made only permitted a patent to be made to adults, and it was held that when this patent was issued that it amounted to a decision that the allottee was an adult. The question for decision was whether the patent was to be taken as determining the allottee's age for any purpose other than that of fixing his right to receive the full title free from the restrictions imposed by Congress.

The patent did not mention the age of the allottee, but the court construed it as amounting to a finding that he was then an adult and treated it as if it was thus written in the face of the patent, as his majority was a prerequisite to the issuance of the patent.

The court held that it would indulge the presumption that there was a finding that he had reached his majority, but that such presumption while indulged in support of titles was not regarded as otherwise having any conclusive or controlling force. "They are not judgments in the sense of the rules restricting estoppel by judgment, and we perceive no reason for giving them any greater force or influence than has been sanctioned by prior decisions."

The court concludes that this administrative finding was not to be taken as a decision of the allottee's age for any purpose other than that of fixing his right to receive the full title, freed from restrictions, and when those restrictions were removed and the patent issued, then the situation was one in which all questions pertaining to the disposal of the land naturally would fall in the scope and operation of the law of the state.

This is in harmony with the decisions of the Oklahoma Court which holds that the enrollment records including the census card are purely hearsay evidence outside of their province, which is prescribed by the Act of Congress. See authorities cited, pages 166, 167 of our brief.

In Malone v. Alderdice, 212 Fed. Rep. 688, the Circuit Court of Appeals of the Eighth Circuit, considered the effect of recitals on a census card. In this case the rights accrued prior to the Act of 1908 which made the Roll conclusive evidence of age and quantum of blood, and therefore had the question as to the effect of recitals on the card without the force of said Act. The Court said:

> "The Commission to the Five Civilized Tribes which made the enrollment of their citizens and freedmen was a quasi judicial tribunal empowered to determine who should be enrolled and what lands should be allotted and in what way it should be allotted to every citizen and freedman, and its adjudication of these questions and of every issue of law and fact that it was necessary for it to determine in order to decide these questions is conclusive and impervious to collateral attack. But its determination, recital, or report regarding issues not material to its answers to the questions who should be enrolled and what lands should be allotted to them and how, is, in the absence of special legislation such as the Act of May 27, 1908, without judicial or other conclusive effect. Kimberlin v. Commission to Five Civilized Tribes, 104 Fed. 653, 662, 44 C. C. A., 109, 118."

Judge Sanborn for that court further made this statement:

> "The provision of the Act of June 28, 1898, that the Commission should make the rolls descriptive of the persons thereon so that they might be identified falls far short of granting jurisdiction to that Commission to adjudge conclusively on what day each minor on those rolls would attain his majority and thus to determine when he could buy, sell and convey property free from the disqualifications of his minority. As well might it be claimed that the Commission's description on its roll of a male as a female would conclusively adjudge that he was without right to marry a woman, or that the recital of the ages of minor heirs as a matter of description in the record in a probate court of the administration and distribution to them of the estate of their ancestor would conclusively adjudge the time when their respective minorities would cease. This was not the purpose or the effect of this provision of the Act of 1898. It was limited in object and in result to the making of a description of the persons enrolled for the purpose of their identification and not for the purpose of the final adjudication of the extent and limits of their disqualifications by reason of their respective ages or otherwise."

So far as a contest between Minnie Atkins and Nancy Atkins is concerned the recitals in this census card are but mere hearsay evidence. They are important and very important as indicating the person whom the Commission thought it was enrolling as Thomas Atkins, who was No. 213 on the Euchee Town Roll of 1895, but its importance is only indicating the identity of the person that they were assuming to enroll. It is true that one mark of identification was the name of the mother and her tribal enrollment which in this instance was Minnie, but of more importance was the age and blood of the person and their findings in these respects fitted the child of Nancy and not the child of Minnie. But more fundamentally important than any of these questions is this fact: The testimony of the chairman of the Dawes Commission and of all of the officers engaged in the enrollment is to the effect that no one was enrolled unless they had before them information which they deemed reliable that the person was living on the first of April, 1899, and a resident of the Creek Nation. The testimony on this subject in this record is practically the same that it was in U. S. v. Wildcat, 244 U. S. 111, which is summarized by Mr. Justice Day in the opinion at pages 120-127, except that it is more detailed and full in this case, than in that.

As stated by Mr. Justice Day of the evidence there, as can be said of the evidence here: "That the Commission never arbitrarily listed any name; that no name was listed solely because it was on the roll of 1895, but some particular individual evidence was required outside of that roll," and further, quoting from the Chairman of the Commission, "That the purpose was to find out whether a man was entitled to enrollment."

The facts adduced by Page and Minnie to sustain their contentions were that her son was born in Leavenworth, Kansas, in 1885, and spent his life there, and that he died at that place in 1899. Therefore he was a non-resident throughout his life, if he had a life, of the Indian Territory, and of the Creek Nation. His mother was rejected for enrollment on account of her non-residence and his census card showed his father was a white man without tribal enrollment, and therefore to sustain their theory the Dawes Commission must be convicted of having violated their first duty; that they did not intend to do so is shown by writing down on the census card the Post Office of the enrolled person as Muskogee, Indian Territory, whereas if they had been enrolling Minnie's son, it would have been written down Leavenworth, Kansas. Therefore this census card is of great importance in determining whom the Dawes Commission considered it was enrolling, but none of these recitals have the effect of judgments and hence an argument to this effect in the brief and the indications to this effect in the opinion of the Circuit Court of Appeals are mistakes of law.

THE FACE OF THE TRIBAL ROLLS

Mr. Hopkins, Chief Clerk of the Dawes Commission, testified that the relative position of names in a family group on the Tribal Rolls gave no indication of the relationship of the parties. He explained the composition of these rolls in that the family was listed on the mother's side; frequently taking the oldest member, male or female descendant of the common mother's particular family, and that name was placed first as the head of the family and was followed with the names of the different descendants of the common ancestor, but there was an exception; a dependent parent or grand-parent or incompetent was listed last, so the head of the family could draw money for him (R. p. 199-204).

Commissioner Bixby and Messrs. Hopkins, Merrick, Hastain and Leiber, the enrollment clerks, all testified that no name was placed upon the Dawes Commission Roll merely because that name was found on the Tribal Roll. That the Tribal Roll was accepted merely as evidence that on the date thereof the Tribe recognized that person as then a member of the Tribe, but that before even a card was started the Commission obtained information from sources it considered reliable to the effect that this person was living on April 1, 1899, and a resident of the Indian Territory. This procedure is fully abstracted in our brief at pages 55-71 and will not be repeated here.

The brief of the Minnie Atkins interests, notwithstanding this undisputed testimony, at page 116 states:

"On the face of the rolls, the Thomas Atkins whom the Commission was examining was the son of Minnie Atkins; with these rolls before it and with the duty resting upon the Commission to determine if the rolls spoke the truth, the Commission took the evidence outside of the rolls and found that the Thomas Atkins on these rolls was, in fact, the son of Minnie Atkins."

This same argument is repeated in the following pages: On the next page it states the examination shows beyond a doubt that the rolls on their face disclose the particular Thomas Atkins, which the Dawes Commission was considering to be the son of Minnie Atkins. We have copied in our brief the four Tribal Rolls of the Creek Nation that were before the Commission. The 1890 Roll is copied at page 71. The original Roll contains no Thomas Atkins; there is added "Thos. and Mary," but the testimony is undisputed that this was added after the roll was made up and no part of it. This is shown at pages 71-76 of our brief.

Moreover Judge Campbell stated, and the evidence of all the enrolling officers stated, that the person enrolled was not considered to be upon the 1890 roll; this is reviewed at page 72, but even if he was upon it there is nothing there to show a relationship of Thomas to Minnie any more than there is to Fred Bowers, opposite to whom these names appeared. The rolls which appeared upon his census card was the Authentic Roll which is copied at page 104, and the Payroll, which is copied at page 106. In addition to these rolls was what was called the King's Roll, or the original roll, which was merged into the Authentic Roll when adopted; this is found at page 100 of our brief.

On the face of them none of these rolls show the relationship of any of the parties in the family group, other than the addition which is made to the King's Roll after it was compiled of "& 2 children" following the name of Mamie Atkins. This roll clearly shows that it was originally made up without this addition and doubtless information came to the Tribal authorities that Minnie had two children and this was added after the original compilation, and either then, or later there was added on the margin of this family group two additional numbers and names, 6 and 7, Charlie and Sussie Atkins, and in this shape with the transposition of the order of names, the original roll became the Authentic Roll. On the Authentic Roll the words "2 children" is apparently erased, thereby indicating that Charlie and Sussie that had been added from the original draft of the King's Roll had taken the place of the "two children" added after Mamie's name; in other words, the Creek authorities learned when Minnie came to Muskogee in 1895 that she had with her two children who were afterwards enrolled as Charlie and Harvey, and evidently these were the persons who were added to it with a mistake in the name of one. Later both of these children were duly enrolled as Charlie and Harvey Harrison, sons of Minnie Harris, nee Atkins.

Therefore the face of the Tribal Rolls on account of these additions do force an irresistible conclusion that Thomas was not intended as the son of Minnie, on account of the way these amendments to the Roll were made, otherwise the rolls on the face as stated by Mr. Hopkins, do not indicate the relationship within the family group. Therefore there was no basis for such an argument as they made on behalf of Minnie Atkins to which attention is here called.

CONFUSION WITH THE NEGRO THOMAS

The brief of counsel of Minnie, at page 105, seeks to explain the testimony of the many reputable witnesses on behalf of Nancy to the effect that she had a child with her at Wagoner called Thomas Atkins, on the theory that this child was not her son but was a negro, Thomas Atkins, a son of Dick Atkins, supposed to be left handed kin of Nancy's. This boy was the son of Dick Atkins and lived near Wagoner, and his father hauled wood into Wagoner and the boy frequently accompanied him; and several witnesses testified that they saw him occasionally with Nancy in Wagoner.

The strongest of this testimony was that of Cheney Trent, a half-sister of this Thomas Atkins. She testified that Thomas went with his father frequently into Wagoner when he was hauling wood and was frequently with Nancy there. She places the time when these occurrences happened as when the boy was eleven to thirteen years of age. He died at the latter age (R. pp. 4179-4189).

There is absolutely no foundation whatsoever to assume for a moment that the witnesses who testified on behalf of Nancy were confusing the boy whom they described as her son, with this negro boy.

While somewhat tedious, yet it is absolutely necessary to refute this charge, and the record absolutely refutes it.

This was not the first effort to try to explain the presence of this son of Nancy's by confusing him with other persons. The questioning of many witnesses showed that the Government and Page interests were trying to confuse this boy with Charlie and Harvey Harrison, Minnie's sons, whom Nancy cared for a short time at Wagoner. But they fell down completely, as all of the witnesses showed that they were not confusing Thomas with either of those boys. But this question was finally put to rest by Mr. Way. He was an intimate friend and neighbor of Tom Holden, a brother-in-law of Minnie, with whom Minnie had left these boys when she left the Indian Territory in 1896. Mr. Way knew them intimately and also Nancy's son Thomas when he was brought to Holden's house by Mr. Holden in 1899 and lived there several months. Mr. Way gave a detailed description of each of the three boys. Much of this, in reply to questions from the Court. After this testimony of Mr. Way's, further effort along this line was futile.

The other theory is even less tenable than this, because Charlie and Harvey were not much different in age from Thomas and, being cousins, it would have been much easier to confuse Thomas with one of them than with this negro.

The testimony of Ananias Atkins, his brother (R. pp. 4398-4401) and of his sister, Mary Atkins Wilson (R pp. 4401-4404) and of his half-sister, Cheney Trent (R. pp. 4179-4189) established these facts: that this boy was seven-eighths negro and one-eighth Indian, and a typical negro in appearance, and that he died in the fall of 1898, aged thirteen years, three months and some days, and was buried ten miles from Wagoner. Therefore, he was born in the summer of 1885 and was five years older than Nancy's son Thomas, who was born September, 1890.

Mr. Way testified that Mr. Holden brought Nancy's son from Wagoner to his place in the summer of 1899 (R. pp. 2594-2595). This was the first time that he ever saw Nancy's son Thomas, and this occurred almost a year after the death of the negro Thomas. Therefore, this theory of confusion is destroyed by his testimony alone. But that is but the beginning.

J. H. Anderson lived six miles east Wagoner and knew the negro, Dick Atkins, and his son Thomas well; and testified he was a different child altogether from Nancy's child, whom he knew as a small child about 1890; and testified that Nancy told him that this was her child, and he saw the child nursing at her breast. He knew that Nancy went to the penitentiary and left this child with Betsy Birney while she was gone (R. pp. 4414-4417).

In 1890 this negro Thomas was five years old, and could hardly have been nursing at Nancy's breast.

Mr. Ruble, sheriff of Wagoner county, testified that he knew Nancy's Thomas well in the latter years of his life, and that he was well acquainted with Cheney Trent, half-sister of negro Thomas, and that it was impossible for this boy, associated with Nancy, to have been Cheney's brother, that Cheney was a negro and this boy with Nancy was white and Indian (R. pp. 4427-4429).

J. K. McLaren knew Nancy and her child in 1891, when he last saw him. He was probably a year and a half old (R. pp. 4406-4414). The negro Thomas was then six or seven years old and not in that country at that time.

W. C. Smith moved to Wagoner in 1898 and saw Nancy and her child for two or three years (R. pp. 2607-2609). The negro Thomas died before or shortly after he went to Wagoner.

D. W. Best knew Nancy's Thomas from 1895 to 1900 (R. pp. 2582-2587). This knowledge carried him two years after the death of the negro Thomas.

W. A. McElroy was in Davis & Jones' store in 1890, when a collection was taken up for Nancy on account of her necessities, she just having a child born to her, and was reported in destitute condition. Afterwards he saw the child which he understood was hers, and he appeared to be Indian and white, and saw this child off and on until he left there in 1901. He thinks the last time in 1899 (R. pp. 2567-2575).

Frank Engles went to Wagoner in 1891, got acquainted with Nancy, who was working in a hotel, where he boarded, and saw her child, then an infant in arms, and saw this child continuously for six years (R. pp. 2557-2566).

Thomas Brewer, who lived at Wagoner for five years, beginning either 1889 or 1890, knew the child from infancy until he died in the dry year, which he places at either 1900 or 1901 (R. pp. 2545-2557).

Walter Posey saw the child when he was four or five years old and continued to know him until 1900 or 1901, when he was apparently ten years of age (R. pp. 2537-2539).

Kirk Turnbo went to Wagoner in 1899, got acquainted with the boy, and remembers his death, which he thinks was as late as 1902; but he judges he was ten or twelve years old when he died, and remembers W. U. Hall, mayor of the town, raising a contribution for the burial (R. pp. 2529-2537). Certainly, he could not have confused him with this negro, as he did not move there until after the negro's death.

J. L. Dyer remembers Nancy being in a pregnant condition about 1890, and that she was sent to the penitentiary and was gone seven or eight months, and she had a child before she went to the penitentiary and it was three months old when she was convicted and looked like a white child, and was called Thomas. He saw it around for nine or ten years (R. pp. 2519-2523).

John Ford was a negro, and got acquainted with Nancy Atkins about the time she was in a pregnant conditio.n He saw her a few days after her baby was born and saw the baby with her in bed. He was Indian and white. The last time he saw him he was about eight or nine years old, and that was in 1899. He contributed twenty-five cents to his burial (R. pp. 2505-2519).

M. I. Sullivan. He knew Nancy from 1892 to 1895. She was in his place of business frequently. She had a child with her, and when he first saw him he was two or three years old (R. pp. 2486-2493). Certainly there could be no confusion with a two-or-three-year-old child in 1892 with a seven-year-old negro boy.

John T. Beard got acquainted with Nancy in 1889 or 1890. He saw her when she was in a pregnant condition and knew of her giving birth to a child, as town talk, and knew of her being sent to the penitentiary. He saw the child when it was two or three years old and she was carrying it in her arms. She said it was hers, and called him Tommy. He saw the child frequently during the next few years. He remembers Mr. Hall, the mayor, taking up the collection for his burial, and saw his funeral procession about 1901 or 1902 (R. pp. 2475-2486).

Ex-Sheriff Long got acquainted with Nancy in 1897, when he was city marshal. She then had a child six or seven years old, to judge from his size, and saw him for four or five years. And he remembers that it was the dry year that he was called upon to contribute to the burial of this child called Tommy (R. pp. 2445-2457). It is impossible that he could have confused this child with the negro, who died in 1898 aged thirteen years and three months.

R. F. Davis, president of the Muskogee Wholesale Grocery Company, is the son of the Davis of Davis & Jones Mercantile Company, and he worked in his father's store from 1889 to 1891, and knew Nancy Atkins well, and saw her in a pregnant condition and afterwards saw her child when it was large enough to walk. The child was light yellow. Doesn't remember the name of the child, but was positive that it was a boy. Saw her carrying him around in her arms (R. pp. 1202-1208). At this time the negro Thomas was six years old, and would have been a rather heavy weight for Nancy to have been carrying in her arms.

These are merely some of the leading witnesses whose characters are not questioned, and who have no interest in the subject matter. A consideration of their testimony leaves it impossible to believe for a moment that there was any confusion between Nancy's son and the negro Thomas, which seems to be the last hope to destroy the testimony on behalf of Nancy Atkins, which establishes his birth in 1890 and his death at approximately ten years later, and that he was half Indian and half white, and was known to the whole community as her son.

MISTAKES OF FACT

(1) At page 4 of the brief it is said that the counsel for Nancy Atkins realized the force of the finding of two courts but seek to avoid it "By asserting that there was no testimony before the trial court establishing Minnie Atkins as the mother of Thomas, and a vast array of testimony in favor of Nancy Atkins establishing her parentage of the said Thomas Atkins." This is a total misconception of our position, as we tried to make it clear at page 27 of our brief. We stated that the evidence in the issue of whether or not Minnie had a son named Thomas took 3,000 pages of this record and that it was such a collateral issue for our case that we are not reviewing it in an effort to overturn the findings of the two courts which have accepted Minnie's story as true that she did have a son Thomas born at Granny Letcher's at Leavenworth, Kansas, in June, 1885. "But we are, for the argument's sake, taking this fact as established for the purpose of our contentions, and seeking to demonstrate to the court that neither the name of Thomas Atkins on the Creek Roll of 1895, nor the name of Thomas Atkins on the Dawes Commission Roll of 1901, represented such a son of Minnie, but in fact represented the son of Nancy. If we demonstrate that fact to your satisfaction it is wholly immaterial whether Minnie, in fact, was the mother of another Thomas Atkins, who was born at Granny Letcher's in Leavenworth, Kansas, early in June, 1885, and who lived his life, if he had one, at Leavenworth, Kansas."

The brief ignores wholly this position which we have assumed and seeks to put us in the attitude of relying solely upon a reversal on the issue of whether or not Minnie did have this child as found by the court, and with that issue we have but little concern. The brief does not attempt to answer our arguments whatever on the proposition stated in the above quoted excerpt from our first brief.

Mr. Merrick, the officer of the Dawes Commission who wrote the enrollment card in this case, testified as follows:

Q. "You intended to enroll Tommy as the son of Minnie Atkins, didn't you, as it appears there?

A. "Well, as it appears, Minnie Atkins being given as the mother, but primarily the Tommy Atkins is the one that appears on the Euchee Roll No. 213." (R. p. 3479.)

Thus it is seen that while the descriptive matter put Minnie down as the mother, yet the primary purpose was to enroll this Thomas Atkins of the Euchee Roll and there is no testimony in this record whatever introduced by Minnie Atkins that her son was on that Roll other than through the Sam Brown and John Davis route heretofore discussed fully, and when that route was destroyed it left her wholly without any testimony whatever on this subject. On the other hand we have the positive testimony that the person intended on that Roll as Thomas Atkins was the son of Nancy, which evidence was given by Ellis Childers. Minnie's whole case was predicated on having told John Davis, her uncle, of the existence of her son Thomas, and John Davis having on a cold day in Muskogee given a list of the Atkins family, including Thomas, to Sam Brown, who made it the basis of the Atkins list on the Euchee Roll. He even introduced his book showing that he had obtained this list from John Davis at Muskogee in March, 1895. We have copied it at page 36 of our brief.

Then after her case was thus made it was destroyed by the introduction of the record showing that for four years prior thereto and for nearly a year subsequent thereto that John Davis was in the penitentiary at Detroit, Michigan (R. pp. 4988-4990).

Moreover the original 1895 Roll itself shows that Thomas was one of the five members of the Atkins family placed thereon and that thereafter opposite the name Mamie Atkins was added "& two children" thereby showing that her children were some other than Thomas, who were added to this Roll and were presumably the added names, 6 and 7, Charlie and Sussie. See our brief at page 100 and the Roll there copied.

Therefore the established facts and the record facts destroyed all surmises which might have been based on Minnie's testimony and Sam Brown's testimony and absolutely prove that Minnie's son could not have been thus placed on the 1895 Tribal Roll; but beyond that his enrollment was made on May 23, 1901 by the Dawes Commission; Minnie has repeatedly testified her uncle, John Davis, and her brother, Lee Atkins, were the only persons in the Indian Territory to whom she gave information of the existence of her son Thomas.

Lee Atkins was killed in November, 1894 (R. p. 4430), and John Davis was killed after 1896, certainly before 1900 (R. p. 6369). Therefore they could not have imparted this information or misinformation to the Dawes Commission.

The testimony shows that Noah Gregory and Sam Brown, each prominent Euchees, were before the Dawes Commission at this time and both of these men have testified positively that they did not remember Thomas Atkins and both testified positively that they reported to the Dawes Commission that Minnie was a non-resident of the Indian Territory.

Therefore there was absolutely no possible information or misinformation before the Dawes Commission entitling her non-resident son of a non-citizen father to have been placed upon this Roll. Therefore our position is that upon these two vital propositions in the case, first, that the Thomas Atkins on the Tribal Roll was not Minnie's son, but was the son of Nancy Atkins, and that the Thomas Atkins on the Dawes Commission Roll was not Minnie's son, but Nancy's son, there is no evidence to sustain Minnie, and much evidence heretofore reviewed to sustain Nancy; yet none of these matters are discussed in this brief on behalf of Minnie, and the discussion sought to turn on whether or not Minnie had this child born in Leavenworth and alleged to have lived his life there, and whether or not Nancy had the child as she and her 30-odd witnesses claimed was born to her and had his life in the Creek Nation.

(2) At page 6 it is stated by counsel that they are sure the Court will find that Nancy never had a son; that she never had but one child and it was a girl child still-born. There are some negro witnesses who have testified to this statement and their testimony is hereinafter analyzed, but against it is the testimony of more than thirty witnesses, a few of them are negroes of the same low grade of intelligence and character of those produced by the Government and Page against her, but in addition to them is the testimony of more than twenty reputable white men and women of the highest standing in the community, occupying positions of trust and confidence, who testified to facts that cannot be accounted for other than that they are the truth, establishing unquestionably that Nancy had a child named Thomas, who lived for ten years and was known to the entire community as "Tommie Atkins."

(3) At page 6 it is stated that the counsel for Nancy Atkins have undertaken to state the testimony for Nancy and against Minnie, but have not stated the testimony against Nancy. We hope this is a typographical error. In the first place we have not stated the testimony against Minnie, in so far as it relates to whether or not she had a child; we have left that to the Government and are not concerned with it, but we have stated the testimony against Nancy. We abstracted fully and completely, witness by witness, beginning at page 192, headed "Testimony against Nancy," and have fully summarized what each of the twenty witnesses called against her testified to, concluding the review of it at page 210. At page 98 it is stated in the Minnie Atkins brief, "It is conceded that the very time she applied for enrollment and allotment for her absent sister if her testimony is to be believed that she had by her side this alleged infant of hers, Thomas Atkins." It may be conceded by Minnie Atkins and Page that this is the case, but it was not conceded by Nancy Atkins, and those claiming under her. Her testimony was to the effect that her boy died in the spring of 1900. Nine reputable witnesses have sworn as to their recollection of the date of his death and while they differ somewhat, their testimony corroborates and establishes by its great weight that her son died in the "Dry Year," which was 1900. This is reviewed in our first brief at pages 247, 248.

ANALYSIS OF SOME OF THE TESTIMONY AGAINST NANCY

At page 97 of the brief of the Minnie interests begins an analysis of the testimony for and against Nancy, and we invite your attention to a brief analysis of the leading testimony against her. While twenty witnesses were introduced against her, yet much of this was purely negative testimony, and of little, if any, probative value. The real case against her consists of the testimony of three negro women and of one negro man. These are Elnora Mayshack, Eliza Sterling, Angeline Moody, and Henry Anderson.

The first introduction to this case of Elnora Mayshack is a telegram sent by Mr. Long, Page's representative, from Portland, Oregon, to his company, reading as follows:

"If you are giving notice of taking depositions, include as witness Mrs. A. M. Mayshack of Portland; she was with Nancy when her baby was born; says it was a boy, but died after birth and was buried in Wagoner." (R. p. 3526.)

Mr. Long also telegraphed at the same time that Mr. Bartlett and Sadie James were there (R. p. 3526). With Mr. Bartlett and Sadie James on hand to look after these witnesses any testimony could be expected from them.

Elnora Mayshack testified and was examined by the Government and the Page interests. Nancy was not represented. It nowhere appears in her testimony that Nancy's child was a boy, in fact it seems studiously concealed.

Angeline Moody and Eliza Sterling, who testified to being present at the birth of this child, testified it was a girl.

Elnora Mayshack said that Nancy was living with her at the time of the birth of the child, but there was no room in the house and she was taken out and placed in a tent, and the child was born there. That it was born in the morning and died in the afternoon and was buried by Monday Barnett, and she thinks in the graveyard (R. pp. 2163, 2167).

Eliza Sterling testified that she lived in Wagoner about a year before Nancy's child was born, and her mother, Amanda Barnett, and Elnora Williams were present when Nancy's child was born; she said it was born in the south room in the Elnora Williams house in the nighttime; was a girl and was born dead. She said the child was born a year before Nancy was sent to the penitentiary. The Government introduced a copy of Nancy's sentence as Govt. Exhibit A-104 and shows it began December 23, 1890 (R. pp. 2179-2189).

John Ford testified that this woman was not living at Wagoner at this time, but was living ten or twelve miles away (R. p. 2511).

Angeline Moody's testimony begins at R. p. 2190. She said that she was present when Nancy's baby was born, which was in Elnora Williams' house; the child was a girl and was born dead. She admits that she did not move to Wagoner until after she sold her farm to a man named Lipscomb (R. p. 1892) and moved to Wagoner the next year and this child was born a year after she moved there (R. pp. 2194, 2195).

John Ford testified he knew all the negroes in Wagoner at this time and that Angeline Moody was not living in Wagoner then (R. p. 2507). Thus it is seen that these star witnesses differ five years in the date of the birth of this child, and not from a lack of memory of date or confusion of dates, but each puts her recollection of the event from some fixed fact, the first being a year before Nancy went to the penitentiary, and the last a period of a year after she moved to Wagoner, which she fixes positively as a year after she sold her farm to Lipscomb in 1892. Manifestly this testimony is unreliable, to say the least of it. They do not agree as to the place of the child's birth, time of its birth, its burial, and differ five years as to when it occurred, and two say it was a girl and one says it was a boy.

Angeline Moody and Eliza Sterling both admitted the visit of Nancy, Betty Mann and Bartlett to them to secure them as witnesses to sustain Bartlett in his suit with Nancy, which Nancy described as a "frame-up" to prove that her child was a girl born dead, for which Micco Hargo was being paid to have her testify and procure witnesses. Their story of the occurrence differs but little from hers.

Henry Anderson's testimony is found at R. pp. 2196-2208. He testified that he had a man named Ellis Harris working for him and early one morning he found him digging a grave near a tent close to Betsy Burnie's house and he told him he was digging it for Nancy's baby; and he had a new-born baby there, which Henry looked at. Henry said this was in the spring and was about a year before Nancy was convicted in the Federal Court. He testified he was one of the witnesses against Nancy when she was convicted for taking a letter belonging to Neosho Burnie to Betsie Burnie; this conviction was in December, 1890.

W. C. Smith moved to Wagoner in 1898 and opened a drug store and had this negro, Henry Anderson, as his porter. He noticed a poorly dressed woman with a yellow headed child following her in his drug store and asked Henry Anderson who she was and he said "It was old Nancy Atkins and her kid." (R. p. 2608.)

J. B. White, one of the defendants here, when searching for witnesses had a conversation with Henry Anderson and Henry told him he knew Nancy and knew her boy, Tommie, and gave him fully the facts about them and he (White) prepared an affidavit for him to sign, stating the facts as related by him. He would not sign it unless Mr. White would pay him $100 down and $300 when the case was over, which Mr. White declined (R. p. 4606).

These are the principal witnesses in conjunction with Micco Hargo, Nancy's former guardian, to make out the case against her. This Micco Hargo got an order of the county court leasing this land to White, brought suit against Bartlett, who had taken possession of the lease under a forged deed procured by Betty Mann and himself from an alleged Minnie Atkins, under which Bartlett took possession of the property; he admitted taking Bartlett's money while litigating against him as Nancy's guardian. Nancy's testimoney is undisputed that Micco Hargo had promises from Bartlett for money for her and for him if she would claim that her child was a girl and born dead, and threats on the other hand to be sent to the penitentiary if she did not.

Her testimony on this subject is contradicted by no witness and corroborated at many points by many witnesses. Against these ignorant and venal negroes is the testimony of more than twenty as reputable citizens as that country affords. There were men holding the highest positions in business and official life of the community. Take such men as Thomas J. Way, Thomas Brewer, the editor, Mr. Phillipi, Sheriff Ruble, W. A. McIlroy, J. D. McLaren, J. H. Anderson, Mrs. Miller, R. F. Davis, president of the Muskogee Wholesale Grocery Company, and any one of them should carry more weight than this whole bunch of negroes. They are men of position and standing, wholly disinterested, and their testimony is without the least contradiction in any particular. In addition to them are many other witnesses, some of less standing and intelligence, two of them with criminal records, yet, these latter are of the same grade as the witnesses against Nancy and their testimony is corroborated by these people of the highest standing—the men of affairs in their community. There can be no question under the facts, of the birth, life and death of Nancy's son Thomas as stated by them.

In analyzing the testimony, the counsel, at pages 106 and 107, puts up in opposition to Mr. Way's testimony that of Mitchell Wardsworth, the son of Mrs. Holden, and quotes his testimony to the effect that Charlie and Harvey and a boy named Edmond Bear were the only persons that stayed in his mother's house from 1898 up to 1902.

There is a good reason for Mitchell Wardsworth's not knowing who was at his mother's house in these years. Nancy Atkins testified in regard to the time when her sister, Mrs. Holden brought Minnie's children, Charlie and Harvey to her house to take care of them. She stated that Mrs. Holden told her that her son Mitchell was scouting or was in trouble, and she wanted money to go to Fort Smith, that she thinks he was in jail, and she let her have money (R. p. 2217).

The counsel for Minnie Atkins in the trial cross-examined Mr. Way about seeing Nancy's son Thomas at Mrs. Holden's place, and asked him if she had a son Mitchell, and he said that she did and he knew him well; and he was asked if Mitchell was at the Holden house at the time Nancy's son was there, and he said that he was not, that he was in the penitentiary then (R. p. 2603).

MINNIE AND THE DAWES COMMISSION

Judge Campbell, while not deciding that Nancy did not have this child, cast doubt on her story on account of her correspondence with the Dawes Commission; and we have in our brief, at page 246, reviewed the evidence showing his error. Now we ask you to consider in this connection the conduct of Minnie towards the Dawes Commission and her relation to it in contrast with Nancy's.

Mitchell Wardsworth, the son of her half-sister, Mrs. Holden, testified that his aunt, Minnie, wrote to him from Detroit in 1898 or 1899 to enroll her and her sons, Charlie and Harvey, and did not mention her son Thomas. He attempted to do so but lost the letter and the Commission would not act upon his verbal statements and he told his step-father of it (R. pp. 4598-4601).

On April 2, 1900, Minnie executed a power of attorney to Thomas E. Holden to select lands and file for herself and her sons, Charlie and Harvey, and did not mention Thomas (R. p. 4712).

Here was affirmative conduct on the part of Minnie in 1899 and in 1900 asserting rights for herself and her two sons Charlie and Harvey, and asserting none for her supposed son, Thomas. In Minnie's Kansas City Statement heretofore referred to it is shown that they attempted to escape this situation by claiming that her son Thomas was dead at the time these letters were written and this power of attorney was made; but suppose that that was true, then she would be in the exact situation that counsel seek to put Nancy in, of seeking to file for herself and making no effort to file for her dead son.

Nancy's letters were merely seeking information as to whether her dead brother and asbsent sister could be placed on the Roll, whereas Minnie was seeking affirmative action in behalf of herself and her two undisputed sons, and making no mention of the disputed son, and her first action in this regard was taken before her sons were enrolled, which was in February, 1900—Government Exhibit 33.

All the argument that is made against Nancy for not filing for her son when she made her own filing can be used in double force against Minnie, and it was doubtless an oversight on Judge Campbell's part that he did not grasp these facts that cast more doubt on Minnie's story than the letters to which he referred cast on Nancy's story.

UNFAIR ABSTRACTING

The appellee's brief states at page 7 that they submit a fair and succinct statement of the evidence for and in behalf of Nancy Atkins. At page 105 the brief argues, after setting out this testimony, that the evidence clarifies and makes plain that the witnesses who testified that Nancy had a son were confusing the child they described with the negro Thomas Atkins, son of Dick Atkins, and this is the subject matter of a separate chapter. Your attention is called to that in this connection, because the abstract is so drawn that many of the salient facts confuting this theory are omitted therefrom.

Thus: Their abstract of the testimony of J. H. Anderson, pages 70 and 71 of the brief, sets out his statement in regard to Nancy's child and states that on cross-examination he stated that the only Tommy Atkins he ever knew in and around Wagoner was the son of Dick Atkins. Mr. Anderson stated he did not remember the name of Nancy's child, but he testified that he saw it nursing at her breast about 1890. He stated that he knew Dick Atkins' son Thomas, that he was a negro child, an altogether different child from the one he described as Nancy's, and that he must have been five or six years older than Nancy's child (R. pp. 4414-4417). None of this appears in the abstract, and with such omissions as that, they may well clarify the situation as they hope to.

In abstracting the testimony of Sheriff Ruble, pages 72 and 73, they omit to say: that he stated that he knew Cheney Trent and he knew it was impossible for this boy of Nancy's to be her brother; that Cheney was a negro and this boy was Caucasian and Indian and showed no indication of any other blood than Indian and white (R. pp. 4427-4429).

They omit from the testimony of Mrs. Miller (R. pp. 4422-4426) that she said that the boy was Indian and white and that he died, as she thinks, in the spring of 1899, which was six months after the death of the negro Thomas.

Another element of unfairness: In the testimony of Dyer, abstracted at page 22, they state that he was convicted for constructively being present at the Blackstone robbery, but omit to state that he got a new trial and was acquitted (R. p. 2521).

In abstracting the testimony of Ex-Sheriff Long, at page 12, it is stated that he admitted that he was convicted for embezzlement while occupying the office of sheriff of Wagoner county in 1913, but omitted to state that a new trial was granted and the case against him was dismissed (R. p. 2457). In abstracting his testimony, they also state (brief page 11) that he stated that Nancy's child was a mulatto looking boy, but omit to state that he was asked what he meant by "mulatto looking" and he stated that the boy was leather colored, with chocolate colored hair and brown eyes, and that he resembled white and Indian more than negro, and that he used the term mulatto in reference to his color, but said that the boy did not look like a negro to him (R. pp. 2448-2449).

With such abstracting it is easy to draw any conclusion that counsel see proper to do. We could go through the abstract and point out, with almost every witness, how misleading it is, but we submit that we have pointed to enough to show that it is thoroughly unreliable to give a true picture of the actual evidence.

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF OKLAHOMA.

PLEAS AND PROCEEDINGS BEFORE THE HONORABLE RALPH E. CAMPBELL, JUDGE OF THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF OKLAHOMA, PRESIDING IN THE FOLLOWING ENTITLED CAUSE:

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

Equity vs. No. 2131

MINNIE ATKINS, et al.

VOLUME II.

Statement of the Evidence (Continued).

And thereafter further testimony herein is taken as follows:

[SADIE JAMES (Deposition of—Continued).

Cross Examination by Mr. Stuart—Continued.]

Q. Sadie, are you getting any money monthly from anybody? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How much, Sadie? A. Fifty Dollars ($50.00).

Q. Who is paying you that fifty dollars, Sadie?

A. I made an agreement with Mr. Buell.

Q. Mr. Buell? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where is he, this gentleman here? A. Yes, sir.

Q. The one armed gentleman? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is he paying you fifty ($50.00) dollars a month for Sadie?

A. In assisting the Pinkertons in digging up the truth.

Q. To assist the Pinkertons to dig up the truth?

A. In digging up no Tommy Atkins, Judge.

Q. Now, are you Mr. Robbins's assistant, the Pinkerton .over here. A. I give him all the assistance I can Judge.

Q. Does he recognize you as an assistant in the case?

A. I don't know as he does that, I told him——

Q. Mr. Robinson is a regularly credited detective, isn't he? A. Yes, sir, so to be around with negroes.

Q. Too much so to be running with negroes? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Has he told you so?

A. No, sir, he didn't tell me that.

Q. When did Mr. Buell agree to give you this fifty ($50.00) dollars a month?

A. I think that was—— What month is this, let me see— a few days after I had got my immunity; I don't know exactly what day it was, a few days after I got that.

Q. Sadie, where did you get your immunity?

A. Right here in Kansas City, Judge.

Q. Who gave it to you? A. Frank L. Montgomery.

Q. Who? A. F. L. Montgomery.

Q. Who is Frank L. Montgomery?

A. He is the United States Probate Attorney for the Creek Nation.

Q. He is not a United States Attorney, though, is he?

A. No, but he wired Judge Allen, and Judge Allen told him to give it to me.

Q. Did you see the wire? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did it say?

A. Said give Sadie James, of Leavenworth, immunity.

Q. Immunity?

A. Yes, sir. That wire came from Washington and I saw it, yes, sir.

Q. What did Mr. Montgomery say to you about this immunity? A. When he gave it to me?

Q. Yes?

A. He told me who he was and that he was seeking evidence in the Tommy Atkins case; said he heard I had been passing as a Government officer and came to see if I would make a confession to him about what I had done; and I told him I was deep in the case and if I talk I would condemn myself, and if he would grant me immunity I would; he said he would see. He left my house that morning and didn't come back until late that afternoon.

Q. Sadie, who was the very first man that ever talked to you about turning State's evidence in this case?

A. About turning State's evidence in it?

Q. Yes? A. After I had run off from Oklahoma.

Q. Don't make any difference when; who was the first man?

A. Mr. Buell and Mr. Robinson was the first men that found me in Leavenworth.

Q. Now, wait a minute. You met Buell and Robinson just as you finished the trip over there?

A. I run up to Leavenworth and they found me in Leavenworth.

Q. Mr. Buell and Mr. Robinson? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, what did they say to you when they came?

A. I didn't know either one of them.

Q. It don't make any difference, what did they say?

A. Mr. Robinson didn't say anything. Mr. Buell told me he didn't believe there ever was a Tommy Atkins, that he had filed some Indians on the land; that he and the Government were seeking the same thing to cancel the allotment, that he had hired—that he had employed the Pinkerton Agency in digging up the truth, and if I knew there wasn't no Tommy Atkins he wanted to hire me to assist them, assist the Pinkertons. I told him when he said that, I told him I was sick of the case and tired of running from the law; that I was running from Judge Allen and that I wanted to get out of it, get out of the case; and he said that he would send some of the Government officers to me, and I told him I wouldn't be in Leavenworth, told him I would be gone from there to Kansas City, so I didn't see him any more that day. The next man I seen was Mr. Montgomery.

Q. Now, how long after that before you made a contract with Buell and Bartlett?

A. I never made no contract with Buell and Bartlett.

Q. You make a contract with either one of them?

A. No contract, no contract, it was an agreement with——

Q. Did you have a written agreement? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you have it later? A. No, sir——

Q. Just answer my question. A. No, sir, I haven't got one.

Q. Sadie, didn't you have a written contract with these people, and haven't you turned it over to somebody in this case? A. No, my goodness! No, you bet I haven't.

Q. Didn't they agree to pay you three thousand ($3,000.00) dollars? A. I never seen Mr. Bartlett.

Q. Didn't Buell agree to do it?

A. Fifty ($50.00) dollars a month, not until Mr. Montgomery came to me.

Q. Answer that?

A. Yes, sir, a few days afterwards, yes, sir.

Q. Where is that agreement?

A. I haven't got no agreement with Bartlett.

Q. Where is the Buell agreement?

A. I haven't got it. I told Mr. Buell I didn't know anything about him and he would have to get somebody I did know, and he wired and got Mr. Bartlett.

Q. Mr. Bartlett told you he would give you three thousand ($3,000.00) dollars?

A. He said make an agreement——

Q. Answer my question. He agreed to give you three thousand ($3,000.00) dollars?

A. Yes, sir, at fifty ($50.00) dollars a month.

Q. And he agreed to give you that to help him beat Minnie Atkins in this case, didn't he? A. No, sir.

Q. Well, then, tell me what he gave it to you for?

A. He said, Sadie, I will make an agreement with you, for three thousand ($3,000.00) dollars, draw it at fifty ($50.00) dollars a month, and I told him if the Government would give me immunity I knew I would be safe as to prosecution and running from these detectives on the other side; and he said I will give you three thousand dollars at fifty dollars a month while this case is pending. I told him it would be three years when this case is settled——

Q. Never mind about that. Don't run off for your protection and mine. A. All right.

Q. You told him you would have to have three thousand dollars didn't you? A. Oh, no, I didn't, Judge, I didn't.

Q. Just answer that? A. No, sir.

Q. He volunteered then to give you three thousand dollars, didn't he?

A. Yes, sir, draw it at fifty dollars a month.

Q. Never mind about drawing it, just answer my question, I will let you explain. He volunteered to give you three thousand dollars? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that three thousand dollars was to help him destroy Tommy Atkins, wasn't it?

A. To prove there wasn't none, digging up the facts, nothing but the truth, no Tommy Atkins.

Q. Sadie, you had a written agreement on that, didn't you? A. You say I did have one?

Q. Yes? A. No, sir, I haven't got none.

Q. Did you take his word for it?

A. Took Hugh Bartlett's word; Mr. Buell, I didn't know him, and he had to wire and have Mr. Bartlett come here to Kansas City.

Q. And you saw Mr. Bartlett then?

A. Yes, sir, Mr. Bartlett said he knew Mr. Buell would do whatever he said he would do he would.

Q. Bartlett said I will back Buell for the three thousand didn't he?

A. He didn't say back him. He said I know Mr. Buell, and whatever he says he will do he will.

Q. Buell wired him to come to Kansas City and see that the deal went through?

A. I told him I didn't know nothing about him.

Q. And he wired him to come up here? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when Bartlett came up, who was present when you had that three-thousand-dollar deal?

A. Mr. Bartlett and Mr. Roninson, and Mr. Buell.

Q. What was said in that conversation?

A. There wasn't no conversation, Judge, Mr. Bartlett didn't stay in my house ten minutes.

Q. But you said to him——

A. No, not about that case.

Q. About that three thousand ($3,000.00) dollars?

A. He didn't talk about the three thousand ($3,000.00) dollars, he didn't know what Mr. Buell offered me.

Q. What did you talk about?

A. Mr. Buell had him come and Mr. Bartlett came out to my place, an he said: Sadie, I know Mr. Buell and whatever he says, he will do. I didn't tell Mr. Bartlett what Mr. Buell promised me.

Q. He told you whatever Buell promised, he would do?

A. That is what he said, yes, sir.

Q. What else did you say there?

A. I didn't say anything, I told him I would take his word.

Q. Take his word and not Mr. Buell's? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Relied on what Mr. Bartlett said?

A. Yes, sir, if Mr. Buell didn't pay me I was looking for it, yes, sir.

Q. Looking for Mr. Bartlett to stand good for the three thousand ($3,000.00) dollars? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is right. Now, you had been working for this man Bartlett before that, hadn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you have thrown him down two or three times, haven't you Sadie? A. No, he has thrown me down.

Q. You had thrown him first, hadn't you? A. No, I didn't.

Q. Didn't you testify that you told him three or four lies at Seattle? A. That is what he put me down for.

Q. You didn't regard then that you were throwing a man down if you lied to him?

A. I didn't think he is throwing me down if——

Q. You did lie to him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Time and again? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he quit you because you had lied to him?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Yet he came up to Kansas City and stood for that three thousand dollars, didn't he? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Said whatever Mr. Buell said he would do, he would do it.

Q. You knew that same Mr. Bartlett was the one that had Bettie to get that forged deed?

A. I knew that was the same Mr. Bartlett.

Q. That took the forged deed? A. Yes, sir I knew that.

Q. Getting back, you have been drawing that fifty dollars every month. A. Yes, sir.

Q. Paid pretty regularly?

A. No, sir, sometimes get behind with me, no, sir.

Q. How is it paid, by check or cash?

A. No, sir, sometimes I get money from Mr. Buell and sometimes from the Pinkertons, and sometimes from Mr. Bartlett.

Q. The Pinkertons detectives are not paying you now?

A. No, sir. I go there when I am out of money and get it.

Q. You don't claim that the Pinkertons are paying you anything? A. No, sir, but I get it.

Q. You get it through the Agency?

A. No, sir, but I go there and get it.

Q. Mr. Buell is reimbursing the Agency?

A. Yes, sir, when I get it.

Q. How often did you expect to draw that fifty dollars?

A. As long as this case goes on I guess.

Q. Until it gets up to three thousand?

A. No, sir, if the Government loses the case I don't get another cent.

Q. But as long as the case is going on you get fifty dollars? A. Yes, sir. And if the——

Q. And if the Government wins the case——

A. I get the balance of the three thousand ($3,000.00) dollars that I haven't drawed.

Q. Now, does any other officer, either private officer or Government officer, ever pay you any money? A. No, sir.

Q. Did Mr. Montgomery pay you fifty dollars once?

A. Oh, no, Mr. Montgomery, he gave me immunity, he explained what he said——

Q. Yes?

A. When I asked him to grant me immunity, he said he would see and he went and came back with a wire later on in the evening, and he said: "Sadie, I will grant you immunity for passing as a Government officer and what you done in this case only"—for nothing but the truth that I was going to tell him, that is all he gave me immunity for.

Q. Now, Sadie, I understand that. When did you first make up your mind—now, answer this as near as you can—to tell the Government what you knew about this case? When did you make up your mind to do it? A. To do so?

Q. Yes?

A. Judge, I have been running and getting out of the way a long time from Judge Allen and Mr. Cook too, and after I had run off from Tulsa and come up to Leavenworth, when Mr. Buell come there and told me what he did, I told him I was sick of that case and wanted to get out of it, but I didn't know how without hurting myself, I didn't want to be in the case any longer.

Q. Now, Sadie, did you ever talk with Mr. Allen about it until you——

A. I never saw Judge Allen until last winter, the first time.

Q. Did you ever talk to any other Government officer about it? A. No, sir.

Q. Mr. Robinson and Mr. Buell? A. Mr. Buell.

Q. Were the first people you ever intimated——

A. Ever intimated.

Q. That you wanted to turn state's evidence?

A. That I wanted to get out of the case, yes, sir.

Q. And when you did turn, you made your contract right there didn't you? A. No, I didn't.

Q. How long before you made it?

A. Mr. Montgomery found me about a week after that, and after my immunity papers were granted, a few days Mr. Buell came to make an agreement about what he would give me.

Q. What do you mean by immunity?

A. About framing up this case.

Q. What you mean by immunity?

A. I was framing Tommy Atkins when there wasn't none, and passing as a Government officer and I wasn't any, and that is what I got immunity for.

Q. Did Mr. Montgomery agree positively that you would never be prosecuted in the United States Court for what you had done? A. In this case.

Q. Yes?

A. He said he would grant me immunity for what I had done in this case only. Whatever I did in any other case——

Q. He has got a lot of power, but he did agree not to prosecute you and see that you were not prosecuted for anything you ever have done in the Minnie Atkins case?

A. In the Minnie Atkins, yes, sir, Minnie Atkins case.

Q. You are testifying now, knowing that whatever you might say here, you will not be prosecuted?

A. Oh, no. Judge Allen and Mr. German have cautioned me and told me if they catch me in a lie, if I tell a lie and they know it, they will prosecute me.

Q. Is that so? A. Both told me that.

Q. When did they tell you that?

A. Told me that last winter down at court and all the time while the case is going on.

Q. Told you if you perjure yourself at all, which one of them would prosecute you?

A. Told me they would prosecute me, yes, sir, they did.

Q. And that is the reason alone that you are telling the truth?

A. I told the truth when I came clean with Mr. Montgomery. I had been framing up enough and I wanted to get out of it.

Q. Now, Sadie, didn't you come clean largely for three thousand dollars?

A. No, sir, it wasn't. I had left my home.

Q. Sadie, why was it necessary, if you wanted to come clean, to have three thousand ($3,000.00) dollars to come clean on? A. I didn't have no three thousand dollars then.

Q. Now, Sadie, if you had had a change of heart and wanted to relieve yourself of what you had done and tell the truth, why did you want the three thousand ($3,000.00) dollars?

A. I didn't want the three thousand dollars to come clean, but I wanted to get out of the case.

Q. You took it, didn't you? A. Afterwards, yes, sir.

Q. After you took it?

A. Yes, sir, after I was turned loose from the law, yes, sir.

Q. Now, Sadie, see if we can come to some dates now. When did Mr. Montgomery see you?

A. Well, now, I can't fix the dates.

Q. Well, now, let's fix it as near as we can?

A. Now, I can't fix that date, Judge.

Q. Now, Sadie, search your memory. You have had a remarkable memory here for days?

A. Yes, sir, pretty good memory for days.

Q. You not only remember the date, but the day of the month and hour of the day a year ago, and the dates. Tell me now when you saw Mr. Montgomery?

A. I think I saw Mr. Montgomery in December, about the second or third of December, or along in there, I think.

Q. The second or third of December?

A. 1915. December, let me see if that is——

Q. Sadie, haven't you——

A. Let me see——No, sir, in December, 1914, wouldn't that be——

Q. Well, I don't know, Sadie, I would help you if I could.

I am not trying to trap you at all, I just want your dates, that is all? A. I think it is 1914.

Q. December, 1914?

A. Yes, sir, I think the first part of December.

Q. Last December a year ago?

A. This past December, yes, sir, a year ago.

Q. Sadie, didn't you make a written confession in this case? A. To Mr. Montgomery.

Q. That written confession is in the hands of the Government, isn't it?

A. I guess so, I gave it to Mr. Montgomery.

Q. And you swore to it, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, when was that confession turned over to Montgomery?

A. It was given him that very day, after he came back with my immunity papers, he came back with——

Q. What month was it? A. That was in December.

Q. December, 1914? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are sure of that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Just as sure of that as anything else you have sworn to? A. Yes, sir, December.

Q. Now, whatever date it was—Listen to me—Whatever date it was, you had seen Buell before that, hadn't you?

A. I had up at Leavenworth, yes, sir.

Q. And he agreed to give you three thousand ($3,000.00) dollars? A. No, Judge.

Q. Let's be certain about it?

A. I will be certain. No, Judge, not then, no, sir.

Q. How soon after did you see Buell?

A. In a day or two, or three, one or two days behind that.

Q. Had he agreed to give you anything before that?

A. No, sir, Judge.

Q. Now, Sadie?

A. I am telling the truth. He hadn't agreed to give me nothing. I told him I [] sick of the law and tired of running from the law, and he said he would send some Government officer to me.

Q. Told you he would get you immunity?

A. No, sir, he would just send an officer to me.

Q. To do what?

A. So I could make my confession to him.

Q. And get immunity?

A. Yes, sir, I guess that was what it was for.

Q. You saw Mr. Buell before Mr. Montgomery come up there and said I will have the Government officer come to you, didn't he?

A. Yes, sir, said he would send some Government officer.

Q. So you could make your confession?

A. So I could make my confession, yes, sir.

Q. That is it? A. Yes, sir, he did that.

Q. Now, Sadie, why was it you made a confidant of Mr. Buell about it?

A. I didn't make a confidant of Mr. Buell, I told him I wanted to get out of the case and he said he would send somebody to me.

Q. Why did you pick Mr. Buell? Why not go straight to some Government officer, Mr. German or Mr. Allen or some other officer?

A. I went straight to Tulsa and Page told me to get out until this was tried.

Q. Told you to jump the country?

A. Told me to go to Leavenworth and stay there until he got it tried.

Q. I would like to know what date Page told you that?

A. The 10th day of November, 1914.

Q. Sadie, as a matter of fact, when you had these talks did you ever have anybody else present besides the man you was talking to? A. With whom?

Q. Page? A. No, sir.

Q. Nobody but Page was present?

A. No, sir. Judge, Mr. Page and I are friends.

Q. I understand that, and you claim to be very intimate friends.

A. I have been I guess I won't be any more.

Q. Yes. Now, talking about friendship, you went in there and tried to get a thousand dollars on that contract with Page, didn't you? A. Oh, no.

Q. Now, hold on, Sadie?

A. My lawyer, before that, Judge, they had agreed as soon as the Gypsy signed papers——

Q. Hold on Sadie, wait a minute. Did you try to get them to pay you the thousand dollars due you on that contract? A. That was two weeks before I run off, Judge.

Q. Did you try to do it two weeks before you run off?

A. Yes, sir, before they gave me any money at all.

Q. Did you try to get a thousand dollars before you run?

A. I was to have had more than that.

Q. Did you try to get the thousand dollars, Sadie?

A. Yes, sir, I did. My lawyer——

Q. That is it? A. My lawyer.

Q. You got two hundred? A. Not on that.

Q. Page and you were great friends? A. We are yet.

Q. Yet you had to take your lawyer over there to force him to a settlement, didn't you?

A. No, I went to see Mr. Josey.

Q. Why didn't you go to see Mr. Page and get that thousand dollars? A. Mr. Page wasn't there.

Q. He was there the next day, wasn't he, and the day before?

A. There the next day and him and my lawyer came to an agreement.

Q. Why didn't you see Mr. Page and get that thousand dollars?

A. I went in Mr. Josey's office and he didn't give me the money, and wanted to give me a hundred dollars and keep it on the contract or something like that; and I went to get my attorney. Mr. Page and I never had a falling out.

Q. Your relations were very friendly and you had to get your lawyer to get that two hundred dollars?

A. I didn't get the two hundred dollars on that.

Q. Sadie, going back, you went there and got that contract from Page? A. Got it from him?

Q. Yes, to produce certain witnesses?

A. Yes, that is what I got it for.

Q. And have them there. Sadie, did either Page or Long —Now listen to me—Did either Page or Long ever intimate to you that they expected you to buy witnesses?

A. Expected me to buy for——

Q. Yes?

A. No, didn't tell me to buy them. Dennis was the one that he wanted to see.

Q. Sadie, they didn't get you to go to anybody to tell lies? Answer my question.

A. Couldn't tell anything but lies, Judge.

Q. Answer my question. Did they tell you to bring witnesses there to tell lies?

A. If I answer my own way I will have to say yes.

Q. Then, they did tell you to bring lying witnesses?

A. Yes, Dennis and them lying witnesses, and Mr. Page knew it.

Q. How did he know?

A. Knew Dennis had come back from the lying trip, Mr. Page knew then and knows now that there is no Tommy Atkins; and knows of course if I brought him any witnesses he would be telling lie.

Q. Now, Sadie, I insist that you answer my question. You are making an argument for the Government, aren't you?

A. No, sir, I am not doing that.

Q. Well, don't argue, because I am not going to argue with you? A. All right.

Q. As a matter of fact, they never intimated to you that they wanted you to go out and buy witnesses?

A. Not to buy witnesses. I only give them five names.

Q. You were not told to buy any witnesses?

A. Not to buy them I didn't say Mr. Page told me to buy witnesses. He didn't give me money to buy witnesses.

Q. He didn't tell you to buy them? A. No, sir.

Q. You understood him that he wanted you—for you to find them, and to bring the witnesses there to swear that Tommy Atkins lived? A. No, Judge.

Q. Didn't you? A. No, Judge.

Q. Did you understand from him that he wanted you to manufacture witnesses?

A. Yes, I did, Judge. I will be honest.

Q. Where did you get that word produce, from the contract?

A. No, I said produce myself, had Frank Long put it in there.

Q. Put that in there?

A. Mr. Page said for Long to make out a contract, and if you don't like it we will change it.

Q. Sadie, did you dictate it to Frank Long?

A. Yes, sir, sitting right there, and Frank Long went in the other room and brought it back and I was satisfied with it.

Q. Sadie, did Frank Long take it down in shorthand when you dictated it?

A. No, I said that is what I want the contract to say.

Q. Now, Sadie, I will give you a chance and you can explain it. Did you tell it to Frank Long and the stenographer take it down?

A. The stenographer wasn't in there.

Q. Frank didn't take it down?

A. Frank Long was listening to what I said.

Q. He didn't take it down?

A. He went out and came back with it.

Q. He didn't put it down?

A. He went out and brought it in and showed it to me, and let me see the thousand dollars. I said I wanted the thousand dollars ($1,000.00) check put in this envelope and the contract, and taken down and put in the bank; and he brought it back and Mr. Page signed it and I seen it put in there.

Q. Let's go back to this again? A. All right.

Q. Frank went in and brought the contract in there?

A. After I got through talking Mr. Long did.

Q. I don't care whether it was after, or before, or in the middle. He went in there and brought the contract back?

A. Went in the office and brought the contract back.

Q. Brought the contract back? A. I looked at it.

Q. You signed—You says put in the word produce?

A. I says: Mr. Page, I want in my contract produce witnesses. I already gave five names. I wasn't to get any more people for them. Frank Long took me up stairs in Mr. Rice's office and I gave them five people I was to hire.

Q. What was the reason for putting the word produce in there if you had already produced them? Hadn't you?

A. No, I hadn't never seen them.

Q. Listen Sadie. Page knew at the time he made that contract with you, the very witnesses you were going to produce, didn't he? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you had given him the names, hadn't you?

A. Had given them to Ben Rice up stairs, yes, sir.

Q. And he knew the very people you expected to testify for him that you were going to get?

A. He didn't know whether I could get them or not.

Q. He knew the names? A. Mr. Long didn't know them.

Q. What were the names—It don't make any difference about Mr. Long?

A. The names I was giving Mr. Long was Dennis Jones and Rube Smith, and I said Mary Hamilton and Claude and Long said I can't handle them and don't want them.

Q. Leave those out then?

A. I was to go along and get my witnesses.

Q. But you haven't told me all the witnesses yet?

A. That is all, five.

Q. Rube? A. Yes.

Q. And Mary Smith? A. Mary Hamilton and her husband.

Q. Her husband? A. And Dennis Jones. Five.

Q. Now, two of them were cut out, wasn't they?

A. Two of them were cut out, I don't know as Mr. Page knew that.

Q. Mr. Long cut them out?

A. Up stairs. Mr. Rice, I guess, already had them.

Q. Didn't leave but three, did it?

A. Didn't leave but three as I know.

Q. And those three lived over at Leavenworth?

A. I had been working with them before I ever went with Page.

Q. They had been living there all their lives, hadn't they?

A. Living there all their lives.

Q. And they have families, haven't they, Sadie?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. They have raised children there themselves?

A. Yes.

Q. That is all? A. Yes.

Q. And those are the witnesses covered by your contract. ain't it Sadie?

A. Yes, sir, those are the ones I was working with in the fraud.

Q. Yes, that is it exactly? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, Sadie, we will have to commence on this journey? A. All right.

Q. And I will go with you in as short a time as I can. Sadie, the first bogus Tommy that you encountered was in Kansas City, wasn't he? A. Bogus Tommy?

Q. Bogus Thomas? A. In Leavenworth.

Q. Didn't they say they had him here in Kansas City?

A. Oh, yes, the detectives had him.

Q. The first bogus Tommy? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you come down here and look at that individual?

A. Yes, sir, Bettie told me a lie.

Q. No, Sadie, I am the lawyer and you are the witness. I am not going to let you run off like that. Answer my questions. I am going to treat you courteously and politely, and more so because you are a darkey, and you answer my questions. The first bogus Tommy, you say, was in Kansas City?

A. In Kansas City, yes, sir.

Q. What sort of looking individual was he, Sadie?

A. A dark complected looking boy, I don't know whether he was pure white or not.

Q. Indian looking? A. I think he was.

Q. Now, Bartlett took him under his wing, didn't he?

A. The detectives had him to come back.

Q. For Bartlett? A. For Bartlett.

Q. And Bartlett took him on down to Oklahoma, didn't he?

A. Had the detectives to get him ready and took him down there.

Q. And you told Bartlett that that wasn't Tommy, didn't you Sadie? A. No, I didn't.

Q. You told the detectives it wasn't Tommy?

A. I told them so, but they said Mr. Bartlett took their word because they were white men.

Q. They were trying to put it over you and you didn't intend for them to do it? Who were these detectives?

A. Mr. Kelsey and Mr. Harrison.

Q. Where are they?

A. City detectives, I think, on the force.

Q. Good men?

A. I suppose so, I don't know anything about them.

Q. They honestly believed that was Tommy?

A. I don't know, sir.

By Mr. German: I object to that as a conclusion.

Q. Said they did? A. From the story the boy told.

Q. They said they thought it was Tommy? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Bartlett came up and got him?

A. Yes, sir, Bartlett got him.

Q. Buell with him at that time?

A. No, sir, it was a year after that.

Q. Do you know whether Buell was operating in the field at that time?

A. I don't know anything about Mr. Buell and Mr. Bartlett.

Q. Do you know whether he was attached at that time by the Tommy Atkins controversy?

A. I don't know nothing about it, I never seen Mr. Buell until a year ago.

Q. But you do know that they took him to Oklahoma?

A. Taken him to Muskogee; Bartlett and Bettie.

Q. What became of him?

A. I never seen him any more after that.

Q. Do you know whether Bartlett tried to put him off on anybody down there? A. I don't know.

Q. Did you hear him say, Sadie? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you hear Mr. Buell say they tried to put him off?

A. I never knew Mr. Buell until a year after that.

Q. Did you hear Mr. Bartlett say so? A. No, sir.

Q. What did Bartlett say he was going to do with that boy?

A. Take him down to the Dawes Commission, I think.

Q. What year was that? A. 1914, March.

Q. The Dawes Commission was rather a dead and defunct Commission in 1914, wasn't it?

By Mr. German: I object to that as a conclusion.

By Mr. Stuart: Calling for a statement of facts if the witness knows.

A. I think that they were going to take him down there before the Government Commission.

Q. Did they do that? A. I think they did.

Q. Did they enroll him?

A. I don't know what you call it, they were going to take him down to Muskogee, I don't know what you call it.

Q. Now, Sadie, we will start— You told them that that fellow here in Kansas City didn't look like, didn't you, he was too old?

A. I told the detectives that. That was before Mr. Bartlett came.

Q. Then, you started out on your own hook, didn't you?

A. No, sir, they had me go with them, but I didn't do it that day; went on home and went to Tulsa.

Q. I am talking about shortly after that, you started out to hunting a Tommy? A. Oh, no.

Q. How long before you started?

A. I started hunting Minnie after that.

Q. Now, Sadie, that is exactly right?

A. I wanted to find Minnie and see if she was dead, and if she was not, I could get her to do anything I wanted her to do.

Q. You started out to hunt Minnie? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Before you found Minnie, you went to Denver?

A. Went to where those soldiers were.

Q. You went to Denver and came back before ever you found Minnie, didn't you? A. That was to get me a contract.

Q. Hold on. Did you go out there and come back before you ever found Minnie? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you go out there for? A. To Denver?

Q. Yes? A. To see if Minnie was at Fort Logan.

Q. You didn't find her? A. No, sir.

Q. Then you came back? A. I got on the trail of her.

Q. And came back here?

A. I didn't know whether I could find her or not when I made the contract.

Q. Then, you made up your mind to go on and hunt for her, didn't you? A. Went for another hunt, yes, sir.

Q. You went out there and found Minnie?

A. Yes, sir, I found Minnie.

Q. Did you take Bettie Mann with you the second trip?

A. Bettie wasn't with me the first trip.

Q. The second trip? A. Yes, sir.

Q. With you all the time after you left here until you got to Seattle? A. Yes, sir.

Q. With you all the time? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you double crossing Bettie all the time, wasn't you?

A. No, I wasn't double crossing Bettie. Bettie was double crossing me.

Q. And you was double crossing her right back, weren't you Sadie?

A. No, I was hunting her for the man that gave us the money to go and find her; Mr. Bartlett, working for him; and Bettie double crossed me. She made a contract before we left home.

Q. Now, you kept everything that you knew religiously away from Bettie, didn't you?

A. Yes, I did, because I had an idea Bettie was going to sell Minnie to somebody else if she knew where Minnie was.

Q. And you made up your mind to beat her to it?

A. I made up my mind to send for Mr. Bartlett, the man that gave us the four hundred ($400.00) dollars, yes, sir.

Q. You got there and found Minnie? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Walk up to the house?

A. Went to the Fort first and came back to the house.

Q. Walked up to the house and the screen door was latched? A. An inside door was shut too.

Q. But you could see in there?

A. No, the door was shut and the screen too.

Q. How did you see Minnie in there?

A. I didn't see her until she opened the door.

Q. And that left the screen door hooked? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Latched on the inside? A. Yes, sir.

Q. She asked you what you wanted?

A. No, sir, didn't ask what I wanted first.

Q. You said something and then she said what do you want? A. Not until I got in the house.

Q. You said open this door, Minnie Atkins?

A. I seen she didn't know me.

Q. Answer my questions. You said, open this door Minnie Atkins? A. Yes, sir, I said that.

Q. And she opened it?

A. She opened it yes, sir, and I got in.

Q. You knew she was living with Harry Folk at that time, didn't you, you found that out?

A. Yes, sir, I found that out.

Q. You found out she had been married seven years?

A. Not until I got in the house.

Q. But you knew she was married?

A. Yes, sir, I heard she was.

Q. Heard she was? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You got in there and she told you she had been married seven years?

A. Yes, sir, and Harry didn't know she had any children.

Q. And told she was happily married, didn't she?

A. No, she didn't say that. I wouldn't tell you what she did say, Judge, about her husband.

Q. You judged from her conversation that she was happily married, didn't you, Sadie? A. Well, I can't say that.

Q. Sadie, she showed a great disinclination to have people up there know her past life, didn't she?

By Mr. German: Object to that as calling for a conclusion and opinion of the witness.

A. I don't know whether she did or not. Keeping it a secret.

Q. Sadie, she seemed to want to conceal her past life, didn't she?

By Mr. German: The same objection for the same reason.

Q. Answer the question?

A. Nobody, didn't know it there in the Fort.

Q. I know, Sadie, but if you will answer my question now, didn't she tell you she wanted to conceal her past life?

A. No, she didn't tell me she wanted to conceal her past life, didn't tell me that.

Q. Sadie, didn't she tell you she didn't want her husband to know she had ever had any children? A. Oh, her husband?

Q. Yes? A. Yes, she didn't want him to know.

Q. You knew she didn't want him to know she had any—told you she didn't want him to know she ever had any children? A. Yes, she was afraid he would leave her.

Q. She told you those children were illegitimate, and you knew it, didn't you? A. No, sir.

Q. Didn't you know they were illegitimate children?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you know she had ever been married before?

A. I thought she could have been married.

Q. Did you know it, whether she had ever married or not?

A. No, I didn't. I thought she was married to Peterkin when she left.

Q. You knew this boy Harvey and the other one?

A. Charlie?

Q. And Charlie Harrison, down there, were her children?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You knew that she hadn't seen them for a long time, didn't you? A. Yes, I knew that.

Q. You knew she had practically forgotten them, didn't you Sadie? A. I thought so until I got to where she was.

Q. I understand, and when she talked to you she said little Alice had been dead so long— A. No.

Q. Mabel then? A. When I asked about Alice——

Q. Didn't she say dead so long, not to talk about it?

A. Told me not to want to know; been dead too long, don't want to know.

Q. Now, Sadie, Minnie tried very hard to keep from her husband the existence of those children, didn't she?

> By Mr. German: I object to that as calling for a conclusion and opinion of the witness.

A. Oh, I don't know.

Q. You understand that?

A. No, she—she told me that day she didn't want Harry to know she had them.

Q. Didn't she weep and ask you, Sadie, not to tell it?

A. No, Judge.

Q. Just answer that. There is no use——

A. Well, I will say no.

Q. Didn't she beg you not to tell it? A. No, Judge.

Q. Now, Sadie? A. No, Judge, I can't say that, no.

Q. Well, didn't she ask you not to tell him?

A. No, Judge, told me to tell him.

Q. Didn't you beg her to let you tell him? A. No, Judge.

Q. Didn't she say, no, not to tell him? A. No, I told him.

Q. Sadie, didn't you swear here when you were examined right in the beginning of this case—Now, listen to me—and isn't it in the record that Minnie asked you not to tell her husband?

A. I told her she would have to and she said that she couldn't. She was afraid he would leave her, and I told her to let me tell him.

Q. You begged her to let you tell him?

A. I didn't beg her, I asked her, and she said all right and she went and 'phoned to him.

Q. When he came in, did he come in in a happy frame of mind? A. The next day——

Q. When you next saw him with his wife—It don't make any difference if it was a week—he was in a happy frame of mind? A. Yes, seemed to be all right.

Q. Seemed to be on splendid terms with, didn't he, Sadie?

A. With her?

Q. With her? A. Yes, with her.

Q. And the very first thing you said, Sadie, was Harry—

A. No, I didn't say Harry.

Q. Mr. Folk? A. Yes.

Q. Do you know your wife real well? A. Real good.

Q. Real good? A. Yes.

Q. That is the first thing you said? A. Yes, because——

Q. Not your causes. You will get a chance to tell everything that was said. Now, Sadie, you said that in a deep whisper, didn't you? A. A deep whisper?

Q. Tolerably low? A. When.

Q. When you told Harry that?

A. No, wasn't nobody in there but us three.

Q. Well, you said, Mr. Folk do you know your wife real good?

A. No, I said Mr. Folk do you know your wife?

Q. Real good? A. No, I didn't say real good.

Q. Good?

A. Good. I said, Mr. Folk do you know your and he said——

Q. I didn't ask what he said. Stop. And then he said, I think not?

A. Yes, sir, I think not. He said he thought——

Q. And then you got up close to him, didn't you Sadie?

A. No, I was sitting down where I was sitting still.

Q. And you said, I have got a secret to tell you?

A. Sitting where I was, I didn't have to whisper to him.

Q. Got a secret to tell you?

A. Said I came to tell you a secret about her. She was sitting with her head down.

Q. Close enough to hear it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. I have come to tell you a secret? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you said, your wife has got a lot of living children?

A. I told him about Minnie's children. I didn't say about leaving Harvey and Charlie.

Q. Did he say, My God? A. No, he didn't.

Q. Say Good Lord? A. No, he didn't.

Q. Did he say, Oh my? A. No.

Q. Say how do you know? A. No.

Q. Just sat still and looked at you?

A. Sat still and looked at me.

Q. Did he look*ed* surprised? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Very much surprised? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then Minnie turned to him and began to weep?

A. No, sir, she didn't.

Q. Didn't weep? A. No, sir, she said, Harry——

Q. I didn't ask you what she said. She didn't weep?

A. No, sir, wasn't crying.

Q. She leaned her head on her hands? A. Yes.

Q. She leaned her head on her hand and said, Harry will you ever forgive me? A. No, Harry can you forgive——

Q. What did Harry say when she said that?

A. Didn't say nothing.

Q. Didn't say a word? A. Not a word then, no, sir.

Q. Did he go out of the house?

A. No, sir, he sat there; he was just paralyzed; he sat there.

Q. And looked at you? A. Yes, sir, looking.

Q. And then you looked at him and told him, said: "Well, there is money in it" isn't there? A. Not then.

Q. But in that conversation? A. In the conversation.

Q. And you said Harry there is big money in it?

A. No, not big money, I told him two thousand ($2,000.00) dollars in it.

Q. And then he smiled, didn't he?

A. No, sir, he didn't commence to smile right there.

Q. When did he commence—when did a smile come on his face? A. After I got through telling him.

Q. After you got through telling him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You told him there was two thousand dollars in it?

A. Yes, sir, two thousand dollars.

Q. Then, the children were forgotten, wasn't they?

A. Yes, sir, as a white man will do when money has come up.

Q. You think that is peculiar to a white man?

A. Negroes haven't got the sense.

Q. Peculiar to white men? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, then, Sadie, when did he begin to show that delight? A. When I spoke about the money.

Q. Just as soon as you got through your story?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You and Harry got to be great friends after that, didn't you? A. He treated me nicely, yes, sir.

Q. You could go to his home whenever you wanted to?

A. I went there every day.

Q. Every day? A. Yes, sir, inside.

Q. You and Minnie talked this thing over from time to time? A. About seven days, yes, sir.

Q. But this Indian woman Minnie said to you there solemnly, Sadie how in the hell did you find me?

A. She said when I walked in there——

Q. I don't care whether it was when you walked in there, sat in, or jumped in. She said how in the hell did you find me?

A. She didn't say it solemnly.

Q. Not solemnly?

A. No, laughingly. She said who is that, and I took my hat off, and after I smiled, she said this is Sadie, and I said yes, and she said how in the hell did you find me, she smiled—anything to find out I will find it.

Q. Then she looked at you and said solemnly, nineteen years ago—— A. Oh, no.

Q. I stole fourteen dollars and forty cents from the Creek Nation and I have been hiding out from that fourteen dollars ever since? A. No, she didn't.

Q. Sadie, she said: Sadie, I committed a crime down in the Creek Nation? A. Not right then.

Q. When did she say that?

A. She spoke about that later.

Q. In the same conversation?

A. She didn't say fourteen dollars ($14.00).

Q. You knew it was fourteen dollars and forty cents ($14.40) a head, didn't you?

A. No, I wasn't down there at the payment.

Q. But you knew it? A. No, I didn't.

Q. You heard it before you went there?

A. I heard Nancy said that she had drawn hers.

Q. Fourteen dollars and forty cents ($14.40)?

A. That Minnie had off Nancy.

Q. You knew she only got fourteen dollars and forty cents ($14.40)? A. I knew it was fourteen dollars.

Q. And she said, Sadie nineteen years ago? A. No.

Q. Hold on. In that conversation—I committed a crime and I have been fleeing from it ever since—hiding from it; I entered Tommy Atkins when I didn't have any Tommy Atkins? A. Oh, no, sir. No, Judge, she didn't.

Q. What did she say, Sadie? A. Oh, my God!

Q. Sadie, what did she say?

A. Oh, Lord, no! No, Judge, she didn't say that. Putting that down too, Judge.

Q. Well, now, Sadie, I will give you a chance to tell me. What she did say about that fourteen dollars and forty ($14.40) cents? A. She didn't say fourteen dollars.

Q. Well, about that money? The money that she stole?

A. She said: Sadie, Thomas Atkins was my father and he had been dead seventeen years when I drew the money. She didn't say how much she drawed.

Q. Well, I know that. A. No, sir.

Q. Sadie, let's not quibble about technicalities, she did say, Sadie, she had been hiding out seventeen years for entering a boy that never did exist? A. No, she didn't say a boy.

Q. Somebody that was her father?

A. No, said hiding from the Government for a crime committed against them for drawing that money.

Q. You knew she meant drawing for somebody that didn't exist? A. Yes, sir, her dead father.

Q. Now, let's see if we can agree. She said, Sadie, nineteen years I have been hiding out from the Government for a crime I committed nineteen years ago?

A. For drawing that money.

Q. Drawing money in the name of Thomas Atkins, my dead father?

A. No. She didn't say any name of Thomas Atkins.

Q. Well, for my dead father?

A. That ain't the way she spoke it.

Q. Tell me how she spoke it?

A. Said hiding from the Government nineteen years for the crime I committed in drawing that money. She didn't say Thomas Atkins was her father—but running from that.

Q. Didn't you tell me a moment ago that the crime she committed was drawing the money in the name of Thomas Atkins, and it was her father and he had been dead——

A. Yes, sir, that is what she said.

Q. And that is the crime she committed?

A. Yes, sir, that is the crime which she committed, drawing that money.

And thereupon, an adjournment is taken until tomorrow morning at nine o'clock.

And thereafter, and on the 17th day of February, 1916, at nine-thirty o'clock A. M. further testimony herein is taken as follows:

SADIE JAMES, being recalled, further testified as follows:

Cross Examination by Mr. Stuart.

Q. Sadie, where is the town of Rye? A. Rye?

Q. Rye. Now, the place by the name of Rye, where is that? A. It is about fifty miles from Pueblo, I think.

Q. How do you get there from Pueblo?

A. You have to go in a machine.

Q. Go in a machine? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you go to the town of Rye, Sadie?

A. I went there in September, just this last September past.

Q. This last September? A. This September, yes, sir.

Q. September? A. 1915.

Q. 1915? A. Yes, sir.

Q. I believe you said you made your confession in December? A. Of 1914.

Q. Of 1914? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the September afterwards, you went to Rye?

A. Yes, sir, I went to Rye.

Q. Did you go by automobile? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who took you out there, Sadie?

A. Mr. Bartlett's son and a man that runs the garage.

Q. Were you taken by automobile out there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was Mr. Bartlett's son named?

A. His name is Ellsworth Bartlett.

Q. Where did he meet you Sadie?

A. Met me where I was staying out at Pueblo.

Q. What place were you staying at in Pueblo?

A. I was stopping at—I forget the number of the place, but it is on——

Q. Never mind about the number. Do you remember the people you stopped with out there?

A. No, I had a little two-room house rented there from a Dago.

Q. Who told you to rent that house, Sadie?

A. I did myself.

Q. I know, but who sent you to Pueblo?

A. Mr. Robinson taken me out to Pueblo.

Q. What for?

A. Because people were all bad in Kansas City I was afraid to stay here.

Q. You went to Pueblo for protection?

A. Yes, sir, getting out of the way of these men here.

Q. Who were they?

A. I don't know. One man gave me the name of Graves.

Q. Let's go slow.

A. That first man wasn't named Graves.

Q. It don't make any difference whether it was the first or the second; Graves came to you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did he claim to be?

A. He claimed to be, told me was a United States Marshal from down in Oklahoma and wanted to arrest me in this case.

Q. Wanted to arrest you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he have a warrant? A. No, he didn't.

Q. Did he claim to have a warrant?

A. Yes, he didn't show me none.

Q. Didn't show you none? A. No, sir.

Q. And he didn't arrest you? A. Yes, I run off.

Q. Could have arrested you right there, couldn't he?

A. Yes, I told him what he wanted me to say. I will tell you what he wanted me to do.

Q. What was it he said?

A. He said that he wanted me to make a statement that I had told a lie on Hugh Bartlett.

Q. Did he promise you anything if you would make the statement, Sadie? A. Did he?

Q. Yes? A. Five thousand ($5,000.00) dollars.

Q. Five thousand ($5,000.00) dollars? Promised you five thousand dollars? A. Yes, sir, five thousand dollars.

Q. If you would make a statement exonerating Mr. Page —what I mean by exonerating, you admit that you told a lie on him?

A. To say so, that I had told a lie on Mr. Page.

Q. On Mr. Page?

A. Yes, said Mr. Bartlett was paying me to tell a lie on Mr. Page.

Q. Now, what kind of looking man was this man Graves, give me a description?

A. I don't know that I could give a description.

Q. Sadie, was he six foot or four?

A. No, he might have been more than four, but wasn't six. This first man wasn't Graves.

Q. I am not asking about the first man, I am talking about Graves.

A. Graves was out in Trinidad.

Q. I don't care where he was, tell me what kind of looking man he was? A. I don't know.

Q. Was Graves out at Trinidad? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What kind of looking man was Graves?

A. I don't know what kind of looking man Graves was.

Q. Now, Sadie, you can give me some idea?

A. I don't think I can.

Q. Now, Sadie, you will have it to do?

A. If I can't, I can't.

Q. Was he a man with black eyes or blue eyes?

A. I think Mr. Graves was light complected, I think. There was two——

Q. Leave out the two. I am talking about Mr. Graves.

A. I think Mr. Graves was a light complected man with blue eyes, I think.

Q. And how tall?

A. Well, I can't tell how tall he was, because I am not any judge of the height of people.

Q. Well, you have a pretty good idea about things, don't you Sadie? A. I don't know how tall he was.

Q. What color are my eyes, Sadie?

A. Blue. Seen you enough to know they are blue.

Q. What color are Judge Allen's eyes there?

A. Hazel I think.

Q. Yes, that is what they call tission brown, isn't it?

A. I don't know.

Q. What color eyes did this man have?

A. I think his eyes were blue; I was scared; I think his eyes were blue.

Q. About how tall was he? A. I don't know about that.

Q. Was he heavy set or thin?

A. Oh, he might have been about the size of——

Q. About the size of Mr. Long? A. I think so.

Q. Look anything like Long? A. No.

Q. It wasn't Long, was it?

A. No, I would have known if it had have been him.

Q. Sadie, is that all you can tell about this man Graves?

A. That is all I can tell, because——

Q. Well, he told you he would give you five thousand ($5,000) dollars?

A. No, that was Graves. This Bludsoe here in Kansas.

Q. Leave out Graves; what was the name of the man here in Kansas City? A. Bludsaw.

Q. Bludsoe? What did Bludsoe represent himself to be?

A. He represented himself to be the same thing. What I am saying, that is what Bludsoe wanted me to do.

Q. Now, wait. We will work to get to Graves.

A. You have got what Mr. Bludsoe said in here with Mr. Graves.

Q. What did Bludsoe say to you?

A. Bludsoe is the man that promised me the five thousand ($5,000.00) dollars.

Q. He did? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who did he say he represented? A. He didn't say.

Q. What kind of looking man was Bludsoe?

A. He was a kind of man—— I don't know.

Q. Say his name was Jim Bludsoe? A. No, he didn't.

Q. Didn't say his name was Jim? A. No, he didn't.

Q. Say he was any kin to Jim Bludsoe?

A. No, he didn't say who he was related to.

Q. What office did he say he held? A. He didn't say.

Q. Where did he see you, Sadie?

A. 1615 Waldron Avenue.

Q. Did he make an appointment with you before he met you?

A. No, sir, I never saw him until he walked up to where I was setting?

Q. Walked up to your house? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he say, I will give you five thousand dollars to do what?

A. He had some papers, to sign these papers, he wanted me to—to say you were hired to tell a lie on Mr. Page.

Q. Did he say who sent him there?

A. No, he didn't say anyone had ever told me.

Q. Did he say where he came from? A. No.

Q. He didn't say where he came from? A. No.

Q. He just walked up to you and said—— Called you Sadie? A. Yes, called me Sadie.

Q. Said, Sadie, I have got some documents here which provide that they will pay you five thousand ($5,000.00) dollars? A. If I will say——

Q. That you were hired to swear a lie against Page?

A. No, hired to swear a lie against him.

Q. Yes? A. Yes, hired to swear a lie against Page.

Q. By Bartlett? A. By Bartlett.

Q. Now, what did you tell him?

A. I told him I wouldn't do it. I went by the Pinkertons then——

Q. Wouldn't do it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, you were in for the money, weren't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Looking for money all the time?

A. Yes, sir, all the time.

Q. Why didn't you take that five thousand ($5,000.00) dollars?

A. Because I had been down to the Court House and told the truth, and think I am going to tell a lie and get in the pen?

Q. You are afraid of the pen are you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. I say you are afraid of that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is on your mind all the time?

A. The penitentiary?

Q. Yes, afraid of the pen?

Q. Night and every—— A. Not every day and night.

Q. Well, we will leave that for a minute, what were you doing in Trinidad?

A. I ran off from Pueblo and staid up at Rye. I didn't want to stay in Rye and I went to Trinidad to stay? That is where Graves came to me.

Q. Let's go back a little. Somebody had you taken in an automobile to Rye?

Q. That is Mr. Bartlett's farm in Colorado?

A. His son's farm.

Q. His son's farm in Colorado? A. His son's farm.

Q. When you got there, they took you out to a house?

Q. And you knew that Ellsworth was the one that came up here and got this forged deed, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. You knew that boy of Bartlett's came up and got that forged deed didn't you?

A. Yes, I knew Bettie and then——

Q. You knew this Ellsworth Bartlett was the one that got that forged deed?

Q. But you had known Ellsworth?

A. I never had seen Ellsworth before.

Q. You had heard that Ellsworth came up here and got that deed? A. I didn't know which one it was that came.

Q. From whom? A. From Mr. Buell.

Q. Did any of it help pay for your food? A. No, sir.

Q. What did you do?

A. I sent to town—— Out there at those country places, it don't take very much to live on. I didn't have any rent to pay; live for one dollar or two dollars a week.

Q. With this chunk of money you bought a lot of things out there? A. I didn't need nothing.

Q. Just lived on air? A. No, not so much air.

Q. But you did buy stuff, didn't you?

A. But the store was nine miles from there.

Q. Assuming it is eighteen, you did buy stuff?

A. I didn't buy over four dollars' worth of stuff.

Q. You paid for that stuff?

A. No, I didn't; Ellsworth brought it up there to me.

Q. Charged it to Bartlett?

A. I would tell him what I wanted.

Q. And Ellsworth would just furnish the stuff?

A. He bought me some stuff when I first got out there, and I gave him two dollars to get some salt meat in town.

Q. He fed you pretty well, didn't he Sadie?

A. No, he did not.

Q. Did you live hard? A. No, but not as I do in town.

Q. You didn't live quite as well as you did when you were at Seattle, and San Francisco and Los Angeles and Portland, did you, Sadie?

A. No, I had lots of money then; I was putting up at the hotel.

Q. The best that the country afforded out there?

A. I don't know what else we talked about.

Q. Well, he told you to be of good cheer, he would protect you? A. No, he didn't tell me that.

Q. Did he say, Sadie, you will be all right, you stay with me?

A. He told me, you stay out here and I will be all right; nobody will come out there after——

Q. Nobody? A. Nobody would come out there after me.

Q. That was sort of a summer resort?

A. No, they have got about twenty thousand acres out there.

Q. You just went at will?

A. Some colored people lived right next, I went there.

Q. I understand that you still stayed with Will?

A. Sure, out there fifty miles from town.

Q. Just as you wished, you did?

Q. Then, about ten months after you made this contract with them—— A. Didn't make no contract.

Q. This agreement? A. Yes, sir, didn't make no contract.

Q. Well, call it an agreement? A. Well, all right.

Q. It was an agreement made upon good consideration, wasn't it? A. Yes, sir, I would do it.

Q. It was valid in every way as you understood it?

A. I understood it, yes, sir.

Q. And binding? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you expected to get the money; now, ten months after that, you turned up at Rye, didn't you, in Bartlett's country residence—ten months from December, the 17th—— I believe I am wrong; about nine months?

A. Yes, sir. I was trying to see.

Q. After nine months though, I understand that you turned up at Rye? A. Yes, I went to Rye.

Q. When did you leave Rye?

A. I left Rye about the first part of October I guess, October, let's see——

Q. Sadie, now you see—— Give me the date?

Q. Yes? A. No, I didn't.

Q. Are you certain of that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You swear your confession is not dated in February? Remember, I have got that in my possession?

A. I don't care what you got, I made it in December.

Q. Didn't make it in February?

A. No, I didn't, I made it in December.

Q. You didn't sign one in February?

A. Sign one in February?

Q. A confession? A. I got my immunity papers.

Q. Did you sign one in February, 1915?

A. No, that I know of.

Q. You say you didn't do it, did you do it?

A. No, that was in December.

Q. You didn't do it? A. No, that was in December.

Q. I want to ask you how many statements you have made to Judge Allen in this case?

A. I haven't made none to him.

Q. How many have you made in his presence?

A. I made my confession to Frank L. Montgomery.

Q. When? A. In Decmeber, 19——

Q. Haven't you signed a half dozen statements since that? A. No, I haven't.

Q. Have you signed a single statement since that?

A. No, I haven't.

Q. Certain of that?

A. Since I signed that one to Mr. Montgomery in December?

Q. In December? A. Yes, sir, I know.

Q. Put your head on it now, I don't want to trick you now?

A. No, I haven't signed nothing since I signed that one.

Q. How many times since you made—— Now listen—that confession to Montgomery in December have you talked to Judge Allen in this case about your confession?

A. I have never talked with Judge Allen about my confession.

Q. Never have? A. No, sir.

Q. Never have talked with him at all? A. No, sir.

A. No, sir, about my confession, no, sir.

Q. Haven't you had conversations with him about what you said in your confession? A. No, no, sir.

Q. As a matter of fact, Judge Allen has never questioned you about this case since you made your confession, has he?

A. No, sir, only when we went down to Muskogee last winter; that was the first time I ever saw Judge Allen.

Q. And since then he has had no conversation with you about your confession?

A. No, sir, not about my confession.

Q. Anywhere or at any time?

A. No, sir, nowhere at any time.

Q. Who has? Name somebody that has?

A. I don't know of anyone that has.

Q. Do you know of any person that talked to you about that December confession? A. No, sir.

Q. Have you talked to Mr. Meserve about it? You know him? A. Yes, I know Mr. Meserve.

Q. What relation does Mr. Meserve bear to this case, do you know?

A. I can't tell you to save my life; that is honest; I don't know.

Q. He is representing Mr. Bartlett?

A. I can't say that.

Q. Did he ever tell you so? A. No, sir.

Q. Mr. Meserve paid your doctor bill since you have been here? A. Did pay it twice, four dollars.

Q. What did he do that for?

A. I didn't have the money.

Q. He furnished the money?

A. He took me up there, he ought to pay it.

Q. Did he tell you it was Mr. Bartlett's money?

A. Didn't tell me.

Q. Who found the doctor?

A. You all told him to take me out.

Q. He just paid the doctor?

A. Two dollars the first trip and two dollars the second trip.

Q. How long has Mr. Meserve been connected with the case, as far as you know? A. I don't know that.

Q. Haven't you talked with Col. Meserve time and time again about this law suit? A. No, I haven't.

Q. Didn't talk at all?

A. No, I have not, I am not going to say I did when I haven't.

Q. That is what I want you to tell, the truth?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You swear to me that you haven't talked to Meserve about what you were going to swear in this case?

A. Yes, sir, I will swear it.

Q. Not at any time? A. I will swear it.

Q. Under any circumstances?

A. Under any circumstances that I have not ever talked to him about my confession.

Q. About what you are going to swear in this case?

A. No, I haven't.

Q. Have you talked with my friend, Mr. Robinson over here? A. No sir.

Q. Have you told him what you are going to swear?

A. No, sir, and he didn't know what I told Mr. Montgomery either.

Q. He didn't know either? A. No.

Q. You kept that secret?

A. I did from him. I didn't think it was Mr. Robinson's business.

Q. Now, Sadie, who has talked to you about this case?

A. Not no one.

Q. Not a single soul?

A. No, sir, I made my confession to Mr. Montgomery and I haven't talked to any one about it.

Q. Since then? A. Since then.

Q. Since you made that confession in December, 1914, nobody has talked to you about this case?

A. About my confession, no, sir.

Q. And about what you would swear in this case?

A. No, sir, nobody.

Q. Nobody has conferred with you?

A. No, sir, they haven't.

Q. You tell that to this Examiner to be true?

A. I am telling it to him.

Q. To be true?

A. To be true. No one talked to me about my confession.

Q. About what you would swear in this case?

A. In this case.

Q. What your testimony was going to be?

A. Nobody has, I am telling it to this man because I wouldn't talk to them.

Q. Although you had confessed it?

A. I had confessed it to one man only.

Q. Now, Sadie, have you ever been up at the United States Attorney's office at Muskogee? A. No, sir.

Q. Never have?

A. I don't know where that is at; up at the Court House where I was swearing last winter?

Q. Yes?

A. Yes, sir, I have been up in there where I was swearing.

Q. Did you make any other statement up there?

A. No, sir.

Q. You know what a supplemental statement, an additional statement—— Have you made any statement, any supplemental statement since your confession in December?

A. Yes, sir, I haven't done that.

Q. Haven't done that?

A. No, sir, I haven't seen nobody in Muskogee, I don't think.

Q. So that if a statement purported to be made by you in February is presented, it is not right?

A. I made a confession in December and I signed that.

Q. That is the only one you know of or have heard of?

A. Yes, sir, that is the only one I know of.

Q. Yes, or have heard of? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, Sadie, you have been promised immunity in December, 1914? Hadn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Judge Allen wired up here?

A. Yes, sir, that my immunity was given me.

Q. And you knew from that hour that you were under protection of the Government, didn't you?

A. For what I had done in this case?

Q. Yes, you were under the Government's protection?

A. Yes, sir, the minute I signed.

Q. Now, will you tell me, if you were under the Government's protection in 1914, what you were afraid of in December, 1915? A. December?

Q. September, 1915?

A. Running from detectives that would come and find me. That is what I was afraid of. I had five or six men on me.

Q. Sadie, weren't you running from men that was trying to interview you as to the truth?

A. As to the truth? No, sir, I had told the truth.

Q. Didn't they tell you, didn't Bartlett and Buell tell you not to talk with anybody?

A. No, they didn't; no, they didn't tell me not to talk with anybody.

Q. Didn't somebody tell you not to talk to anybody?

A. Who has give me advice not to talk to anybody, Judge? My! Nobody has to give me advice.

Q. Sadie, if you don't need advice, why were you running to Rye for protection?

A. To keep this man, Judge Stuart, from getting me; I was afraid they would kill me.

Q. What men? Detectives were trying to kill you?

A. Yes, sir, in a big case, and turning up fraud like this I was afraid I might be killed.

Q. You were afraid of getting assassinated?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have killed a man haven't you?

A. Yes, sir, and I would kill another one if I had to.

Q. You are afraid of getting killed? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Wasn't you carrying a gun at that time?

A. No, sir, I didn't need no gun. I wasn't running a road house.

Q. You knew that you had protection all the time, didn't you, Sadie? A. There was no one around me if I did.

Q. You said you would kill another one? What other one do you want to kill?

A. If some one tried to take my life like the negro I killed, I would kill another.

Q. You aren't craving to kill another one now?

A. No, sir, I am talking about if some one was to try to kill me.

Q. Dod you think anybody in this case is afraid of you?

A. No, sir, I know they are not.

Q. You get that out of your mind if you think so.

A. No, sir, I am speaking about this man like I had killed——

By Mr. German: I object to the question of counsel as being argumentative and improper.

Q. You have often said, Sadie, that you wasn't afraid of anything that wore hair, haven't you?

A. That depends, Judge.

Q. Now, tell me; haven't you said that?

A. Once on a time, yes, sir, when I was running the Road House.

Q. Once in a time that you were running the Road House you—— A. Nothing that rolled on top of the earth.

Q. Now, when did you get so that you were afraid of people? A. After I had made my confession.

Q. After you made your confession?

A. Yes, sir, I got afraid.

Q. Were these white men or negroes that came to you?

A. They were white men.

Q. White men? A. Yes, sir, white men.

Q. And you were afraid that these white men were going to assassinate you?

A. The ones that came to me, I didn't know what they were hired somebody to do. They didn't look like desperate men that came to me.

Q. They didn't threaten to kill you, did they?

A. No, they didn't say they would do so.

Q. Sadie, did any human being threaten you with violence? A. No, they didn't threaten me, I was afraid.

Q. You took up the idea that some of these people questioning you might kill you?

A. I didn't think they would; they might hire somebody else, I didn't think they would.

Q. And in view of that fact, you went to Rye, Colorado, and there found your peace, didn't you?

A. I run away from Kansas City first and went to Pueblo.

Q. To Rye, and from there to Trinidad and to Rye?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And in Rye you found peace?

A. No, sir, I stayed there three weeks and I left.

Q. You wanted to get out of there?

A. It was too lonesome there for me; five thousand dollars——

Q. Magnificent snow-clad mountains? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Plenty to eat? A. No, sir, didn't have plenty to eat.

Q. Lots safer and to know? A. No.

Q. How came you——

A. I got lonesome and wanted to get back in town.

Q. Back into company?

A. No, sir, there was no company out there for me to get in there.

Q. You were a stranger?

A. I wanted to get back in Trinidad, I wanted to see town.

Q. You wanted to get back to the bright lights?

A. I am not a country woman and I wanted to get back to town.

Q. To the white lights? A. Yes, sir.

Q. While you had lights, you didn't feel any apprehension about anybody killing you, did you? A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. Did you feel any fear about anybody killing you?

A. Rye was a mile from where I lived.

Q. Didn't you believe Ellsworth?

A. There was thousands of miles around there. How did I know who would come out and kill me at night.

Q. Ellsworth had five thousand acres there?

A. A big farm. He has got a large ranch there.

Q. He furnished you that house?

A. It wasn't his house.

Q. He hired it?

A. I don't know whether he bought it or not, I stayed in it.

Q. You didn't pay for it? A. I didn't pay for it.

Q. Somebody paid for it? A. Somebody paid for it.

Q. And Ellsworth put you in there that night?

A. He put me in there.

Q. Took you in his automobile, didn't he?

A. He came in there and took me and my trunks out, I 'phoned for him.

Q. You began to long for the "Flesh pots of Egypt," didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Wanted to get back to town? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you notify him of that?

A. No, sir, he kept putting me off and said he would take me, and I just run off.

Q. Take you where? A. To town where I wanted to go.

Q. He still wanted to hold you?

A. I was out there scared.

Q. He didn't want you to go, did he, Sadie?

A. No, sir, I came out there for protection and he told me to stay there.

Q. During that three weeks, did you go to Ellsworth's house? Have any meals at his house?

A. No, sir, never ate at his house.

Q. Who lives at his house?

A. His wife and a hired girl and about fifteen ranchmen, I guess.

Q. Tell me who you knew at that house?

A. Didn't know a soul but Ellsworth, never seen a soul.

Q. You were trusting him?

A. Trusting him and those cow-boys.

Q. To the extent of their ability?

A. I knew what they would do if they saw anybody coming to me.

Q. You knew they would do them up?

A. Yes, sir, I knew they would do them up.

Q. You got a feeling of solitude and couldn't stand it?

A. No, I didn't want to stay there any longer.

Q. What place did you go to?

A. I made for Trinidad.

Q. How long did you stay there?

A. I stayed in Trinidad about four weeks.

Q. Four weeks, I believe you say for—— How big is Trinidad? A. Trinidad is a big place.

Q. About how many thousand people?

A. I don't know how many people. I didn't go around much.

Q. What place did you first go to?

A. I first went to Daniel's Place on 305 on Bluff Street and I stayed there a week and left, and then went to 432 West Main, another colored place.

Q. You wrote Ellsworth your address, didn't you?

A. After I got over there.

Q. At Trinidad? A. Trinidad, yes, sir.

Q. What did you say in that letter to Ellsworth?

A. I don't know what I did say.

Q. Tell us, Sadie? A. I couldn't read it.

Q. You wrote him didn't you?

A. I called him over the 'phone.

Q. Did you give him your street number?

A. I told him where I was.

Q. What did you say to him besides telling him where you were?

A. I told him to call up Bartlett or Mr. Buell or somebody and let them know where I was.

Q. And let them keep on tab of you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You wanted them to know where you were all the time?

A. Yes, sir, I wanted them to know where I was all the time.

Q. All the time? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were not scared in Trinidad, were you?

A. I run off I guess I was.

Q. Who scared you out of Trinidad?

A. This man Graves came to me in Trinidad.

Q. Bluffed you out of Trinidad?

A. Yes, sir, he bluffed me out.

Q. Where did you go?

A. I went to Rye. I went first to Walsenburg and sat up in the court house all night; stayed up in the court house from eleven o'clock at night until four in the morning; and set out in the morning to get me a room at a Dago place until seven o'clock in the morning.

Q. Were you sober? A. Sure I was sober.

Q. Dead sober? A. Dead sober.

Q. Where did you go from there?

A. Taken a machine and went back to Rye.

Q. Who furnished the machine? A. Hired one.

Q. Who paid for that machine?

A. Mrs. Bartlett when I got out there.

Q. Mrs. Bartlett had come out to Rye?

A. Mrs. Bartlett was already there.

Q. Came out there since you left Ellsworth?

A. She was out there all the time, I didn't stay at their home.

Q. Oh, you didn't tell me that?

A. They have quite a fine ten thousand dollar home there.

Q. That is what I thought. Bartlett's wife was out there in the summer home? A. Young Bartlett's.

Q. What Bartlett? A. Ellsworth.

Q. Lived in a fine ten thousand ($10,000.00) dollar home?

A. They had the house built like that.

Q. That place where you went to?

A. Down there, that place wasn't built then.

Q. That ten thousand dollar home, the one that you went to? Rye, that's where you went to?

A. Yes, sir, stayed there.

Q. What did you go back to Rye for?

A. To tell them what happened in Trinidad.

Q. You went back to tell Ellsworth what happened?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Thought you would find protection in Rye again?

A. Yes, sir, I went out there for protection.

Q. You thought you would find it?

A. I didn't take my husband with me, left him in Trinidad, running off from him, and everybody else.

Q. You quit the whole thing?

A. Yes, sir, a lot was after me, United States Marshal, Graves. Graves said he was to carry me back to Muskogee.

Q. Hadn't the Government here, Mr. German and these people here, promised you protection?

Q. Yes, but he told a lie; said when I made the confession down there I hadn't implicated anybody else but myself and a warrant was out for me, he was a United States Detective and would take me back the next morning at seven o'clock on the seven o'clock train; and I left that night on the ten o'clock instead of waiting until seven.

Q. He didn't take you did he?

A. No, sir, he didn't take me.

Q. Did he take you?

A. He told me he would take me back in the morning at seven.

Q. Did he take you to Rye?

A. I left that night about ten o'clock; he left about seven in the evening and was to be back in the morning for me at seven, and I left that night.

Q. Tell me how you gave him the slip?

A. My husband got a machine and circled me around in town first, I taken a train and got into Trinidad about eleven o'clock, and then the next morning I taken an automobile.

Q. And you left your husband then?

A. Yes, sir, and I went to Rye.

Q. What did you leave him for?

A. I couldn't take him over there with me as fast as I was getting out of the way.

Q. He could ride in the automobile as well as you could?

A. I didn't leave in an automobile. When I left Trinidad I left on the car forty miles of Walsenburg.

Q. Gone on the car as well as you could?

A. Who would pay for him. I had nothing to carry him with.

Q. What became of your money?

A. Didn't I have to live in Trinidad?

Q. What had become of your money? A. I had spent it.

Q. Hadn't you wired for more money?

A. What can I do on fifty dollars a month running around?

Q. That is what I want to know. Did you wire for any more money?

A. No, sir, I got some money I didn't wire for it.

Q. Who from? A. Ellsworth.

Q. How much did Ellsworth give you? A. Fifty dollars.

Q. The last time? A. Yes, sir, the last time.

Q. The second trip?

A. Yes, sir, and I stayed there four days and I left; went back to Walsenburg.

Q. Were you still afraid to stay in the light?

A. I didn't go there to Rye to stay that trip.

Q. I didn't ask you that?

A. Because Ellsworth wasn't there when I got there; I had to wait.

Q. You would be more uneasy with Ellsworth not there?

A. But his wife and the Rangers were there.

Q. Weren't you more uneasy during that four days?

A. I didn't intend to stay there.

Q. You were uneasy during that four days?

A. Their house, I wasn't in that little house then.

Q. You stayed in their house? A. In their house.

Q. What part of their house was it you stayed in?

A. They didn't have but two rooms, the new house wasn't done.

Q. You stayed in one room and they in another?

A. No, they had a tent waiting for the house to be built.

Q. You stayed in the new house? A. No, I didn't.

Q. I thought you said they had two rooms in that house?

A. In that little house.

Q. Did you say they had two rooms in that little house?

A. A little two-room house. They cooked in one, and then their front room, and then they had a tent out there they slept in; and lots more tents around there.

Q. Who stayed in the front room?

A. That is where I slept.

Q. Where did Ellsworth stay?

A. Ellsworth and his wife slept right back of their house in a tent, and the big house they were building was in front.

Q. Sadie, the truth is, from December, 1914, to this hour, you knew that Bartlett and Buell expected you to swear for them, didn't you? A. Why sure.

Q. Sure you did?

A. Sure, I had made a confession to the Government and what I said to the Government I was telling the truth there they knew would help them, I suppose, sure.

Q. Sadie, did you think you could kidnap anybody?

A. No, I went there to try it.

Q. Well, I know, but before you entered on this kidnapping business, had you ever kidnapped anybody?

A. No, I don't think I have.

Q. How many people have you kidnapped in your life?

A. I don't think I kidnapped anybody.

Q. You kidnapped a baby away back yonder, didn't you, Sadie? A. No.

Q. Sure? A. Sure, I am honest.

Q. Honest?

A. Sure, I am honest, I had a baby of my own, I didn't want to kidnap any more.

Q. Sometimes they want more than one?

A. No, I didn't, couldn't keep it.

Q. Didn't pay you enough? A. No, sir.

Q. Now, Sadie, when did you go into the kidnapping business?

A. After I went with Mr. Page, October 7th, he hired me to go and get Nancy.

Q. Didn't you testify that Mr. Long wanted you to kidnap Minnie? A. Wanted me to——

Q. Kidnap?

A. Steal Minnie and bring her to Oklahoma, three thousand dollars and bring her to Oklahoma, he didn't say kidnap, steal her.

Q. Steal her? A. Steal her.

Q. Sadie, how did you intend to steal her?

A. I had control over Minnie; she had no baby and I had control over her and had been a friend of hers, and Frank Long knew I did, knew he couldn't do anything with her as Captain McNab had her, and he knew I could get her away from there.

Q. How did you get that control over her? A. That is it.

Q. That is it? A. That is it, I will keep that.

Q. I demand that you tell it? A. I won't do it.

Q. You refuse to tell it? A. Yes, I do.

Q. Would it incriminate you? A. It would.

Q. Subject you to prosecution?

A. Yes, sir, and Minnie and myself both.

Q. Yourself and Minnie both?

A. Yes, sir, and I refuse to tell it.

Q. And in that way you got control over Minnie?

A. Yes, sir, in that way.

Q. She became your willing servant after that and she would do whatever you told her to do?

A. No, I hadn't seen her for a number of years.

Q. All right, you got this control? A. Many years ago.

Q. Away back yonder? A. Away back.

Q. What year? A. Away back.

Q. What year was it, name the year?

A. I won't tell that.

Q. That won't incriminate you?

A. It would incriminate me.

Q. I demand that she tell it.

A. I won't tell it, I won't tell it.

Q. Sadie, tell me the year? A. I won't, Judge.

Q. Sadie, tell me the year?

A. I would like to Judge, I can't.

Q. You want to be honest in this thing?

A. I want to be honest but I can't tell you.

Q. What year was it, Sadie?

A. Judge, I can't tell you. I refuse to tell you what place it was. No, Judge, I can't tell you.

Q. What place was it? A. I can't tell you.

Q. You got a grit one on her then?

A. She got one on me and I got one on her.

Q. Still got it on her?

A. Yes, sir, and she has got one on me.

Q. Exercising it now? A. No, sir.

Q. When did you turn it loose? A. I am keeping that.

Q. When are you going to play it, Sadie?

A. I expect my God will make me pay it.

Q. When? A. When I get ready to die.

Q. When you come to your death bed, you will plank up the truth, won't you? A. Between me and Minnie.

Q. But you are not going to do it until you get there?

A. Between me and her and she is not going to do it. If she did it will hurt somebody else.

Q. You have not figured on what that time will be?

A. When she dies.

Q. And when you die?

A. No, me or her either, but she will die in that secret, me and her both will.

Q. I would like to know what place it was that you put that hypnotic period on her? A. That is a secret, Judge.

Q. Did you ever pose a conjurer? A. No, sir, Judge.

Q. As a hoodo? A. No, sir, I don't know what that is.

Q. Passed hands before people? A. No, Judge.

Q. Can you look them in the eye and control them?

A. I don't think so.

Q. Now, Sadie, haven't you said several times if a person would look you in the eye long enough, especially a woman, you would control them? A. I can't control you, Judge.

Q. That is your misfortune, you can't control some people. A. Not all of them, Judge. They can control me too.

Q. Minnie exercises power over you?

A. Power over me, if she talks I have got one over her, if she talks.

Q. What is that power? A. No, Judge.

Q. Got a cord that binds you to the——

A. Between me and her.

Q. To the dead, a mystic cord that binds both of you to the dead? A. To the dead.

Q. And through the dead you have got that same?

A. I wouldn't say what that is through, I couldn't afford to tell anybody Judge, wouldn't do it.

Q. I am willing for you to tell it?

A. You wouldn't be if I would.

Q. Minnie is willing for you to tell it?

A. I know she wouldn't be.

Q. I am here to say that she is?

A. I am here to say that she wouldn't, I know more about her than you do.

Q. Now, then, when you told Bartlett that you were going to hunt Minnie, you knew that the moment that you laid your eyes on Minnie, you could throw a spell on her?

A. Throw a spell, she had one throwed on herself before I got there, and the sight of me brought it back to her.

Q. You could recall that to her? A. She hasn't forgot it.

Q. You could recall it?

A. I can never forget, I never can forget.

Q. You could recall it?

A. I can never forget, never on earth.

Q. You could recall it to her, and on that you could wake that memory and control her?

A. I didn't have to wake it; it hasn't never died in her.

Q. Sadie, you have got to answer my question, just make up your mind; I will stay here two months.

A. Judge, you will have to do it if you think I could tell that secret.

Q. I don't want you to tell a secret, I asked you if you knew when you went there, knew you could control Minnie still? Didn't you? A. No, I couldn't.

Q. Didn't you say that you had a grip on her?

A. I knew I had that on her, but I didn't think I could control her.

Q. Didn't you say the grip would put her under your control?

A. I said I could get her to do anything I wanted her to do, told Dennis and Rube.

Q. Under that grip?

A. I supposed so, I told Dennis and Rube.

Q. When you left this country to find Minnie, you knew when you found her that you could control her?

A. I knew she would do whatever I wanted her to do.

Q. Ain't that the same thing?

A. Yes, sir, the same thing.

Q. Then, when you said "Open the door, Minnie Atkins"——

A. She knew somebody knowed her a great many years ago, Judge.

Q. Did she understand that whisper? Come up, come up. A. I am not asleep, Judge.

Q. Don't hide your head, look at me.

A. What did you say?

Q. Open this door, Minnie Atkins? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you whisper anything to her? A. No, sir.

Q. She knew it was somebody from the olden days, didn't she Sadie? A. She did that, Judge.

Q. Yet, she had to take off your hat and hear your voice a minute before she knew you?

A. So many years since she seen me she did.

Q. But she knew when you spoke, it was a voice from the dead? A. Voice from the past.

Q. Voice from the deep and silent past?

A. From the deep and grim past, she knew it was somebody.

Q. A crime that you and she committed?

A. She and I committed.

Q. Now, you admit you and she committed a crime?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You will admit that? A. I will admit that.

Q. You don't claim any privilege?

A. I will admit that; incriminate myself to tell you what it was, that something.

Q. You admit that you have committed a crime with her?

A. I said it will incriminate me and I will say no more than that now, incriminate myself and her.

Q. Did you at any time mention that crime to her in Seattle? A. I did.

Q. Why haven't you told it before in this case?

A. I never have told it.

Q. Why didn't you tell here?

A. You are bringing it out of me right now, you are bringing it out of me.

Q. Sadie, when you were before the Government, when you testified before her officers, and you were making this confession, when you testified at the Receivership hearing, and when you gave your affidavit, why didn't you tell them privately——

A. I couldn't afford to Judge, that is why.

Q. They had offered you protection, hadn't they, Sadie?

A. The only thing that goes was what I had done then.

Q. Sadie, you knew you would be protected, didn't you?

A. No, I didn't, Judge.

Q. Sadie, this is the first time that you have ever intimated to any human soul that you had a shadow hanging over Minnie that you could control her will and her judgment?

A. Yes, sir, this is the first time that I ever mentioned it, you are pulling it out of me now but I won't tell the rest of it.

Q. I don't want any more? A. I refuse to tell it.

Q. You refuse? A. Yes, I refuse to tell it.

Q. Why was it, if that was so, when you came back—when you got back there, Minnie pulled you people out and told you to get out of there, you tried to make her tell a lie?

By Mr. German: I object to that as argument.

Q. Tell me that?

A. She taken me by the hand as soon as I got to the door and started to run in the kitchen; Hanford went there and throwed us apart, this man here; he said, Minnie, you must not talk to Sadie, yes.

Q. When you all went out there. Now tell me this now:

Sadie, you answered my questions very well yesterday, now make up your mind to answer my questions?

A. I will do that as far as I can.

Q. That is all I want. When you went up there afterwards to Minnie's house, she balled you out, didn't she?

A. After Mr. Hanford told Minnie——

Q. Don't make any difference who told her, you answer my questions? A. No, she didn't ball me out.

Q. What did she say?

A. Talking to Mr. Robertson and them.

Q. I don't care who she was talking to?

A. Didn't ball me out.

Q. Didn't tell you you couldn't come in there?

A. She wasn't talking to me.

Q. Did she tell you you had been there trying to make her swear a lie?

A. She might have been talking to them white men, Hanford was there.

Q. What did she say?

A. She said I am still the mother of Thomas Atkins, hadn't told me nothing.

Q. If I had a court here I would have you fined?

A. I can pay it if you did Judge.

Q. I am trying to treat you politely, I want you to answer my questions, you are a woman, if you were a man I would treat you differently.

A. Judge, I can stand about as much as a man can when it comes to fighting.

Q. I understand, I want you to answer my questions.

A. When it comes to fighting, I can do pretty much as you can.

Q. Now, Sadie, answer my questions?

A. Yes, sir, I will do that.

Q. When those people went in that house didn't Minnie ball them out? A. She did.

Q. What did she say to them?

A. I can't say to you all she did say.

Q. Tell me as near as you can what she said?

A. I can't tell you all she did say.

Q. Give me the substance of it, Sadie, as near as you can.

A. She said, Captain McNab has done quit and I am still the mother of Thomas Atkins, and the papers you left here have been torn up. There had been immunity papers left out there for her; I didn't see Minnie for four days.

Q. I know, what did she say there?

A. She didn't say nothing to me.

Q. What did she say to them?

A. Talking to Mr. Buell and Mr. Robinson.

Q. I understand, what did she say to them?

A. Telling them she was still the mother of Thomas Atkins.

Q. Didn't she say, Sadie you are a bunch of crooks?

A. Yes, she did, she knew who she was talking to, yes, she did.

Q. She said you are a bunch of crooks and I am still the mother of Thomas Atkins?

A. I am still the mother. If she had ever been the one she wouldn't have said——

Q. You are a pretty good argurer after all?

A. Yes, you will have to give it to me.

Q. Yes, I will pass it up to you. You say she did say that you are a bunch of crooks?

A. Yes, when Judge Montgomery came back, she didn't know that he was a Government officer, called him a crook.

Q. When you told her he was a Government officer?

A. I said this man is a Government officer.

Q. What did she say then?

A. I said this man, Mr. Hanford has got a power over you and don't let him put you in the penitentiary.

Q. Now, are you through your statement?

A. Through mine.

Q. Your statement?

A. No, sir, I said see Minnie, I told you I was working for the Government, this a Government officer and I will meet you at the court house in Oklahoma, and what I say, Minnie, don't blame me; and she said no, Sadie.

Q. And you and she parted friends?

A. We sat there and talked while Mr. Bartlett, Mr. Hanford and Mr. Robinson talked and Minnie and I sat over at the table, as Mr. Hanford will remember, and talked about Mrs. Richardson.

Q. Did anybody take you out of there?

A. No, nobody taken me out; Mr. Montgomery said, Well——

Q. Mr. Robinson took your arm and led you out, didn't he?

A. No, sir, Mr. Montgomery or nobody led me out. Mr. Montgomery, when he got up to go over to the Fort, said Minnie, this is Sadie James you are talking about, and said is this the woman—and she said, your lawyer——

Q. Sadie, Mr. Long had told you that Minnie was in the hands of the soldiers, hadn't he? A. Mr. Long?

Q. Yes? A. No.

Q. When you were talking about kidnapping her?

A. No, she was not in the hands of soldiers then.

Q. You knew that soldiers were guarding her, didn't you? A. Not then.

Q. When Long talked to you?

A. No, I didn't see Mr. Long any more after that Saturday.

Q. How much did Long offer you to steal Minnie?

A. Three thousand ($3,000.00) dollars to steal her and take her to Oklahoma.

Q. Three cold thousands. A. Three cold thousands.

Q. How were you going to steal her and get her?

A. Going out there and get her and persuade her to go to Oklahoma with me, I knew she would do it.

Q. You didn't call that stealing?

A. Mr. Hanford and Captain McNab got her papers, I would have to get her——

Q. You knew at that time that she was under the protection of Captain McNab, a Captain in the United States Army, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir, that is what he took her under his protection for, to rob her.

Q. Do you want to put that in there?

A. Yes, sir, I want to put that in there.

Q. You now state during the process of this investigation that Captain McNab, a Captain of the United States Army——

A. Yes, sir, the Captain.

Q. Intended to rob Minnie?

A. Yes, sir, I want to say nothing else but that; and Mr. Hanford.

Q. And Mr. Hanford?

A. Yes, sir, and Mr. Hanford thrown in.

Q. Mr. Hanford? A. Yes, and Captain McNab.

Q. Were bound together? A. When I got there——

Q. Bound together to rob this woman?

A. That is the only thing could have been; they knowed she had no baby; to get some money.

Q. You knew that Captain McNab was a Captain in the United States Army, didn't you?

A. That didn't make no difference.

Q. Didn't spell a thing to you?

A. Not a thing but money.

Q. You believe that officers in the United States Army would steal like anybody else?

A. Like anybody else, and lawyers too, they will do the same, Judge, to make some money; I have seen it too often.

Q. You feel that way by all humanity?

A. Not all lawyers, Judge, not all.

Q. Where are some exceptions?

A. Not all, Judge, I can't say some.

Q. Can you point out some exceptions to the rule, who wouldn't steal? A. I can't afford to do that.

Q. Yes, you can? A. I don't know that.

Q. I would like to know one?

A. I believe they are all in this case outside of Hanford and Frank Long are honest.

Q. You think so, do you?

A. Yes, sir, I know they are crooks.

Q. The balance of them you can in a sense vouch for?

A. No, sir, I believe you gentlemen are straight, but I believe Frank Long—I don't believe it, I know it, and know Hanford is a crook.

Q. Sadie, you look at me, don't you really believe I am trying to get you to tell the truth in this case?

A. Answer it any way I want to, Judge?

Q. Yes, I want you to tell me?

A. Yes, I believe, Judge, you think there is a Thomas Atkins, and you think I am lying, I believe you are honest in what you are trying to do.

Q. Sadie, you admitted about a dozen times that you were lying? A. Lying about there was a Tommy?

Q. You admitted that?

A. Yes, I admit that, lying all the way through. I believe you think there is.

Q. Now, Sadie, you went up to kidnap Nancy didn't you?

A. That was about October 9th, I think.

Q. Nancy is Judge Rosser's client, isn't she?

A. Yes, I did, Judge, and I believe the Judge here——

Q. Sadie? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you went into Minnie's house one day—Now, I don't care what day it was, you understand—? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, we will assume one day, you found a paper lying on the table?

A. Yes, found it, that they wanted her to sign.

Q. A paper there? A. Yes, I think there was two.

Q. Two papers there? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you say that that paper had some dates on it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, tell me again what dates that paper had on it?

A. What dates it was?

Q. Yes?

A. I don't remember whether it had that day—you mean about the year?

Q. Yes?

A. The facts that I was going to talk about in this case?

Q. Yes.

A. I think I talked to Mr. Meserve last winter, I believe.

Q. Last winter? A. I think so, yes, sir.

Q. Did Mr. Meserve tell you who he was representing?

A. No, he didn't, but I thought I knew.

Q. Well, who did you think he was representing?

A. I seen him with Mr. Buell a good deal and I thought that he was——

Q. You thought that? A. I thought so.

Q. You understand now that he was representing Mr. Bartlett and Mr. Buell?

A. I think so, I never seen him with Mr. Bartlett, I have seen him with Mr. Buell.

Q. Your understanding is that he represents Mr. Buell?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You talked with him last winter? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Talked with him since you have been here about the trial?

A. No, sir, not about what I am going to testify to.

Q. You have talked to him about the facts in the case since you have been here? A. Yes, sir, I did that.

Q. When?

A. I think that was the first few days they used me a week before last.

Q. Week before last when you first testified? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you talked with him since then about the case?

A. Yes, sir, three times.

Q. When? Did you talk with him night before last about the case? A. Night before last?

Q. Yes?

A. No, not about the case, no, sir. Night before last?

Q. Did you talk to him at all night before last? Did you talk to him last night about the case? A. I never seen him.

Q. Talk to him any time this week about the case?

A. I don't know whether I have or not.

Q. Sadie, you know; I don't. A. I know you don't, Judge.

Q. Well, I can't tell, you tell me?

A. I am trying to do that the best I know, sir.

Q. Well, think as long as you please, but tell me just exactly what it is?

A. No, sir, I haven't talked to him about what I am going to testify to.

Q. I didn't ask you about that, I ask you if you talked to him about this case?

A. Yes, sir, I talked with him about the case, yes, sir.

Q. When was the last time?

A. About this case, I believe yesterday I talked to him about the case, the last time, I think it was yesterday.

Q. What place, where was it?

A. Up here in the hall, yes, sir.

Q. You talked to him today any about it?

A. Today about the case, no, sir, not about the case, no, sir.

Q. Have you talked to Judge Allen about the case since you have been here? A. Today?

Q. About this case?

A. Yes, sir, I talked to Judge Allen about the case.

Q. When did you first talk with the Judge about it?

A. I talked to Judge Allen when I first talked to him I talked to Judge Allen and Mr. German last winter.

Q. I mean since you have been here?

A. I talked to them several times about this case, Judge.

Q. Now, when and where?

A. Well, let me see where it was.

Q. Now, figure it out and where did you talk to them about it? A. I think I talked to them Sunday, I believe.

Q. Last Sunday?

A. I think so, yes, sir.

Q. Last Sunday, let me see?

A. No, wait until I get it straight now whether it was last Sunday or not. No, I didn't talk to them last Sunday about it.

Q. You remember what date you talked to them?

A. Well, I don't.

Q. Understand, I am not objecting to your talking to Mr. German, he has got a right to talk to you when he wants to, so has Judge Allen. A. Yes, sir.

Q. I only want to know when you did it?

A. I don't remember when the last time was when I talked to them about it.

Q. Well, can you fix some date, some time?

A. I am trying to think about the last time I talked to them.

Q. Does it take you that long. How long has it been since you talked to these representatives of the Government, can't you fix that in your mind?

A. No, sir.

Q. You have talked to them since they have been here?

A. Yes, sir, but not about the case; talked to them several times.

Q. Well, I am asking you about the case, can't you fix it, can't you fix the time and place that you talked to them about the case?

A. I think I talked to them Monday about this case.

Q. Monday? A. Yes, sir, I think so.

Q. Where, in this house? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Once, twice, or how many times?

A. I think about once.

Q. You think it is not more than that?

A. No, I don't think it is more than that over the case.

Q. Sadie? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did you get these dates, 1885, into your head?

A. How did I ever get it?

Q. Yes, tell me. A. How came me to first start it?

Q. Yes?

A. I had a reason, Judge, but I can't tell you; it will incriminate myself if I tell you.

Q. That will incriminate you too?

A. That will incriminate me too if I tell how come me to start that date.

Q. You claim your privilege on that?

A. Yes, sir, I had to fix it at that date; I told Dennis——

Q. Had to fix it at that date? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You now refuse to tell me why you fixed that date?

A. Yes, sir, I will say that.

Q. Had you ever been down in the Creek Country?

A. No, sir.

Q. Didn't know anything about that? A. No, sir.

Q. Where did you get your information about the Roll. or 1895, down in the Creek Nation?

A. 1895 and the Roll?

Q. Yes? A. Where did I get it?

Q. Yes?

A. No, I didn't know—I didn't get that roll.

Q. Didn't you know the roll down there was called the Roll of 1895?

A. I didn't see it, I know Minnie went down there and drawed money.

Q. You didn't know anything about that roll?

A. No, I didn't know anything about it.

Q. Sadie, when you testified in this case last week, you said that Sallie Page told you to find the baby, Thomas Atkins, that was born in 1885? A. To find one?

Q. Yes? A. No, she didn't tell me to find one.

Q. To prove that?

A. He wanted me to prove it, say it was up in Leavenworth.

Q. Sally Page told you he wanted you to establish a birth in 1885? A. In 1885, yes, sir.

Q. To establish a death? A. Yes, sir.

Q. In the fall of '98 or the spring of '99?

A. In the spring of '99.

Q. Didn't you testify that, Sadie?

A. I did, Judge, but he said '99.

Q. Why did you say, when you testified before in the fall of '98 or the spring of '99, why did you do it?

A. Well, I don't know.

Q. You just guessing at it?

A. I was just guessing at it.

Q. Just guessing at it?

A. I know when he said he wanted him to die, in the spring of ninety-nine would be about age fourteen when he died.

Q. Why did you say on your direct examination that he wanted to find somebody that died in the fall of ninety-eight or the spring of ninety-nine?

A. I thought of a good many things since I testified.

Q. How did you think of it then?

A. It came in my mind, I suppose.

Q. The truth about it was your memory about it was hazy? A. I know he said ninety-nine, I know now.

Q. You are satisfied now he said ninety-eight?

A. I am not satisfied about it, he said to be born in eighty-five and to die in ninety-nine.

Q. You now change that? A. I am changing it now.

Q. You want it changed? A. Yes, I want it changed.

Q. So you didn't mean ninety-eight, but the spring of ninety-nine? A. Ninety-nine.

Q. What time in the spring?

A. Didn't say about the time, about the age of fourteen when he died; he and Dennis in there——

Q. Did he tell you what date he wanted him born? A. No, he didn't.

Q. You didn't know what date Tommy was to be born, did you Sadie? A. No, because——

Q. Wait. You didn't know? A. No, I didn't.

Q. Wanted it to be about a year—when he was born—— A. Who was born?

Q. Tommy? A. What Tommy?

Q. Wanted it to be a certain time from the time he was born but you didn't know the time, didn't know of his birth date, did you? A. He hadn't none.

Q. Page didn't tell you of a birth date, did he?

A. No, sir, because he knew we negroes had gotten one started.

Q. Never mind about you negroes, I will cover that directly. You didn't know the date Page claimed Tommy was born, did you? A. No, I didn't.

Q. So, you didn't know what time in ninety-nine he wanted him to die?

A. No, I didn't he didn't say what time.

Q. If you established he died the first day of March, ninety-nine that would have satisfied Page, wouldn't it?

A. To live long enough for an allotment.

Q. That would have satisfied Page, wouldn't it?

A. I don't know when the allotment was.

Q. Didn't you testify that he set the time in the spring of ninety nine? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Didn't tell you what time in the spring of ninety nine?

A. Just long enough for an allotment.

Q. When did you put that on, today?

A. I put that on it all the time, I put that on.

Q. Put that on when you testified before?

A. Yes, sir, I think I did. We had this case started before ever Mr. Page got hold of it.

Q. I am not talking about when you started it, I am talking about what Page said; when you saw that paper lying on the table you saw the dates on it?

A. Saw eighty-five on there.

Q. What else did you see on there?

A. 1899 on the paper.

Q. What part of ninety-nine?

A. Didn't say what part that I remember; I don't know that I remember what part it said.

Q. Do you know now the date that they had to die in 1899? A. No, I don't.

Q. You don't know that?

A. No, sir, I don't; I remember eighty-five on the paper and ninety nine, but I don't know what date.

Q. Don't know what date they had to die?

A. No, sir, I don't know what date was on the paper.

Q. Don't know what date they had to die?

A. No, sir, I don't know that, we didn't start no dates up there.

Q. You didn't care about the date?

A. When we first told that lie in Leavenworth, no, sir. We didn't.

Q. You were just going to find a baby there that was born and died? A. Wasn't going to find one?

Q. Make one? A. Yes, sir, build it up.

Q. Who was that boy in North Platte, Nebraska?

A. Railroad porter, I never seen him, that was a railroad man.

Q. What kind of looking man was that?

A. I never saw him. Dennis was telling Mr. Page about making him.

Q. You never saw him? A. No, sir.

Q. Now, Sadie, I want to travel with you a little?

A. All right.

Q. We will travel together a while? A. All right.

Q. You went to Los Angeles, didn't you, Sadie?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And there you tried your hand on a Tommy?

A. Tried it strong there because it was a big town.

Q. How many folks did you pick up there?

A. Picked up two or three men.

Q. What kind of looking fellows were they?

A. I don't know, I didn't care how they looked, just so they would lie.

Q. How did you want them to look?

A. Like a yellow man; we didn't want a white—we had said it was a nigger baby.

Q. You didn't want it to have straight hair?

A. No, sir.

Q. Kinky hair? A. No, sir.

Q. What kind of hair?

A. Pretty good hair and good fellow?

Q. Like yourself or my friend Coody's?

A. No, straight hair.

Q. I thought you didn't care about straight?

A. I wanted them to have good hair.

Q. What do you mean, you darkies in that country about Leavenworth, by good hair? Straight hair?

A. Straight hair.

Q. Every hair that aint straight is bad hair?
A. Bad hair.
Q. There aint no good hair but straight hair?
A. Straight hair.
Q. You wanted this boy to have straight hair?
A. Yes, look something like an Indian.
Q. Why didn't you tell me that just now?
A. That is what I wanted him to look like, an Indian.
Q. Was there anything else you wanted him to look like?
A. No, I don't think I wanted him to look like anything else.
Q. I thought you wanted him to look like a yellow man?
A. Lots of yellow negroes that looks like Indians, you know. My father looked like one; he was a half breed, but a negro just the same.
Q. Had darkey blood in him?
A. Didn't claim to have any negro blood at all, but he did.
Q. He couldn't get on the roll? A. No, sir.
Q. You couldn't either?
A. I didn't, I tried to but I couldn't, my mother's case is still pending.
Q. Rejected you? A. Rejected me.
Q. You tried to work yourself off as a Cherokee?
A. I am a Cherokee Freedman, I am.
Q. You tried to work yourself off, didn't you? And it didn't work? A. No, it didn't.
Q. They turned you down?
A. Turned me down but my mother's is still pending, her case is still pending.
Q. Still being contested?
A. Still contested, yes, sir.
Q. If she is an Indian, you are an Indian, aren't you?
A. Freedman.
Q. If she were a freedman you are a freedman?
A. Yes, sir, the reason they turned me down, I got too smart, I got sassy and they naturally cut me out.
Q. That is a mean fellow, Hastings?
A. Yes, sir, you got that.
Q. A mean fellow, isn't he?
A. Yes, sir, I got too smart.
Q. If you had kept your mouth and been reasonable, he would have let you in?
A. Yes, sir, I will get in some day anyway. That is what I got out of it for being so selfish.
Q. Now, when you called these men up in Los Angeles,—now, mark you—— A. Yes, sir.
Q. What would you say to them?

A. I had somebody there, and I would go around to saloons and different places, and in the hotels where I stopped, and ask people who was there if they knew of a man by the name of Tommy Atkins and would describe some kind of fellow to them, and they would say, I know a boy here by the name of Tommy Atkins, and I said I guess that is the boy I want. They thought it was the truth and would bring him to me.

Q. You found by the name of Thomas Atkins, two or three in Los Angeles? A. Yes, sir, several of them.

Q. And several of them in San Francisco?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Named Tommy Atkins? A. Yes, sir.

Q. So you went to saloons and found out these names?

A. Yes, sir, in saloons.

Q. And in boarding houses?

A. Yes, sir, and boarding houses and would ask them if they knew of anybody named Tommy Atkins.

Q. White boarding houses or colored?

A. No, sir, we had a negro case started.

Q. Now, I understand you, if you would go to a white place, you would see if there were any porter there?

A. I didn't care whether there was a porter or not.

Q. Try to get him at a white place?

A. No, I knowed better as to try to find him at white places.

Q. You confined yourself to the saloons and the colored boarding places? A. Yes, sir.

Q. In the City of Los Angeles? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Los Angeles, is a place of half a million people, isn't it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many people there did you go to—how many saloons did you go to there? A. Two or three.

Q. Did each one have a Tommy Atkins?

A. No, sir, they would tell me somebody they knew, they thought I was telling the truth; said I know a boy named Tommy Atkins, maybe it might be him; I described him.

Q. I want you to tell me one man in Los Angeles who told you he knew a Tommy Atkins?

A. I don't know that I could do it.

Q. Why didn't you get his name?

A. I didn't care about his name, all I wanted was to get a boy.

Q. Tell me where the saloon was and the street number?

A. No, I can't; the place I stopped at was Waldron.

Q. Give us the place? A. They had a Tommy Atkins.

Q. You haven't given the number yet?

A. I don't know the number of it.

Q. Do you know where you stayed?

A. I don't. If I had my cards I could tell you every place I stopped.

Q. Sadie, tell me why it is when you got to Seattle and Portland, you can remember not only the names and places, but the date, the day of the week and the hour of the day, and yet you can't tell me in Los Angeles a single man that you talked to?

A. Some of them dates I got down pretty good, got some of them down in my book.

Q. In your book, where is your book?

A. At home I reckon.

Q. Why didn't you bring it with you?

A. I didn't want it.

Q. Afraid it would incriminate you?

A. No, I am not, I am past making a Tommy Atkins?

Q. Now, Sadie, you can't name a single man that you talked to in Los Angeles, can you? A. No.

Q. Not a single being? A. No.

Q. Can you give me the number of a single saloon?

A. No, I don't think I can.

Q. Can you give me the name of a single boarding house that you stopped at in Los Angeles?

A. I haven't done it.

Q. You can do it?

A. No, I just run the streets around there.

Q. You wired Bartlett that you were still on the trail?

A. Yes, sir, I wired him a lie.

Q. Wired him a lie? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Told him to send you some money?

A. Yes, sir, and he sent it.

Q. How much did you call for then?

A. Two hundred.

Q. Two hundred? A. Yes, two hundred.

Q. Did he send it? A. He did.

Q. You got it before you left Los Angeles? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you go to San Francisco? A. I did.

Q. Who went with you to San Francisco?

A. My husband.

Q. Was your husband with you in Los Angeles?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was he helping you to run down Tommy?

A. No, he thought I was telling the truth, he didn't know until last winter that I was lying.

Q. You kept it from him? A. Yes.

Q. You deceived your own husband?

A. Sure, that wasn't nothing, me and Dennis pulled a trick and married on him and he didn't know it.

Q. Didn't know it, your husband?

A. He didn't know that.

Q. You and Dennis pulled a marriage right under his nose and he didn't know it? A. He didn't know it.

Q. Is that so? A. That is so.

Q. Your husband was your companion but he was simply a looker on in Dennis?

A. He thought there was a real Tommy, and sometimes he would ask——

Q. Would he go to these saloons?

A. I don't know where he went.

Q. You told him to go out and search for him?

A. No, he didn't search, he just asked for me.

Q. You were first Lieutenant or Captain? A. Boss.

Q. Captain and manager? A. I was boss.

Q. You were running the whole ship?

A. Because he wasn't in the play, it was me.

Q. You took that two hundred and went to Frisco?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you do in Frisco?

A. I stayed there about four days running around town.

Q. How many Tommy's did you find there?

A. I found two I think.

Q. In Frisco? A. Two I think.

Q. Name the places?

A. I couldn't name them places, but where I lived at and where I stopped I know where I stopped at in Frisco.

Q. Where did you stop?

Q. You got a place at a white hotel?

A. Right there at Frisco.

Q. And you were the only colored person that you saw at that hotel?

A. Only colored face that I saw in that hotel.

Q. They gave you a room? A. Yes, sir.

A. I stayed there about four days.

Q. You would go to saloons there?

A. I went on other streets there.

Q. You would go to saloons?

A. No, I didn't go to saloons.

Q. Why didn't you do that like you did in Seattle?

Q. Just would go up and down the streets, didn't see very many to ask; I think I run across two there.

Q. What saloons did you go to?

A. I don't know, no nigger saloons there.

Q. You would go in a white boarding house, why didn't you go in a white saloon?

A. No, I knew I couldn't start nothing in a white saloon, no colored men run saloons out there.

Q. Was that a colored saloon you went into in Los Angeles?

A. Yes, colored saloons. They called them cafe's, didn't call them saloons.

Q. Colored cafe's? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Wounded? A. Yes, sir, Cutneck George.

Q. He told you to go up that alley and find out something there?

A. No, sir, he told me I could get meals up there.

Q. You are talking about where you went to inquire?

A. About a Tommy. I just seen people on the street and was inquiring about Tommy.

Q. You would meet people at random?

A. I would just walk up to people, like I was hunting a real Tommy Atkins and describe him. I had a picture with me.

Q. In San Francisco, if you would see a fellow going down the street who looked pretty amiable, you would pull out that picture and say have you seen this boy before?

A. Yes, sir, I got that nervy Judge.

Q. You would say, have you ever seen this picture before?

A. Yes, sir, if it looked like a crook, I would do that.

Q. How many times did you do that?

A. I don't know how many times I did that.

Q. Sadie, don't you know that is a mighty slow way to find people?

A. That was him.

Q. Where is that picture?

A. The detectives got it and I think they gave it back to Mrs. Hamilton.

Q. Sadie, could you get it for me, I would like to see it.

A. The detectives took it away from me to go and run down Tommy; they thought it was Tommy; I told them a lie and told Mr. Bartlett a lie and they taken the picture to run him down.

Q. You met the detectives up there, and they told you, Sadie you are all blowed up this is a lie?

A. No, Mr. Bartlett sent for him, he didn't meet me.

Q. That detective told you you were blowed up?

A. No, sir, I didn't know it until I got back to Tulsa.

Q. You knew he told Bartlett?

A. I didn't know it until I got back to Tulsa. I thought he was believing me still he treated me so nice; he brought me clear back home to Tulsa.

Q. Well, while you were in Portland, did you get any money from Bartlett?

A. When I run around with the picture, yes, sir.

Q. How much money did you get there?

A. Fifty dollars or a hundred dollars.

Q. How much money did you skin Bartlett out of?

A. In Portland?

Q. No, on that trip, these trips?

A. I don't know, I got six or seven hundred dollars out of Bartlett, I don't know.

Q. Didn't you get more than that?

A. I beat him out of that much I know.

Q. And when Bartlett told you he would stand for Buell's contract, he told you he would forgive you for that six or seven hundred, ($600. or $700.) dollars, didn't he?

A. No, sir, he owed it to me on that contract.

Q. Sadie, you were lying to him all the time?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. You didn't think the man owed you money if you were lying to him all the time?

A. Yes, I did, he hadn't paid me for finding Minnie, and he owed me.

Q. He found out that you were lying to him all the time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And in the face of that, he stood for this three thousand dollar contract?

A. Yes, I took his word for it; he knew there wasn't none and he found out that I was lying.

Q. Well, you had Bartlett—did you find Tommy there—did you try? A. I tried, yes, sir.

Q. How many men did you find?

A. I didn't tackle, Bow-legs was doing the tackling.

Q. Did you go with him? A. No, sir.

Q. Bow-legs would go to the saloons?

A. He was running a place there himself.

Q. Did you go with him to saloons?

A. I don't know where he went, my husband would be with me and he would go to the hotel.

Q. About what time in the morning did Bow-legs show up? A. I don't know, sometime during the day.

Q. Do you know that he would show up in the morning?

A. Yes, sometimes at night.

Q. And report to you every morning?

A. No, not in the morning.

Q. Report to you at night? A. Sometimes.

Q. How did you find out what progress Bow-Legs was making? A. He would come and tell me.

Q. When would he come and tell you?

A. Sometimes in the morning and sometimes in the evenings, I guess.

Q. At your hotel? A. At my hotel.

Q. What hotel? A. The Golden West.

Q. Colored or white? A. Colored; five story hotel.

Q. You and your husband there together?

A. Paying nine dollars a week just for a room.

Q. Pretty stiff price, wasn't it?

A. I was living high.

Q. Living high? A. Yes, living high.

Q. Who was putting up the money, Bartlett?

A. I was skinning him then.

Q. Skinning him as you went?

A. Yes, skinning him as I went.

Q. Bow-legs finally reported that the thing wouldn't go?

A. No, the detectives came there before Bow-legs could get anybody started.

Q. What detectives?

A. Mr. Edwards. Mr. Bartlett brought them and took the picture away from me in Portland.

Q. Where were you when they took that picture away from you?

A. In the Golden West Hotel, took it away from me there.

Q. Bartlett and the two detectives came together?

A. Came together; Mr. Bartlett brought them down there; he told me two or three times, Sadie give me the picture, and I wouldn't do it.

Q. Were you in your room when they came?

A. The porter rang the bell and I would go in the reception room.

Q. Did you go to the reception room? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was anybody there then?

A. Mr. Bartlett and the two detectives.

Q. Sadie, what did Bartlett say—what was the first thing Bartlett said to you when you went down to the reception room? A. With the two detectives?

Q. He wasn't there except with the two dectectives, was he? A. Yes, he came first by himself.

Q. Let's find out that, did you see him when he first came?

A. I didn't know he was in town yes, I wired to Oklahoma for him.

Q. Sadie, did you see him before you saw him with the detectives? A. Yes, saw him once.

Q. At that same hotel? A. At that same hotel.

Q. At what time?

A. It must have been in the evening about four o'clock.

Q. What did you and Bartlett say then?

A. Mr. Bartlett said Sadie have you got trace of the boy, and I said yes he has gone to Butte, Montana.

Q. What did he say?

A. He said, well I will have to get somebody to run him down.

Q. Tell the whole conversation?

A. That is all he said about that then.

Q. That all that was said? A. About that then.

Q. Did he say good morning, Sadie?

A. He spoke to me.

Q. After he said he would have to get somebody to run him down, did he say good-bye?

A. He said he would be back.

Q. What did he say he was going to do?

A. Said he would have to get somebody to run him down.

Q. And the next morning you were called down to the reception room again? A. Again.

Q. And he had the two detectives with him then?

A. Two detectives with him, yes.

Q. Tell what occurred?

A. When I got in they were down stairs waiting for me and he introduced Mr. Edwards and Mr. Wright to me, and he introduced them to me, and he said Sadie I hired these two men, he said, you let them see that picture. I didn't want to do it, because I knew whose picture it was. Didn't know whose picture it was, but Mrs. Hamilton told me when I took the picture. I had to go back up stairs to get the picture and I started to tear it up, but I didn't, because I didn't want them to see it; and I brought it back and showed it to Mr. Edwards and he looked at it, and he passed it to Mr. Wright, and Mr. Wright said, Sadie let us have this picture, we can do more with it than you can, we can run this boy down; and I said no I rather you wouldn't take this picture, I got it from a friend of mine, it is hers and I told her I would send it back; and they said, we will see that they get it back all right, and they just took the picture.

Q. You showed it to them?

A. Yes, sir, I showed it to them.

Q. They wouldn't give it back to you?

A. Showed it to Mr. Edwards first and he passed it to Mr. Wright.

Q. He passed it to Mr. Bartlett?

A. No, he seen it before.

Q. After they passed it around did you ask them to give it back to you?

A. No, they said Sadie you had better let us have this picture, and I said no it is a friend of mine and I told her when I got through with it I would send it back; they said they could do more with the picture than you can and we will see that she gets it, they wouldn't give it back to me at all, I wanted it.

Q. They took it?

A. They kept that picture to run it down.

Q. Did they tell you right then that your story had blowed up?

A. No, not then; taken that picture the detectives; they ran that man down them two.

Q. Did Bartlett tell you to keep on and keep hunting?

A. No, not then.

Q. You were standing right there? A. No, I wasn't.

Q. Did you sever your relations from Bartlett right then? A. No, no.

Q. What did you do?

A. Stayed there until Crawley came, sent this Clara Kirk up there to see if I could see Minnie.

Q. How long did you stay with Bartlett after that?

A. He brought me clear back in the month of April after that. In July that was when he brought me back to Denver.

Q. Now, you still remained in Bartlett's employ did you Sadie?

A. Yes, sir, he carried me back, clear back to where—clear down to Denver.

Q. What day was that?

A. That was in July, about—I guess that must have been about July 22nd, maybe.

Q. Where was the next place that you got any more money from Bartlett?

A. I didn't get any more money from Bartlett, when he carried me back up to San Francisco, they were hunting for Mary Sapin, I wouldn't tell them where Mary Hamilton lived.

Q. Answer my question?

A. I got money from Mr. Bartlett in Los Angeles, fifty dollars there.

Q. Where was that?

A. When they left with the detectives taking me back home.

Q. Who did you go with? A. With him.

Q. What did you go back with Bartiett for?

A. He was going back to Rye, Colorado.

Q. Why did you go back with Bartlett?

A. Wasn't I going home.

Q. You had your husband with you didn't you?

A. Yes, sir, all three were on the same train, but he quit us at Pueblo.

Q. Why did you go back with Bartlett?

A. Because he was going on that train; I didn't know he found out I was lying, he had the big detective with him.

Q. When he gave you money at Los Angeles——

A. He had the big detective with him; this big detective run down Mary Spain.

Q. He found out you were lying before you got to Los Angeles, didn't he? A. No, he didn't.

Q. Did he find out in Los Angeles?

A. Must have found it out after we got to Los Angeles, after the big detective came.

Q. Why did he buy you a ticket to go home?

A. He didn't leave me out there broke, give me money.

Q. He wasn't that kind of man?

A. No, sir, after me doing like I had.

Q. He still wanted to take care of you?

A. See that I got back home.

Q. How much money did he give you?

A. I think it was fifty ($50.00) dollars.

Q. Did he tell you to come down Sadie I have bought you a ticket? A. No, he didn't tell me.

Q. Told you he wanted you to go home?

A. No, he asked me when I was going home and I told him.

Q. Told you that he was going on the same train?

A. He told me when he was going.

Q. And you took the same train? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Do you remember how much he paid for your ticket?

A. I had money, I wasn't broke.

Q. How much did you pay for that ticket?

A. I don't know whether it was forty dollars or how much, I don't know, bought my ticket back to Denver.

Q. Buy a sleeper too?

A. Yes, sir, think I was going to sit up in a chair car?

Q. Is there any Jim Crow law out there?

A. No, long as I could get a berth.

Q. Bought your ticket?

A. I had about three hundred ($300.00) dollars on me then.

Q. When did you get that three hundred from?

A. Saving it; I wasn't spending that money when I wired.

Q. Did you have three hundred on you that time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did you carry that money?

A. You don't mind where I carried that, I had it.

Q. You had it in a secret place? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did your husband know you had it?

A. No, he didn't, I wired Bartlett and he didn't know how much I wired for either.

Q. You had three hundred dollars in your pocket, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Yet, Mr. Bartlett give you more money to buy——

A. Yes, sir, all the time I was making him give me more money, yes, sir.

Q. You bought your ticket? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You and Bartlett got on the train together, didn't you? A. Yes, sir, we three.

Q. And you and he talked for how long, about two hundred miles?

A. Mr. Bartlett didn't pay so much attention to us coming back.

Q. You testified on your direct examination that he came and sat down by you? A. That was Betty.

Q. Didn't he sit down by you when you were coming from Los Angeles? A. Me and Betty.

Q. No, you think about yourself?

A. I will think about myself.

Q. I want you to do that, but didn't you sit down by Bartlett? A. No, I don't think I did.

Q. Well, then you have got another think coming, try it?

A. I expect I have got a lot of thinks coming.

Q. Well, try it?

A. I don't know whether he did or not.

Q. Sadie, didn't you and Bartlett talk together on that trip? A. No—— Yes, we did.

Q. Yes, you did. A. Yes, on that trip.

Q. You came to go in your sleeper——

A. I was right on the same car he was, in the tourist car.

Q. Where did you get your meals?

A. In the dining car, I did.

Q. Diner on that train? A. Diner on that train.

Q. That must have been a special train?

A. All them fast trains you know have diners on them.

Q. What road was it? A. Santa Fe.

Q. Golden State Limited? A. I don't know.

Q. Lightning Express?

A. I can't name them—the train.

Q. The California Meteor?

A. I am not going to name no train, because I don't know.

Q. A fast one, wasn't it?

A. Yes, fast train, leave out there about seven o'clock.

Q. You and he had a berth in the tourist car?

A. Not him and I alone, there is another——

Q. Any other sleeper on there besides the tourist sleeper? A. Pullman, sure, of course.

Q. The Pullman and the Tourist?

A. We rode in the tourist car.

Q. Bartlett rode in the tourist car, didn't he?

A. Yes, but——

Q. But there were nice sleepers on there?

A. Yes, but Hugh Bartlett don't try to live like a heap of people, he takes the cheapest thing.

Q. The cheapest thing he could get?

A. He did it out there.

Q. Not a high flyer? A. No.

Q. He don't fly at all?

A. I guess he don't, he dresses like a very common man.

Q. But he put up the money whenever you called for it?

A. Yes, sir, he was honest when he did that.

Q. You and he got on that sleeper, one of these willow seats? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Old fashioned sleeper? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Bartlett was in there, served meals in that car?

A. No, back in the diner.

Q. You went back there? A. Sure.

Q. How many meals did you take with Mr. Bartlett?

A. I never took meals with him.

Q. Now, Sadie? A. I never ate with him.

Q. Who did you eat with? A. My husband.

Q. Mr. Bartlett go in at meals with you?

A. No, he just took coffee or something like that; don't think Bartlett is going to spend fifty or seventy-five cents.

Q. Is he a skin flint?

A. No, I was spending it though.

Q. He lived on coffee and sandwiches and things?

A. You, bet you. That is all I seen him do.

Q. You were taking a good square meal every time?

A. I was putting it on in the diner.

Q. Eating beef steak? A. I was past that.

Q. What did you eat, I would like to know?

A. Eat chicken and everything else. My meals would cost me a dollar and a half sometimes.

Q. Sure enough?

A. Mine and my husband's together.

Q. Did you order a chicken for breakfast?

A. No, I don't know what I had for breakfast, pick up the bill of fare,—nothing costing me nothing, I ordered it, the first time I was living so high I thought I would call for it.

Q. And poor old Bartlett was back there eating cheap stuff and drinking coffee?

A. That is what I was doing, I was living on his money.

Q. Didn't you invite him to take a single meal with you, Sadie? A. Oh, no.

Q. He looked hungry?

A. I thought he could buy his own stuff.

Q. He looked like a man half starved?

A. He looked like he was all right, he looked like he was satisfied.

Q. Didn't you tell Mr Bartlett, Mr. Bartlett you ought not to be living on sandwiches and coffee?

A. No, he knew how he ought to spend his money and I couldn't tell him that.

Q. You couldn't remonstrate with him at all?

A. I didn't care how he did.

Q. Now, Sadie, you had a seat in that tourist car, didn't you?

By Mr. German: I object as repetition.

A. I got my sleeper all the way through.

Q. You had a seat? A. Yes.

Q. You and your husband had a seat?

A. We had seats together.

Q. When Mr. Bartlett would come out and sit down and talk to you?

A. He didn't have to come, he was in the car with me.

Q. When did he come to your seat?

A. I don't know, he was talking to Will a good deal, we had two seats.

Q. Do you know whether he came there to talk to you the first day?

A. I wouldn't say, the day, I don't know.

Q. Did he come over and talk to you in the evening or morning? A. Oh, I don't know.

Q. He did come? A. He did come.

Q. Your husband there when he talked to you? A. Yes.

Q. Did you get your husband to get out of the way?

A. What did he want to do that for?

Q. You were talking about Tommy?

A. Certainly, what did I want to make my husband get out of the way for?

Q. Anything else but Tommy? A. Nothing but Tommy?

Q. He knew at that time that you had bitten him?

A. Yes, but he had another thought coming. He knew there wasn't no Tommy, but thought I knew a whole lot about there wasn't none, and he thought he would treat me good and bring me back home.

Q. He figured you had something that you hadn't coughed up yet?

A. That wasn't known, and he treated me nice.

Q. Anyhow, after he had found out you had swindled him out of this money? A. Yes.

Q. And lied to him? A. Lied to him.

Q. And had this junketing trip all at his expense, he still stuck to you?

A. I don't know for sure that Mr. Bartlett ever believed them detectives, I don't know how he believed.

Q. Now, Sadie, don't let's quibble; You told me he found out in Los Angeles that you had bit him?

A. But he never told me nothing about it until we got back to Muskogee, here in August.

Q. When did you find out and look Bartlett in the face and say, Mr. Bartlett I have been a liar from beginning to end? A. I don't know; I ain't never told him.

Q. Sadie, haven't you ever admitted it to him?

A. No, when I made my confession to Mr. Montgomery, I never told anybody but him; Mr. Bartlett, I never told him that.

Q. You told Mr. Buell? A. What?

Q. That you lied to Bartlett?

A. Yes, but I never told him in what way.

Q. You told him you were lying all the time?

A. I told him that I was telling them stories, but I didn't tell him in that way, I didn't think that was their business.

Q. How far did you go? A. Where?

Q. On this trip from Los Angeles, where did you get off?

A. I came to Denver.

Q. To Denver? A. Yes.

Q. Where did you go when you got to Denver?

A. Went to Claude Hamilton's I think.

Q. What did you go back to Hamilton's for?

A. To tell him had he heard from his wife. I had carried her to Los Angeles on the first trip going out.

Q. Mrs. Hamilton agreed to stand for these lies of yours?

A. She didn't know they were lies?

Q. Didn't she?

A. No, she said she knew that dead one, but I didn't, but she said when and where could Minnie had a son in Leavenworth?

Q. She told you that Minnie never had a son?

A. No, she knew that dead baby.

Q. Didn't you testify that she said Minnie never had a son except that dead baby?

A. She didn't say about the dead baby, she said when and where; wouldn't even tell me the secret about the dead baby; said when and where could Minnie have had a baby.

Q. Did Mrs. Hamilton tell you that she wouldn't swear for you? A. Did she tell me that?

Q. Yes?

A. I asked her would she help me identify that picture.

Q. Sadie, now you told me didn't you that you got that picture of Minnie from Mrs. Hamilton? A. I did.

Q. That is it? A. I did.

Q. You never got any picture from Minnie away back yonder, did you? A. Why didn't I in Leavenworth?

Q. Where abouts? A. When she worked at Hyde's.

Q. Tell me the time and place that she gave you that picture? A. I worked three months in that neighborhood.

Q. Where is it?

A. If I hadn't had it, I wouldn't have got it from Hamilton's.

Q. Where is that picture? A. I don't know.

Q. Did you throw it away? A. I don't know.

Q. Burn it up? A. I can't tell you.

Q. Did you look for it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You had the picture? A. Years ago? Yes, sir.

Q. Years ago? A. Years ago.

Q. Taken at Carlisle? A. Taken at Carlisle.

Q. You don't know what you did with it? A. No.

Q. Whether or not you burned it up? A. No.

Q. Or lost it? A. No.

Q. And you never searched for it? A. No.

Q. Didn't care anything about it?

A. No, she gave it to me, I didn't care nothing about it. I did then.

Q. You can't account for that picture at all now, can you?

A. I didn't account for it then, and I don't account for it now.

Q. I would like to know—— You remember with such distinctness about things—I want you to tell me right where she gave you that picture, what place in Leavenworth?

A. She gave me that picture at Hyde's when she worked there.

Q. What place in Hyde's house did she give you that picture? A. In my house when she was working at Hyde's.

Q. Came over to your house and gave it to you?

A. I was working at this corner with Haven's, and worked there about a month after Minnie came, and I quit working there October 4th, and didn't leave town until November 22nd, and when I quit working close to where Minnie was about the 4th of October, I didn't see her any more until I came back, had been gone about five months.

And thereupon, the noon recess is taken until two o'clock, P. M.

And thereafter, and at two o'clock, P. M., further testimony is taken, the witness SADIE JAMES, being recalled, as follows:

Further Cross Examination by Mr. Stuart.

Q. Sadie, who was it that gave you the two hundred dollar check? A. When?

Q. At Tulsa, when you went up to get the money on the Page contract?

A. I think, I won't swear, but I think it was Mr. Eberle.

Q. Mr. Eberle? A. I think so.

Q. Do you know who signed the check? Did Mr. Page sign it? A. I thing he did, I am not sure.

Q. You think he did?

A. I think he did. Yes. I believe he did.

Q. Mr. Page?

A. I think so, I can't say whether he did or not.

Q. That is your best judgment?

A. Yes, that is my best judgment.

Q. Mr. Page came in and told Mr. Eberle to make out the check?

A. He called some one, I ain't sure, but I think he was the one.

Q. Who do you think it was if it wasn't Eberle, who was it? A. It might have been Mr. Long, I don't know.

Q. One of the clerks in there?

A. Some one that belonged in the office.

Q. Told him to come in, and then you think Mr. Page signed that check for two hundred ($200.00) dollars?

A. Somebody signed it, because I went over to the Exchange National Bank and got that cashed.

Q. Is this the check right here? A. No.

Q. That ain't it?

A. This is two hundred ($200.00) dollars right here.

Q. That it?

A. I guess so. That looks like the check, Sadie James.

Q. Is it the check?

A. Well, I can't swear whether it is the check or not.

Q. Does it look like it, does it look like it, Sadie?

A. Yes, this looks like it.

Q. Looks like it? A. Looks like it.

Q. Mr. Josey's name is signed there, isn't it?

A. He must have—well, I don't know who signed it.

Q. His name is signed to that check isn't it?

A. His name is signed to this.

Q. Well, when you say you think Mr. Page signed it, you made a mistake, didn't you?

A. If this is the check, yes, sir.

Q. Then, you have certainly failed in your memory, haven't you?

A. Yes, about who signed that check; he called, I thought, Mr. Eberle, I am not sure; I said Mr. Josey could have signed it, because Mr. Page called somebody over the 'phone and he came in, I think it was Mr. Eberle, I think.

Q. You said a few moments ago it was either Eberle or Long? A. I said I didn't know who it was too.

Q. That is your signature on there, isn't it, Sadie?

A. Yes, that is my signature there, that is it.

By Mr. Stuart: You may mark that now, Defendant's Exhibit.

Q. Sadie, after you made your confession in December, 1914, you went west, didn't you?

A. Yes, afterwards, yes, sir.

Q. After you made your confession you went West?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, tell us who went with you on that trip West?

A. Mr. Buell and Mr. Robinson.

Q. Who else now?

A. When I got to Portland, I met Mr. Montgomery.

Q. Mr. Montgomery? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, then, when you got to Portland, Mr. Buell, Mr. Robinson, and Mr., who else? A. Mr. Montgomery.

Q. And Mr. Montgomery was with you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you started out on that trip, how did you come to go on that trip with these men?

A. Why, Mr. Buell and Mr. Robinson asked me to go.

Q. Asked you to go? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What for, Sadie?

A. What for? To get Minnie to tell the truth; I told them that she would confess that she had no Tommy Atkins.

Q. That she would confess?

A. That she didn't have none, and that she would confess it, yes, sir.

Q. And they all went along with you to hear her make the confession, is that right?

A. That is what Mr. Buell and Mr. Robinson went along for.

Q. To hear Minnie? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was Mr. Montgomery doing there?

A. I suppose he was going out to hear her tell the truth and he would give her immunity.

Q. Had you made arrangements for immunity to be given Minnie? A. How could I?

Q. Had you heard anybody agree to give her immunity?

A. No.

Q. What made you think that Mr. Montgomery was going along to give her immunity?

A. He couldn't be going for anything else, I thought she was going to tell the truth and quit sticking to that lie which she did.

Q. And you took Buell and Robinson along to hear her tell the truth?

A. Yes, sir to stop telling a lie and tell the truth.

Q. A lie that you asked her to tell?

A. No, Captain McNab and Mr. Hanford had got her to tell.

Q. And you asked her to tell one too?

A. I asked her to always say she had one but the Government found out she wouldn't do it.

Q. Sadie, didn't you say the last thing when you left Minnie there, in 1914, on that first trip, didn't you say Minnie you keep on swearing and don't ever take it back that you had a boy named Tommy Atkins?

A. I said you always say it and I will keep the secret.

Q. Always say it and I will keep the secret?

A. Always say it and I will keep the secret.

Q. Now, you got it into your head after you made a confession, that you could go out and make Minnie take that back? A. I couldn't make her take it back.

Q. But you could persuade her to take it back?

A. I didn't see her until after the confession.

Q. You got it into your head that you could get a confession? A. No, I couldn't make her take it back.

Q. Who was going to make her take it back? Any person with you and Robinson?

A. I expected her there on that occasion to quit lying.

Q. You expected you could make her make that confession?

A. Why she will later on; the truth will out, yes, sir, it will out.

Q. The truth will out? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You mean the "Truth crushed to earth will rise again?"

A. Yes, sir, McNab and Hanford can lie on top of the truth, but it will come out.

Q. Now, you went up there with the understanding—now, listen—— A. Yes, sir.

Q. With Robinson and Buell? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That you could persuade Minnie to tell the God's truth? A. No, I didn't tell them that, no, sir.

Q. Stop right there, who was going to persuade her?

A. I guess they was; they taken me to her.

Q. What did you go for?

A. I only went with them and I knowed she would do it, couldn't help but do it.

Q. How did you know?

A. I knew Minnie couldn't stand up with that lie.

Q. You told her to tell the lie?

A. Yes, sir, I had told her to tell the lie.

Q. Stick to it as long as you live?

A. As long as I lived and I wouldn't tell it and I am telling it.

Q. You told her to stick to that lie?

A. I told her to stick to that lie, and she took it back when they got there.

Q. Wait a minute, I will let you tell that directly.

Q. You told her to stick to the lie, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. Stop right there. And you expected her to stick to the lie, didn't you? A. I did.

Q. You made your confession?

A. Told the truth about it.

Q. And after you were promising three thousand dollars, you thought you could make her take it back, didn't you, Sadie? A. No, I didn't.

Q. You didn't? A. I didn't.

Q. What made that change come over your soul?

A. I didn't want, after I had made a confession and told the secret on her for her to be prosecuted for sticking to a lie; I wanted her to know that I had told it.

Q. You had felt this way; you had a change of heart, didn't you? A. Felt sorry for her, yes, sir.

Q. And had a change of heart in December, 1914?

A. After I got free, yes, sir.

Q. I say you had a change of heart? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it took three thousand dollars and a promise of immunity to bring about that change of heart?

A. The promise of immunity wasn't it, I was running from the law for telling that lie.

Q. And three thousand dollars?

A. Not the three thousand dollars I got from them.

Q. Did your conscience hurt you?

A. Yes, sir, if you got to lying now you would feel the conscience.

Q. When did that conscience first strike?

A. In Leavenworth with Dennis and Rube. I knew that all along.

Q. But the conscience didn't take on you until December, 1914, did it? A. Oh, yes, Judge.

Q. If didn't take, did it? A. Yes, Judge.

Q. Sadie, you didn't think anything until December, 1914?

A. Yes, Judge; but, Judge, after I first started to lying and Fred Cook commenced to run around, and Mr. Page cooked up his lie, I thought I was safe, but when Bettie was hooked up with Judge Allen, I had to run again and leave my home.

Q. Sadie, it was not conscience that made you cough up. was it?

A. No, sir, it was the conscience of that lie down in here.

Q. How far down?

A. So deep down that after that immunity raised——

Q. Deep as you could get it? A. Deep as I could get it.

Q. Away down there you heard the conscience talking?

A. Some more lies yet, some others.

Q. You haven't coughed them up?

A. You will make them tell it.

Q. You said some other lies? A. Some others.

Q. You told all you knew?

A. I am holding some of them; another secret.

Q. You are going to keep that until judgment?

A. Until judgment, holding another secret.

Q. Now, Sadie, when that conscience struck and you coughed up this thing in December, 1914, just after you did that you took the train with Robinson and Buell and started West? A. I did, a few days, maybe a week.

Q. Yes, you went? A. Yes, sir, I done that.

Q. And your sole object in going out there was to see that Minnie would take back what she said?

A. I didn't go to her.

Q. That was your object though?

A. I told them to go to her.

Q. That was their object?

A. To get her to tell the truth, yes, sir.

Q. And to take back what she said?

A. And to tell the truth; the lie that I told her to stick to, to take it back.

Q. To take back the lie that you put in her mouth?

A. Yes, sir, and the lie that she was telling.

Q. The lie that you put into her mouth? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You put that lie in her mouth?

A. That she had Tommy Atkins?

Q. Yes, sir?

A. She and me both: Minnie and I both, I did it.

Q. Now, when you and Buell and Robinson went out there, did you make her take back that lie?

A. I didn't see her at all.

Q. I don't care whether you saw her at all, that is what you went out there for?

A. Yes, sir, that is what I went out there for.

Q. That is the point. Now, when you started on that journey, to justify your conscience, where did you stop the first time? A. Stop where?

Q. Stop on that trip the first time?

A. Stopped at Mary Hamilton's in Los Angeles.

Q. Who was with you then?

A. Mr. Buell and Mr. Robinson.

Q. Did you go out and see Mary?

A. Yes, later on after she made a confession to them.

Q. Well? A. Yes, sir, I saw her the day I left.

Q. You all went out to see her, didn't you?

A. I didn't go out there first no, sir.

Q. Did they go out first?

A. Yes, and saw her the day before I saw her.

Q. Did you tell her that they were coming?

A. No, sir, I didn't see her, I didn't know they were going to take me there; I didn't know they were going to take me to Los Angeles at all.

Q. That was the first place you stopped?

A. The first place we stopped.

Q. They went out first to see Mary? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did Mary do?

A. They told her what I had said, they wanted to see if I was telling the truth, if that picture I had was a friend of hers, and she told them yes, and they asked if she ever knew of Minnie having Thomas Atkins and she told them no.

Q. What picture are you talking about?

A. About the last picture I got from Mary Hamilton, the boy's picture, a man about twenty five years.

Q. They wanted to see Mary, and did Mary make a confession? A. She didn't have any confession to make.

Q. You said a moment ago she made a confession?

A. She didn't have any confession because she wasn't in the case.

Q. Why did you say she made a confession?

A. I don't know why, she didn't have none to make.

Q. You take that back?

A. She didn't have none to make.

Q. If you said she made a confession, you made a mistake?

A. Sure, I did, because she didn't have none to make.

Q. Why did you take these men to her?

A. She knew Minnie at Carlisle, and knew her before she left the town and they wanted to know if she knew Minnie ever had a son named Tommy Atkins.

Q. You went out to see her after they went out?

A. Mrs. Hamilton asked where I was——

Q. You did see her? A. After they saw her.

Q. What occurred between you and Mrs. Hamilton? Tell that.

A. They taken me out there and left me there.

Q. I want to know now what was said there, tell it all to us.

A. I said to her, I said, Mrs. Hamilton, I said, I have told you a lie, I said, I told you that Minnie had a negro baby in Leavenworth, named Tommy Atkins, and I said it was all a lie, Mrs. Hamilton, and she said Mrs. James I thought you were telling me the truth, and I said no I wasn't. That is all. I told her I was telling a lie.

Q. Did you tell her, Sadie—now listen—— A. Yes, sir.

Q. That you had confessed? A. No, sir.

Q. Tht you had lied?

A. I told her I lied, I didn't tell her I had made a confession and got immunity, I didn't want her to know it.

Q. You said you had some immunity papers, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where are they? A. At my house.

Q. What sort of papers are they, I want to know.

A. Judge if you will give me time I will bring them down in the morning.

Q. Will you do that? A. Yes, sir, I will do that.

Q. How many have you? A. I aint got but one.

Q. You have kept them all the time? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You didn't tell her that you confessed?

A. No, sir, I just told her I told her a lie.

Q. Did you tell her you had been offered three thousand dollars to find the truth?

A. No, sir, I didn't tell her, I didn't want her to know that.

Q. After you left there, where did you go?

A. Went to Portland.

Q. Went to Portland? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you do there?

A. Didn't do anything only met Mr. Montgomery there.

Q. That is where Montgomery joined you?

A. Met us, yes, sir.

Q. Did you have a talk with Mr. Montgomery there?

A. No, sir, I don't think I staid there long enough.

Q. Well did you ride on the train with him?

A. Yes, sir, they were out of the car with me though.

Q. Did you talk to anybody in Portland

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you go out to see anybody in Portland?

A. No, sir, we got there Tuesday, I think we went Tuesday night.

Q. Tuesday night? A. I think so.

Q. Didn't do anything there? A. No, sir, nobody to hunt up in Portland.

Q. Then where did you go? A. Went to Seattle.

Q. Where did you all stop at Seattle?

A. I can't tell you where all they stopped, I told you where I stopped.

Q. At the same place? A. No, my goodness!

Q. In the same old place?

A. No, sir I stopped at the Rex, Chinaman running the place.

Q. Where is that? A. Have you been out there?

Q. I haven't been out there.

A. Professor Johnson perhaps can tell you.

Q. Well, Coody isn't under oath, you tell me yourself?

A. I don't know, it is a big hotel there.

Q. Called the Rex?

A. Called the Rex. Now, Judge, in the morning I am going to bring you a card everywhere I stopped, I taken a house card of those places.

Q. I will be glad if you will do that, but at the present writing, confine ourselves to our memories.

A. I understand.

Q. You stopped at the Rex? A. At the Rex.

Q. Did you take a little souvenir from everywhere you stopped?

A. Took a card, that wasn't the same place that Bettie stopped.

Q. You stopped at the Rex? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know where that was?

A. No, sir, I don't know the street; a little hotel, a Chinaman they run it, about five stories high; colored and whites staid in it.

Q. You stopped there? A. Yes, sir, I stopped there.

Q. Where did Mr. Robinson and Mr. Montgomery and Mr. Buell stop?

A. I don't know the hotel, Mr. Hanford knows it, I don't.

Q. You don't know it?

A. No, sir, I don't know the name of it.

Q. Did Judge Allen show up out there? A. No, sir.

Q. Never did? A. No, sir.

Q. Any representative of the Government show up out there? A. Nobody but Mr. Montgomery.

Q. You knew Mr. Montgomery was from Judge Allen's office, didn't you? A. I didn't know whose office.

Q. Didn't he tell you that he represented the Government?

A. Yes, sir, but I didn't know whose office he was out of out there.

Q. Had you ever been down to a hearing down there?

A. Not then.

Q. Not then? A. No, sir.

Q. You knew Mr. Montgomery was a government officer?

A. He said he was.

Q. Claimed that he was?

A. If he didn't, I wouldn't have talked to him.

Q. Did you go down and register at the Rex? A. Yes, sir.

Q. By your self this time? A. By myself this time.

Q. Your husband wasn't with you?

A. No, sir, wasn't with me.

Q. You staid at the Rex? A. Staid at the Rex.

Q. When did you communicate, after that for the first time, with Buell, Montgomery, and Robinson?

A. After they got me a hotel, after I got my hotel?

Q. Yes?

A. I think we got in there in the night—no, early in the morning, I believe, and I don't think I saw them until that night. I am not positive now, but I know I didn't see them any earlier than that. I think that night.

Q. What did you have to say to them that night?

A. That night?

Q. Yes, what did you all talk about?

A. Talking about the case; I think they had been to see Minnie then, I think.

Q. You think they had? A. I believe they had.

Q. Did they say they had? A. I can't say for sure.

Q. Your best recollection is that they told you they had been to see Minnie that day?

A. I don't know whether it was the first day or the second day; I was there four days, and I am not going to say the first day.

Q. Anyhow, when you saw them, they told you they had seen Minnie?

A. Yes, sir, I think they had seen Minnie; I think they had been out.

Q. Now, then, did you see Minnie?

A. I didn't see Minnie until the day I left; I was there four days before I saw her.

Q. What was the reason you didn't see her?

A. What did they want me to see Minnie for?

Q. Sadie, you went out there to make Minnie take back that lie? A. I didn't do no such thing.

Q. You went there?

A. I went out there but not to make her take it back.

Q. You went out there to persuade——

A. You know how come me to go out there?

Q. You already told me.

A. Mr. Hanford stated that we came out to Captain McNab's.

Q. After you got to Seattle? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you left there to go to Seattle and make her take it back?

A. Not to make her, because I couldn't make her do it, Judge.

Q. Persuade her?

A. I didn't see Minnie, Mr. Hanford asked us to come out there.

Q. To ask her to take it back? A. I didn't see her.

Q. What did you go for?

A. Just to be honest, to have me right with them, I expect.

Q. Honor to have you right with them?

A. I rode with them and I expect——

Q. That is just what I thought. Just the honor to have you right with them? A. Yes, sir, it was an honor.

Q. Well, I am not prepared to say it wasn't A. No, sir.

Q. But still, Sadie, they took you along, didn't they?

A. After they got the honor to take me, yes, sir.

Q. After they got the honor to take you?

A. Yes, sir, they took me.

Q. Who put up the money?

A. I didn't, I don't know who put it up; Mr. Robinson had my ticket.

Q. Mr. Robinson got your ticket?

A. He had my ticket bought.

Q. Who paid your hotel bill?

A. I had about forty dollars when I left.

Q. What became of that three hundred?

A. My goodness, man, I had done made a lot more money since then; gone to Leavenworth and drawn on Dennis and my money; we had money up there on this old——

Q. How much more money?

A. You remember I got about a hundred dollars on that old soldier.

Q. You had a pull up there?

A. Yes, sir, got a pull until it run out.

Q. You had about forty dollars when you went out there, when you started?

A. Yes, sir, I had more than that I guess.

Q. You could have had and you didn't?

A. No, sir, I had spent some of that money; I don't think I had over forty dollars when I started.

Q. What did you do with that forty dollars on that trip?

A. Spent it.

Q. What for? A. To eat and get me a room.

Q. Well, you got the money back?

A. No, I didn't get a penny in that.

Q. Didn't somebody pay?

A. On the train they paid my railroad fare and bought me something to eat on the train, I didn't pay that.

Q. Didn't they pay for your hotel?

A. No, sir, I paid that after I got out there. They paid for my trip on the train and meals on the train.

Q. You never got the money back?

A. I never got it back then; I guess I got it back; I wasn't getting none then.

Q. You had a sort of an idea that you would get it back sometime and you did get it back?

A. Sometime, yes, sir. I thought I would get it back.

Q. And you did get it back. So when you got out there, you just sat still and let them work it?

A. I sat still in that hotel, never went on the street.

Q. Let them work it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You didn't see Minnie at all?

A. I didn't want to see her.

Q. You didn't want to see her?

A. Didn't want to see her.

Q. You let them try it? A. Let them try it, yes, sir.

Q. Is that your handwriting, Sadie? A. That is.

Q. That is your handwriting?

A. That is mine. This isn't; this is mine; no, that isn't mine.

By Mr. Stuart: Mark that. (Marked Defendant's Exhibit 6).

Q. I will read you this one, Sadie, which you admit is yours? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Seattle, Washington, Saturday, December 19th, 1914. Mrs. Minnie Folk: I want to see you. You meet me at the post-office——

A. Yes, I sent that note, I sure sent it.

Q. I thought you said you didn't want to see her?

A. She was to be at the bank the next morning at ten o'clock, and I did send that note.

Q. You said a few minutes ago that you didn't try to see Minnie?

A. Yes, I did, but I did send that note, and the boy said her husband snatched it away from her.

Q. You did try to see her?

A. Yes, and the boy said that he snatched it away from her.

By Mr. Blakeney: I move to strike out what she said as not responsive.

Q. You expected to see her the next morning at the bank?

A. She was coming to the bank with Mr. Montgomery the next morning.

Q. What is the date of that, Saturday?

A. Yes, she was going to be there the next morning.

Q. The next morning is Sunday?

A. She was to be at the bank.

Q. The next morning, Sunday, at the bank?

A. She was to be at the bank with Mr. Montgomery.

Q. Didn't you say the next morning?

A. She was to be at the bank that morning; she was to come in and get that money, it couldn't have been the next morning.

Q. You take that back, do you?

A. She was to be at the bank that morning or some morning.

Q. Sunday morning, is that it?

A. No, to be at the bank that morning; that note, I think that note was sent about eight o'clock that morning; about eight o'clock that Saturday morning.

Q. So, now, Sadie you realize that you are mistaken when you say that you didn't try to see Minnie, don't you?

A. I had seen her then.

Q. Why, you told me you hadn't seen her?

A. I think I had seen Minnie before I sent that note—no.

Q. Had you seen her?

A. I never seen her until after she made the confession, no,sir.

Q. When did you see her, Sadie?

A. I seen her after—when Mr. Montgomery went back after the paper.

Q. Did you see her before you wrote that note, look at that and see?

A. I was trying to think whether I had seen her before.

Q. Let's take time?

A. No, I didn't see her before I wrote this note, no. I seen her that night—no, we all went out there that night.

Q. What night? A. It was that Saturday night.

Q. The same day that you wrote this note?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. December the 19th? You are sure of that?

A. Yes, sir, I am sure that is right.

Q. Sure. Who was with you that night, Mr. Buell and Mr.——

A. Robinson, Mr. Hanford and Mr. Montgomery.

Q. That was on Saturday night?

A. I think that was on Saturday night.

Q. You state it was? A. I am sure it was, yes, sir.

Q. Where did you see Minnie the next time?

A. I never seen her any more, Hanford had me run out of town.

Q. When was it that she balled you out?

A. Who was it said she balled me out?

Q. When she balled these other people out?

A. That same Saturday night, she didn't ball me out.

Q. I know, because she was afraid to ball you out?

A. No, she wasn't afraid. She didn't do it.

Q. She didn't do it? A. Balled out the others.

Q. Balled out the others? A. Yes, sir.

Q. She told them they were a lot of crooks?

A. Yes, sir, she said——

Q. Didn't she say this: You have been here trying to make me tell a lie and I am not going to do it?

A. Who said that?

Q. These people?

A. No, sir, nobody said that; Hanford said that; who told you that? Hanford told you that.

By Mr. Stuart: I move to strike that out because it is impertinent and insulting.

By Mr. Blakeney: Let the record show that I asked you to put in a statement and you refused to do it.

The Examiner: I state to Mr. Blakeney that I will put into the record all objections and the grounds for objections, but not the speeches of counsel.

By Mr. Blakeney: What I wanted to put——

The Examiner: I will put in here what you want—

By Mr. Blakeney: I just wanted the Examiner to describe the conduct and appearance of the witness at this particular time.

By the Examiner: That is what you first desired to put in, is it?

By Mr. Blakeney: Yes, sir.

The Examiner: I will state that I cannot describe the appearance of witnesses and write down the testimony at the same time.

By Mr. Blakeney: I am satisfied with that.

Q. Now, Sadie, can you forget Hanford for a minute in this case in order to testify? A. Well, I can.

Q. It is hard to do, I know?

A. It is awfully hard to do after the racket him and I had that night, it is hard.

Q. I know, but let's forget him and see if we can understand each other? A. All right.

Q. You went up there and Minnie told those people that they were crooks, didn't she? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Didn't tell you?

A. No, sir, I was sitting over there, no she didn't.

Q. Didn't she say I am the mother of Thomas Atkins?

A. No, she said, I am still the mother of him; she didn't take the lie back and was telling it again; still the mother of Thomas Atkins.

Q. Now, I wish—— I can't get your tone in the record. Did she throw her head back? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Threw her head back?

A. Yes, sir, said I am still the mother of Thomas Atkins.

Q. Wait a minute now. You and I will be here a week if you don't answer my questions?

A. Judge, I am willing to stay here all the summer.

Q. I know you are, you have plenty of money to spend and I haven't.

A. No, I haven't, I aint Judge, I got plenty of time.

By Mr. German: I object to the argument of counsel with the witness.

Q. Now, Sadie, she said, I am still the mother of Tommy Atkins you dirty crooks? A. No, she didn't.

Q. When did the crooks come in?

A. I don't know when it came in.

Q. In the conversation?

A. I will tell it over again.

Q. Tell it over again, I like to hear you talk?

A. She said, I am still the mother of Tommy Atkins and Captain McNab aint in it any more; he has backed out.

By Mr. Blakeney: I move to strike out "but he has backed out" as not responsive.

Q. Now, tell me what she said?

A. She said Captain McNab aint in it any more, he has done quit; and said, I want you crooks, looking right at Mr. Robinson and Mr. Buell—Mr. Montgomery had gone up in the Fort to get Captain McNab—looking at Mr. Robinson, said I want you crooks to get out of here.

Q. What else?

A. That is all, said I want you crooks to get out of here, and Montgomery came in by that time.

Q. That is all she said?

A. That is all that I remember she said.

Q. Didn't you say a minute ago that she said I want you crooks to get out of here, I am still the mother of Thomas Atkins?

A. No, she didn't say that; said I am still the mother of Tommy Atkins, and as soon as Hanford took her in the kitchen and said something to her, she came back.

Q. Well, at the same time she did say Sadie, this: You get out of here, you crooks? A. Yes, sir.

Q. I am still the mother of Thomas Atkins?

A. No, sir, she didn't have the crooks first.

Q. Well, I am still the mother of Thomas Atkins?

A. Yes, sir, Captain McNab had quit.

Q. Get out of here you crooks?

A. Captain McNab has quit.

Q. Captain McNab had quit? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Get out of here you crooks?

A. And by that time I had walked over to the table and was talking about Mrs. Richardson.

Q. I hadn't asked you about that?

A. I wanted to tell you she wasn't balling me out.

Q. I didn't ask about that. Let's see if we got it straight. She says, I am still the mother of Tommy Atkins?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Get out of here you crooks? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Captain McNab has quit?

A. Yes, sir, still the mother of Thomas Atkins, Captain McNab has done quit, get out of here you crooks.

Q. Yes? A. Yes, sir, and she sat down and got to talking.

Q. Who was there? A. Professor Hanford was there.

Q. Who else besides the professor?

A. Professor had brought another man, a friend of his out there with him.

Q. What was his name? A. I don't know.

Q. What kind of looking man?

A. I don't know, I can't describe him.

Q. Did he have apileps on his shoulder?

A. Did he, you couldn't pull Captain McNab in there, no, sir.

Q. I didn't ask you anything about pulling Captain McNab in there? A. Hiding out.

Q. Why couldn't you pull him in there?

A. Done stole that money and getting away from the—

Q. Where was he?

A. He was up in the Fort and Mr. Montgomery had gone after him.

Q. And he was hiding out?

A. Yes, sir, that money had done got hot and he was turning it loose.

Q. Is it possible? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say he was in the Fort?

A. Yes, sir, he was up there out of that disgrace and he throwed up his hands and hollered murder.

Q. Hollered murder?

A. Yes, sir, he done quit and they couldn't get him down there.

Q. You said he hollered murder—put it down.

A. Put it down if you want to.

Q. Montgomery couldn't get him out, could he?

A. He wouldn't come out.

Q. Afraid to come out?

A. No, Judge, he was afraid to come.

Q. Did Montgomery have a warrant for him?

A. No, sir, but that money Captain McNab was dealing with was too hot.

Q. I understand, but did he have a warrant for him?

A. No, sir, I didn't see any warrant.

Q. If Minnie—now you listen to me—if not the rightful heir, what did Montgomery have to do with her money?

A. Montgomery?

Q. Yes?

A. He didn't have nothing to do with the money, Captain McNab and Hanford had it.

Q. But if Minnie was not the rightful heir, what did Montgomery have to do with prosecuting McNab?

A. He wasn't going to prosecute McNab.

Q. Well, what was McNab scared of then?

A. McNab had done got tired, him and Mr. Hanford, and he turned himself out.

Q. Who was going after McNab?

A. He was a nice army officer to get the Fort mixed up in that stuff.

Q. Who was going after him?

A. Mr. Montgomery went up to see him about the papers that day.

Q. You told me he was hiding out?

A. He didn't come down there.

Q. You said hiding out? A. Yes, sir I did.

Q. You told me he was afraid to come out of that Fort? A. I did.

Q. And the Government was after him?

A. I didn't say the Government was after him.

Q. Didn't you say that?

A. I said Mr. Montgomery had to go to the Fort after him and bring him down to the house.

Q. Didn't you say the Government was after him?

A. Mr. Hanford told Mr. Montgomery to go and get him.

Q. Didn't you say the Government was after him?

A. No, I didn't say that.

Q. Didn't you say that he threw up his hands and said murder?

A. I didn't see him, that was an expression of mine.

Q. You have volunteered that expression to enliven the case? A. Volunteered it?

Q. Yes, about oh murder?

A. That is my expression, not Captain McNab's I didn't see him say it.

Q. Now, Sadie, when you went up there, in your conversation from time to time with Minnie, you told her that you had to prove that she had a negro child, didn't you?

A. Oh, no, she didn't have no kind, I didn't have to tell her that.

Q. Didn't you tell her you had to make one?

A. She suggested that, I told her I had it started.

Q. Sadie, do you say here now that Minnie suggested the making of a Tommy Atkins?

A. I had made one back here, started one before I went out there, me and these negroes at Leavenworth started one before she was found, four months before she was found. When I got out there and talked to Minnie, then she told me, said who is dead if I had a baby there I could say I gave it to her.

Q. Didn't you understand that you were to build up a child for Minnie?

A. I had already built one, Judge, she wasn't found when I built that one.

Q. You made her agree to it?

A. That is just what I wanted her to say.

Q. You persuaded her to agree?

A. The minute she spoke up and said that, that is what I wanted her to say.

Q. Minnie jumped at your suggestion?

A. When she said, I drawed that money for her father, she said who is dead in Leavenworth, Sadie, if I had a baby I could give it to, that is just what I wanted her to say, Judge. That fit me in this nigger case in Leavenworth.

Q. That fit everything together? A. Yes, sir.

Q. She meant what darkey was dead in Leavenworth?

A. She didn't say who.

Q. That is what you understood? A. No, I didn't.

Q. What white person is dead?

A. Anybody who is dead.

Q. Did you tell her who is dead?

A. Yes, I said my grandmother, Granny Letcher.

Q. Tell me who you told her was dead?

A. My grandmother, Granny Letcher.

Q. Who else? A. That is all I told her.

Q. Did that satisfy her?

A. Why, it just fit like clock work.

Q. Fit like clock work? A. It did.

Q. The moment you called up Granny it satisfied Minnie?

A. That satisfied Minnie. Dennis and I had started the lie.

Q. She knew didn't she that Dennis Jones was still living? A. She had never seen Dennis.

Q. Never seen him? A. No.

Q. She knew Rube Smith was still alive?

A. She never had seen them niggers, before in her life until she switched to Leavenworth; them niggers is a liar because I started that lie with them, Dennis Jones and Rube Smith, and I started that lie, Judge, off the bare ground.

Q. Did she know Ida Foster was alive?

A. She didn't know nothing about Ida Foster.

Q. Did she know Ida Foster was alive?

A. She never did know Ida Foster at all.

Q. Do you know where Ida Foster stayed in Leavenworth?

A. I run with her, she wasn't nothing but a nigger.

Q. In the poor house?

A. On Choctaw Street, when she run that hoar house; Minnie Atkins had been gone from Leavenworth too long, she wasn't nothing but a girl, Ida was.

Q. You quite a strip of a girl?

A. Ida was younger than me.

Q. Ida did have a house of that kind?

A. Now when she did about 1889, when she started the house.

By Mr. Blakeney: I would like to put into the record that the witness is arguing every question and we never will get through.

By Mr. Stuart: We never will get through.

By Mr. German: I wish you would try to just answer his questions.

Q. When did you take up with Ida Foster?

A. From a girl, school girl in the town.

Q. Stop right there now. How old was you?

A. I was about eleven years old.

Q. How old was Ida? A. About—Ida was about nine.

Q. Nine, when did Ida start this house of prostitution?

A. About 1889—no, later than that. I was in Leavenworth before she—

Q. Answer the question?

A. It must have been about 1890 when she started.

Q. Did you know Ida then?

A. Knowed her until she died, yes, sir.

Q. Did you know her when she ran this house of prostituton? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you go there frequently, Sadie?
A. No, sir, not so frequently, not until after she——
Q. You went there sometimes? A. Sometimes, yes, sir.
Q. She was then on Choctaw? A. On Choctaw.
Q. She moved from Choctaw? A. On Delaware, yes, sir.
Q. To where? A. Deleware Street.
Q. Did you go there frequently, then? A. Yes, sir.
Q. Ida didn't know Minnie, did she? A. No, sir.
Q. She didn't know Minnie? A. No, sir, she didn't.
Q. Did you know Mary Smith? A. Her sister, yes, sir.
Q. What was her name? A. Mary Smith.
Q. That was Ida's sister? A. Ida's sister.
Q. Did Mary know Minnie? A. No, sir.
Q. Didn't know Minnie at all? A. Didn't know Minnie.
Q. Never had seen Minnie?

A. No, sir, she had never seen her, she was a white woman.

Q. Did you know a man there named George Crilly?

A. Well, I think I do; drove down in the hack with him when I was a little bit of a girl.

Q. He lived right opposite Granny's didn't he?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. He didn't know Minnie either?

A. He had a chance to know her; he didn't know her at Granny's.

Q. You know that to be a fact?
A. I know that to be a fact.
Q. If he says he did he is a liar?
A. Yes, sir, and I would tell him so.
Q. I know you would. A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you know anybody else that lived around there besides George Crilly, right close in there?

A. No, because all of them were white, about all the neighbors around in there.

Q. Did you ever work at the Fort? A. No, sir.
Q. You never worked at the Fort?
A. No, I never worked at the Fort.
Q. Sure of that? A. No, I never worked up in the Fort.
Q. Sure that you didn't work at the Fort?
A. If I did—I don't think I ever did work at the Fort.
Q. Did you ever go out there?
A. Yes, been in the Fort.
Q. Ever go out there with Minnie? A. No.
Q. Minnie worked at the Fort a good deal?
A. Yes, but I did't go with her.
Q. Who did she work for out there?
A. I don't know who she worked for until Staffords.

Q. Who else did she work for?

A. I don't know until she worked for Brocks.

Q. Sadie, Minnie gave you this picture sometime in eighty-four, didn't she? A. Right after she first came.

Q. After she came, along in August? A. About that.

Q. In Eighty-four? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, you testified—I will ask you if you testified at the Receivership hearing at Muskogee? A. Did I?

Q. Yes? A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will ask you if this question was asked you: You knew Minnie pretty well at Leavenworth? And if you didn't make this answer: A. Yes, sir, I knew her better after I came back?

A. After I came back from the west?

Q. Yes? A. Yes, sir, I said that.

Q. I will ask you this question: How did you happen to know her so well? and if you didn't answer: I was working and she was with the white soldiers and I would meet her, I was the first person she met. Is that right?

A. I said she would come down in the town with the soldiers.

Q. Did you make that answer, just answer that yes or no?

A. I think I did that she came down down with the soldiers, yes, sir.

Q. Now, then, you didn't know Minnie well until eighty-five, did you?

A. I didn't know her but about three months in eighty-four, because I left.

Q. You didn't know her well until eighty-five?

A. After I came back.

Q. Yet she gave you the picture in eighty-four?

A. Just after I knew her, yes, sir.

Q. Just after you knew her?

A. She didn't give it to me until she came, you know.

Q. Where did Granny Letcher live in December, 1884?

A. December, 1884, on Cherokee Street between Second and Third.

Q. And she lived there until when?

A. Until about the fall of eighty-five.

Q. Until about the fall of 1885?

A. Yes, sir, along about the holidays in eighty-five.

Q. And then she moved up on Seneca?

A. Yes, sir, moved up on Seneca.

Q. You testified in this case before on the Receivership hearing, didn't you? A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. On page 147, I will ask you if this question wasn't asked you, speaking of Granny Letcher, where did she live in January eighty-four? A. In January eighty-four?

Q. Where did she live in January eighty-four?

A. Living on Cherokee Street.

Q. That is your answer: Where did she live in January, 1885, and didn't you answer, she moved up there, lived on Seneca? A. January eighty-five?

Q. Yes, didn't you say that?

A. If I did, Judge, I certainly made a mistake, because she didn't live up there.

Q. Then, you did make a mistake when you testified at the Receivership hearing that she lived on Seneca in January, eighty-five? A. Yes, sir, because she didn't.

Q. But you said she lived opposite Crilly's barn?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then you said she moved on the corner of Third and Seneca, is that right?

A. She moved on Seneca and Third along about eighteen eighty—about eighteen ninety and moved right back then.

Q. Now, Sadie, why was it that you made that mistake?

A. I don't know if they got that down, Granny didn't live on Seneca Street.

Q. You take that back now? A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. German: Pardon me, Judge, I want to object on the ground that you didn't read to the witness the exact question and answer on the matter you last inquired about; in your effort to state the substance of it, I think you fell into error.

By Mr. Stuart: You mean this opposite George blank?

Q. The question right in here, is that it opposite George Barnes, do you mean George Crilly?

A. George Crilly, yes, sir.

Q. The answer is then that she moved on the corner of Third and Seneca? A. Yes, sir, but she didn't.

Q. That is a mistake?

A. Yes, sir, if they got that down that way, she didn't live up there in January.

Q. Sadie, how far—— You say you worked for Brock, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir, I worked for Brock, yes, sir.

Q. How far was Brock's house from Hyde's house?

A. Oh, I wasn't working for Brock when—— I was working for Bryan's and Haven's.

Q. I didn't ask you that.

A. Brock's house was—my goodness——

Q. Fifteen blocks, wasn't it?

A. I expect, or twenty blocks, I didn't work for Brock until I came back from the west.

Q. I didn't ask when you worked for him?

A. That was about fifteen blocks.

Q. That is where you worked when you came back from the west in the spring of eighty-five?

A. Yes, sir, I went to work there in May.

Q. In the spring of eighty-five you were working twenty blocks from Hyde's?

A. Minnie wasn't there at Hyde's.

Q. I didn't ask you that?

A. Yes, sir, I was working in May, eighty-five, at Brocks.

Q. Where was Minnie working then? A. Up in the Fort.

Q. When was that? A. The spring of eighty-five.

Q. The spring of eighty-five?

A. I came back in March and she was working—I met her——

Q. She was working—— A. In the Fort.

Q. How late in eighty-five, did you see her, Sadie?

A. I had only been home about, oh, two or three weeks in March.

Q. Did you see her off and on in 1885?

A. No, sir, I didn't come back until March.

Q. Did you see her off and on after March in 1885?

A. Oh, from that on? Yes, I saw her from then until, oh, let's see, in September, from September until the middle of October, she worked for Brocks about four weeks.

Q. Where?

A. Right out there where I did about four weeks.

Q. What place that you did?

A. Corner of 6th and Shawnee, Brocks.

Q. In September?

A. September until the middle of October.

Q. Who was she working for then?

A. Dr. Brock, she was house-maid there.

Q. You and she worked there?

A. Yes, sir, I was Mrs. Brock's maid.

Q. And she was what?

A. House girl, and we had a colored cook there.

Q. That was in September?

A. September, didn't work there until——

Q. Never mind, this was in September?

A. Yes, sir, September.

Q. September, 1885? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What other cook can you name that worked there?

A. Mag Turner.

Q. Do you know what become of her? A. No, I don't.

Q. Anybody else but you and Minnie work there that you could give the name of? A. The Sparks are dead.

Q. Let me know somebody that you knew was there?

A. Dr. Brock's wife's sister and Mrs. Taylor, they lived there at the same place.

Q. Where is Mrs. Taylor?

A. Same place, 6th and Shawnee.

Q. Do you know where they are?

A. They live at 6th and Shawnee I guess.

Q. She knew you and Minnie worked there?

A. She ought to remember it, yes, sir, Mrs. McFarland.

Q. Do you know who Minnie worked for at the Fort?

A. Not until after she left there.

Q. Left where?

A. She left Brocks, she went to Major Staffords.

Q. Didn't you tell me that after you got back in 1885 that Minnie was working up at the Fort?

A. Yes, sir, but not for Stafford's.

Q. Who was she working for? A. I don't know.

Q. She told you, didn't she? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was she working for at the Fort?

A. She was working in the Fort.

Q. When did she quit, in September?

A. It must have been in September, I guess, I can't swear it was in September, but she came there in September.

Q. Now, you never saw her after you came back until after she got to working at the Fort, did you?

A. Oh, yes, sir, I did. Saw her, but not to be with her; met her on the street——

Q. How came, Sadie—— The fact is, Sadie, that you and Minnie were just bare acquaintances?

A. She would come from the Fort and come there where I was.

Q. You claim to have been her intimate friend, Sadie?

A. No intimate friends, not enough to be sleeping together all the time.

Q. Just good friends?

A. Just good acquaintances, and good at that.

Q. Good acquaintances? A. Yes, good ones too.

Q. You didn't run together much?

A. She stayed in the Fort I couldn't run with her all the time.

Q. You didn't run with her a whole lot?

A. Not a whole lot.

Q. She was working wasn't she?

A. Not to amount to anything.

Q. This crime that you and she committed, that was away back yonder? A. No, not way back.

Q. I thought you would tell me the year?

A. No, I wouldn't do it, you wouldn't want me to do it, you will know it later on; it will help your case.

Q. When are you going to tell it? A. I don't know.

Q. It will help your case?

A. It will help hers and you.

Q. I would like to know it?

A. You are trying to get the truth, ain't you?

Q. Yes?

A. You are going to get it too; I am going to show it to you too.

Q. Who is going to give it to me, Sadie?

By Mr. German: I object to counsel and this witness arguing the case.

By Mr. Stuart: I am not arguing the case.

Q. Sadie, are you holding anything back on me?

A. No, I don't know a thing on you.

Q. I mean in this case?

A. I will tell you what I think about you.

Q. You have told me what you think——

A. I think you are a gentleman, and I think Mr. Blakeney is a gentleman, I think you are fooled in the case; wrong man and you can't afford—that is Ben Rice, the man that came up here.

Q. Are you sure? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is there any other didactic and Christian remark that you desire to address to me?

By Mr. German: I object to the question as improper cross examination.

By Mr. Blakeney: I admit it, I want to run in that objection.

Q. Now, Sadie, tell me? A. What is the answer, Judge.

Q. Look at me and tell me; don't let's have any more levity about it. Judge Allen objects to my levity.

A. Well, go along, all right.

Q. I want to ask you this.

By Mr. Allen: I want to say that I made no objections.

By Mr. Stuart: I was observing your objections heretofore, gentlemen.

Q. Now, Sadie, are you holding anything back on this case? Tell me now? A. I can't say that.

Q. Have you got a bomb that you are going to explode later?

By Mr. German: I object to the question on the ground that it is argument, calls for a conclusion, and is improper cross examination.

Q. Have you, Sadie? A. I refuse to answer that.

Q. You refuse to answer that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then, you have got something locked up that I can't find out? A. I have, yes, sir.

Q. And you are going to tell it when you get ready?

A. No, it incriminates me, I will tell it when I get ready.

Q. When you get ready? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You don't want to take any advantage of me, do you Sadie? A. No, sir, I am going to protect myself though.

Q. Sadie, when you testified before the Receivership hearing, I asked you if this question wasn't asked you: Working for Dr. Brock, worked there until his place burned down. Is that your answer? A. My answer was yes.

Q. The question was: "Where were you in the summer of eighty-six?"

By Mr. Stuart: 134, Mr. German.

A. Summer of eighty-six?

Q. Yes?

A. The house burned down about the middle of June I think.

Q. Eighty-six? A. Eighty-six, yes, sir.

Q. This question asked you, you were working for Dr. Brock in the summer of eighty-six, and if you didn't answer, I went to work for Dr. Brock along in the winter of eighty-five, and worked for Dr. Brock until September, eighty-six. You said that, didn't you?

A. Well, Judge, if I did I couldn't have worked there until September, I started to work for Brock in 1885 in May, and stayed there until June, 1886, when it was in the fire.

Q. Then, if this answer is—— Listen: "I went to work for Dr. Brock along about the winter of eighty-five, and worked for Dr. Brock until about September, eighty-six," that answer is wrong?

A. That answer is wrong, I worked there about thirteen months.

Q. The next question: "Then, you were working for Dr. Brock in the summer of eighty-six? A. Yes, sir"?

A. Yes, sir. That is correct.

Q. That is correct. "Did you know Minnie during the summer of eighty-six? A. Yes, sir"?

A. Yes, sir, I said yes, sir.

Q. Was she at the Fort then?

A. Yes, sir, at Fort Leavenworth.

Q. That is all right? A. Yes, sir, that is all right.

Q. Everything is right, except the answer that you commenced working for Brock in the winter of eighty-five?

A. Yes, sir, I commenced working in the spring of eighty-five, in the spring.

Q. Now, Sadie, when you testified before the Receivership hearing, you didn't say that Minnie ever worked at Brock's did you?

A. I don't think I did, I don't know, sir.

Q. Why didn't you tell that? A. They didn't ask me.

Q. You were telling all you knew about Minnie, weren't you? A. They didn't ask me.

Q. You were telling all you knew about her, weren't you?
A. No, I——

Q. You was not? A. No.

Q. You were telling all you knew about where she worked, wasn't you?

A. No, I don't know as I did. I didn't do that.

Q. As a matter of fact you didn't tell on the hearing that she was working for Brock's before the Receivership?

A. No, sir, I didn't.

Q. Do you know this Quinton Garrett?

A. Mr. Buell's man?

Q. No, sir. You don't know him? A. No, sir.

Q. Don't you know there is a man named Quinton Garrett, claiming this land?

A. No, I don't know Quinton Garrett.

Q. A minor boy? A. No, sir, I don't know him.

Q. You never heard of him?

A. No, sir, I don't know Quinton Garrett.

Q. Didn't Mr. Buell tell you if the Government won this case, this man would get the land?

A. No sir, he said it was a matter of law between him and the Government.

Q. A matter of law between him and the Government?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he told you he had a man who would law the Government for it?

A. He told me he had filed some Indians on the land didn't say who it was.

Q. Then if the Government won it, it would be between him and the Government?

A. Fight between him and the Government, that is what he said.

Q. Now, Sadie, what have you been doing to earn this fifty dollars a month since December, 1914?

A. I have been taking Mr. Robinson around and telling him where the people are that know the truth; that is what I have been doing.

Q. Ever since December, 1914?

A. No, sir, not ever since that but at times.

Q. And lots of times you didn't work at all?

A. Didn't work at all because I was at some place else.

Q. Lots of times you were idle?

A. Lots of times I was idle, yes, sir.

Q. But your fifty dollars came regularly?

A. Yes, sir, three thousand dollars I was promised, was to draw that by the month.

Q. And all you have done is to take Robinson around and show him certain witnesses?

A. Or give him the names and let him go to them.

Q. You and Robinson have been working together?

A. Yes, sir, have been working together.

Q. And you know, Sadie, that Mr. Buell and Mr. Bartlett are relying upon your testimony to win this case, don't you? A. No, I don't.

> By Mr. German: I object to that as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, argumentative, and calling for a statement of conclusions and opinion by the witness.

Q. You know it? A. No, sir.

Q. Answer it? A. No, sir.

Q. Did they ever tell you that you testimony was very important in this case? A. No, sir, they never have.

Q. They never told you that you would make them a good witness? A. No, sir.

Q. Never told you that they wanted you for a witness?

A. No, the Government, no, sir, they never did tell me.

Q. Never did? A. No, sir.

Q. Never did? A. No, sir.

Q. You are not getting anything from the Government of the United States, are you?

A. Oh, no. I got immunity from them, what I wanted, Judge, if I hadn't got a cent from Mr. Buell, no.

Q. Now, will you be kind enough in the morning to bring these immunity papers?

A. I will. I will sure bring them and the names of the hotels I stopped at in the west.

Q. Bring me those things and the hotel papers?

A. I will certainly bring them to you, yes, sir.

Q. Bring them to me? A. I will. All right.

Cross Examination by Mr. Blakeney.

Q. Minnie, please answer the question?

A. Yes, sir, I will do that.

By Mr. Allen: I desire to suggest in the record that this witness has been on the witness stand all day Monday, Monday evening, Tuesday, and that Tuesday morning she—the cross examination of Mr. Hanford began and that he cross examined her until in the afternoon of yesterday; Judge Stuart has been cross examining since that time and until the present hour, 3:28.

By Mr. Blakeney: I would like to ask counsel the purpose of this statement before I commence the examination.

By Mr. Allen: I think it is obvious.

By Mr. Blakeney: If this objection is being made because of the witness being tired, I would ask that the examiner ascertain the facts and take an adjournment at this time.

The Examiner: Sadie, are you tired?

A. Yes, sir, I wouldn't mind waiting until in the morning, and he can keep me from now until next week if he wants to go home.

The Examiner: I don't think we ought to lose the time; I think we ought to go ahead.

The Witness: I am willing.

Q. Sadie, you have used the word crook in your examination and cross examination. What do you mean by that word?

A. I mean people getting money falsely, Mr. Blakeney. Do anything like I will do.

Q. You mean by that term, a person that will get money in an unlawful way?

A. That is what I mean, in an unlawful way, yes, sir.

Q. You mean a person who will take advantage of a man being drunk and roll him and take money off of him?

A. Well, I don't know that I mean that—Steal it off of him. That would be a big chance.

Q. That would be a crook? A. Yes, sir, that is a crook.

Q. A person that will commit any species of fraud to obtain money? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is what you say you have been all your life?

A. Me?

Q. Yes?

A. I couldn't say nothing else what I have been, could you?

Q. Now, Sadie, just answer the questions, because I can't testify and I don't know the facts either? A. I think I have.

Q. Your judgment is that you have been a crook as we have defined it here all your life?

A. The principal part of my life, yes, sir.

Q. All of your adult life?

A. Not all of it, but the principal part of it.

Q. When did you commence a life of that kind?

A. What kind?

Q. Being a crook?

A. Oh, I don't know. I can't tell you, Mr. Blakeney.

Q. How old are you now?

A. I will be forty-seven in April.

Q. That will make you born in 1869?

A. Yes, sir, April 29th, 1869.

Q. April 29th, 1869? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, about what age were you when you commenced living an irregular life?

A. Well, I will have to think that up; I was about nineteen, I guess.

A. About nineteen years of age? A. I think so.

Q. That will be about eighty-seven or eighty-eight?

A. Well, about the fall of eighty-eight.

Q. About the fall of eighty-eight you will say that you commenced being a crook?

A. Well, I don't know, I think it was about eighty-nine, eighty-eight or eighty-nine.

Q. You didn't—How did you commence it, what did you do, that you say started you to living a life of a crook?

A. Well, just making money that wasn't right.

Q. Well, what was your business or occupation at that time?

A. Working and making money too, other ways.

Q. Working how? A. Working for people and families.

Q. Doing domestic work? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did this being a crook include stealing things around the house wherever you worked?

A. No, I never was accused of stealing anything, I didn't want anything like that.

Q. You never did commit petty larcenies of that kind?

A. No, sir, I never did steal nothing from anybody.

Q. Were you a girl of lude virtue?

A. Yes, sir, and working too at the same time.

Q. When did you commence that kind of a life?

A. Well, about the fall of eighty-eight, I guess.

Q. The fall of eighty-eight you commenced living a life of easy virtue? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And have continued to live that kind of life up to the present time? A. Oh, not at all times, no.

Q. Off and on at times? A. Off and on at times, yes.

Q. Now, you have said you have spoken about Mr. Page being a crook, Mr. Hanford and Mr. Long? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You said, if I remember, that they were crooks because they had hired you, is that it?

A. Well, they—Listen, if I hadn't been a crook they wouldn't have hired me.

Q. Wouldn't have hired you?

A. No, wouldn't have hired me in that case.

Q. But they hired you for the same reason that you were a crook?

A. They didn't know a thing about me until Bettie took me to them.

Q. Page had never known you?

A. No, but I had been working six months in this fraud case, and Mr. Page did hire me.

Q. You were pretending to work in good faith?

A. No, not after that.

Q. When you commenced working for Long and Page, you had been, so far as the public knew, working in good faith to find Minnie and Tommy Atkins?

A. Yes, before I went up there, yes, sir, just the day before I went to Mr. Long's, the people thought I was telling the truth, yes, sir.

Q. Now, Long tried to hire you at Seattle when he came into the room there and you were with Bettie? A. He did.

Q. He tried to hire you? A. He did.

Q. When he was trying to hire you then, he thought so far as you knew, that you were going in good faith and trying to locate Minnie and trying to find Minnie's child?

A. Mr. Long?

Q. Yes? A. Do you want me to answer that?

Q. I certainly want you to answer it.

A. No, Frank Long knew better.

Q. When he spoke to you in Seattle? A. To steal Minnie?

Q. To steal Minnie? A. No, Mr. Long knew better——

Q. Knew better than what?

A. That there wasn't no Tommy Atkins and knew I was a crook.

Q. Knew you was a crook? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did he know there wasn't any Tommy Atkins?

A. Frank Long knew before ever he came out there, there wasn't no Tommy Atkins.

Q. Frank Long knew it by intuition?

A. Rogers and Bettie Mann had already told him before ever he came out there.

Q. In your presence?

A. No, sir, but they told me they told him.

Q. Bettie Mann didn't know it, did she? A. Yes, she——

Q. Bettie Mann didn't know Minnie until twenty years after she left school?

A. That is right, she didn't know anything about Minnie.

Q. She didn't know anything about Minnie except that she left school and went to Leavenworth? A. Yes, that is all.

Q. She didn't know whether she had two children or a dozen children? A. She brought two children down there.

Q. Bettie Mann had seen those two children?

A. Yes, helped to raise those two.

Q. Did Bettie know anything about whether Minnie had three children or not? A. No.

Q. Knew nothing about it?

A. No, I don't think she knew that.

Q. Now, up to that time then, so far as you knew, Long had no information that you were not acting in good faith in trying to find the child? A. He knew it when he came——

By Mr. German: I object to asking the questions unless the witness has knowledge on the subject; object to counsel eliciting conclusions from the witness.

A. He knew it when he wanted me to steal Minnie, yes, sir.

Q. Did he say he knew it?

A. He said she told him the baby died when it was six months old and that was too early and he would give me three thousand ($3,000.00) dollars—I believe it was to me and Bettie both, to steal Minnie and take her to Oklahoma.

Q. Didn't want anybody but Minnie?

A. They never wanted no boy.

Q. Now, Minnie, you called Bettie Mann the "seven year woman?"

A. I don't call her that. My husband calls her that; he didn't know what her name is.

Q. What does your husband do?

A. Don't do anything; used to be in a rock quarry.

Q. Is he a crook? A. No.

Q. He is one man who associated with you who wasn't a crook?

A. Yes, I guess he used to be, I don't know what he did, but he isn't none now.

Q. Now, I notice in your examination that you bragged about being a crook——

By Mr. German: I object to the question on the ground that it is without justification, and the mere conclusion of counsel.

A. No use of hiding it, they knew it, and what did I want to try to keep on hiding it for from these men if they knew it.

Q. You have bragged about it in your examination?

A. No, I haven't bragged about it; I have said I was.

Q. You have stated when counsel had not asked you about it? A. I just acknowledged it, sure I acknowledged it.

Q. Every place you switched it in; you switched it in, I am a liar, I was a liar, and I told lies and I was a crook?

A. I told it, yes, sir.

Q. Switched it in when it wasn't responsive to questions, didn't you?

A. I don't know whether I did that or not.

Q. You have never changed that life?

A. Oh, yes, I change it sometimes.

Q. Are you a crook now? A. No, not now.

Q. When did you change?

A. I changed quite a little bit ago.

Q. Give us the date and day, will you?

A. No, I can't mention that.

Q. Well, about when? A. I don't know, sir, when.

Q. Well? A. About a year or so ago, or more.

Q. Was it the December morning when you talked to Frank Montgomery when you changed? A. Yes, I changed I guess.

Q. That was the date? A. I guess so.

Q. From that date you changed and decided that you would do the right thing?

A. Do the right thing, that is the best.

Q. You decided that?

A. I decided that if I could get out of that crooked deal, yes, sir.

Q. You said here you had—to use your expression—You had beat Bartlett out of seven or eight hundred ($700.00 or $800.00) dollars on this trip west.

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. You did? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did you beat him out of it? A. Just lying to him.

Q. Tell us how?

A. Telling him I was hunting a boy and wasn't hunting none; trying to get people to stand up, and there wasn't none to hunt.

Q. You wired Bartlett you were hunting a boy when you knew there wasn't no boy to hunt? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that was the fraud that you perpetrated on him?

Q. Yes, sir. That was a fraud.

Q. And you were paying your expense account?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Stealing, grand larceny and petty larceny too?

A. Yes, sir, doing it all.

Q. Doing it all? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you reached this change, this period and had a change of heart, did you feel that you ought to pay that money back to him?

A. I don't know where I would be going to get it at.

Q. Did you feel that you ought to pay it back?

A. Yes, sir, I felt sorry that I had lied.

Q. And if you had it, you felt that you ought to pay it back? A. Yes, sir, but I didn't have it.

Q. Felt that you ought to do that?

A. Yes, sir, that I ought to pay it back.

Q. Sadie, who do I represent in this case?

A. I don't know.

Q. You don't know who I represent in this case?

A. No, I don't know who you are.

Q. Who does Judge Stuart represent?

A. I guess Mr. Page.

Q. You guess Mr. Page? A. Yes.

Q. Don't you know it?

A. No, I don't; I thought Mr. Hanford was representing Mr. Page until he stepped in, and now I think you are in my thoughts.

Q. In your thoughts? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Didn't you know that Judge Stuart represented Mr. Page when you said I have something that will benefit your client and I will tell you some day? I ask you what you meant when you said you expected it to benefit him?

A. I didn't expect it to benefit anybody of his, I was going to get the truth out of him so he would know what he was doing.

Q. When you said some day you would tell the truth and benefit his client——

A. I meant benefit Mr. Page, so he could show Page where he is wrong.

Q. You wanted to benefit Page?

A. Yes, sir, so he would stop.

Q. Answer the question? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then you knew Stuart was representing Page?

A. Yes, sir, he was talking.

Q. Who does this gentleman, Mr. Meserve, represent here?

A. I suppose he represents Mr. Buell, I guess.

Q. Mr. Buell? A. I think so.

Q. You know Mr. Buell hasn't got any money?

A. I don't know what he has got.

Q. You know he is associated with Bartlett in this transaction? A. He might be.

Q. And he is representing Bartlett in this matter?

A. You say don't I know; that is what I don't know, I can't say.

Q. You believe that, don't you?

A. No, sir, I don't. I believe he was representing himself; I believe he had a man his own self.

Q. Don't you know that the Buell Company, composed of himself and Bartlett, have taken a lease of this Quinton Garrett? A. No, sir, I don't know that?

Q. You heard it?

A. No, sir, I don't know anything about Quinton Garrett.

Q. Don't you know now that this gentleman is representing, directly or indirectly, Mr. Bartlett?

A. No, I don't. I can't say that when I don't know it.

Q. Are you willing to ask them?

A. Yes, sir, I am willing to ask them.

Q. Now, if you find out they are representing Bartlett, then will you decline to take that three thousand ($3,000.00) dollars from them?

A. No, sir, I wouldn't decline it even then, although Mr. Bartlett owes me, but I don't think Mr. Buell was in with Mr. Bartlett.

By Mr. German: I object to that as not proper.

Q. If you find out that Bartlett is paying this money in, are you willing for Bartlett to take out this seven hundred dollars that you say you skinned him out of, out of that three thousand dollars? A. Willing for him to do that?

Q. Yes?

A. No, I am not working for Mr. Bartlett, I am working for Mr. Buell.

Q. Isn't this a fact that you are still doing just what you have always done, just working for whoever will pay you the money? A. No, sir, no, sir.

Q. Sadie, when you first talked to Bettie Mann was it in Leavenworth,or Kansas City? A. In Leavenworth.

Q. You had been running a road house near Tulsa for a few years? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long did you run it?

A. I run that road house three or four years I guess, two or three years, something like that.

Q. Minnie had come out there? A. Do you mean Bettie?

Q. Bettie had come out there and tried to get you to forge a deed? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did she tell you what deed?

A. She told me that she had told a man, she didn't tell me what deed, no.

Q. What did she say about the deed?

A. She told me: Sade, do you want to make some money?

And I said yes, and I said how? She said Osey and I have told Bartlett that we know where Minnie is, but we don't, but we want somebody to go and sign a deed and give it to him, we want somebody; and I said well I will do it for a thousand dollars, and she said that is more than is what is in the deed, ain't but three hundred ($300.00) dollars for the party who is going to sign the deed, and wasn't over five or six hundred dollars in the deal I don't guess.

Q. You guess from what she told you that there was three hundred?

A. Yes, sir, three hundred for her to get somebody that would do it.

Q. You knew she did go up to Kansas City and got a forged deed? A. Yes, I knew that.

Q. Did you know what land it was on?

A. No, I never seen that land, no.

Q. Not the identical piece, but did you know that it was the land of one of Minnie's sons?

A. Not none of Minnie's sons, but I knew it was land that belonged down there somewhere.

Q. You knew why Minnie was supposed to have an interest in it, didn't you? Supposed to be one of her dead son's?

A. No, one of her dead children's.

Q. Supposed to be one of her dead children's?

A. I thought it was Minnie's land they were going to get a deed for. She didn't say enough for me to know about the boy then.

Q. You finally learned, however, that they were trying to get the boy's land?

A. That was away later, in 1914 I found that out.

Q. That is the first time you learned it?

A. That is the first.

Q. Didn't you learn of the prosecution of Bettie Mann?

A. That was for another crime done eight—that is seven years ago.

Q. Didn't you learn of the prosecution and Bettie—this seven year Bettie—— A. That wasn't for that crime.

Q. Your understanding that it wasn't for that crime.

A. No, another affair, yes, sir.

Q. Another forgery? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You never learned during the time that this matter was being discussed with you when you were running this road house that Bettie was attempting to get a forged deed that was on land that was supposed to have been allotted to Minnie's son?

A. I did not, didn't know that until she came up to Leavenworth.

Q. When she got to Leavenworth and you had a talk with her, what did she say?

A. She said: Sade, do you know Minnie that used to work here at Hyde's; first said, Sade you know that deed Harjo and I got Bartlett? and I said yes, and she said: J. B. White is making me trouble about it now and we have got to make it good; and she said, we will say it is the son of Minnie Atkins, and I said whoever said Minnie ever had a son here named Tommy Atkins; and she said I did, but she said, I have been working on the case three years and I don't believe there ever was a Thomas Atkins, but I have been working for two men, J. B. White and H. U. Bartlett, for two years, and it won't do now to let them know any better and, I asked her if these white men had any money and she said yes.

Q. I would like to interrupt, I will get back to it. Now, you learned there then that this seven-year woman had been working for two or three years trying to get a deed from one of Minnie's sons?

A. No, sir, no she had been working for them, wasn't trying to get no deed for them, already got a deed for Mr. Bartlett and she was up there trying to make it good; Mr. White was pushing her..

Q. Said she had been working two or three years?

A. Yes, that is what she told me.

Q. But she had never been to Leavenworth?

A. Bettie had been to Leavenworth the month of February before she found me.

Q. Never talked to you? A. Didn't know I lived there.

Q. When you were talking to Bettie at the road house in Tulsa, you told Bettie that you knew Minnie?

A. We never talked it over; she wanted the deed.

Q. She was hunting Minnie Atkins?

A. Not then she wasn't; she thought Minnie was dead, she wasn't hunting Minnie; just wanted somebody to get a forged deed, that is all she wanted.

Q. She wanted somebody to go and sign Minnie Atkins' name to a deed? A. To a deed, that is all she wanted.

Q. Did you tell her you had known Minnie?

A. Yes, sir, I told her.

Q. You told her all about it? A. No, I didn't.

Q. What did you tell her?

A. I told her I knew Minnie, but she said she was dead; that is what Bettie said.

Q. You told her that she was not?

A. No, it had been seventeen or eighteen, or nineteen years since I had seen her.

Q. You had known her seventeen or nineteen years and you didn't know——

A. I hadn't seen her in that time, I didn't know but what she was dead.

Q. Have you told us now all that you learned from Bettie Mann at Leavenworth now? A. At that time.

Q. I don't care of the circumstances that she told you, but of the knowledge that you learned from the transaction of Bettie; you learned that Bettie was working two or three years there getting or trying to make a deed that she had gotten to stand up?

A. Yes, she had been lying trying to make it stand up.

Q. And she had worked two or three years?

A. She said that.

Q. Did you learn whose land it was that had been allotted? A. No.

Q. Didn't learn to whom it had been allotted? A. No.

Q. Didn't learn it had oil then?

A. No, I didn't learn it had oil on it.

Q. Didn't learn any of the details?

A. No, sir, didn't know where the land was.

Q. What did Bettie want you to do?

A. She wanted to get a boy started there.

Q. Did she tell you why?

A. Yes, to make the deed good, yes. She said Minnie was dead, and I want to get a boy started.

Q. The deed was signed by Minnie, wasn't it?

A. Yes, but a forged one.

Q. And then she wasn't hunting Minnie? A. No.

Q. Hunting somebody else to get a deed to make it stand up that she had signed?

A. No, hunting a boy to make——

Q. Instead of trying to make that deed stand up she was trying to get a real owner of it, the boy?

A. The real owner.

Q. The one that claimed to be the owner?

A. The one that claimed, yes.

Q. She was not hunting Minnie? A. No.

Q. Wasn't trying to find Minnie's son?

A. No, she wasn't trying to find Minnie's son.

Q. She didn't know Minnie didn't have no son?

A. She knew Minnie didn't have no Thomas Atkins.

Q. She hadn't seen Minnie for twenty-five years, had she? A. For thirty years.

Q. Thirty years? Hadn't seen Minnie now for thirty years? A. For thirty years hadn't seen her.

Q. And didn't know whether she had any children or not except the two living in Oklahoma in her own knowledge?

A. In her own knowledge that is all she knew.

Q. She wasn't hunting Minnie because she thought Minnie was dead? A. That is what she said.

Q. Bettie Mann didn't want to find whether Minnie had a son or not, she simply wanted to find some one that she could hand to Bartlett and say this is the boy?

A. That is what she wanted; she told Mr. Bartlett that she knew Minnie had a son, and after Mr. White got after her so, she tells another lie, that she knew Minnie did have a son.

Q. All right, let's keep close. I think you answered directly but I want to be sure. Bettie Mann was not trying to find Minnie or Minnie's son, because Bettie thought Minnie was dead already? A. Yes, sir.

Q. She was trying to find some Indian or negro that she could palm off on Bartlett as this boy? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was the theory?

A. Yes, sir, wasn't hunting Minnie's son.

Q. That is what she wanted you for, to help her?

A. Told me to tell the white men that and I could get a job.

Q. Wanted you to get a job so you could help her?

A. Help her; didn't ask me to get a job, I asked her for it.

Q. She consented? A. Yes, she knew I could do it.

Q. After you had this conversation and you both agreed that you would try to get a job from this white man, she wanted you to get that job to try to help her to make the Tommy Atkins? A. Yes, she did.

Q. Didn't want you to help her find the real Tommy Atkins? A. She couldn't have wanted me to do that.

Q. Answer the question? A. No, that wasn't done, no.

Q. How did you know——

A. I know there was none and I will show you there ain't none.

Q. How did you know it?

A. I know it. She didn't have it there.

Q. You didn't know but what she had it somewhere else?

A. I did know it.

Q. How did you know it? A. I did know it.

Q. Know she didn't have one some other place?

A. Yes, I do know it.

Q. You know that then as well as you know the other things you have testified to in this case?

A. I will always know it.

Q. Did you know then as well that there was no Tommy Atkins as you know the other things that you have testified to in this case? A. Yes, she has got none.

By Mr. German: I object to the question and move to strike the answer on the ground that it is argument, and calls for a conclusion and an opinion of the witness.

The Witness: I am getting tired and would like to quit.

By Mr. Blakeney: Well, if she is getting tired. Let the record show that she is tired.

And thereupon, the witness is excused until 9:30 o'clock, A. M., February 18th, 1916.

SADIE JAMES, being recalled, further testified as follows:

Cross Examination by Mr. Blakeney.

Q. Sadie, did you bring the papers that Judge Stuart asked you to?

A. I couldn't find my hotel papers, but I brought my immunity paper, yes, sir; and I told you I had a copy of the note I sent Minnie that I would bring to you; yes, sir, I brought that one.

Q. Sadie, in your long life and experience in the underworld, you had framed up and put over a good many schemes and frauds, haven't you? A. No.

Q. You had not? A. No.

Q. What did you mean when you told Judge Stuart that you were an expert?

A. I don't know as I said an expert

Q. In matters of that kind?

A. I mean in doing other things. No, I never was in any land deals before.

Q. You have had a good deal of experience in advancing different frame-ups of different kinds and types? A. Yes.

Q. In preparing these frame-ups, you always adopted a plan that appeared to you the most probable, didn't you?

A. Yes.

Q. You did that because it would avoid detection and if it is detected it appears to be the most natural anyhow?

A. Well, I don't know as I did all the time; not all the time did I prepare them, sometimes other folks would prepare them.

Q. When you did prepare them, you would prepare them in a way most natural, in a way that it would have occurred if it occurred at all? A. I didn't this one.

Q. You usually did?

A. No, I didn't do any framing up.

Q. Why didn't you do that?

A. I knew how this one just how this one ought to be done, this case.

Q. And you framed it up according to the knowledge you had? A. Yes, sir, this one.

Q. Dennis Jones told you when you first spoke to him that he could prove hell was an ice box by lawyers, bankers, and merchants? A. And doctors.

Q. And doctors? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he say he could prove it by white or black?

A. There ain't a nigger banker in Leavenworth, never have been.

Q. Then, you knew he was thinking of proving it by white bankers? A. White.

Q. And white lawyers and bankers?

A. Yes, sir, and doctors I suppose. He said doctors, lawyers, and bankers.

Q. You understood anyhow that he could prove it by a number of supposed white people?

A. I didn't understand it, I knew what he and I had just done; I knew it.

Q. Then you knew that he could prove it by what was supposed to be reputable white people?

A. I knew what he had done and I thought that he——

Q. Just answer the question.

A. I didn't know that he could do that, what he said he could do, but I——

Q. I asked if you supposed and you said you knew it——

A. I didn't know whether he could get them bankers and lawyers, but I believe it now since, because that has gone so far.

Q. You believe it yet?

A. He has got a lot of strong witnesses in it. Yes, sir, I believe what he has said.

Q. Your experience in the under-world has rather turned you to believe all men are dishonest? A. No, oh no.

By Mr. German: I object to the question as argumentative.

A. If it had been, I wouldn't have said that you were honest.

Q. Didn't you adopt that your rule of life that the virtue of every woman and integrity of every man can be bought?

A. No, I would be a fool to think so.

Q. Why was it that you didn't spring this up naturally if you say you didn't?

A. This case, Tommy Atkins case?

Q. Yes?

A. Didn't Dennis and I and Rube frame it up?

Q. I asked if you framed it up naturally and you said you usually did, but didn't this one?

A. I didn't say I did this one.

Q. Well, did you this one? A. I did this one.

By Mr. German: Object to it on the ground that it is argumentative.

Q. Then, you and Dennis Jones in a conversation of but a few minutes framed this whole case up?

A. In a few minutes?

Q. Yes?

A. Rube Smith, Dennis Jones, and myself were together that night until nearly ten o'clock, from about six o'clock until about ten, something like that.

Q. Something about four hours? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You and them framed this case up? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You did it or Dennis?

A. I laid out the plan and Dennis did the work.

Q. And Dennis was to get the work?

A. He did do it, I didn't get a witness.

Q. You laid out the plan and he was to get the witnesses?

A. Which he did.

Q. You laid out the plan in the most natural way, in your judgment, that it could be laid out?

A. Yes, sir, laid it out.

Q. Laid it out to put the child born in the colored poor house?

A. Yes, sir, in my grandmother's poor house, yes, sir, because she was dead, couldn't be made anywhere else.

Q. You knew at the time that Minnie had never been associated with colored people?

A. Yes, sir, and they knew it.

Q. You knew that? A. I knew that.

Q. Then, you wasn't laying it out the natural way?

A. Why wasn't it?

Q. Were you?

A. Didn't I, they didn't know her; they never seen her until a year ago until they switched her up there so they could see her. Mr. Hanford took her up there the first time and wouldn't let a nigger in the town see her until he fell down on his first proposition and had to take it up with our negroes.

Q. You said Minnie never knew Ida?

A. Ida Foster, Minnie Atkins never did know Ida Foster.

Q. You know that?

A. I know that, she never did know her. Ida Foster is dead and couldn't speak for herself. When Ida Foster commenced running around town, Minnie Atkins had gone.

Q. But as a matter of fact, you don't know whether she knew Ida or not? A. I know she didn't know her.

Q. Ida and Minnie had gone up to the hotel or up to some rooming house with a couple of men at different times, you don't know anything about it? A. No, it never happened.

Q. You wouldn't have known it if it had have happened, would you?

A. Ida Foster lived with me and Lawyer Bell knows it. When I lived at Third and Shawnee in 1889 and Minnie Atkins had left town, and Lawyer Bell knows exactly where I lived.

Q. Don't you know that Lawyer Bell defended Minnie and Ida for disorderly conduct in about 1884? A. No, Oh God!

By Mr. German: Wait until I make an objection. I object to the question unless the witness knows and on the ground that it is improper cross examination.

Q. Did you ever know or hear that Lawyer Bell had defended Minnie and Ida Foster for disorderly conduct at nights on the streets of Leavenworth?

By Mr. German: I object to the question unless counsel fixes the time and place, and object to it on the ground that it is improper cross examination.

A. Oh, no. I am at the first of that now.

Q. That is the first you ever heard of that?

A. This Lawyer Bell?

Q. This identical Lawyer Bell.

A. That Lawyer Bell never seen Minnie in his life, I am here to tell him so.

By Mr. German: Now, Sadie, don't argue the case, just testify to what you know and don't argue the case.

Q. You say this Lawyer Bell never saw Minnie Atkins in his life?

A. Never in his life, and I am talking to Lawyer Bell now.

Q. You are sure of that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Didn't he see her a year ago when she came to Leavenworth? A. Oh, yes, when they took her around.

Q. As a matter of fact, you don't care whether you know it or not?

A. I am telling what I believe; I almost know it.

Q. When you believe a thing you will testify it is true, is that a fact? A. I know it.

Q. You will testify that you know it? A. Yes, I will.

Q. Do you know Mat Burns?

A. Yes, sir, one of the other witnesses; sure, I know Mat Burns.

Q. What did you say about one of the other witnesses?

A. Yes, one of Mr. Page's witnesses, yes, sir, I know.

Q. Why did you say one of the other witnesses, Page's witnesses?

A. Because Dennis — told me on my trip that he had gotten Mat Burns and Kate Logan and Mary Smith.

Q. That was the reason now that you said—you mentioned one of those witnesses?

A. Yes, sir, because afterwards I found that he went to the court house and swore to a certain statement.

Q. You did it because you wanted to discredit his evidence too, didn't you? A. Discredit it?

By Mr. German: I object to it as argument.

Q. Answer it. You did it because you wanted to discredit his evidence?

A. Why, I knew he was in the frame up, certainly, I am saying just what I know now.

Q. I asked you the question, did you know whether Mat Burns had paid Judge Bell here, back in eighty-seven or eighty-eight, or during the eighties, a fee for defending Minnie and Ida for disorderly conduct on the streets of Leavenworth?

A. No, Mr. Blakeney.

Q. Did you ever hear of it?

A. Oh, no, not until this minute, Mr. Blakeney.

Q. Now, when you got out to Minnie's, that Minnie said to you, who is dead in Leavenworth, did she ask you that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you said, oh my grandmother? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Granny Letcher? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You knew when you framed up at Leavenworth with Dennis Jones that night that Minnie was going to ask you that, didn't you? A. No, I didn't.

Q. And you had selected Granny Letcher because she was dead?

A. No, I didn't know it. It was the first time she ever heard my grandmother's name when I said that to her in Seattle.

Q. The first time that Minnie ever heard?

A. The first time. If my Granny was alive today you would have to tell her who she was.

Q. The first time? A. The first time.

Q. Let me finish the question. The first time that Minnie ever heard of Granny Letcher was when you named her in Seattle? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That you are sure of?

A. Yes, sir, I am positive of that.

Q. Just as sure as you are of anything else?
A. Certainly am.

By Mr. German: I object to that as argumentative, and calling for a conclusion of the witness.

A. Lawyer Bell, my God!

Q. Sadie, you just said Lawyer Bell, my God! threw up your head and threw yourself back in the chair, what was that for?

A. Listen! I am surprised, Lawyer Bell being an honorable man like he ever was to sit up here and tell you any such tale. I have always known Lawyer Bell to be a respectable man, but now I am surprised at him.

Q. Anybody who had ever seen Minnie at Leavenworth would not be respectable, would he?

A. Yes, but Lawyer Bell——

Q. You say Minnie never had any child at Leavenworth?

A. I said she didn't have any children there that any negroes ever knew about there.

Q. How would you have known about it?

A. If she had ever had one in my grandmother's house wouldn't I have known it; my goodness! Lawyer Bell, the very idea!

Q. You never heard that she ever had a baby named Robert Peterkin at all? A. No, I am honest, no.

Q. You never heard that? A. No.

Q. Yet you never heard that an old nigger woman assisted her a week or ten days after the birth of that child?

A. No, I don't know that; I am telling you I don't know that.

Q. You do say that no nigger woman knew anything about her having a child in Leavenworth?

A. I don't say no nigger woman, but not in my grandmother's house, I know that.

Q. You were here at Kansas City watching the taking of depositions in Leavenworth, weren't you?

A. No, I was watching the actions of Minnie.

Q. What were you watching Minnie's actions for?

A. To see how she was going to stand up under those lies.

Q. What lies? A. Lies Mr. Page had her to tell.

Q. Is that what was making you so nervous to see whether Minnie would stand up under the frame up?

A. She didn't stand up under it.

Q. She swore the child was born in the hospital in Leavenworth?

A. No, not that lie. That was a lie when they took her down to Tulsa. That was the lie in Leavenworth that she was going to tell. My stars!

Q. Are you suffering Sadie?

A. I have got shocked by Lawyer Bell. Never get over that as long as I live.

Q. What shocked you?

A. I will get over that but I may never look the same.

Q. Always be shocked will you? A. Always.

Q. Sadie, after hearing that you will have to get yourself three six shooters after that and carry them, won't you, that you have lost confidence in Lawyer Bell you will have to get three six shooters? A. I have lost it.

Q. Sadie, you remember about Lawyer Bell—You was arrested for disorderly conduct in about eighty-seven or eight on the streets, weren't you?

A. No, about eighty-three—no, eighty-seven or eighty-eight? Me and a white man and another girl, yes, got arrested; I was living on Fifth Street; Lawyer Bell knows that. He does know that but he doesn't know the other; I am surprised at him.

Q. Now, when you started this frame up you thought Minnie was dead, didn't you?

A. Bettie had said she was dead, and I hadn't seen her for seventeen or eighteen years, I thought she could be dead.

Q. She told you here that she thought she was dead?

A. Bettie said she found out about eleven years ago that Minnie had died up in Kansas City in a hospital.

Q. Told you she had found it out? A. No.

Q. Told you Minnie wasn't allotted, didn't she?

A. No, we never talked over that. Bettie was just telling a story then.

Q. When did Bettie tell you that?

A. When she came up there in March.

Q. Bettie was rather like you, couldn't tell the truth, could she? A. It makes no difference——

By Mr. German: Object to that as argument and calling for a conclusion, and an opinion of the witness.

A. Shall I answer that?

Q. Yes?

A. In this case we were lying all of us, yes, sir. I told the truth in some things, but in this case we were lying.

Q. You never told the truth when a lie would serve your interest better did you?

A. Oh, yes, the truth serves me better now.

Q. I say you never told the truth when a lie would serve you better, did you?

By Mr. German: I object to that as argument and calling for a conclusion of the witness and an opinion of the witness.

By Mr. Blakeney: I will say to counsel that I am willing for him to dictate an objection for conclusion and improper examination for every question in the record so as not to have the examination stopped.

By Mr. German: I am willing to that.

By Mr. Blakeney: That objection may be interposed both to the form and substance, improper cross examination, and that the question is calling for a conclusion and leading.

By Mr. German: And any other known ground of objection.

By Mr. Blakeney: Every other known ground.

By Mr. German: To all the questions that you may put to the witness.

By Mr. Blakeney: Yes.

Q. The question is, you will never tell the truth when a lie will serve your interest better?

A. I am telling the truth now, I told lies a lot.

Q. The truth will serve your interest better now, doesn't it? A. Yes, that is why I am telling it.

Q. It is serving your interest better?

A. Serves my soul better and the truth has to come out.

Q. If a lie would be more profitable or more advantage to you, you would tell a lie now, wouldn't you?

A. No, I couldn't Judge, not now. Tell another lie in this case, couldn't.

Q. You would have to start a new case then?

A. I couldn't do it at all.

Q. You would have to start a new frame up?

A. No, Judge, I wouldn't have a thing to do with that crooked case any more.

Q. Now, you didn't learn from Dennis or Bettie or Bartlett anything about the fact that Minnie had placed her children on the Indian Roll? A. Minnie had?

Q. In 1895, yes?

A. I didn't know who she placed on there Judge, listen, when she came back—

Q. I asked you if you knew. You didn't find out anything from them about it?

A. I didn't find out anything from them about it.

Q. How was it that you told Minnie at Seattle, when you were talking to her, why Minnie you enrolled Thomas, Alice, and Charlie and Harvey? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you said Alice was dead? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did you know that? A. How did I know that?

Q. How did you know that? A. Want me to tell that?

Q. I want you to tell.

A. I didn't find that out from them.

Q. Where did you find that out? A. From the Gypsy.

Q. When did you find that out?

A. I found that out later on.

Q. You found that out before you told Minnie?

A. Oh, before I told Minnie.

Q. Yes? A. Sure before I told Minnie.

Q. You told Minnie that second day that you were at Seattle, didn't you?

A. No, I didn't, I told Minnie that the first day I found her, didn't tell her where I got it at; I knew she had three children when she came to my house.

Q. You knew that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You didn't know Alice was dead?

A. Only that she had those two, was all that I knew.

Q. And you didn't know whether Alice was enrolled or not? A. I heard that.

Q. How?

A. I heard that Alice was born, I think I did, I wasn't hunting for nobody but one.

Q. No, but I am trying to find out how you learned it?

A. I don't know how I found that out.

Q. Didn't Bettie show you a copy of the roll?

A. No, no, Bettie Mann never showed me nothing. Bettie never showed me, I didn't get that from Bettie, I never have seen it.

Q. Didn't Bettie show you?

A. No, I never have seen that.

Q. A paper in which it showed, "Belonging to the Euchee Tribe was enrolled—That Minnie Atkins, Charlie Atkins, Alice Atkins and Thomas Atkins, Harvey Atkins and Nancy Atkins were enrolled."

A. Oh, no, Bettie never had nothing up there with her, never had a thing up there.

Q. Whether she had or not, she told you the facts?

A. No, she didn't.

Q. How did you learn it to tell to Minnie?

A. I learned that from a copy when I went down to tell the Gipsy lies.

Q. To tell the Gipsy a lie?

A. When Dennis and I started the lie up here, I went down to the Gipsy in April and told them a lie, told Mr. Brayley and Mr. McGraw.

Q. Wait a minute, Bettie spoke to you about it in Leavenworth? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That night that you saw Dennis and Rube, you had an engagement with Dennis and Rube? A. Yes, sir.

Q. The next morning you came to Kansas City?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You found Bartlett here? A. Yes, sir.
Q. You talked to Bartlett?
A. Talked to him about that lie that I knowed, yes, sir.
Q. Why did you say that you talked to him about the lie that you knowed?
A. Bettie told me to tell him a lie.
Q. Why do you say that, I didn't ask you that?
A. Because I wanted you to know what I told him.
Q. You sort of glory in the fact that you told it?
A. I wanted you to know that I told him a lie.
Q. Don't you know that I know it when you repeated it in this record?
A. I thought you might forget it, I didn't want you to forget that I was lying.
Q. You made a contract with Bartlett then didn't you?
A. I didn't make a contract with him then.
Q. You made a contract that he was to pay your expenses while you searched for Tommy?
A. To get him a Tommy, yes.
Q. You told him that you would go and get Tommy?
A. I told him I knew a boy, I hadn't seen him since he was five years old. I told him a lie.
Q. Why did you tell me again that you told him a lie?
A. Well, because I——
Q. I asked you what you told Bartlett. Now, Sadie, after you talked to Bartlett—— A. Yes, sir.
Q. You went back to Leavenworth? A. Yes, sir.
Q. And you stayed there how long?
A. I stayed there two weeks.
Q. Then what did you do?
A. I went then back to Kansas City where they had detectives, where detectives had this boy.
Q. You came over to Kansas City to see this Tommy Atkins the detectives had?
A. Yes, and Bettie had sent for them.
Q. And instead of going to Muskogee, you went to Tulsa?
Q. My home, Tulsa, yes, sir.
Q. What were you doing at Leavenworth? A. When?
Q. When Bettie found you there?
A. Me and Dennis had done pulled off a job—went there for me and him to pull off this job on this old soldier; we robbed him of a thousand dollars that white people had of his, and his house down here at Odessa, and we had his house and lot all tied up and we couldn't get it sold; Dennis and I.
Q. You just cleaned the old fellow?

A. Cleaned him fair, me and Dennis; had to marry him to do it.

Q. Did you marry him?

A. Yes, I married him; Dennis had me marry him.

Q. White or black?

A. I wouldn't care what he was, but this happened to be a colored man. I had to marry him so we could get this thing untied.

Q. So you did marry the old fellow?

A. Yes, sir, never lived with him a day.

Q. Just to pull off the scheme?

A. Yes, sir, Dennis got it tied up so I had to marry him and pull the scheme off, Dennis has my papers—Will papers a notary gave me.

Q. Where is the old soldier now?

A. He is up there in the Fort now.

Q. That is the fraud you have been refusing to tell about isn't it?

A. Yes, that is the one between me and Dennis.

Q. That is the one when Judge Stuart was asking you that you refused to tell about? A. I did then.

Q. You had been up there pulling that off, how long had you been there?

A. I had been there several months when Bettie found me.

Q. Been there seven months?

A. Yes, sir, seven months.

Q. Now, after this two weeks that you came over to Kansas City and went down to Tulsa, how long did you stay at Tulsa?

A. I think I stayed at Tulsa some four or five days, I think.

Q. You saw Bartlett there?

A. I called him over the 'phone and had him come.

Q. He came over and you saw him and talked to him?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You didn't learn from him how Minnie had the children enrolled, did you?

A. No, I didn't learn nothing from him; all he wanted was Thomas Atkins, he was crazy about Tommy.

Q. Crazy about a Tommy?

A. A Tommy, yes, sir. He thought there was a Tommy and I told him there was one and he was crazy about getting a Tommy.

Q. He knew the deed that he had taken from Minnie was then a forgery? A. He knew that then, yes, sir.

Q. He knew that Bettie had forged it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. He had Bettie hired to help you?

A. Yes, sir, had me hired to help Bettie; I was a Leavenworth woman.

Q. Bettie was boss, she was master of the situation and you was merely assisting?

A. At that time she was the boss, at that time only.

Q. You finally undermined her?

A. Finally undermined her and got to be boss myself; I could boss that job.

Q. Then you kicked Bettie out?

A. I didn't kick her out then; she came with me again down there and I——

Q. After you talked with Bartlett, did you talk with anybody else except Bettie about the enrollment?

A. No, not down there except the Gipsy.

Q. What did the Gipsy tell you?

A. I went up there to the Gipsy and told them that I knew that I was a Leavenworth woman, and I knew Tommy Atkins and they said, you do? and they said, who raised him, Sadie? and I said, she had him in my grandmother's house. I told Mr. McGraw that; and they told me then about Minnie enrolling, said did you know when she enrolled the children; and I told him yes, sir.

Q. Tell all that you said? A. I don't know all.

Q. I said all that you can remember?

A. I don't know all that I did say. I stayed in the office quite a little bit talking.

Q. How long did you stay?

A. I don't know how long I did stay.

Q. They told you that Minnie had enrolled herself, Tommy, Alice, and Harvey and Charlie?

A. Yes, sir, they told me that.

Q. You told you that in the enrollment it had shown that Alice was dead?

A. No, sir. They didn't tell me they showed that Alice was dead; didn't say anything about her showing anybody dead.

Q. Didn't say anything about anybody being dead?

A. Didn't say that, no, sir.

Q. They told you that this showed Tommy was the oldest?

A. No, I didn't say that, just told me about she enrolled when she came down there, didn't say anybody was dead.

Q. Didn't tell you about the ages?

A. No, didn't tell me a thing about that.

Q. You had never known anything about the ag[illegible] until that time?

A. No, I didn't know anything about the ages, only them two that she had here.

Q. Those two that you had seen? A. Yes.

Q. And you didn't know anything about the ages?

A. No, I didn't know anything about the ages.

Q. When did you first learn about the supposed ages?

A. I never did know anything about the supposed ages.

Q. When you were talking to Minnie, at Seattle, you didn't know anything about what was supposed to be the ages?

A. No, I didn't know about the supposed ages, so I just told her to say 1885, I didn't know.

Q. You didn't know what the supposed ages were?

A. No, not until I was talking to Mr. Page.

Q. As a matter of fact, when you were talking to Minnie there, you didn't know whether she had a Tommy or not?

A. Yes, I knew when I left Leavenworth that she didn't have one.

Q. You didn't know she had one at Denver?

A. I knew she had that one at Denver.

Q. You didn't know that she didn't have any at Denver?

A. I learned that she had three children at Denver.

Q. You knew that she didn't have any at Fort Wayne?

A. I didn't go to Fort Wayne.

Q. Did you find out whether she ever lived at Fort Wayne? A. Yes, I know it.

Q. Did you find out whether she had any child there?

A. I knew she didn't have one there.

Q. Did you find out whether she did?

A. No, I found out she left Fort Logan in ninety-eight, but I didn't know she had any children in Fort Wayne, but I found out that she didn't have but three children in Fort Logan.

Q. But when you were talking to Minnie, you didn't know whether she had, in the twenty-five or seven years that you hadn't seen her, whether she had had a child named Tommy or not? A. The twenty-five years?

Q. Yes?

A. I knew she didn't have any Tommy, I knew she didn't have any in Leavenworth, I didn't know what else she had.

Q. You had no information she ever claimed it was born in Leavenworth when you went to see her? A. No.

Q. When you and Dennis were working up your scheme, you didn't know whether Minnie claimed this Tommy was born in Leavenworth now or Fort Logan or any other place where she had been? A. What Tommy?

Q. This Tommy that she enrolled?

A. Good God! She ain't never enrolled no Thomas as her boy?

Q. She has not? A. No.

Q. How did it get enrolled?

A. She told me that she drew that money for her father, her own self.

Q. Oh, she didn't tell you that she put Thomas' name as a son on the roll?

A. She told me that Thomas Atkins was my father and was dead seventeen years when I drew this money.

Q. When you got to Seattle? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you framed that up? A. Yes, sir, back here.

Q. Sadie, just tell the truth, isn't it a fact that after you found out that Minnie had a child at Leavenworth, that you then were trying to develop that fact, and when you turned against her you just merely claimed that was your frame up?

A. Had what child at Leavenworth?

Q. Didn't you know that she had the child at Leavenworth yourself, and when this three thousand dollar arrangement was made, then you just framed up with Buell to say that you framed this other up as a frame up?

A. Had Tommy Atkins at Leavenworth?

Q. Yes?

A. Oh, my God! Judge, I hope you will live until you find Tommy Atkins, you will live forever.

Q. You say when you got to Los Angeles and other places, that you would inquire for Tommy Atkins?

A. I knowed there wasn't none, I was trying to get somebody named Tommy Atkins and bring him there and put him around. The negroes will tell a lie a minute in Leavenworth, I found that out here this morning.

Q. They would tell it in Kansas City too, wouldn't they?

A. No, sir, I will never get a nigger in a suit anywhere.

Q. Niggers will tell a lie anywhere?

A. Yes, anywhere. I will never get a nigger in a law suit.

Q. Sadie, away back in 1895, Minnie told you that she had drawn money for her dead father? A. No, she didn't.

Q. She didn't tell you that?

A. In '96 when she came back?

Q. Yes? A. No, she didn't tell me that.

Q. You didn't know who she drawed for then?

A. No, she told me that she drawed money that belonged to her and that she was leaving to go to the Philippines, didn't tell me that until I got to Seattle.

Q. Didn't tell you about her father until you got to Seattle?

A. No, she didn't tell me who she drew that money for, didn't tell me until I got to Seattle. Told me that she was going to the Phillipines.

Q. You learned before you got to Seattle that Minnie had drawn Nancy's money, her sister?

A. Yes, I learned that from Nancy, I didn't know whether she had drawn it or not.

Q. I know, but you had learned it?

A. Nancy told me she had, I didn't know.

Q. When you were talking to her in Seattle, you assumed what she referred to in Kansas City in '96 was drawing Nancy's money? A. I told her what Nancy said.

Q. Well, Minnie had told you she had drawn money that didn't belong to her? A. Didn't belong to her, yes.

Q. Nancy told you that she had drawn her money?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you put the two together and understood that Minnie had drawn Nancy's money and that was what Minnie referred to?

A. When she asked me where her sister Nancy was.

Q. She asked you that at Seattle?

A. Yes, she asked me that at Seattle. She thought Nancy was dead. I said, if dead I seen Nancy, she was talking about that fourteen dollars, and she said, you tell Nancy when I make some money I am going to pay her back.

Q. That is all she claimed she owed Nancy, that fourteen dollars? A. That fourteen dollars, yes, sir.

Q. Well, Minnie was talking there to you about drawing money for her dead father some nineteen years previous, who had been dead some seventeen years, I believe you said?

A. That is what she said, I didn't say that.

Q. I understand, some seventeen years previous before that, did she explain to you how she could have drawn money for her dead father?

A. She told me—never asked me how many children I had, that was during the same week.

Q. When she drew the money you never asked her how many children she had?

A. No, when she drew the money I never asked her how many children she had.

Q. She told you that and you figured up how many children she had?

A. No, I didn't know she had drawn for Nancy until she told me herself.

Q. She told you she had three brothers and sisters didn't she? A. I knew she had a sister and brother.

Q. You knew that? A. Yes, I knew that.

Q. And you know then that she couldn't have drawn money for her father?

A. I didn't know that until she told me.

Q. You knew that she couldn't? A. How did I know it.

Q. You thought that one child could draw money that was due for all the children, did you?

A. I didn't know what they could do, I know what she told me that she did do.

Q. How long did she tell you that her father had been dead when she drew that money?

A. Told me he had been dead seventeen years, Sadie he has been dead seventeen years, when I drew that money.

Q. And she had drawn the money nineteen years before she was talking to you? A. Nineteen years?

Q. Yes? A. Yes, I guess so.

Q. She told you that, didn't she?

A. I was telling you what she had said to me.

Q. I am asking you that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Told you that her father had died, when you were talking, had been dead twenty-six years?

A. She didn't say how long.

Q. Had been dead seventeen years when she drew it?

A. She didn't say thirty-six years, didn't count up the time then at all.

Q. Didn't count it up and add it together?

A. No, sir, I am just telling what she said.

Q. Did she mention any other brothers and sisters besides Nancy?

A. No, sir, she said she thought she was dead from a letter that she got at Mazula, Montana, said it was from Kate; she said Kate had it, and I said no Kate Ward is dead, been dead three years.

Q. Then she mentioned Nancy and Kate both to you as sisters? A. Yes, she knew I knew those were sisters.

Q. Did she mention her brother to you?

A. Yes, she mentioned Lee. The reason she mentioned Lee, I told her about my having Bettie there in town and told her who Bettie was, and the reason I didn't want her to see Bettie, I said you know Bettie's cousin is the one who killed your brother, the only brother she had, because I knew the minute I mentioned Bettie to her, and Lee, she would hate Bettie.

Q. This is not pertinent to what I am asking about, I am asking about did she mention her brothers and sisters to you in that conversation?

A. She didn't mention Lee at that time, she mentioned Nancy and Kate but not her brother.

Q. During the time that you were there, she mentioned her brother, Lee? A. During the week, yes, sir.

Q. She didn't explain to you why she could draw any money for her father, two sisters and a brother?

A. We didn't discuss it, no, sir.

Q. She told you these two sisters and brothers were down living in Indian Territory?

A. She didn't know where they were.

Q. You knew they continued to live there?

A. Yes, sir, I knew that they were down there.

Q. And the girl that had come back from Denver in 1895 and stayed a few months, had drawn money for her father, when there were brothers and sisters living in Indian Territory who didn't get a part of it?

A. I knew they didn't get any part of it, because Minnie left there; I can't tell you any more than what Minnie said to me.

Q. Now, getting back again just a minute, I will not take long. Did you know Mary Gillisp?

A. No, sir, G-i-l-l-i-s, ain't it?

Q. Yes? A. Yes, sir, I know Mary Gillis.

Q. Who is she?

A. A colored woman there married to a white soldier, she's dead now I guess.

Q. Didn't you run with her when you were a girl?

A. Yes, sir, run with her when I was on Fifth Street, Lawyer Bell knows that.

Q. Was she a lady of easy virtue?

A. Yes, sir. White men only.

Q. You colored girls have two classes, don't you, one that run with white men only and one that run with colored men?

A. Well, at that time, we were running with white men, meeting down at Granny's every night with white men; that is the truth of it, you want the truth of it don't you?

Q. Yes?

A. Yes, sir, my grandmother raised me from a little girl and when I got to be grown I would go down there with white men.

Q. Well, others could do the same, couldn't they?

A. Yes, sir, any girl.

Q. Was Leavenworth a dry town then?

A. In eighty-eight, I think it was, yes, sir, I think Leavenworth was.

Q. Well, the law never was enforced in Leavenworth until here along after nineteen hundred was it?

A. Saloons wasn't wide open then. Maybe—— I don't think, because I used to go to a white place on Fifth Street, Johnny Farns, and I don't think he sold any; I used to go there and buy hard cider and I am not positive about the saloons.

Q. Johnny Farns was killed in 1887, wasn't he?

A. No, Johnny Farns must have been killed after I moved down to Kansas City, I was in Johnny Farns' place—what time?

Q. You are sure that he was not killed in eighty-seven?

A. No, I am positive; you could go up there and find out.

Q. When was he killed?

A. I don't know when he was killed, I think after I moved.

Q. When did you move?

A. I moved away from Leavenworth in 1889; I am sure Johnny didn't get killed when I was there; I didn't stay away from Leavenworth, I was back there every three weeks.

Q. When did you move, what time of the year?

A. I left there about the first of October, I think; coming down here getting ready for the Priest of Palace parade.

Q. Do you know Oregon Henderson?

A. Yes, sir, I knew her.

Q. Who is she?

A. A colored woman, she went with a fellow named Babe Jackson and she lived with him—lived then——

Q. She married Babe finally, didn't she?

A. And killed him, yes, sir. Married him and killed him, yes, sir.

Q. Is she alive now?

A. I don't know whether she is alive or not.

Q. Was she a girl of easy virtue? A. Well, yes, she was.

Q. White men or colored?

A. I never seen Oregon around with any white men because this fellow was a miner and he made her a pretty good living.

Q. Did Minnie know Mary Gillis? A. Mary Gillis?

Q. Yes?

A. Didn't know Mary Gillis anything that I know about.

Q. Do you know whether she could have known her or not, don't you? A. I don't know whether she could.

By Mr. German: I object to the question on the ground that—— Well, the objection is already in the record.

A. I said not that I know, Mary Gillis was at my house all the time on Fifth Street, because her husband then was out of the Post, Street Car Conductor in town.

Q. Do you remember that Mary Gillis gave an entertainment or reception that a lot of white soldiers came down?

A. I wasn't there.

Q. And that the police raided them?

A. No, I don't remember that.

Q. In 1888? A. No, I don't remember that.

Q. You know it did happen, don't you?

A. No, I don't know it did happen, I don't know that; I don't say it didn't happen because I don't know.

Q. You don't know whether they was there, whether Minnie was there when the raid was made or not?

A. Minnie Atkins?

Q. One Minnie Atkins?

A. I don't know that she wasn't there, but I say I believe she wasn't, I know she wasn't.

Q. Are you going now to say you believe?

A. No, I will say—I don't know, but she wasn't there.

Q. You say that you know she wasn't there?

A. No, I don't say I know she wasn't there, but I believe she wasn't there, I know enough to know she wasn't.

By Mr. German: Sadie, don't argue the case.

Q. Do you remember a soldied, a big white soldier with burnsides down the sides of his face?

A. I don't know no soldiers at all.

Q. Named McDonald?

A. No, I didn't know no soldiers at all, I never did run with no soldiers.

Q. Did you ever see any soldier running around of that description and by that name?

A. No, I didn't know none of their names.

Q. Did Minnie know Oregon Henderson?

A. Not that I know of; not in my life.

Q. In 1884, did you run around at nights with Minnie?

A. Minnie didn't go anywhere at nights and I didn't either.

Q. Ho- do you know she didn't go anywhere at nights?

A. I never seen her away nights from Hyde's.

Q. Yet, do you know it?

A. I knowed her there about three months, she came there in July and I worked at Haven's from July up until about the latter part of August and I left there and went just a block west of Minnie's—to Third and Arch, and worked there until about the 4th of October.

Q. 1884?

A. 1884, and I went home; my parents lived in town, and stayed there about two months, until about October 22nd, and then I left town.

Q. You left about August 22nd and went down home?

A. Left in the middle of August, where I was working out at Havens, down this side of Minnie's, and went then to Guyons and worked there.

Q. Is that Frank Guyons?

A. Yes, had a daughter named Lily and a boy named Will; I used to work for their sister years ago; and I worked there until October 4th, about October 4th I quit Guyon's and went over to my mother's house in the town and stayed there.

Q. About two months? A. Yes.

Q. Let's stop now? A. All right.

Q. During the time that you were working now at all these places that you named, you saw Minnie frequently?

A. Saw Minnie frequently, yes, sir.

Q. How frequently did you see her?

A. Well, I would say that I seen Minnie every day or two.

Q. You were straight then, were you?

A. Yes, I wasn't but fifteen, and she just came from school.

Q. You didn't know what Minnie was doing during the nights?

A. I can't swear what Minnie was doing during the night.

Q. So far as you knew she was behaving herself?

A. Behaving herself.

Q. You were young? A. And she was too.

Q. And you were younger than she was?

A. I was younger than she was about four or five years.

Q. When you were fifteen then, she was nineteen?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you were fifteen you wouldn't have understood the sexual relations between men and women?

A. Oh, I was old enough, I was quite a kid.

Q. You didn't understand those matters?

A. I guess I could understood them; I knew she was nice all right.

Q. You didn't know she was bad? A. No, sir, I didn't.

Q. And you didn't know what she was doing at nights?

A. Not every night, no, sir.

Q. And you didn't know but what some nights she might have slipped off and met Ida Foster, did you?

A. She couldn't have met Ida Foster then, because Ida Foster then was about thirteen. and what could Ida have done?

Q. I didn't ask you what Ida could have done, but I asked if she could have met her?

A. No, sir, she was about thirteen; I am so much older than Ida.

Q. Just couldn't have met a thirteen year old girl, could she? A. No, not Ida then, no, sir.

Q. In 1884, she was thirteen, you say?

A. Ida was about thirteen, I am two or three years older than Ida is.

Q. When did Ida commence going around, about what age?

A. I guess about when she was about sixteen I guess.

Q. About sixteen? A. Yes, I guess.

Q. When she commenced, she went pretty fast then, didn't she? A. Yes, she and I was going together then.

Q. Both were going awful fast?

A. Both were going awful fast.

Q. In police court every few days?

A. No, the white men were keeping us out of police court.

Q. You started her down her decline, didn't you?

A. No, sir, she had three sisters older than I was, and they started her I guess.

Q. They may have started her out before you knew her then?

A. I don't know, I know she had two awful bad sisters in the town.

Q. Did you know Emma Wilson? A. Emma Wilson, yes.

Q. Yes? A. Annie Wilson?

Q. Annie? A. Annie or Emma?

Q. I said Emma?

A. I knew Annie Wilson; I don't think I know Emma Wilson: I know Annie Wilson.

Q. Do you remember Captain Matthews' girl, Emma Wilson?

A. No, I don't believe I knew Captain Matthews and John, I don't know whether I knew his daughter.

Q. No, not his daughter, a woman that he was keeping, Emma Wilson?

A. I don't recall whether I knew her or not; I knew Captain and his boy.

Q. When did you get acquainted with this old crook, Dennis Jones?

A. Dennis used to go with my father when I was a little girl about eight years old.

Q. Dennis is older than you?

A. Dennis is about—— I guess Dennis now about sixty, yes, sir.

Q. How much older is he than you?

A. Fourteen or fifteen years, I will soon be forty-seven.

Q. Now, when do you say that you got first acquainted with him? A. About eight years old.

Q. About as far back as you remember you have known Dennis Jones?

A. We had been there about two years when I first met Dennis Jones.

Q. What was Dennis doing when you first met him?

A. When I first met him he was Porter there at the old Continental Hotel.

Q. The old Continental Hotel? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long did he work there as Porter of the old Continental Hotel?

A. I can't tell you that, I don't remember; when I left Leavenworth, he was on the police force.

Q. You left Leavenworth in 1889, and Dennis was then on the police force?

A. On the police force, him and Rube Smith too.

Q. You say that Ed Murphy was on the police force?

A. Ed Murphy was on the police force too, and I am positive that he was on the police force.

Q. When did Ed Murphy go on the police force?

A. I don't know; first he was a guard at the jail; I won't swear that he was on the police force.

Q. You knew everybody that was on the police force?

A. Yes, I was old enough, and I was doing enough; a lot was up there with me.

Q. You was trying to stand in with the police all the time? A. I was standing in with them.

Q. You stood in with Dennis?

A. Dennis was a nigger, but I stood in with him; I never —I think he was on the police force, I am not sure.

Q. You think Murphy was on the police force?

A. I think he was.

Q. But Ed Murphy got on the police—— When did Ed Murphy get on the police force?

A. I can't tell you. I had a lot of other men to keep account of besides Ed Murphy.

Q. But you do know when you left Leavenworth, that he was on the police force? A. I am most sure.

Q. How long do you think he was on it?

A. I can't tell you.

Q. What is your judgment?

A. I won't pass that, I don't know.

Q. You never did hear about him arresting Minnie down there in Granny Letcher's place?

A. About Ed Murphy arresting her?

Q. Yes or no?

A. No. Because when I left Leavenworth, I was living within a block of Granny's.

Q. You heard about Granny's place being raided?

A. You want the truth, don't you?

Q. Yes, if you can tell me I would like to have it.

A. I never heard of Granny's place, Mr. Blakeney, being raided after she moved off of Cherokee Street.

Q. Never did hear about it?

A. Never did hear about a raid being up to her house the whole time I was there.

Q. Well, I asked you if you knew of Minnie's being arrested down at Granny Letcher's by Ed Murphy?

A. No, sir.

Q. You didn't know that? A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did you ever hear of anybody being arrested at Granny Letcher's on Seneca? A. No, sir, never heard of it.

Q. She was still doing the same old business?

A. The same old business, but the law had let Granny alone because she was old.

Q. She had sort of a stand in?

A. No, but she had been knowing Ed Murphy around there and all of the old ones.

Q. Knowing him when she lived on Cherokee Street too?

A. Yes, but not so well acquainted with him, he was a guard at the jail then.

Q. He sometimes arrested people at Granny's without arresting—— A. Down on Cherokee Street?

Q. But not on Seneca Street? A. No, I don't.

Q. It wouldn't do for you to admit of Granny being arrested on Seneca Street? A. Admit it if I knew it.

Q. You would admit it if she was raided on Cherokee Street, because that was before Minnie came to Leavenworth?

A. No, it wasn't, Minnie came to Leavenworth in eighty-four, Granny lived on Cherokee Street——

Q. Did you ever hear of Murphy arresting Minnie on Cherokee Street? A. No, I never did.

Q. Never heard of it? A. No.

Q. Who did you hear of being arrested at Granny's place on Cherokee Street?

A. No, no one; I knew they did arrest people down there, but no one that I could call their names.

Q. Are you feeling all right, Sadie?

A. Oh, yes, I am feeling all right. Mr. Blakeney, I think we are getting along just fine.

Q. You say you don't just know when Ed Murphy went on the police force?

A. No, I don't; I know he was on there, but I can't tell you just when.

Q. When did Dennis Jones first go on the police force?

A. I don't know that I know he was on there before I left, because they came to my house, Ed Murphy and Dennis and Rube all came to my house when I was running this place on Shawnee.

Q. What day of the week did they come to your house?

A. Any day they wanted to come there.

Q. Name the day of the week?

A. Night, they didn't come up there in the day time.

Q. Did they come frequently?

A. Very frequently, yes, sir.

Q. You had your husband there with you?

A. I didn't have no husband then; I was living with a white man.

Q. Living with a white man? A. I had one.

Q. About how long now—search your memory—about how long had Dennis Jones been on the police force before you left in 1889?

A. He hadn't been on there very long before I left, he hadn't been on there very long; maybe a year or something like that, I don't know right now when, I can't tell, but I know that he hadn't been on so very long; I would be afraid to say when he did go on. I wasn't bothered with the law then; I wasn't keeping house until 1888.

Q. Before you started keeping house you wasn't bothered with the law? A. No, I was living with my mother.

Q. Before you went to keeping house, you did run around with the boys sometimes?

A. I run around with white men before I went to keeping house, up at my grandmothers, I was working but I went up to Granny's.

Q. About how long before you went to keeping house before you went to going up to Granny's?

A. Do you mean with men?

Q. Yes?

A. Oh, some—about a year or more before that.

Q. About a year or more A. About a year.

Q. Then, that was about 1887 that you began to run up to Granny's with men?

A. About the summer of eighty-seven with men, but between that I had always been around her place before that.

Q. I am not talking about being around her place, I am talking about you from the summer of 1887 to the summer of 1888, you didn't pay much attention to the police force?

A. No.

Q. You don't know whether Dennis was on the police force or not?

A. No, I can't remember; he might have been, I can't remember now.

Q. Before Dennis went on the police force what did he do? A. Now, I don't know what Dennis done.

Q. He had been a porter at the old hotel?

A. The old Continental Hotel.

Q. The Continental was the leading hotel at Leavenworth? A. At that time, yes.

Q. Do you remember what Dennis did between the times—— A. I don't know.

Q. In either of these places, now, he would have learned the loose girls of the town, couldn't he?

A. He could have learned them, yes, the loose girls of the town.

Q. As the porter of a hotel or as a policeman?

A. Yes, he would have learned the loose girls.

Q. The loose girls of the town?

A. He would have learned the loose girls.

Q. You don't know whether or who Minnie would associate with after she commenced going with the soldiers?

A. I never knew of a single soul, no, sir, outside of the Hamilton's that ever I knew of her going with.

Q. Did you ever see her with the Hamilton's, or just see her going down to the Hamilton's house?

A. I have walked with her; not into the Hamilton's house, but lots of times going to the Hamilton's house; not a whole lot of times, but a number of times.

Q. Going to Hamilton's house in the evenings?

A. Not always in the evenings when she worked at Hyde's and going down from the Fort, I worked at Brocks, in going up there I would see her going there, I don't know where she went, I couldn't swear that, in the fall of eighty-five and the spring of eighty-six.

Q. You never saw her with other girls?

A. Not a soul in my life.

Q. You never saw her with any girl except yourself?

A. I never did, and she wasn't what you call an associate of mine, what you would call running partners, she treated me nice.

Q. You don't know whether she had a partner or not?

A. Not that I seen.

Q. You never seen her with any partner?

A. I never seen her with none, no, sir.

Q. Did you ever see Minnie go with him?

A. No, sir, Mr. Blakeney.

Q. About how old was he in eighty-five?

A. Travis Findley?

Q. Yes?

A. I think then about—I suppose that Mr. Findley was about—well, I don't know how old he was in eighty-five. Mr. Findley if he was living, of course he is dead, if he was living he would be somewhere about sixty-three or four years old, about the age of my mother.

Q. Then he was about thirty-two or thirty-three at that time? A. Yes, sir, about the age of Dennis.

Q. A colored man?

A. Yes, a colored barber at that time.

Q. He was a pretty gay fellow?

A. Yes, sir, he had a family there. He had a wife.

A. No, he couldn't have been too gay with his wife; his wife lived in the barber shop, you know.

Q. Do you know Lee Porter?

A. Yes, he is dead too, Levi Porter, all those people are dead.

Q. Who was he?

A. A fellow around town. He would be about the same age if he was living, sixty some years.

Q. He was a pretty gay sport, wasn't he?

A. Pretty gay sport.

Q. Why do you say he is dead, Sadie?

A. Why, I am almost sure he is dead; everybody there that you have named to me is dead.

Q. All dead? A. Not all of them.

Q. You didn't accuse Page or Dennis Jones of killing any of them?

A. No, they have been dead too long ago. Some of those people have been dead twenty years.

Q. Do you know William Gray? A. Will Gray?

Q. Yes. A. Yes, sir.

Q. He is dead now? A. No. Will Gray isn't dead.

Q. When did you know him?

A. I don't know whether he is dead or not, I haven't seen him.

Q. When did you know him? A. Will Gray?

Q. Yes.

A. I went to school with his brother—Will and Lewis; of course, Will Gray was quite old—older than I was. He went along with Dennis, of course. I thought he was living.

Q. Did you ever see him at Granny Letcher's?

A. No, I never seen Will Gray there.

Q. John Bland? A. Oh, yes, I knew him well.

Q. He was a pretty good sport, wasn't he?

A. No. John Bland wasn't a game man. I knew John Bland from the time that I was about eight years old.

Q. Charlie Quinn?

A. Yes, I knew Charlie Quinn; worked for Doctor Brock. Those three I named were Doctor Brock's coachmen—he had three.

Q. All colored men? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever see Minnie, now, with any one of those men that I named?

A. Those men that you named?

Q. Yes. A. No, sir, oh, no.

Q. You never saw them with her?

A. And I have saw John Bland often. They were coachmen at the place I worked.

Q. In the daytime? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did Minnie ever work at that place where John Bland lived? A. She worked——

Q. Worked there at the same time that John Bland worked there? A. She didn't work at the barn.

Q. Worked at Brock's? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You knew John Bland well because you worked at Brock's? A. Yes, sir; of course I knew——

Q. You said in answer to a question, of course I knew John Bland—he worked at Brock's. He did work there, did he?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Minnie would have known John Bland?

A. After she came up there in the fall of '85.

Q. And whether she had known him before that, you don't know?

A. I don't know whether she knew him before that or not; I can't swear to that.

Q. Now, Sadie, when you was working for Bartlett, out at Seattle, you met Frank Long, you- first time, did you, at the hotel in Seattle?

A. The first time ever I had seen Frank Long?

Q. Not seen him, met him; the first time you had met him—had a conversation with him?

A. The first time I had seen Mr. Long?

Q. I asked you——

A. Oh, no, sir, I had met Frank Long in Tulsa—Frank Long in Tulsa—before ever I went to Seattle, when he was Indian agent there.

Q. Why didn't you know him when you met him in the hall-way?

A. He had his collar turned up this way, and his cap pulled down over his face when he passed me in the hall.

Q. So disguised that you didn't recognize him?

A. I thought it was Mr. Cook—the way he had his coat up.

Q. What kind of coat did he have on?

A. I don't know; it was dark in the hall.

Q. What kind of hat? A. He had on a cap.

Q. Cap? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Fur cap? A. No, it wasn't a fur cap.

Q. When you saw him with Bettie there the next day——

A. That same day.

Q. You saw him with Bettie, did you see what kind of an overcoat he had on then?

A. He didn't have on an overcoat then; that was in June.

Q. June? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Didn't he have on an overcoat when you saw him in the hall? A. I said his coat.

Q. Had his coat collar up? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see what kind of coat he had on that night in Bettie's room?

A. I saw him about two o'clock in the day.

Q. Did you notice what kind of coat he had on?

A. No, I didn't notice what kind of clothes he had on.

Q. At that time you weren't working for Long there in the hotel? A. No, I wasn't.

Q. You were working for Bartlett? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You had made up your mind that whenever you got any information that you would throw it to the Gypsy?

A. Yes, sir, to the Gypsy.

Q. And double-cross Bartlett?

A. That was my intention to do that.

Q. You had agreed with somebody to do that?

A. Had agreed with Dennis and Rube before ever I started out on this boy.

Q. Before you started out you agreed with Dennis and Rube to make Bartlett pay the expense there but if you got anything, to throw it to the Gypsy?

A. Yes, sir, I didn't know who Bartlett was and I knew the Gypsy had money.

Q. You wanted to throw it [] somebody that had money?

A. Yes, sir, that is what I was to do.

Q. You kept your eye on the money?

A. On the money—on the money, yes, sir.

Q. Now, you talked there with Long? I believe you said you cussed him? A. I did.

Q. Did you have a conversation after you got through cussing him? A. Yes, sir, a very short one.

Q. A short one? A. Yes, sir.

Q. He offered you three thousand dollars to steal Minnie?

A. To steal Minnie. She told him that the baby died when it was six months old, and that was too early.

Q. Sadie, why did you say that?

A. You said did we have a conversation—you asked me, and I told you what it was.

Q. Did you understand that I was asking you if you had a conversation?

A. That is what I thought you asked.

Q. Didn't you understand that I asked you if he had asked you to steal Minnie for three thousand dollars?

A. I didn't understand you that way.

Q. He did ask you to steal Minnie for him?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And offered you three thousand dollars? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you refused to do that? A. I refused to do it.

Q. You waited for about a week after that for Bartlett?

A. Yes, sir, it took him a week to get there; yes, sir.

Q. Where did you stay during the week?

A. Up where I lived at; I think the number is——

Q. I don't care for the number.

A. At the hotel on Jackson street—a rooming house where I stopped. The name of the hotel was the Comfort rooming house, I think, but it was on Jackson street and the people's name was Jackson that run it.

Q. What did you do during that week—just in a general way?

A. Bettie and I just bummed around, taking in the moving picture shows.

Q. Was Minnie there then?

A. I couldn't see her, she was fastened up and I couldn't get to see her. She didn't stay at her house any more after that.

Q. Did you go to her?

A. Didn't I tell you the other day?

Q. I want you to tell me again.

A. I went out to the house and the house was locked up and Minnie was up to Captain MacNab's.

Q. What do you mean up at Captain MacNab's?

A. Captain MacNab had taken Minnie and moved her up in the Fort.

Q. Moved her to a house in the Fort? A. I suppose.

Q. You didn't know where Minnie was?

A. I didn't know.

Q. You knew that Captain MacNab lived at the mess house?

A. And had stolen her and carried her there.

Q. You knew that Captain MacNab lived at the mess house? A. I knew where his house was.

Q. You knew all the unmarried officers lived at the mess house?

A. I don't know who was there; Captain MacNab was there.

Q. And don't you know that women were not allowed in that place?

A. I don't know who was living there; I don't know. A woman came there and let Mr. Bartlett and I in—opened the door—and Captain MacNab came down the step.

Q. A white woman or a colored woman?

A. No negroes were out in that Fort, no.

Q. Negroes didn't have very good standing out in that Fort? A. Minnie is about the only negro out there.

Q. Is Minnie a negro?

A. She ain't pure white; some white, but not all white. Doctor Brock used to tell her about that, too; he examined her hands—I seen him do it lots of times.

Q. Now when you—during that week, you went out to the house that Minnie was in out there?

A. On the following Monday, yes, sir; the next day after Sunday.

Q. Saturday you saw Long? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you do Sunday?

A. Sunday I stayed all day with Minnie.

Q. All day with Minnie? A. Yes, all day.

Q. Sunday they had a soldier guarding?

A. Yes, sir. A soldier stayed on the porch all day long watching Minnie.

Q. And on Monday you went out again?

A. Yes, sir. She had done told me not to come back out there; that I was going to be arrested. And I came in Seattle, but I went anyhow.

Q. What did she say that you were going to get arrested for?

A. They found out that I wasn't no Government officer and Hanford and MacNab seen there was some money in it, and they was going to have me arrested then.

Q. Sadie, why do you say that Hanford and Captain MacNab seen where there was going to be some money in it?

A. Oh, Frank Long had done told me how much money there was to the land, and they didn't want any more negroes mixed up in it.

Q. You are just assuming all that?

A. I assume it from what I know afterwards.

Q. Anything that you assume you know is true?

A. From the action, yes, sir, I will say I know it; yes, sir.

Q. On Monday you went out and she wasn't there?

A. She wasn't there about ten o'clock in the morning.

Q. How long did you stay?

A. I got off of the car——

Q. Just answer, now, direct.

A. Out in the Fort altogether?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, I walked up in the Fort quite a distance there—

Q. Did you see Minnie? A. No, I didn't see her.

Q. Did you see any house where Minnie was?

A. I went to Captain MacNab's house, where the white women had the grocery store outside the Fort—she told me that Captain MacNab had taken Minnie into the Fort.

Q. The Fort you understand by that as a collection of houses? A. Up in the quarters.

Q. Where the officers and privates have their quarters?

A. Yes, sir, up in there.

Q. A good many buildings?

A. Quite a number of dwellings up there.

Q. You never found Minnie and you don't know where Minnie was? A. Not at that time.

Q. When did you go back there? The next day?

A. On that coming Saturday with Mr. Bartlett.

Q. Did you stay away all the week?

A. All the week, yes, sir.

Q. And went back on the coming Saturday with Mr. Bartlett? A. Went back on Saturday with Mr. Bartlett.

Q. Did you see Minnie there?

A. I saw her there Saturday morning, June 20th?

Q. Where did you see her?

A. Captain MacNab sent and got her, I reckon.

Q. I asked you where you saw her?

A. In Captain MacNab's house.

Q. Bartlett had a talk with her?

A. A very short talk, yes, sir.

Q. What was the talk Bartlett had?

A. After Captain MacNab went and got her and told her to sit down, she sit about—further than that from there—in a chair, and Mr. Bartlett sat in front of her, and Captain stood off to this side, standing up.

Q. Close to her?

A. No, sir, closer to Mr. Bartlett, but where Mr. Bartlett couldn't look at Minnie without seeing Captain MacNab the way he was standing, but she didn't never look up at anybody when she came in. Mr. Bartlett asked her, are you Minnie Atkins, and she was sitting this way, looking down, and she said, yes.

Q. Had her hands folded?

A. Minnie always has her hands in her lap, most of the time, if you have seen her.

Q. Had her hands folded?

A. Always had her arms crossed.

Q. And her shoulders sagged down?

A. Didn't have her shoulders down but cowed down.

Q. Always an expression of cowardice?

A. Yes, sir. Tell you how she looked when she came in, Mr. Bartlett asked her that question, are you Minnie Atkins.

Q. What did she say? A. She said yes.

Q. What did Mr. Bartlett say?

A. Mr. Bartlett said are you the mother Thomas Atkins? Minnie never answered.

Q. Wait a minute; what was the next thing said?

A. Captain MacNab said, yes, but she has not seen him since he was two years old; Captain MacNab—Minnie didn't answer that. Mr. Bartlett said then, Minnie, did you ever go to Carlisle? and she said, yes. She answered that. And he said what school did you go to in Oklahoma before you went to Carlisle? She didn't answer that—I guess it had been too long—she tried to.

Q. Minnie really tried to tell him what school?

A. To tell him what school in Oklahoma. And she said—

Q. Wait a minute; how do you know she tried?

A. She was trying to think it up; I don't know whether she called Tullahasse or not.

Q. She did say that she went to some Indian school that got burned down?

A. She didn't say burned down; she tried to get the name of some school but didn't say it—she couldn't answer that question.

Q. She showed that she couldn't answer it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And showed it by what she was saying?

A. Yes, sir, by what she was saying.

Q. But you can't remember what it was?

A. No, sir, I can't remember what it was.

Q. You can't recall anything that Minnie said there about the school now?

A. No, sir. And then he asked her if she remembered Miss Alice Robertson and he tried to tell her, and did tell her, who Miss Robertson was—Mr. Bartlett did, but Minnie didn't remember; didn't even remember Miss Robertson. I think Mr. Bartlett tried to tell her about her being at the——

Q. And told her that Alice Robertson was the daughter of an old Commissioner, didn't he? A. I think so.

Q. And that she taught in that school that was burned down? A. Something to that effect; I don't remember.

Q. But Minnie couldn't remember Miss Robertson?

A. Minnie couldn't remember Miss Robertson——

Q. Just a minute; couldn't remember the school and couldn't remember Miss Robertson. And then what was said?

A. Captain McNab said, you know how Indians are; they are sulky and Minnie is one of that disposition.

Q. Apologizing for Minnie not being able to remember those things?

A. He just wanted to let Mr. Bartlett know that Minnie was the mother of Thomas Atkins, that is all; he was afraid Minnie would say no. He managed it—Captain McNab did that morning.

Q. Now, these vicious expressions you have given us here on the witness stand, and all this intonation of your voice, you are trying to emphasize the idea that Captain McNab knew there wasn't any Tommy but wanted to let Bartlett think there was a Tommy?

A. Captain McNab knew there wasn't no——

Q. That is what you are doing? Answering the question.

A. But what I know, he knew.

Q. How did you know?

A. Hadn't Minnie told me in front of Mr. Hanford and

Mr. McNab that the baby died when he was six months old? Died when he was six months old.

Q. Minnie told them that? A. Minnie told them that.

Q. Now, what then, next occurred there after Captain McNab said something about the sulking Indian?

A. Captain MacNab said Sadie only offered Minnie two thousand for the land, and Mr. Long said the land is valuable, and I have sent my lawyer down—didn't say Minnie's lawyer —my lawyer—to investigate it. Mr. Bartlett then spoke up—

Q. Why did you notice that he said my lawyer instead of Minnie's lawyer?

A. He told me that day when I met him and Mr. Hanford and he introduced us, he said this is my lawyer, and then Mr. Bartlett spoke up and said, Captain MacNab, I bought a deed for that land three years ago and I sold a lease to the Gypsy and I afterwards found out that a forged deed had been put off on me and I am out here now, not in the interests of myself but to protect the interests of the Gypsy and I hope while your lawyer is down there you will have him call and see the Gypsy because they are able and will give you as much money for the land as anybody else will. Captain MacNab agreed to do so; said, I will. Captain MacNab said, Mr. Bartlett, you come back here at two o'clock this afternoon, I want to talk to you; then we left.

Q. During this whole conversation, you hadn't said a word after you introduced them?

A. I hadn't spoke because Captain MacNab hadn't paid any attention to me at all.

Q. You hadn't spoken?

A. I hadn't said anything; only introduced them at the door—said who Mr. Bartlett was when Captain MacNab first came down stairs.

Q. Mr. Bartlett came back that afternoon?

A. He was to come back and I guess he did.

Q. You don't know?

A. No, I couldn't swear that he went back.

Q. Now, how long were you out there when you were there with Mr. Bartlett?

A. Well, I don't know now; don't believe I can tell just how long—wasn't there very long.

Q. A little short visit? A. Yes sir, I think.

Q. It took just about the time that it required to have the conversations that you detail?

A. Well, maybe a little longer time than that?

Q. A little longer time. When you first went in, you spoke to each other and introduced each other?

A. I didn't say nothing to nobody; just told him who Mr. Bartlett was.

Q. Mr. Bartlett shook hands and talked with Captain—

A. Yes, he talked with Captain.

Q. Did you say anything to Minnie?

A. I didn't get to speak to Minnie, she never looked at me.

Q. You never got to her at all?

A. No, I never got to talk to her at all.

Q. You testified in the—at the trial of the case at which the application was pending for the appointment of a receiver in this case, at Muskogee, didn't you? A. I did.

Q. And matters were just as fresh in your memory then as they are now? A. No, they weren't.

Q. Just as fresh now—

A. Not as fresh now, no, sir, not as fresh now.

Q. You say now, that you never talked to Minnie at all, and you don't believe that you never talked to Captain MacNab at all?

A. Well, not that I remember; not right this minute.

Q. Can you remember that you said a word to Captain MacNab more than an introduction?

A. I can't recall it right now?

Q. Did you say anything to Bartlett in the presence of these two at that time?

A. I don't remember a conversation that I had.

Q. You don't remember a word that you said?

A. No, sir, I don't think I did.

Q. Why any doubt about that when you remember everything else? A. I can't remember just this minute.

Q. But you do remember that you testified in the United States District Court at Muskogee?

A. Yes, I know that I testified.

Q. And in that examination, you testified just about like you have here, only when a question was asked you, you would go on and tell the whole story as you best remember it?

A. They didn't cut you off.

Q. When they didn't cut you off? A. Yes, I think so.

Q. Referring to page 120 and up to 122 of the record, I will ask you if in answer to the question who was Mr. Hanford, if you didn't answer, Minnie's lawyer—they were waiting for me. Question, he was living in Seattle? Yes, sir. Then you continued your answer with the following, I had taken Mr. Bartlett out there near Minnie's house and she wasn't home, and we went to the Fort to Captain MacNab's house. He seen where he could make a lot of money and he said, oh yes, this is Minnie alright; I sent and got her and he said that she left home because Minnie felt nervous, and I hired a lawyer—that was Mr. Hanford—and he would be out later on. Minnie couldn't talk for Captain MacNab. Every time I asked Minnie where she got the baby, he said Leavenworth, and you must look over—Minnie is going to have an operation. Did you give any such testimony as that?

A. Part of that testimony I gave but I didn't ask Minnie nothing about no baby. I believe I do remember of Captain MacNab telling that; I believe I do, about an operation, I believe I do.

Q. You do rememer now, that Minnie told that she left home because she felt so nervous?

A. No, sir. She wasn't talking to me; she wasn't talking to me, either.

Q. Well, she talked in your presence.

A. That conversation, I believe was in that house. I think that conversation was brought up; I think was talked, I am not sure; but not me—they wasn't talking to me. I never did get to talk.

Q. You do recall now, after your memory being refreshed, you do recall that Minnie did say something to the crowd there about leaving because she was so nervous?

A. No, I think Captain MacNab spoke that.

Q. Your recollection is then, that Captain MacNab spoke that?

A. I think so, yes; to the best of my recollection, I think so.

Q. You do recall Minnie's saying that she had had to hire a lawyer?

A. No, sir, I don't remember that; I don't remember of Minnie saying that she had to hire a lawyer. She had nothing to hire a lawyer on.

Q. You say now that Minnie said that she was the Minnie Atkins, don't you?

A. Yes, she answered that question; said, I am Minnie—

Q. When you testified at the Receivership hearing, you said that Captain MacNab after he had seen where he could make a lot of money, said, yes, this is Minnie, alright?

A. That could have been.

Q. Captain MacNab said, that was Minnie?

A. Captain MacNab done all the talking—that was it.

Q. Also said, that he wouldn't let Minnie talk?

A. That is true, he didn't.

Q. You do say that Minnie did say that she was Minnie Atkins, and she did have a conversation trying to show what school she had gone to?

A. Yes, that conversation Minnie had.

Q. Captain MacNab did let her tell that?

A. About that school, yes.

Q. You are meaning to say that Captain MacNab let her say anything about herself except, when it came to Thomas Atkins?

A. Yes, sir, to the baby business; he wanted to have that.

Q. Up to that time, you wasn't hunting for any—you wasn't hunting for this Tommy Atkins, or any Tommy Atkins, that Minnie had? A. Minnie had none.

Q. I say, you weren't hunting for any that she did have; you were merely trying to find Minnie and to frame a Tommy? A. That is all I could do.

Q. All you intended to do?

A. The only way I could get a Tommy was to frame one.

Q. You never intended to find any little Tommy?

A. I couldn't find no real Tommy.

Q. Didn't you tell me that you didn't know when you started out with Dennis Jones, whether Minnie had a child in Fort Logan, or not? A. Yes.

Q. Or whether she had one in Fort Wayne, or Carlisle?

A. I knew that she had those children that she brought to Kansas City, I didn't know what else she had——

Q. You didn't know whether she had another one named Tommy? A. I didn't know it.

Q. Regardless of finding out whether she had one, you had framed one up? A. Framed one.

Q. And you were still carrying out that?

A. I knew I could get her to do anything I wanted to.

Q. You knew that?

A. I knew that, yes, sir, before I left Leavenworth; I knew it, and after I got to Fort Logan and found she had none there, just then I knew when I got to her, that I could get her to do anything that I wanted her to.

Q. You tried to get her to go—you wanted her to Spokane, or Long?

A. Frank Long wanted her to go there and I told Captain MacNab not to let her do it.

Q. You wanted her to sign a deed for you?

A. I didn't have no deed.

Q. You wanted her to sign one for Bartlett to get?

A. Yes, Captain——

Q. When Captain MacNab came in, you got lost in it, didn't you?

A. Captain MacNab didn't want her to sign a paper for nobody; only sign it over to him.

Q. When Captain MacNab got into the field, you some way lost your control?

A. Captain MacNab and Hanford seen where they could steal a lot of money and they took her away from me, I will say that.

Q. Why do you say that?

A. I say it because they did do it; took her under control and stole the money and she didn't get it.

Q. You know that? A. Yes, sir, I know that.

Q. She didn't get anything?

A. She got, maybe, two or three dollars; Hanford and them got it. I am telling about what Charles Page told me to tell Minnie when I went to get the deed—tell her that Hanford and MacNab were using it for themselves; that they were stealing it.

Q. Let's get that, now; that is something new.

A. I told that way back here; you wasn't here, I guess.

Q. What was that Charlie Page told you?

A. Charlie Page told me, just a day or two before they were to take depositions at Leavenworth, Sadie, we are going to Leavenworth to take depositions. I want you to go, and while you are up there, you can handle Minnie, and I want you to get a deed from her unbeknownst to Hanford and you tell her that the money was paid to her and she isn't getting it. Captain MacNab and Hanford are using it—they had done stole it.

Q. Did he say they had done stole it?

A. He said used it for themselves. I am saying that. He told me to tell her that Captain MacNab and Hanford——

Q. You needn't repeat it again. I am asking why you gave your opinion when I asked for the conversation.

A. That is my opinion; if they used it for themselves, they were stealing it from her. Page didn't say that.

Q. You lost your control?

A. Captain MacNab and Hanford had beaten me.

Q. How did you have any control?

A. I had done framed up with her.

Q. You said when you left to go out there, that you knew that whenever you got to her that you would have her under your control?

A. Yes, I refuse to tell you what it was.

Q. I am not asking you that but asking you how you got her under your control?

A. Never mind, I refuse to tell you. I refused to tell Judge Stuart and I refuse again today.

Q. When did you get her under your control?

A. I will not tell that.

Q. When did you lose the control?

A. When Captain MacNab and Hanford stole her and locked her up in the Fort.

Q. When did they lock her up?

A. I don't know when but they took her away from home.

Q. The day that you went out there and she wasn't there and you didn't find her, is the day that you lost your control?

A. The day they beat me to her—that is what I am talking about.

Q. How long had your control lasted?

A. Lasted every minute until Frank Long got there and told Captain MacNab the land was valuable, and Hanford and them took Minnie away from everybody.

Q. You got control of Minnie the minute you found her?

A. Yes.

Q. And you lost control on the morning that you went out and found the house vacant?

A. No, I lost my control that Saturday night when they had her sign over those papers to Captain MacNab.

Q. Sadie, you knew why she signed those papers over?

A. Because she didn't have sense enough to keep that lie down, and that is why she signed those papers that night.

Q. Now, that is the reason? A. That is the reason.

Q. Alright, let's figure it out. A. Alright.

Q. You had asked Minnie to wait and see Bartlett?

A. Told her he was coming, yes sir.

Q. And that Bartlett would buy the land?

A. Pay her two thousand dollars.

Q. She didn't know anything about the value of the land?

A. Didn't know anything about where it was at all.

Q. She called Captain MacNab down to consult about it?

A. She didn't have it done, no sir.

Q. Who did?

A. When I had taken the telegram out to Harry on Friday, and showed him where it said I will be there to-morrow, have everything fixed, Bill Jones—I thought that was from Mr. Bartlett—I carried that and showed it to Harry. He had to leave the next morning to go to Spokane, and he takes that telegram and carried it up in the Fort to his Colonel and his Captain to see if they wouldn't let him stay over until Saturday. When he came back down from the Fort with the telegram, he said, Sadie, I have told Captain and the Colonel about it, and they won't let me stay, and I said, Harry, you have got to have somebody; he said, Captain McComb——

Q. Lieutenant? A. I thought he said Captain McComb.

Q. Alright.

A. Saturday night when I went back out there, Captain

MacNab and Mr. Hanford were there on the porch. I walked in the house and Captain MacNab told me—he said, Sadie, Captain McComb can't come, and Captain McComb got Captain MacNab.

Q. Your understanding of it, then, was that he was going to ask Lieut. McComb, or Captain MacNab?

A. That is what he told me.

Q. And you expected to find Lieut. McComb out there?

A. When I went out there the next morning for the meeting, I expected to find him, although I had never met him.

Q. And instead of finding Lieut. McComb, you found Captain MacNab, and Captain MacNab said to you——

A. And Mr. Hanford was there.

Q. And Captain MacNab said to you, Lieut. McComb couldn't come and I came?

A. And brought my lawyer with me and introduced——

Q. Wait a minute. Who was present when he said that?

A. Minnie, and Mr. Hanford and myself were present; in the house then.

Q. Now he also told you in that conversation that he thought Minnie had better turn it over to him didn't he?

A. During that conversation, not then.

Q. But during that conversation?

A. He asked me that.

Q. What did you say?

A. He said, Sadie, Minnie don't know how to talk, don't you think Minnie had better turn her business over into my and Hanford's hands, and I told him yes.

Q. Now Sadie, in the early part of that conversation, they told you about Minnie getting ready the evening before to go over to Spokane, didn't they? A. No, sir.

Q. You heard about that?

A. No, she was to go that evening. Frank Long was there to take her that evening on the six o'clock train.

Q. What evening?

A. The same Saturday evening. Frank Long came and made arrangements if she signed papers that he brought with him—Minnie's husband was in Spokane.

Q. When did you learn that? A. That very morning.

Q. That very morning you learned from Minnie, McNab and Hanford, that Minnie had agreed with Long that she would go over to Spokane and sign a deed for four thousand ($4000.00) dollars? A. I don't know what the deed was for.

Q. You didn't hear the amount of money? A. No.

Q. But she was going over that night to sign it?

A. That night to sign it.

Q. And Captain McNab said that he thought that he had better get some papers drawn up so that Minnie couldn't do that?

A. No, he didn't say it that way. Can I tell what Minnie said.

Q. Yes?

A. Minnie said, I told the man that the baby died when the baby was six months old.

Q. Minnie said that in every conversation?

A. In my presence and Captain McNab's and Mr. Hanford's.

Q. She said that in every conversation that she had with you, didn't she?

A. No, she didn't. Minnie said that was too early and it would have to be fixed.

Q. Who said that?

A. Minnie said that Frank Long said that,: that was too early, the baby died too early, it would have to be fixed, and then Captain McNab spoke up and said: Sadie, don't you think Minnie ought to turn her business over into our hands, because she don't know how to talk, and I said yes, Captain, and whatever you do, don't let Minnie sign those papers and don't let Frank Long take her to Spokane tonight. And he said I won't.

Q. Now, you are sure that Captain McNab wanted to take this business out of Minnie's hands because Minnie didn't know how to talk?

A. She had done told the man about the dead baby and it had to be fixed up, Frank Long said that is too early we will have to fix that now.

Q. Sadie, we can't get your gestures in the record?

A. I wish you would let me go like I want to though, I could tell you so much better.

Q. Captain McNab didn't say that he wanted to put Minnie under a Trusteeship or under a contract because he was afraid she would sell this piece of land, of which she had no knowledge of its value for any consideration that she could get? A. No, sir, he didn't say that.

Q. Didn't he intimate that to you?

A. No, sir, he didn't intimate that to me, he didn't say that.

Q. He didn't intimate to you that he thought this piece of land ought to be handled as any other business proposition? A. No, he didn't say that to me.

Q. And Minnie didn't treat it in that way?

A. No, sir, he didn't say that.

Q. Anything in substance to that effect? A. No, sir.

Q. Didn't talk right?

A. Minnie had done said too much to me about that baby.

Q. She didn't talk right?

A. He made her talk right.

Q. The idea was that Captain McNab got to be trustee that Minnie would talk right?

A. No, but he got to be trustee he would make Minnie keep her mouth shut and tell about this baby.

Q. Which mouth did you want to put your hand over?

A. No, they would train her.

Q. When did you make your contract with Long?

A. Contract with Long?

Q. Page, yes? A. About August, in August.

Q. This was in June that you were up in Seattle?

A. In Seattle, yes, sir.

Q. And you continued working with Bartlett until you got home?

A. I thought I was working for anybody, I was loose.

Q. You continued to plunder him until you got home?

A. Yes, until I made my way back home, yes.

Q. Were you discharged by Bartlett?

A. No, he didn't tell me he would let me go; he treated me nice in a way, but I didn't get any money out of him, talking to him all the time but I wasn't getting nothing out of him.

Q. He wasn't footing up any?

A. No, sir, he treated me nice, never did tell me that he knew I was lying.

Q. He quit putting the long green into your hand?

A. He hasn't told me at all that he knew I was lying, he didn't know about my confession, and I hope he never will know that.

Q. You really have some sympathy for Bartlett?

A. I have yes, sir, for what I have done; for what I have done against him.

Q. You really feel like you would like for Bartlett to get this land, don't you?

A. No, sir, I don't care who gets it. It is no interest——

Q. Between Bartlett and Page and some other claimants you would rather for Bartlett to get it, wouldn't you?

A. No, I wouldn't I know——

Q. Rather have the man who you feel treated you so nice than old crook like Page?

A. No, Mr. Page has been just as good friend of mine as Bartlett has. You think so don't you, I know so.

Q. You feel that way?

A. I feel in one way that he has been a better friend than Bartlett.

Q. Do you feel kind towards Page?

A. I feel just as nice today as I did the day I left down there.

Q. You feel just as kind towards Page as you do against Page? A. He never done a thing to me in my life.

Q. You feel just as kind? A. Yes, I do.

Q. Yet you come here and tell that you had clandestine feelings with him in his office and in his park?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. In which you claim that he had sexual intercourse with you?

A. Yes, sir, I do because Mr. Hanford pulled it out of me, I didn't want to tell it.

Q. Why didn't you want to tell it?

A. Why didn't I want to tell it? I knew the position of a good man as Mr. Page is and everybody thinks he is, and I hated to tell it. He is a married man and a wealthy man and I hated for anybody outside of him and me to know he ever was with me.

Q. Sadie, it is a matter of principle even with prostitutes not to disclose the names of men who have sexual intercourse with them?

A. No, sir, and I don't. Mr. Hanford kept insisting on me telling it, I didn't want to tell it and he kept saying what was that meeting up there.

Q. You needn't repeat what the record shows, it shows whether he insisted or not? A. Well.

Q. Yet, now, after doing that you say you think just as much of him as you do of Bartlett?

A. Why shouldn't I?

Q. Sadie, you have declined to tell what you and Minnie did?

A. Yes, that incriminates myself and Minnie.

Q. Sexual relations—The sexual relation with married men would incriminate you and Page, wouldn't it?

A. No, it don't, it shows Mr. Page up to be an awful funny man with me a nigger.

Q. Shows him to be a criminal, don't it?

A. I don't know what it shows him to be, I know it is a disgrace on him.

Q. You knew it was a criminal offense for a married man to have sexual intercourse with a married woman?

A. No, I don't. I was trying to protect him.

Q. Trying to protect him, yourself and Page?

A. Not me.

Q. You are trying to protect you and Minnie from one crime? A. Yes, and I am going to do it.

Q. And you are willing to tell the crime on Page?

A. No, I wasn't willing to do that.

Q. You finally did it? A. Yes, I had to tell it.

Q. Will you tell us the crime that you and Minnie committed? A. No, I wont until death comes to me.

Q. The one that you and Minnie committed is barred by the statute of limitations, isn't it?

A. Well, if it is barred never until judgment day will I tell it.

Q. The one that you and Page committed is not barred, is it? A. On my part it would have been forever.

Q. Not barred by law?

A. I don't care whether there is any law in it or not, I never would have told it.

Q. You and Page committed your crime in the last three years?

A. You can take it to his wife and tell her if you want to, I never would tell her.

Q. Why do you say it?

A. You keep on asking me about it.

Q. You would like to have his wife now to quit him for that?

A. No, on account of a nigger, no, and Mrs. Page an invalid.

Q. That is because you loved Page so, isn't it?

A. No. I got respect for Page and Mrs. Page too, and you want all this stuff, I am telling it.

Q. I am asking you why it is you claim an offense you committed twenty five or thirty years ago would incriminate you? A. Yes.

Q. When you tell one that was committed within three years.

A. Yes, in three years, less time than three years.

Q. You understand that the statute of limitations is three years, don't you?

A. I don't care anything about the statute, I don't know anything about it.

Q. And you understand that the crime you are referring to of you and Minnie is barred by the statute, but yet the one you are telling on Page is not barred?

A. I am telling this much, I am not going to tell it.

And thereupon, a recess is taken until one-thirty o'clock P. M., and thereafter and at 1:30 o'clock P. M., further testimony herein is taken as follows:

SADIE JAMES, being recalled, further testified as follows:

Cross Examination by Mr. Blakeney.

Q. Sadie, after the adjournment just before noon, you left the stand and immediately walked and talked to Mr. Buell and Mr. Robinson, didn't you?

A. Give me time now. Yes, I did, yes, sir.

Q. You did that yesterday?

A. Not to Mr. Buell, but to Mr. Robinson——

Q. To Robinson and Mr. Meserve here after the adjournment? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Every time that you would get off of the stand you would walk up to them and see if they were approving of your testimony so they would continue this fifty dollars, didn't you? A. No, sir, wasn't talking about that.

Q. You were trying to see if they were satisfied so they would continue this fifty dollars?

A. I didn't care whether they were satisfied or not, I am not telling about anything to their interest that I know of.

Q. You know that if they—that if the Government wins, Quinton Garrett will?

A. I don't know Quinton Garrett.

Q. That Quinton Garrett will be entitled to file on this piece of land, and you know that they have a lease under this Quinton Garrett?

A. I don't know who they have got a lease under.

Q. Why do you think they are paying you three thousand ($3000.00) dollars?

A. To get the facts out of this case.

Q. Just for the love of the Lord? A. Of the Lord?

Q. Yes. A. And get the truth, yes.

Q. They are so interested in getting the truth?

A. And they are going to get it.

Q. They will pay three thousand dollars?

A. Not in a bunch, that is going to last while this case is going on, maybe take a year or two to get the truth out of this case, and the facts.

Q. You never inquired about their interests?

A. No, I don't have to.

Q. You knew, did you?

A. No, they just filed some Indians on the land, she didn't tell me who.

Q. Well, they have not disapproved your testimony at all, have they?

A. I haven't talked over my testimony; they don't know what my testimony is going to be.

Q. They have been sitting here listening to it?

A. They have been here listening, nothing to keep them from listening.

Q. Sadie, when you started in this matter, you decided to pass yourself off for a Government Officer?

A. Did do it right from the jump.

Q. When did you make that decision in your mind?

A. To pass off as a Government officer?

Q. Yes? A. Just as soon as I took the job.

Q. Immediately after talking with Mr. Bartlett?

A. No, I had that in mind before ever I seen Mr. Bartlett when Bettie talked to me.

Q. As soon as Bettie talked to you, you made up your mind to play a Government officer? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you want to do that for?

A. I knew if I found her, I would have to find her in some of the Forts, and I couldn't get up there being a common woman, and I would have to be some kind of an officer, and I would have to be a Government officer to find her in the Fort.

Q. Sadie, you had no idea of finding her in any Fort when you started to Omaha to look for her?

A. I didn't think she was in Omaha. I went up there to see Al Walker and didn't find him and run across Bertha Black.

Q. Did you have any expectation of finding Minnie in a Government Fort?

A. I didn't know where I would find her, I thought I might.

Q. Didn't think it strong enough to go right up to the Government Forts there did you?

A. She hadn't been there for years and she didn't——

Q. Minnie lived in Oklahoma for a good many years?

A. Fifteen years.

Q. And you had also been engaged in unlawful occupations nearly all your life?

A. Running places of mine, yes.

Q. And you knew that the type of people that you had associated with were a class of people that felt safe if they got with Government officers—on the Government side?

A. I knew that there were certain classes that did?

Q. Yes? A. No, I didn't believe that.

Q. You knew that in the tenderloin districts and among the crooks that they always felt safe if they were on the Government side? A. No, I didn't.

Q. That they could get immunity? A. No, I didn't.

Q. You knew that, didn't you?

A. No, I was selling whiskey and had to run from the Government until Bill Creekmore pulled them off of me. Bill Creekmore got behind me in Tulsa.

Q. You weren't with the officers then?

A. Bill Creekmore was with me.

Q. And when he got with the officers they quit bothering you? A. He pulled the officers off of me.

Q. Your whole life experience was that if you could get the officers with you, you were safe?

A. I knew by passing myself off as a Government Officer, they would tell me more freely.

Q. You knew that the Indians in the Indian Territory could be induced to swear to anything that the officers wanted them to? A. No, I didn't.

Q. You feel that way yet, don't you? If you have got the Government behind you, you can swear to anything?

A. No, I don't.

Q. You can swear to a truth or falsely with impunity if the Government officers are behind you?

A. No, sir, I know of niggers at Leavenworth for swearing a lie and they wasn't behind them in it.

Q. Is that some other case or this case?

A. No, this is your case.

Q. Oh, my case? A. Yes, your case, lying.

Q. What is my case?

A. Why, I understand the way you are representing—Mr. Page, I suppose you are representing Tommy Atkins, ain't you? That is the way I think from the way you are acting now.

Q. Representing Tommy Atkins?

A. Yes, Tommy, the one that fell in the river, I guess, I don't know where he fell at.

Q. Why are you telling that you think I have got any witnesses lying for me in Leavenworth, behind me, you are just guessing again aren't you?

A. You ain't got them behind you; they got the town behind them, you ain't in it, I think you are right, I think you are—think you are right.

Q. You don't know who I am for? A. I don't care.

Q. So far as you know I may show that there aint no Tommy Atkins connected with it?

A. You are going to show that by your witnesses lying.

Q. Let's get along and not suggest any more?

A. That is left with you.

Q. Sadie, you made your contract with Page when?

A. August, sometime in August.

Q. Do you know what day of the week it was?

A. No, I think it was Thursday August 20th, I think, I will not be positive about that.

Q. Thursday, August 20th? A. Yes, sir, 1914.

Q. You made it in writing?

A. Yes, sir, I think that is the date.

Q. Had you done any work for Page before you made this contract? A. Not for him.

Q. Have you done any for Long?

A. No, I had known Frank Long three years before that.

Q. Sadie, just answer the questions. I asked if you had done any work for Frank Long?

A. No, sir, not any work for him.

Q. The first work you undertook was when you signed this written contract?

A. That written contract up there, yes sir.

Q. I believe you said that you told Page that there was no Tommy Atkins before you made this contract?

A. Before I made the contract, the day before that.

Q. The day before that you told him? A. Yes.

Q. You went with him out to his Park?

A. That night.

Q. And talked with him there? A. That night.

Q. Who was present?

A. My husband, Frank Long, and myself.

Q. Which husband?

A. Well, I got so many, but this time it was Will James.

Q. Will James? A. Yes, this time.

Q. Did you talk over the case there with Page?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Now, up to that time, you was trying to create a Tommy?

A. No, I had quit, wasn't doing it for anybody.

Q. What you had done up to that time was the creation of Tommy? A. Yes, the creation of Tommy.

Q. Now, that night when you had a talk with Page, what did you say to him? Don't give all the language unless you feel it necessary, but the substance.

A. I had talked with him in the evening before in his office.

Q. How long was you talking in the office?

A. Not so long, no.

Q. Give me the substance of that now?

A. In the office?

Q. Yes?

A. Well, when Frank Long taken me to him, when he opened the door Mr. Page was sitting there talking to two men, I think it was two and Frank Long called him; we were on the outside of the railing and I think Mr. Page came to the railing. Mr. Long said Mr. Page this is that Sadie James.

Q. Didn't he say that notorious Sadie?

A. He knew how notorious I was, he had been in my road house enough, he knew how notorious I was.

By Mr. Blakeney: I move to strike out that "he had been in my road house enough" as not responsive.

Q. I was not asking you for any opinions?

A. You asked if he knew I was notorious.

Q. I asked if he said that?

A. He didn't have to say that he knew it.

Q. Just answer the questions and leave out all your feelings.

By Mr. German: Just answer as to what you know.

Q. Just give now the conversation?

A. He said, Mr. Page this is that Sadie James. Mr. Page said hello Sadie I have been looking for you. I said Mr. Page I came up here to tell you there is no Tommy Atkins, and he said I don't give a damn if there ain't, the Government records say so and will make one.

Q. Now, Sadie you were standing outside with Long?

A. Standing right in the door just as you step in the door.

Q. Outside of the railing?

A. Outside of the railing that bars the office.

Q. And Page was standing on the inside?

A. Leaning on the railing.

Q. Anybody with him? A. No.

Q. And you just broke out without saying good morning or anything? A. I broke out to tell him.

Q. Broke right out? A. Broke right on out.

Q. Saying I came to tell you there aint no Tommy Atkins?

A. I told Mr. Long in his room before I went——

Q. Answer what you said. A. Yes, sir.

Q. The rest of the conversation you told?

A. I will have to say what Mr. Page said?

Q. You told that?

A. There is some more behind that.

Q. All right, repeat that.

A. He said, Sadie, you know what we want, which I did. They wanted a baby boy and I was making a live one.

Q. I say tell just what he said, not what you knew.

A. I said I do. He said I want the birth of Thomas Atkins, the birth and death of Thomas Atkins in Leavenworth, Kansas, can you do it; and I said I can, I can get you witnesses to swear that hell's an ice box. He said I have been informed through friends of mine in Leavenworth, Kansas, that Dennis Jones is a shrewd man, he has been a policeman, a detective, a lawyer, a politician, and his influence in this case will help it, can you get it? I said, Mr. Page, Dennis Jones and Rube Smith are my co-workers, they have been working with me in this case anyhow, but I don't think I can get Dennis as easy as I can Rube, because he has just got back from a lying trip with the Gipsy making a live man, and he will hate now to stop making a live man and go to making a dead one; he said, you tell Dennis Jones if he don't stop making a live man he will get arrested; he said Sadie meet me in my park tonight at eight o'clock. Mr. Long and I then walked out into the hall, left Mr. Page and walked into the hall; and Mr. Long then taken me up stairs to Ben Rice's office. You want me to tell you what I did up there?

Q. Up there you gave him the names of two witnesses?

A. I gave him the name of five.

Q. Five, one dead, Aunt Kate Logan?

A. She wasn't dead then. When she told that lie she died, yes, sir.

Q. It killed her did it?

A. I think it did, Aunt Kate died with that lie in her mouth that very lie, that is the lie she died with.

Q. You seem to have fattened up under it, don't you?

A. No.

Q. I believe you say you ate fricassee of chicken on it?

A. Oh that was before that, I had everything.

Q. Now, Minnie—— A. Sadie.

Q. Sadie, after you had this talk with Long, you went on up to Ben Rice's office, you there gave him the five witnesses whose names you have given us? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then you left? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you make the contract before you went up to Rice's office?

A. No, sir, didn't make the contract until the next morning at ten o'clock.

Q. You went on to the park that night?

A. That day was the 19th.

Q. But you went on to the park that night?

A. Like he told me to come at eight o'clock.

Q. And there you saw Page?

A. Mr. Long met us at the gate and carried us up in the park and set us down.

Q. There wasn't anything unusual, as you understood it, about Page being at his park in the evening, did you?

A. I didn't know anything about it, he told me to meet him there; lot of white people there in the park but no negroes.

Q. You knew Page spent every evening at that park didn't you?

A. No, that was the first time I ever knew Mr. Page, I had seen him but didn't know him, I knew Frank Long.

Q. You talked it over with Mr. Page, didn't you?

A. As soon as we got there.

Q. Page—— Did Page give you any details about the kind of Tommy he wanted?

A. I will tell you what he said.

Q. All right?

A. When Mr. Long got Mr. Page and brought him up to where we were and introduced him to my husband, Mr. Page had never seen him, and Mr. Page turned to me and said, Sadie, you know what I want—speaking this all over again—know what I want, I want Sadie the death of Tommy Atkins established in Leavenworth, Kansas, and what will you charge to get witnesses to swear it. Before I could think what I wanted, he said I know what I will give you, I will give you a thousand dollars, and I said all right I will take it. The minute I said I will take it, we were all four standing in a bunch, he turned to Frank Long and said, Frank pull Fred Cook off of Sadie and tell him to let her alone, she is working for me; just as though he had power over Mr. Cook, or had Cook on me or something. That is what he said to Frank Long, pull him off of me.

Q. Let's leave out the suppose.

A. All right. I said, Mr. Page, I want a contract and he said Sadie you don't need a contract, you know me, I pay everybody. I said yes, sir, but I am having a lot of trouble about my money now, and he said why don't you sue the—— He said he sent his son up in Kansas to get a forged deed, he ought to be put in the pen and I don't want to see a yellow dog in there. I said, no he didn't I know something about that deed, and I turned around and said Mr. Page I want my lawyers to come up to the office with me and make out a contract, and he said who are your lawyers, and I said Bob Davidson and Judge Williams and C. S. Walker. He said Davidson and Williams are all right but don't get Walker he has got a yellow streak up his back and he will holler. By that time it started raining, we were sitting under that little shed, shoot the chute, or some place when the rain started up. I said Mr. Page we are now going to make a nigger case out of this, I was talking to Mr. Page. We are going to make a nigger case out of this, what are we going to do with that testimony you let Minnie give at Sapulpa. I said there is where you made a mistake in letting her go on and swear that lie, saying the baby was born in the hospital. I said don't you know that you can't get sisters of the Charity to tell a lie? He said, well I will just put her back on the stand and say the reason she told that lie was because she didn't want her husband to know she was living with negroes. That is about all the conversation him and I had out there in the park when he said, you meet me in my office tomorrow at ten o'clock in the morning.

Q. I understand now that you left there with the understanding that you was going to go and establish that Tommy Atkins was a negro?

A. Yes, sir, negro. We negroes had started it up there, but knew there wasn't none.

Q. Please answer. You left Page there in the park with the understanding that you were to go and establish and prove that Tommy Atkins was a negro?

A. Yes, sir, they done started to swearing one was white and we negroes had to hook on Mr. Page's case then and pull him out of the hole where he got stalled.

Q. What did you then do? A. We left.

Q. You signed your contract next—— A. Not that night.

Q. The next morning?

A. The next morning at the office.

Q. You didn't have any talk the next morning?

A. Not about the case, about the contract.

Q. You signed the contract and that is the contract you produced?

A. Yes, that is the contract that I produced.

Q. You had already performed it before you signed?

A. Yes, sir, I made the agreement and that contract——

Q. You didn't understand my question, so I will ask you again.

Q. You had already given the witnesses that you referred to in the contract to Rice?

A. The ones I was working with, yes, sir, that I could get them.

Q. The only thing now that you had to do to complete your duties under that contract was to see that those parties you had in mind and had given Ben Rice would testify?

A. To get them for Mr. Page.

Q. Yes? A. I knew I could, I agreed to do that.

Q. You had already given him the names? A. Yes.

Q. All you had to do now was to get them to swear for Page?

A. Yes, sir, get them to swear for Page. I guess that was going to be the language of it, that is all I did get that trip.

Q. You left Page and came up to Leavenworth?

A. Yes, sir, I came up to Leavenworth and got there on Friday, yes, sir.

Q. And when had you signed the contract?

A. I signed my contract on a Thursday.

Q. And came up the next day?

A. Left Thursday night and came up to Leavenworth on Friday.

Q. Who came with you?

A. I came by myself, and Frank Long he came on the Frisco and I came on the Santa Fe, and I got in town about eight thirty, got to Leavenworth about eight-thirty in the morning.

Q. What time did he get in?

A. I don't know, but I got hold of him, I guess it was about near ten when I got hold of him, got hold of Frank.

Q. What did you do? A. I told him I had seen Rube.

Q. Had you seen Rube?

A. Yes, I had seen Rube and made a proposition about Long, yes.

Q. What kind of a proposition did you make to Rube?

A. Want me to tell it?

Q. No, but in detail.

A. Well, Rube had said he would work for him.

Q. Had you seen Dennis?

A. No, he asked me if I had seen Dennis and I told him no.

Q. What did you do with Long?

A. I told Mr. Long then I was going down to Aunt Kate's, told him how to get down there and he said that he would follow; after I had been down there a while he would come on down there.

Q. He came on down there? A. Came on down there.

Q. Who did you go to after Aunt Kate?

A. Well, I went down to Dennis' office and Dennis wasn't there; Eugie was there and I said to her——

Q. Never mind about talking.

A. I had Frank Long to come up the alley to Aunt Martha's to where I stopped, and told him Dennis wasn't there; and I went off, we were to have another meeting with Rube Smith about three or four o'clock that evening, and I didn't meet them. I went up to town and got drunk and didn't meet them that night at all. About seventy-thirty that night when I came back up there drunk with the woman carrying me off the street.

Q. And you worked the next day around Leavenworth?

A. No, Long told me to get ready, Bettie and Hanford would be down here, and he didn't want Bettie and Hanford to see me, they were coming up to Leavenworth.

By Mr. German: Mr. Blakeney, Sadie has told me she desires to correct one part of her testimony, and it is along in where you are now and we thought you would want to cover it in your cross examination, and I suggest that she give that now. If you prefer not to do it now, all right.

Q. All right, all changes now.

A. I didn't get Dennis, I stayed there a day and I got Dennis the first time; I didn't get Dennis the first trip when I went up there; I didn't get Dennis until two weeks and a half after this first trip; that was in September that I got Dennis, about a month before Dennis came down there; I never thought of it.

Q. When you were there working with Long on this trip—the first trip? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You was still trying to establish that it was a negro baby?

A. I was hooking up him then with my witnesses that I had already started with, that is all I was doing then.

Q. You were just transferring your witnesses from Bartlett to Long?

A. I was handing over my negroes that I had been working with to Mr. Long; they wasn't working for anybody, Dennis and Rube wasn't, they wasn't working for Mr. Bartlett.

Q. You were just selling your negroes out then to Long?

A. Selling my negroes out to Long.

Q. Selling—selling out these three negroes of yours?

A. Selling——

Q. These three negroes of yours for a thousand ($1000.00) dollars?

A. They had a bunch of negroes up there too, Rube and them did, I didn't know anything about.

Q. You were just going over those negroes, Rube's negroes wasn't you?

A. I didn't know, I guess Rube was going to turn them over to him. I was just going to turn over a few principal negroes and Dennis and Rube.

Q. What negroes did you know Rube had at that time?

A. I knew Rube had Will Parker, Will refused to work for me but Rube had got him, and Mat Burns and Dennis had got Aunt Kate to tell a lie, say she seen the baby when it was two weeks old.

Q. You need not tell what was said?

A. And got Mary Smith, Dennis got them. That is all that I know that they had got, I didn't get them.

Q. Then you say you left and it was about two weeks before you went back?

A. About a week and a half before Frank Long and I both came back together.

Q. Frank Long told you that he wanted you to leave because he didn't want Hanford and Bettie to see you?

A. Told me to, didn't want them to meet me because no need to let Bettie and Hanford—Bettie know anything about the case. He wasn't afraid of Hanford, he was afraid of Bettie.

Q. Did you go back to Tulsa?

A. I went right back to Tulsa.

Q. Then about two and a half weeks you came back?

A. On this trip Frank Long hired George Crilly, so he told me, told me that down at Aunt Kate's.

Q. On the first trip?

A. On the first trip, yes, sir, Frank Long told me that on the first trip.

Q. He told you that George Crilly was going to swear that he had known of——

A. Didn't tell me what he was going to swear, he told me, said Sadie I met George Crilly and in talking to him I found out he was a school mate of my mother's and he lived right across the street from Granny's and I am going to hire him in the case; didn't tell me what he was going to pay him or nothing.

Q. That is all he said about George Crilly?

A. Yes, sir, about George Crilly.

Q. He didn't tell you whether he was going to work for him?

A. He said I have hired him in the case, was all.

Q. Now, you come back in about two and a half weeks?

A. We got back there about September, I got back there Thursday night and I think that was about the 10th I guess I reckon along in there somewhere, Frank Long was there before I came.

Q. What did you do then?

A. What did I do then? I stayed in town about a week, very near a week before we found Dennis, before I got him to meet Dennis. I went out to the grave-yard Long got me a pont, he told me to go to Joe Cranstons and get a horse and buggy on him; I told him I had to go out there and see if I could find the grave, you know; and then about four or five days after that I got hold of Dennis, about Wednesday of the next week.

Q. Now, Sadie, that was the first time now?

A. No, this was the second.

Q. That you had commenced doing any active working trying to prove that Tommy Atkins was dead when you went out to the grave-yard?

A. No, I went out to the grave-yard—— You see when I left Tulsa I was to go up to the grave-yard at Coffeyville, I told Mr. Long and Mr. Page that I would go. That is the reason that Mr. Long didn't go the night I did, because I was going to Coffeyville to search the grave-yard there, and Long figured up how many days it would take me to get to Leavenworth. When I got to Coffeyville I couldn't find me anything there that would do in the grave-yard and that pulled me on to Leavenworth.

Q. And when you started on this trip that was the first time you tried to do any active work to find a dead Tommy?

A. No, something that never had lived, I was going to find him dead now.

Q. Then you went out to Leavenworth?

A. Went to the grave-yard.

Q. Went out to the grave-yard?

A. I didn't find anything there and I came back and told Frank Long I would have to go over to Waldron then.

Q. You did find something there at the grave-yard?

A. I didn't find nothing but the other dead there, but nothing to suit anything that we wanted.

Q. You didn't make a list of any?

A. No, I didn't make a list of any; couldn't tell what grave-yard had been there at Pilot Knob; at Mount Munsey I could.

Q. What were you expecting to find at the grave-yard?

A. To find an unknown grave where people had buried at; find an unknown grave and description maybe of some boy; I wasn't going to try to find anybody that had a name on the tombstone.

Q. You didn't find any tomb stone there with the words "Unknown boy"? A. Like I wanted, no, sir.

Q. You came back and told Mr. Long?

A. I told Mr. Long there was nothing there and I then told him I would have to go over to Waldron to my aunt's, but before I went to Waldron, I got him and Dennis hooked up together.

Q. When did you hook them?

A. I hooked them two—we went to Dennis' office about Wednesday; that was September about the 16th or 17th, some place in there, I took him up to Dennis' office.

Q. How long did you stay up there?

A. Dennis's office? Oh, about, I went up there about half past twelve and stayed there until about two o'clock, until Mr. Long came and didn't stay very long after he came.

Q. Did he make a contract there at Dennis's?

A. No, he told Dennis to consider himself hired and Dennis wouldn't make a contract with him because I told him not to. Mr. Page told me if I got him to bring him to him.

Q. But you wanted him to——

A. That the man that told me to bring him.

Q. Told you not to let Long make a contract with him?

A. No, he didn't tell me that, he said Sadie if you get Dennis you bring him to me, I want to see him and talk to him.

Q. Well, did Dennis go to work then?

A. I don't know whether Dennis went to work on the case right there or not, I told Dennis I had been to the Pilot Knob and hadn't found nothing and he said: Sadie, I will look the death records over while I was gone over to my Aunt's.

Q. Well, that is good enough for an answer anyhow. Now, did you go anywhere else then to look at any other graves?

A. Not right then, I did later on, I did a couple of days after I went to Waldron, but before that I—Mr. Long and I went to work then; I went down Delaware street to Ben Samuel's Restaurant and saw Louis Brown in there, a boy that refused to work for me in April. I stayed there and told Louis, I said Louis a white man is here in this case, and Louis said I don't want to see him. Frank Long then was around in my room at 221 Cheyenne Street with my husband Will James. I left there and went back around where Frank was up in my room and told him about Louis Brown being down there, and he went down there I guess and got Louis. Well—

Q. You said—Louis didn't work in the case?

A. Louis did work in the case.

Q. Louis Brown did go to work?

A. He did, not that I know, but I heard afterwards that he was a witness.

Q. You and Long went to work from that time on did you and worked together? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then you said that after a couple of days you went to Waldron? A. Yes, sir, but before that——

Q. Well, what before that now?

A. I taken Frank Long out to Walker's home, he and I both went out to Walker's home to get a colored man out there by the name of Britton, and Britton wouldn't work.

Q. Well, you didn't get Britton?

A. We didn't get Britton, no, sir.

Q. Then, you and——

A. Came back to town and Mr. Long told me him and Rube Smith were going to come down here to Kansas City, had some witnesses down here, and Mr. Long said Sadie if you find what you are going over to Waldron to look for—I was going there to my aunt's—you come on home.

Q. Where was your home then? A. Tulsa.

Q. Come back to Tulsa? A. Come back to Tulsa.

Q. He told you what to do if you didn't find any?

A. No, sir I went to Waldron and hunted around the country grave-yards, several of them, country grave-yards to find out anything that would suit me.

Q. You just were going to the grave-yards looking at the epitaphs?

A. Looking to see if I could see anything to do any good; tell a lie on that dead man.

Q. Did your conscience hurt you a little walking there among the resting place of the dead?

A. No, sir, I am not afraid of them.

Q. Afraid the devil was going to get you?

A. No, I was just as bad about as he was then, I was about as bad as the devil was then, no, sir, I wasn't afraid of him.

Q. What did you do then, come back to Tulsa?

A. Came back to Leavenworth and a telegram was there for me from the Gem Oil Company telling me to come home, be there tomorrow, this is what the telegram said; that was on Friday. Saturday morning I went down and sent another telegram that I would be there in the morning which meant Sunday. I went straight on from the Telegraph Office to Dennis's office and said, Dennis I didn't find nothing over at Waldron; and he said Sadie I have tapped the mortuary records.

Q. Tapped them?

A. Looked them over, is what he meant, and I couldn't find no unknown dead there that will do any good. I told him where I was going, I had some papers of mine out at the soldiers home, and I came back and gave Dennis some money and told him I would meet him at the depot at Tulsa Tuesday morning. That was Monday night, September the 22nd, he was going to leave Monday night the 22nd from Leavenworth and that would have throwed him in Tulsa the 22nd of September, Tuesday.

Q. Did you go down?

A. Yes, sir, after I drawed the money and paid Dennis I went on.

Q. What did you owe Dennis for?

A. The deal we had on that old soldier, he was getting a pension every three months of forty five ($45.00) dollars, and we were getting twenty dollars a month out of—all of his money down in Odessa.

Q. You had already drawn a thousand dollars?

A. No, we got his thousand dollars, we didn't get it all at once, had to draw it by the month, only two hundred and fifty dollars down, a month.

Q. Paid you the money as a wife of a surviving soldier?

A. No, I had to get a white lawyer to fix that up so I could draw twenty dollars a month out of it.

Q. It was being paid to you as a surviving widow of an old soldier?

A. The man was living, the old soldier was living.

By Mr. German: That is not material in any way is it? Of course I would object but it wouldn't do any good to keep——

By Mr. Blakeney: I am not caring to show your interest to any great length.

Q. You did get some money there and divided it and went to Tulsa? A. And went to Tulsa.

Q. Did you report to the Gem Oil Company?

A. Reported to the boss man, Mr. Page.

Q. What report did you make to him?

A. I told him that Dennis would be down Tuesday morning and I hadn't found anything up there, and he said let Dennis do that.

Q. Well, did you claim then that your contract had been performed?

A Oh, no, Mr. Page told me he had another job for me, give me another job after that. That was October 2nd—to steal Nancy, you see. That was two weeks and a half after that when I got this job.

Q. Of going to steal Nancy? A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. German: I will withdraw my statement in regard to that matter.

By Mr. Blakeney: I don't need it any way.

Q. During all this time now, Page and Long both were insisting that you should find a dead negro?

A. Insisting on me doing it?

Q. Yes?

A. Until I couldn't find none up there, and they put it in Dennis's hands and Dennis came down.

Q. During the whole time you were working with him, you were trying to find a dead negro, weren't you?

A. No, the first trip up there I was to get them witnesses.

Q. After you got the witnesses?

A. Two weeks and a half after that Page told me, and Long you see was there, that I ought to be able to go up there and find a grave but I didn't do it.

Q. Why did they want him dead, did they tell you that?

A. Yes, wanted him to be alive long enough just to be for an allotment.

Q. And to die right after it?

A. Didn't care if he died the next minute after it was over.

Q. He told you why he wanted him dead?

A. He didn't say.

Q. Well, you knew he had taken a lease from Minnie, didn't you? A. Yes, I knowed it.

Q. And he wanted to kill him or wanted him dead so his lease would be good? A. Wasn't nobody to die.

Q. Well, that is what he told you, if you found a live one he wouldn't have any lease anyhow?

A. Mr. Page knew that we were making live men that time with Dennis and the negroes up there.

Q. But Mr. Page did inform you that the reason he didn't want a live one was because he had a lease with Minnie?

A. No, he knew the Gipsy would beat him, that the Gipsy would get the live man.

Q. He didn't explain to you if you found a live one it wouldn't do him any good because he had a lease from Minnie and he took it on the theory that Minnie had inherited it from her dead son? Did Mr. Page give you that idea?

A. No, he knew I knew she had nothing.

Q. Did he tell you why a live one wouldn't suit him as well as a dead one?

A. No, he didn't. He wanted him dead, and the Gipsy was swearing that she had a son living.

Q. If he found a live one and got a lease from a live one? Wouldn't that give him as much title?

A. I don't know as it would if he would find one that stood up; he didn't ask us to find a live one.

Q. He told you he had a lease from Minnie?

A. I knew it.

Q. He wanted a boy to be dead?

A. He wanted him to be born in 1885 and dead in 1899, just live long enough for an allotment; didn't want him to live a bit longer than that or die a bit younger than that.

Q. Did he care whether he did die in 1890?

A. Did he care?

Q. Yes. A. I just told you the years he said.

Q. Said the child would have to be born in 1885?

A. To be born.

Q. And have to die after April 1st, 1899?

A. He didn't tell me April 1st, he didn't say which month; I didn't know when the allotment was, how long they had to be living and when dead, I wasn't a Creek, I didn't know.

Q. Now then you were hired to steal Nancy?

A. That was September 22nd, when Dennis came down.

Q. Don't give the dates, yes or no?

A. Yes, sir, hired to steal Nancy.

Q. Did you steal her?

A. No, sir, I got her all framed up to steal her but didn't steal her.

Q. Then what was the next thing you did—not in detail?

A. Well, I was to go then after I came back from there, about a week after that, I was to go and get ready and go up to Leavenworth and steal this deed from Minnie, unbeknowns to Hanford, but I didn't get any further than Kansas City.

Q. About a week after that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were sent by Page up to Leavenworth, Kansas, to get Minnie to make a deed?

A. To be there when they took the depositions; they went up a few days I think before the depositions were taken, I didn't leave until Tuesday night.

Q. You stayed right here in Kansas City?

A. Yes, sir, I stayed right their.

Q. You got you some crook? A. Jim Redmond.

Q. He is a crook too? A. He ain't nothing but a crook.

Q. Is he a red man in fact or a black man?

A. He was a white man.

Q. Redmond would go over to Leavenworth and stay all day?

A. He wasn't to the Court House, he was watching Minnie at the hotel or some place.

Q. What was he watching Minnie for you say?

A. Minnie had just came from telling one lie down at Tulsa and they took her up there to tell this lie, and I just wanted to see how she was going to stand this ordeal, I wanted to see if she was going to go on the stand and swear that.

Q. What kind of lie was Minnie going up there to swear up there?

A. Swearing still that she was the mother of Thomas Atkins with those negroes.

Q. She was going to swear to the same lie, except that she was going to put the place that the baby was born in the negro place? A. In the negro place yes.

Q. You learned they took her evidence and she did do that?

A. She didn't do that, she broke down and couldn't.

Q. She broke down, how do you know that?

A. He told me about it, and Mr. Page told me about her breaking down himself.

Q. Was Page up there?

A. Yes, sir, Mr. Page was up there, at least he told me he was.

Q. Now, what was it she broke down in, what did he tell you?

A. He said, Sadie, Minnie broke down. I said Mr. Page how did everything go off, and he said, Sadie, Minnie broke down she couldn't stand it, couldn't come here to testify, and I said where is she? And he said up at Leavenworth, as soon as we get her under control we are going to bring her back here to testify.

Q. Did he say Minnie had broken down, or got sick and was taken out to the hospital?

A. Didn't tell me nothing about her getting sick.

Q. This man Redmond, told you she was sick?

A. No, he didn't tell me that, just told me they couldn't get Minnie to testify or something.

Q. Were you paying this man Redmond?

A. Paying his train fare or something.

Q. Was that all you were paying him?

A. I think it was, I am telling you that I paid his train fare now.

Q. Is that all?

A. I will say that I paid his train fare.

Q. I want you to say what all that you paid him?

A. That is all that I paid him, his train fare.

Q. Were you down when they took Minnie's evidence at Tulsa?

A. No, sir, I was in the room the day before she did testify though, in Mr. Page's office.

Q. In Mr. Page's office the day before?

A. The day before that, yes, sir.

Q. And the day before was when you talked to Page about it? A. I talked about then in his room, yes, sir.

Q. And he told you that they were going to take Minnie's evidence the next day?

A. She was in the office and wanted me to go in there and talk to her, she was in Mr. Long's room. He said, Sadie, Minnie is in Mr. Long's room and I want you to go in there and talk to her. I said, I don't want to see Minnie, Mr. Page.

Q. And you didn't go? A. I wouldn't go, no, sir.

Q. And you heard that she gave her evidence?

A. I heard it afterwards. I went up there three or four days afterwards and Mr. Page told me that Minnie had done well.

Q. Told you also what she had sworn to?

A. No, he didn't.

Q. Did he tell you that she had sworn that she had the baby at Granny Letcher's?

A. No, he didn't. I said, Mr. Page, how did Minnie do, and he said, Sadie Minnie done well.

Q. Sadie, up to this time, you never had heard of Robert Lee Peterkin, had you?

A. No, I never had heard of him.

Q. Never heard of him at all? A. No.

Q. Now, what did you next do? A. Next do?

Q. Yes?

A. Well in about—in about, I don't—I didn't do anything after Minnie's depositions were taken.

Q. Never worked any more for Page?

A. Just staying in the case until—He told me it wouldn't be long before him and the Gipsy—I seen where they were going to get together and everything would be all right.

Q. Him and the Gipsy would get together——

A. Him and the Gipsy were about to get together, they agreed to combine with one another; and Mr. Josey told me—I said, Mr. Josey, I see where you and the Gipsy are about to get together, and he said, yes, you know the reason we done that; he said we got Minnie but the Gipsy has got the land; he said the courts are so funny that the Gipsy can keep it in Court five or six years and we will be making no money and the Gipsy has got good lawyers and we got good lawyers and we will soon have Nancy, because we will soon have the Nancy case sideswitched and there will be nothing in the way. That is what Mr. Josey told me.

Q. Now, Sadie, is that the last work you did for Long and Page? A. That is all the work I did, yes, sir.

Q. That is all the work you did? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, then, up to that time, as you understood it, they were trying to claim that Minnie had a negro kid and it was dead? A. Did I understand that?

Q. Yes? You never heard anything about a white kid before had you? A. Of Minnie's?

Q. Yes? A. No, sir.

Q. Long hadn't mentioned any white kid to you? A. No.

Q. Page hadn't mentioned any? A. No.

Q. Now, do you remember about that time that they found a colored boy named Henry Carter?

A. Do I know about that time?

Q. Yes? A. You talking about A. D. Henry up there?

Q. Did you hear something about them finding a boy named Henry Carter?

A. No, I didn't know nothing about that.

Q. You never heard anything about that?

A. I aint never heard nothing about a Henry Carter.

Q. Didn't Long or Page tell you that when they took a picture of a nigger boy to Minnie, that Minnie said she wouldn't stand hitched, that she would quitclaim the land or abandon it before she would admit her child was a negro?

A. No, you are telling me that now. Never heard of that.

Q. Never heard of that from Long or Page?

A. Mr. Blakeney, can I ask you a question?

Q. Wait until you get off the stand to ask it.

A. Right here.

Q. You never heard from Long or Page or Hanford that they had to change from a negro boy to a white one because Minnie wouldn't stand hitched?

A. No, you are telling me that, Mr. Blakeney. Can I ask you a question?

Q. You never heard either Page or Long or Hanford——

A. No.

Q. Say that Minnie wouldn't stand hitched to a negro kid? A. No.

Q. And that she would rather abandon the land than to admit that her kid was by a negro man?

A. No, sir, No sir, Judge, I am honest.

Q. I am talking about Page and Long telling you that?

A. No, sir, they never told me that.

Q. At the time that you quit them, they were trying to show it was a negro boy?

A. I don't know what after they got Dennie——

Q. Up to the time that you quit? A. Yes, sir.

Q. As far as you knew?

A. I knew they weren't working with Henry.

Q. When they were working with you they were trying to find some negro boy that had died?

A. I was trying to find where anyone had died so they looked like an Indian. Surely you aint got Henry Carter in this case, sure enough?

By Mr. Blakeney: I move to strike out "sure enough."

(Brief recess.)

Q. Sadie, didn't you say in your direct examination that you had a conversation with Hanford? A. With Hanford?

Q. Mr. Hanford at Tulsa, in which you said to Mr. Hanford you are making a mistake trying to make the kid white, or in substance to that effect?

A. That aint the exact statement.

Q. What is that statement, just tell the statement now?

A. I asked him where Minnie is and he said she is at home. I don't know whereabout the home was, and I said, you understand they are going to try to make a negro case out of it, and he said do you think you can do it, and I said yes; and I said, here is where you made your mistake by letting Minnie go on the stand down at Sapulpa and swear that lie, saying that the baby was born at the hospital. I said, don't you know you can't get the Sisters of Charity to tell a lie. That was the conversation between Mr. Hanford and I.

Q. Did you say anything about letting her swear that the kid was a white child, did you mention that?

A. No, I didn't mention a white child; no, sir, I didn't mention that.

Q. Now, Sadie, after you had made this agreement with one Garfield Buell? A. Yes, sir.

Q. I believe you said you weren't to do anything for that —that was just a donation that he was giving you of fifty dollars a month?

A. When I was working in it. If I was traveling I would get my traveling expenses, if I had to go to get people or something.

Q. Well, you went with him to see every witness you had seen while you had been working for Bartlett, didn't you?

A. No, not every one.

Q. Well, you went over with them to see Mary Smith?

A. No, I didn't, I never did go with them to see Mary Smith, I went to see Mary Smith by myself after I had run off, I went up to Mary Smith's by my own self, I wasn't working for Mr. Buell there.

Q. After you commenced working for Buell, did you go with Robinson and Buell to see Mary Smith?

A. No, sir, I never did, no, sir.

Q. Didn't you go along about the middle of December, 1914, to Mary Smith house, with Robinson and Buell?

A. No, sir, no, sir.

Q. Didn't you at that time and place have a conversation with Mary Smith in which you in substance stated: Mary I am now working for a white man that has got plenty of money and I am claiming that I framed up this Tommy Atkins and you had better get in line with us and help us do that, and you can get some money? A. You want me to answer that?

Q. Yes? A. No, sir, no, sir.

Q. Nothing in substance to that effect?

A. By myself, Judge.

Q. By yourself you had that—— A. By myself.

Q. Wasn't a one armed man and another man the size of Mr. Robinson sitting either on the porch or at the gate when you had that conversation?

A. No, sir, she has no gate, she lives on the street, and I wasn't working for Mr. Buell either then, no, sir.

Q. Didn't you then finally say to them, that man the one armed man you see has got the money and if you don't do that they will send you to the penitentiary?

A. No, Judge, did she tell you that lie?

Q. Did you have a conversation in substance to that effect now? A. Can I tell you the conversation?

Q. Did you have that? A. No, sir.

Q. Didn't she then order you out of the house?

A. No, sir, my goodness! Judge, please allow me to tell you what I said to her.

Q. Now, you remember that Garfield Buell or Robinson took a deposition or an affidavit, a long affidavit from——

A. Whose deposition?

Q. From Mrs. Hamilton out at Los Angeles, don't you?

A. I knowed that, yes.

Q. Just before they commenced taking that evidence, you called Mrs. Hamilton off in another room and had a talk with her?

A. I called Mrs. Hamilton off in another room and had a talk with her?

Q. Yes?

A. Let's see. Let's see if I did. Yes, I belive I did.

Q. You testified in the examination here that you hadn't seen Mrs. Hamilton only the day before—that you went out there the day before Robinson and Buell went?

A. Mrs. Hamilton, I told you I didn't see Mrs. Hamilton when Mr. Bartlett was with me, but when I saw Mrs. Hamilton though, before they taken her down to take depositions, and explained my lie to her before they taken her statement, Mrs. Hamilton's.

Q. Why, Sadie, part of your employment out there was to go and get witnesses to swear to the Buell theory of the case, wasn't it?

A. They believed that that picture I had——

Q. Don't answer that. Wasn't it a part of your duty, under your employment, to go and get witnesses to swear as Buell wanted them to swear?

A. No, not as he wanted them to swear, but to swear to the truth.

Q. To swear that there wasn't any Tommy Atkins?

A. No, if there wasn't one. If there wasn't one to say no.

Q. But if any of them say there was one, you then threatened them with the penitentiary?

A. No, I never knowed of no one that said so; I never carried them to any that said that lie.

Q. Who all was it that you went to?

A. A number of them.

Q. Just tell all that you went to with Buell and Robinson?

A. I went to Mrs. Hamilton's twice, only went when Mr. Buell was along.

Q. You went out to Seattle?

A. I didn't see nobody there except Minnie, I didn't do no talking to her.

Q. Where did—What did you keep a copy of the note that you wrote to Minnie for?

A. What did I keep a copy for?

Q. Yes? A. I was afraid you might change it.

Q. Change your note? A. Yes.

Q. You are very acute, aren't you?

A. I got plenty of sense. You got to say that.

Q. You merely writing a little note saying that you wanted to see her? A. Yes.

Q. And kept a copy of that note for fear it would be changed?

A. For fear—For fear the copy, maybe Mr. Hanford might tell a lie, so I kept a copy of it.

Q. That is the reason? A. That is the reason.

Q. Did you keep copies of all the notes and letters that you made?

A. That is the only one I sent and I kept a copy of that one because it was——

Q. You sent telegrams?

A. I didn't have to keep copy of the telegrams because they kept them in the office.

Q. You were very much disappointed here when they introduced a copy of that here unchanged, wasn't you?

A. Yes, I was because they are such liars, I was.

Recross Examination by Mr. Stuart.

Q. Sadie, the date of your immunity paper, I believe is December 4th, 1914? A. Yes, sir.

Q. December 4th, 1914? A. Yes, sir.

Q. On that date was a telegram received from Judge Allen? A. Yes, sir, that very date.

Q. Where did that telegram come from?

A. Well, I guess it came from Washington, I don't know.

Q. Washington State, that is your recollection?

A. That is my recollection, I think it was the same date, yes, sir.

Q. That telegram from Judge Allen was from Washington City? A. I think it was from Washington, yes, sir.

Q. Let me have these immunity papers?

A. I didn't bring them back, Judge. I can bring them back in the morning.

By Mr. Stuart: I want them copied into the record.

Q. Now, on the same December 4th that Judge Allen telegraphed from Washington, Mr. Buell—— Now, listen, I will read it to you. I will ask you if Mr. Buell didn't send this telegram: Now, listen: "Kansas City, Mo., 12/4/14. M. L. Mott, National Hotel, Washington, D. C. After consideration we believe it very advisable for Department to file suit in behalf of Creek Nation in Atkins matter at once so depositions can be taken on western trip and testimony preserved. Can you get immediate action. Wire. Signed J. Garfield Buell."

A. Do I know whether he sent it?

Q. Yes? A. I can't tell you Judge.

Q. Do you know whether he sent any telegram to Mr. Mott?

A. No, I don't know, no sir. You want me to answer to what I know?

Q. Yes? A. No, sir, I don't know.

Q. Did you hear him say whether he sent that or not?

A. No, sir, I didn't, Judge, I didn't.

Q. Mr. Montgomery didn't write out this paper which you call immunity, and still he got that telegram from Judge Allen at Washington?

A. No, sir, you see Mr. Montgomery came in the morning and he said he would have to see; Mr. Robinson left Mr. Montgomery at my house and I had a talk with Mr. Montgomery, I didn't make no confession——

Q. But you didn't get these papers written up by Mr. Montgomery until you—until he got the telegram from Judge Allen, did you?

A. I didn't make no confession until he came back out there with the telegram, and he brought this man taking down what I am talking, like this man, and he had to go back down town and get it written out, typewritten and he brought a

Notary that night and I signed it, and he handed me over the papers.

Q. When you told him unless he brought that out you wouldn't confess? A. My immunity?

Q. Yes?

A. I wasn't going to talk to him, I asked him——

Q. You wasn't going to talk until you got it?

A. I wasn't going to talk myself, no, sir, until he gave me the papers.

Q. He brought Judge Allen's telegram to you in the afternoon with the immunity papers?

A. No, sir, he didn't bring the immunity papers.

Q. When did he bring the immunity papers?

A. When he came back with the telegram, you see, I didn't make no confession to Judge Montgomery that morning; he didn't know whether he could get immunity or not, he said he would see; he went up town and was gone three or four hours and maybe more.

Q. Will you tell me when you got the immunity papers?

A. That same day. I made my confession about two o'clock that afternoon and then Mr. Montgomery didn't come back until about seven o'clock that night with a Notary Public and they read it over to me what I have said and I signed it, and the minute I signed the statement I had made, then Mr. Montgomery gave me the immunity papers.

Q. He passed you the immunity papers?

A. The minute I signed that.

Q. The minute you signed that?

A. Yes, sir, the minute I signed that.

By Mr. German: Judge Stuart, I wish you would have this telegram that you read, purported telegram identified.

By Mr. Blakeney: I object to that until it has been properly identified.

By Mr. German: I mean identified by the Examiner.

By Mr. Hanford: Do you admit it?

By Mr. German: No, sir, I object to it. I mean identified by the Examiner. I object to it being admitted in evidence, but I desire that counsel have the document from which he read identified and filed.

By Mr. Blakeney: I object to any marking or filing of a document that is not properly identified here. It may be, so far as I know, or might be merely a note written.

By Mr. Stuart: I just asked you if she saw that kind of a telegram sent.

By Mr. German: You are unwilling to do that?

By Mr. Stuart: I am unwilling, because I haven't got the original telegram. I asked if that kind of telegram was sent.

By Mr. German: Now, I move to strike the question and the answer thereto pertaining to the purported telegram and all inquiries concerning the same on the ground that they are incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and improper cross examination; and for the reason that counsel is not willing to file the document from which he read as a part of the examination.

Redirect Examination by Mr. German.

Q. Sadie, you have been on the witness stand now all this week, haven't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And at one night session? A. At one night session.

Q. It is now four o'clock in the afternoon or about?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. We started with your testimony the second or third day of this month? A. Two days.

Q. And had you on the stand a part of two days and your voice gave down? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were sick—had you been sick?

A. They served a subpoena on me in the bed. Yes, sir, I had been in the bed pretty near two weeks.

Q. Up to that time?

A. Yes, sir, up to that time.

Q. Do you remember how long before you came to testify that that subpoena had been served on you?

By Mr. Hanford: I object on the ground that it is incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

By Mr. Blakeney: We object for the same reason.

By Mr. German: We object for the same reason.

Q. You say you were sick in bed when it was served on you? A. I was sick in bed.

By Mr. Hanford: I object on the ground that it is incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, improper redirect examination, and move to strike the answer which was given before I could interpose my objection.

Q. When did you get out of bed with reference to the time that you began to testify on the second or third days?

By Mr. Hanford: The same objection.

A. Wednesday morning, the morning I was to be here in Court, yes, sir, I got out of bed.

Q. We had a recess for quite a while after you had testified on Wednesday, and then on Thursday until you could recover your voice?

By Mr. Hanford: The same objection.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Referring to Mr. Blakeney's questions to you referring to your conversation with Mary Smith, at Leavenworth, I wish you would relate that conversation and when it was?

By Mr. Blakeney: We object as hearsay, irrelevant, incompetent, and immaterial, no time and place laid.

Q. When was it?

By Mr. Hanford: We object on the ground that it is hearsay, not made in the presence of any of the parties to this suit.

A. That was the latter part of, about the middle I guess of November, 1914—1914.

Q. That was before your contract with Buell?

A. That was before my contract, before I had made a contract, before I had made a confession to the Government, yes, sir.

Q. All right, I don't care for your relation of it then. What year is that you said you began to pursue a bad life?

A. About eighty-eight, the fall of eighty-eight.

Q. About the fall of '88? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How old were you then?

A. Oh, about nineteen, I guess, I think I was nineteen.

A. I quit going to school when I was sixteen. You see I never did go to school regularly, I go to be about thirteen years old, would just go at intervals.

Q. Are your parents living?

A. My mother is living but my father is dead.

Q. Where does your mother live?

A. My mother lives in Tulsa, Oklahoma.

Q. When did you first commence to—when did you first know Granny Letcher? A. 1879 we moved with her 1879.

Q. Who is we? A. My mother and myself.

Q. Where was Granny living at that time?

A. Living on the corner of Fourth and Choctaw.

Q. How long did you and your mother continue to live with Granny? A. Until the spring of eighty-three.

Q. Was your father living at that time?

A. No, sir, my—— Yes, sir, my father was living but not with us.

Q. He wasn't living with your mother?

A. With my mother, no, sir.

Q. Did you make your home after that with your mother or with Granny?

A. Well, my mother married and I stayed around Granny's and worked.

Q. Except when you were working——

A. Working, and I stayed back and forth with Granny. Hardly ever at my mother's house because I had a step father.

Q. So outside of the time that you were out of Leavenworth in the winter of eighty-four, the time that you mentioned when you went west somewhere—— A. Yes, sir.

Q. You made your home, when you were not working, with Granny?

A. Around Granny's, yes, sir, around Granny's house.

Q. And when you were working, would you or not visit at Granny's? A. I did.

Q. Very frequently?

A. Yes, sir, I taken her to be my grandmother, she wasn't but then I would go there.

Q. Is your step-father living? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When was it you started up a house there in Leavenworth of your own? A. 1888, in the fall of 1888.

Q. At that time you had discontinued living with Granny? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Or making Granny's your home?

A. Yes, sir, but I would go there and eat at Granny's; she fed people you know and I would go down there and eat.

Q. You spoke of Granny having lived at one time at the corner of Third and Seneca, did you not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where had she lived at just prior to the time that she lived at Third and Seneca?

A. Right on Seneca where she died at. She lived there and moved away, down on Third, between Third and Fourth on Seneca.

Q. Then, as I understand you, she lived at two different places on Seneca Street in the course of her life?

A. Yes, sir, and then she moved back to where she had moved out of.

Q. What was the street number of the first place on Seneca Street that she lived?

A. 217, the first place that she moved, yes, sir.

Q. Where had she come from to that place?

A. Off of Cherokee Street.

Q. What part os Cherokee Street?

A. 215 Cherokee was her number.

Q. Do you know about when it was that she moved from 217 Seneca to the corner of Third and Seneca?

A. No, I don't know now. I don't know.

Q. That was after you quit living with her?

A. Yes, sir, that was after I quit living with her, she didn't live down there so very long, outside of three or four months.

Q. Lived where?

A. Down on Seneca between Third and Fourth, and she moved right back then to 217.

Q. You spoke of down—you said down from 217 Seneca to the corner of Third and Seneca?

A. No, it is west, pretty near a block west.

Q. Well is it down hill? A. No, sir, I just said down.

Q. You just call it that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Judge Stuart inquired of you about your testimony in Muskogee, as to what you had testified with reference to Granny living or moving to Third and Seneca, and I wanted to ask you a little about that.

By Mr. Hanford: I would like to ask the witness what the papers are that you referred to.

By Mr. Blakeney: We have a right to object to the witness using apparently memoranda without making them on exhibit or identifying them or explaining the nature and character of the same.

By Mr. German: In connection with that, I want to make this record. That after the last statement that I made to the witness, I begun to look through my notes and have been engaged in that for a short while when the witness examined some papers she had, and thereupon Mr. Hanford asked her the question just put to her or made the statement.

By Mr. Blakeney: Counsel's statement is correct, but we would like to have the memorandum she examined identified and made a part of the record.

By Mr. Hanford: Let the record show that it was three pieces of note paper she took from her book and read over and then returned to her book after my interrogation.

By Mr. Blakeney: I asked here for permission to examine the witness before counsel examines her to see what the character and nature of memoranda and papers which she took from her grip and examined them, the same looking like that they were notes from which she was testifying, being at the time on the witness stand and under examination by counsel.

By Mr. Hanford: I join in that request.

The Examiner: The witness is now under examination by the attorneys for the complainants. I ask the attorneys for the complainant if they will accede to the above request?

By Mr. German: No, I am unwilling to do so for the simple reason that during the cessation of my examination, and not until after I had commenced to examine my notes, the witness even looked at any paper that she had, and couldn't have looked at that for the purpose of answering any question, because I had not stated a question.

Q. Sadie, did you have any child in Leavenworth?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Hanford: I object on the ground that it is incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and move to strike the answer for the reason that it was made before I could make an objection.

By Mr. German: I will withdraw the question.

Q. When did you go to——

By Mr. Hanford: I want my objection to show that the answer was made before I could interpose my objection, the witness answering so quickly.

Q. When did you move to the Indian Territory or Oklahoma? A. About the fall of ninety-nine—1899.

Q. 1899? A. Let's see, 1899. Yes, sir, 1899.

Q. Have you lived there continuously since then until you came to Kansas City this last time?

A. Yes, lived there—— Yes, sir, lived right there.

Q. How long have you been living in Tulsa?

A. I have been living in Tulsa about—I moved there in 1908.

Q. And then did you live there for some time after that?

A. I lived there until now, when I can stay home I am there now, there is where I live.

Q. What business are you engaged in at Tulsa?

A. Well, when I first went there I run a rooming house until about 1910.

Q. Then what business were you engaged in?

A. Running a road house.

Q. Where was this road house located?

A. The road house was located about—let's see, on North Greenwood, but about three blocks or four blocks outside of the city limits.

Q. In what direction from the main part of town?

A. Well, it would be north of Main Street, north—— No, north of Second Street, the north part of town.

Q. What kind of business was carried on at that road house?

A. Well, it was a little longer than this I guess.

Q. This room?

A. Yes, sir, thirty feet front and forty feet long, and I had a gambling house in there, two bed rooms and a place —a dance hall.

Q. Did you sell any intoxicants there?

A. Yes, from a hundred to two hundred and fifty dollars of beer and stuff at night.

Q. Was anybody interested with you in that business?

A. They wasn't interested with me, I run it myself, but Mr. Creekmore was back of me with the law there. I was buying my stuff from him.

Q. Bought your stuff from Bill Creekmore?

A. Bill Creekmore, yes, sir.

Q. Did you do a big business or not?

A. I guess so, I had from a hundred to two hundred people a night.

By Mr. Hanford: I object to that as improper redirect examination, improper, incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

A. I would have from a hundred to two hundred people every night and part of the day.

Q. People from Tulsa?

A. People from Tulsa and out of town too.

A. Well patronized place?

A. Yes, sir, especially at nights.

Q. Was it very well known in the city?

A. Yes, sir, I was busy all the time, yes.

Q. Were you ever arrested over that house, for running that road house?

A. Never got arrested for running the road house. Got arrested in town first and Mr. Creekmore had me move out on the hill.

Q. Got arrested in town before you moved out there?

A. Yes, sir, raided a good many times and he had me move out there.

Q. Was there any publication of your arrest in the news papers? A. A good many times, yes.

Q. What name were you going under at that time.

By Mr. Hanford: I object to all this line of interrogation on the ground that it is incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and improper redirect examination and can serve no other purpose than to encumber the record.

By Mr. Blakeney: We object especially as it doesn't even show that Henry Carter read the papers of Tulsa or had access to them.

Q. Sadie, you found out since Mr. Blakeney—since you were answering his questions as to whom he represented, you have found out whom he does represent? A. I have.

By Mr. Blakeney: We object now.

By Mr. Hanford: Do we need to make special exception, or do we agree to my general objection?

By Mr. German: Unless you object to the form of the question.

By Mr. Blakeney: I object to the last question that counsel must have told her, she couldn't have found out from anything I did.

Q. I will ask you this: How long did you continue to run the Road House?

A. Until the spring of 1913, along about March when I married.

Q. You got married? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you do then?

A. I didn't do anything after 1913, but I ran the road house from 1910 to 1913.

Q. Were you tried for murder at Tulsa? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did the killing take place?

A. In the road house in 1911, July 3rd, 1911, the first one.

Q. What was your name at that time? A. Sadie Johnson.

Q. You say the first one?

A. There was two killed there, yes, sir.

Q. Two killings there? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was connected with the other killing?

A. My son-in-law and a house man out there killed a notorious fellow called "Five-dollar Red."

Q. Were you tried on both those charges?

A. No, sir, they found out I didn't have anything to do with that killing.

Q. What was the outcome of the trial on the first killing?

A. Both of them were acquitted. Both boys were acquitted for theirs and me too.

Q. You were acquitted for the one that you were charged with? A. I was acquitted too.

Q. Were you charged by complaint and indictment for the last murder too? A. No, sir.

Q. Were you arrested on account of it?

A. Yes, sir, I was arrested because the boys were working for me.

Q. Was anything in the news papers about those arrests and those homicides?

By Mr. Blakeney: We object now, too indefinite and remote, nothing to indicate that they were read by Henry Carter.

Q. What news papers contained articles about the homicides? A. The Tulsa World, the front page was full of it.

Q. Did your name appear in those articles?

A. My name appeared yes, sir, and at my trial too.

Q. The papers were full of it?

A. The front page was full of that too. About the Bucket of Blood and who I was.

Q. At the time of your trial——

A. When I did the killing.

Q. Now, at the time that you ran this road house, was Frank Long ever there?

A. Yes, sir, Frank Long that is in here?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, sir, Frank Long has been at my road house lots of times; he had been in my road house before ever I done the killing.

Q. Did you know him at that time?

A. Yes, sir, I knowed Mr. Long.

Q. Did he know you? A. Yes, sir, Mr. Long knowed me.

Q. That was prior to the time that you were employed by Mr. Page? A. Three years before that.

Q. Why was that place called "The Bucket of Blood"?

A. Because of those two killings and it was so awful rough out there. Three had got killed and I don't know how many of them there had been beat up awful bad out there, and rough too, and robbed too.

Q. Now, after you were employed by Mr. Page, you say you saw Bill Creekmore in there in his office?

A. Had I seen him?

Q. Yes?

A. A number of times have I been in there when Mr. Creekmore was in there, yes, sir.

Q. What was Bill Creekmore doing in Mr. Page's office?

By Mr. Hanford: I object on the ground that it is incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial—not shown that she knows.

By Mr. German: Your objections go to all of this as I understand it.

By Mr. Hanford: All right.

A. My understanding, you mean, what was he doing in there?

Q. Yes?

A. They were friends, and then I have seen Claude bring out the monthly receipts of the railroad and show them, exhibit them to Mr. Creekmore, for Mr. Page would tell Claude to get those papers.

By Mr. Blakeney: I had to wait for the answer to see the connection, and the answer shows no connection with the case. I move now to strike the answer as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, has no connection or bearing on the case in any form.

By Mr. Hanford: Will Mr. German state the purpose of the examination.

By Mr. Blakeney: I don't think he could state anything to show that.

By Mr. German: The purpose of this——

By Mr. Blakeney: I object as encumbering the record as to any purposes.

Q. Had you ever heard Mr. Creekmore ask Mr. Page anything about those papers?

A. About the road house, about the railroad papers?

Q. The railroad business, yes?

A. No, sir, I didn't hear but when Mr. Creekmore——

By Mr. Blakeney: We object as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

Q. Did you hear Mr. Page discussing the railroad matters? A. Yes, sir, I have.

By Mr. Blakeney: We object as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

Q. What railroad was that?

By Mr. Blakeney: We object as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

A. My understanding it was the street car road there in town, interurban part of the railroad business.

Q. That ran from Tulsa to Sand Springs?

A. To Sand Springs, yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever hear Mr. Creekmore say anything to Mr. Page about how—or Mr. Page say anything to Mr. Creekmore about you?

By Mr. Hanford: Now, I move to strike all these questions and answers covered by my objection on the ground that they are all incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, improper redirect and impertinent, and purely slanderous.

By Mr. Blakeney: I object to it all because it is not in any sense competent, relevant, or material.

Q. Answer that yes, or no? A. Yes, sir.
Q. Which one was it? A. Mr. Creekmore.
Q. Who did he speak to? A. Talking to Mr. Page.
Q. What did he say?
A. Telling Mr. Page how game I was.
Q. Well, tell just what he said?
A. He said, well Charlie, Sadie is all right——

By Mr. Blakeney: We object to any statement.

A. She ran the road house out there for two or three years, anything you want Sadie to do she will do it.
Q. Now, when was that conversation?
A. That was after I had been hired to Mr. Page.
Q. How long after?
A. Oh, in about a week if that long.
Q. In about a week? A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Blakeney: We move now to strike it out for the reason that it is obviously irrelevant and immaterial.

Q. What, if anything, did Mr. Page say to that in answer to that?

A. He said well he knew it because I had been so game making this live man, you see, and the nerve I had in it.

By Mr. Blakeney: I move to strike out all after the word "because," as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

By Mr. Hanford: I join in the motion to strike.

Q. Was that Mr. Page's statement, or is that your conclusion as to why he said that?

By Mr. Blakeney: We object to the form of the question; let the witness tell what Page said.

A. That is the answer he gave Mr. Creekmore.

Q. Sadie, you were asked something on your cross examination about whether you had discussed your confession with anybody and you stated that you had not; and as to whether you had talked with anybody as to what you were going to swear in this case and you said you had not. I will ask you to state whether you ever talked to anybody as to what you knew about the facts? A. In this case?

Q. Yes? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who to?

A. I have talked to you in the presence of Judge Allen and Mr. Meserve, and I have talked to Judge Allen and Mr. Cook with the two of them about the facts what I knew and about what I had found out, but not about my confession.

Q. Have you ever talked with Judge Allen about this case except in the presence of me and Mr. Cook? A. No, sir.

By Mr. Blakeney: We object to that as immaterial; we are not trying Judge Allen now.

Q. Judge Stuart inquired of you about some statement you are supposed to have made in February, 1915, which he stated or indicated that he understood you had made in Judge Allen's office, stating as I remember it at the time that he had it or was in possession of it or a copy of it. Did you make a statement in February, 1915?

A. Yes, sir, but not in Judge Allen's office.

Q. Where did you make it?

A. I made that in my room down on South Second Street.

Q. In whose presence?

A. In the presence of Mr. Montgomery and some shorthand writer there that they had, I sent for them.

Q. Sadie, when in your testimony you made some reference to the fact that before you and Bettie Mann went to Seattle you had heard Bettie say something about Frank Long, as I remember it——

A. Before we went?

Q. Yes, before you and Bettie went to Seattle?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Had she said something to you about Frank Long?

A. That day or way before that——

By Mr. Blakeney: I object all the way through the record and the examination in chief to conversations between Bettie and this witness as being hearsay, incompetent, immaterial, and I would like to make that objection now to go to any questions——

By Mr. German: We are not eliciting the conversation.

By Mr. Blakeney: Oh, then, I beg your pardon.

Q. When and where before you went to Seattle that Bettie did say something to you about Frank Long?

A. The first time was in Sapulpa, her and Rogers both said something to me; they had been talking to him up at the depot in Sapulpa the second time.

Q. Where was the second time? A. In the Tulsa Hotel.

Q. Where? A. The Stafford Hotel the second time.

Q. In Kansas City? A. Yes, sir, Kansas City.

Q. Was that before you had gone to Seattle.

A. Yes, sir, that was before we had gone to Seattle.

Q. And the third day that you were in Seattle— Oh, yes, I believe it was the third day after you had first seen Minnie there or at least on the day that you say you told Harry Folk about Minnie's children; I wish you would relate what was said to Harry about Alice, Minnie's child Alice? A. Alice?

Q. Yes, if anything?

A. Yes, sir, I told him that the children were living.

Q. You told him that Alice was living?

A. Yes, sir, I told him that Alice was living.

Q. What, if anything, did you say about Mabel?

A. We never spoke about the dead one, about Mabel.

Q. About Mabel?

A. No, sir, didn't tell him anything about that.

Q. Now, after Mr. Long came to Seattle while you were there on your first trip there, in Bettie's room when you and Bettie and Mr. Long were in there, you started to tell while Judge Stuart was cross examining you about what Frank Long said when he threw his hands up, I wish you now would tell what that was? A. I told Frank Long——

Q. When he threw his hands up?

A. I said where you made your mistake was by not talking to Captain McNab, and he said I see my handwriting on the wall and I am going back.

Q. Now, when was that statement made with reference to the time that he threw his hands up?

A. You mean what had been going on before he threw his hands up?

Q. When he threw his hands up?

A. I told him he made a mistake by not talking to Captain McNab.

Q. Then, did he throw his hands up?

A. Yes, he said I see where I made my mistake, I see my handwriting on the wall.

Q. And it was when he said that that he threw his hands up, while he was saying it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Sadie, when Mr. Hanford had you on cross examination, he read to you some testimony given on the witness stand in Muskogee when the application for appointment of Receiver was being heard, the following: "I said that is just my matter, she told me the baby died when it was six months old." He, referring to Frank Long, said I will give you and Bettie three hundred dollars apiece to steal Minnie and bring her to Oklahoma. And you answered that it was three thousand dollars.

A. Yes, sir, I never did say three hundred.

Q. Now, I want to ask you about the first part of this statement that he read to you?

By Mr. Hanford: Now, I want to interpose an objection on the ground that the question is a statement of the record. I don't believe that I read the first part of that. The extract which you read, and the question is therefore improper redirect.

By Mr. German: Though you did read it, you withdraw it?

By Mr. Hanford? If I did read it, I withdraw it, yes.

By Mr. German: And will not hold her to having said that she said that.

By Mr. Hanford: Oh, no.

By Mr. German: The word "she" appears here where it should be the word "he."

By Mr. Hanford: I won't consent to any correction of the record or admissions as to what the witness said at that hearing or now.

By Mr. Blakeney: I want to object to this discussion. This discussion is just enlightning the witness on what that answer should be.

Q. Sadie, didn't you state down at Muskogee that Minnie told you that the baby died when it was six months old?

A. Did I state down at Muskogee?

Q. Yes.

A. I stated she told me that in front of Captain McNab and Mr. Hanford, yes, sir.

Q. She told you that in front of Captain McNab and Mr. Hanford? A. Yes, sir, she did.

Q. But did you state there at Muskogee that you had said on the occasion when you first talked with Frank Long in Bettie Mann's room there in Seattle, that you told Mr. Long that Minnie had told you that the baby died when it was six months old? A. No, Frank Long said she told him.

Q. Is that what you testified to in Muskogee? A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Hanford: I object and move to strike the answer, which was made before my objection could be interposed, on the ground that the question is improper redirect examination, incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and the record speaks for itself as to what was said at Muskogee at the Receivership hearing.

By Mr. Blakeney: Sadie, I want you to bring the three sheets that you had examining here and put into your handbag in when you come for redirect in the morning or leave them with the examiner this evening.

A. Some of them don't belong to this case. I will see what I will do.

By Mr. Hanford: Sadie, will you leave those papers with Mr. Penick?

A. No, I won't.

And thereupon the witness is excused until nine-thirty o'clock A. M.

By Mr. Allen: It is stipulated and agreed that the certified transcript of the record now in possession of the attorney for the Government and which was certified to be a true copy of the same by the Clerk of the Supreme Court of Oklahoma on February 20th, 1915, is a true and complete case-made, and contains all pleadings, proceedings, and evidence in the case of H. U. Bartlett, A. A. Hammer, and the Gypsy Oil Company, a corporation, plaintiff in error, against Nancy Atkins, an incompetent person, by Micco P. Harjo, the legal guardian and next friend, M. S. Murphy, Milbur M. Norris, W. W. Walker, and Ellis H. Hammett, defendants in error; in case No. 6970, filed in the Supreme Court, November 14, 1914; and that further identification of any pleadings, proceedings, or the testimony of any witness will not be required, and that any part of same may be hereafter offered subject to such objections as counsel may desire to make other than the objection that same is not properly identified.

By Mr. Blakeney: Now, I understand that this evidence does not in any sense refer to Henry Carter.

By Mr. Allen: We can make any objection in the hearing that we want to to any paper in that case, made under this stipulation, except an objection as not being properly identified.

By Mr. Blakeney: I admit that that is a correct transcript, and I waive any further identification, but I certainly object to any testimony in that case-made being used against me as I was not a party to the suit.

And thereupon an adjournment was taken until nine-thirty o'clock A. M.

And thereafter, and on February 19, 1916, at nine-thirty o'clock A. M., further testimony is taken herein as follows:

SADIE JAMES, being recalled, further testified as follows:

Redirect Examination by Mr. German.

Q. Sadie, you say you didn't know about it if Mr. Buell sent a telegram to Mr. Mott, such as Judge Stuart read to you yesterday afternoon?

A. No, sir, that was the first time I had heard of it.

Q. I will ask you if you knew that Judge Allen had recommended to the Secretary of the Interior that this suit be brought a month and a half before you made your confession to Mr. Montgomery?

By Mr. Hanford: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

A. No, sir, I never heard of it.

Q. Did you know that Judge Allen had made that recommendation to the Secretary of the Interior before Garfield Buell's Indian attempted to file on this land? A. I did not.

Q. Did you know that M. L. Mott, the man to whom Mr. Buell is supposed to have sent that supposed telegram, was then and is now a law partner of John B. Meserve?

A. I don't know Mr. Mott.

Q. You don't know him? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you know, Sadie, that Judge Allen sought to get the Congress which convened in December, 1914, to withdraw this Atkins allotment and all other unallotted Creek lands and the Barney Thlocco allotment from allotment, and that he spent about six months before the Indian Committees in Congress trying to bring about that result?

By Mr. Hanford: Objected to as irrelevant, incompetent and immaterial, and to the competency of the witness.

A. No, sir, you know I didn't know Judge Allen, no, I didn't know anything about it.

Q. Did you know that having failed to get Congress to pass legislation to that effect, he procured the President of the United States to issue an order withdrawing the land from allotment in the Creek Nation until Congress could act in the matter?

By Mr. Hanford: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and object to the competency of the witness.

A. No, sir.

Q. Sadie, did you know that Judge Allen prepared a bill that has been introduced at this session of Congress for the purpose of withdrawing all Creek lands from allotment in order to prevent the Garrett allotment and the Thlocco allotment from being allotted by any Indian citizens? Did you know that?

By Mr. Hanford: Objected to as irrelevant, incompetent and immaterial and the competency of the witness.

By Mr. Bell: The same objection on behalf of Henry Carter.

A. No, sir, I didn't know it.

Q. Did you know that during the last session of Congress when Judge Allen was seeking to get the bill that he had then introduced passed, that he not only made oral arguments, but submitted written briefs in which he referred not only to the Quinton Garrett allotment, but to the Thlocco and other allotments and urged Congress to withdraw them; and in the course of his argument he pressed upon Congress the great injustice growing out of permitting Quinton Garrett or any other Indian to take Thomas Atkins' allotment?

By Mr. Hanford: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and to the competency of the witness, and because the question is argument and can only be asked for the purpose of arguing the case, counsel well knowing that the defendant is capable of answering the question and can have no knowledge of the facts.

By Mr. Bell: The same objection on behalf of Tommy Atkins, known as Henry Carter.

A. No, sir.

Q. Sadie, how long had you known Bettie Mann when you went to Tulsa to live?

A. When I went to Tulsa to live?

Q. Yes?

A. I had known here about six or seven years before I went there. I guess five or six or seven years before I went there.

Q. You knew her while you were living in Tulsa?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Before you came to Kansas City the last time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Before you went to Leavenworth the last time, when Mr. Page sent you away? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know what her reputation was in the Tulsa community? Answer yes or no.

By Mr. Hanford: Objected to as irrelevant, incompetent, and immaterial.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, I speak of her reputation for morality and honesty. Do you know her reputation for morality and honesty?

By Mr. Hanford: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and for the further ground that if Bettie Mann is to be a witness in this case called in the future, her reputation cannot be involved in the case at her own instance at this time.

Q. Answer yes or no? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was it good or bad?

A. It was bad. Bad in Muskogee when I first knew her.

By Mr. Hanford: I want to object to that question and move to strike the answer, made before I——

Q. Was she very well known around Tulsa at that time?

By Mr. Hanford: Objected to as irrelevant, incompetent, and immaterial.

A. Yes, sir, and all over Oklahoma.

Q. Her general reputation that you speak of, was it well known around Tulsa? A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Hanford: I object to all this line of questioning relating to Bettie Mann at this time.

Q. You referred to—in connection with Bettie Mann—to some seven year matter. What did you mean by that?

A. Why she was tried in Tulsa on a land fraud deal and that seven years she and Don McDonald and three of the other boys went to the pen on it, but Bettie is out on bond.

Q. Do you know who bonded her out?

A. I didn't at first, no, I don't know, I can't say who bonded her out.

Q. Was she out on bond at the time you were first brought in this case up here in 1914?

A. I will change this. I think at first Mr. Bartlett and somebody else was on her bond; then that Mr. Bartlett withdrew from the bond, and not knowing myself I think Mr. Page was instrumental in someone else going on it; I think so.

Q. Have you so heard?

By Mr. Hanford: I want to interpose a specific objection to that question, and move to strike the answer on the ground that it is incompetent, irrelevant, immaterial, and hearsay, and object to the competency of the witness. I think it was covered by my general objection, but I want to [] the specific objection notwithstanding.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever hear of Bettie saying anything about it? A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Hanford: Objected to as hearsay.

Q. When was it she told you anything about it?

A. That was after I came back from the west along in August, 1914, I guess.

Q. What did she tell you about it?

By Mr. Hanford: Objected to as hearsay.

A. She told me that Mr. Bartlett had got off of her bond and Mr. Page said that he would see that she didn't get placed in jail anyhow; she didn't say he was on the bond though.

Q. Referring to Ida Foster. You say she is older than you? A. Oh, no, I am lots older than Ida.

Q. You are older than Ida? A. Yes, sir.

Q. About how much?

A. Well, I am three or four years anyhow older than Ida Foster, I know I am that much older.

Q. You say that you and Ida ran together about the time that she began to go bad?

A. Eighty-nine, yes, sir, about the fall of eighty-eight, or spring of eighty-nine.

Q. That was about the time that you commenced to pursue an immoral life, was it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How much did you and Dennis Jones rob that soldier out of?

A. Well, he had a thousand dollars, we thought he had about a thousand dollars, he had seven hundred and fifty dollars down in the Odessa Bank in Missouri, and a house and two lots. He had a hundred and eighty-five dollars in the bank there at Leavenworth, in the First National Bank; he had ninety-two dollars in the Soldier's Home Office out there, and then his pension money, we drew that for a year and this other money for a month, drawing twenty dollars a month for a year, we drew it.

By Mr. Hanford: I want it to appear that my general objection does not go to this line of questioning as to this matter between Sadie and Dennis Jones.

Q. You say Dennis got into that with you before you married that soldier?

A. Dennis put me up to marrying him, he got his money tied up so that I couldn't do anything but marry him. Married him like this morning, and in about twenty minutes after that we came right back to Dennis' office and Dennis drew up a will and made the old man sign over the stuff to me, and then he gave me—to make me power of attorney over his stuff to sell out at once. I was going to sell it right away, and I went right to the Court House, County Court there in Leavenworth and had it recorded. Dennis was the executor of the will; it is recorded right there in Leavenworth; brought the papers back, the receipt for the will and the notary papers, power of attorney, and gave them to Dennis and he has them yet without he has destroyed them.

Q. Did Dennis know you were a married woman when you married that soldier?

A. Sure Dennis knowed it, my husband was right there in town, I told him I was married.

Q. What is his name? A. William James.

Q. And in what capacity was Dennis connected with that, as your lawyer or how? A. Was he my lawyer?

Q. Yes?

A. No, sir, he wasn't representing me as a lawyer; he was until we got the money tied up. He put me on this old soldier, I didn't know him until I got there. Dennis told me about old man Lane.

Q. Did you have occasion to employ a lawyer after you married the old fellow?

A. Yes, sir, the old soldier's name was Lane, about eighty-five years old.

Q. Who was the attorney that you engaged?

A. I got—— Codding is my attorney. Dennis sent me to Mr. Codding after we got the money tied up.

Q. He is a white man, isn't he?

A. Yes, sir, he is a white man there running a law office, they are law partners there.

Q. Did Mr. Codding accept employment from you?

A. Yes, sir. He didn't know me and I went up and told him about the old man. The old man was notified to be in Court December 4th, the white people down at Odessa had control over his money and were going to place a guardian over him, and notified him to be there December 4th to see whether or not he should be adjudged of unsound mind, and Dennis was afraid to go down there because it was a little white Missouri town and he was afraid to go down there; so he sent me to Mr. Codding.

Q. He sent you to Mr. Codding?

A. Yes, sir, he sent me to Mr. Codding.

Q. When you went to Mr. Codding, did you have any trouble getting Mr. Codding [] accept employment?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

By Mr. Stuart: We object to that because it is leading and suggestive.

By Mr. Hanford: The same objection.

A. I did.

Q. Well, what did you have to do? A. Mr. Codding——

Q. What did he say to you about that?

A. He told me he didn't know me, asked if I was known in Leavenworth, and I told him I was raised there, and he said do you know——

By Mr. Hanford: I move to strike the answer of the witness this far, on the ground that it is hearsay and a conversation not in the presence of the parties to this suit, and I object to the question.

A. Any reputable person there in Leavenworth that would say that I was all right.

Q. What did you tell him? A. I told him yes, sir.

Q. Well, what did he say?

A. He asked me who it was, and I told him Dennis Jones.

By Mr. Stuart: We object to this because it is hearsay, has no relation to the issue, and they were statements made not in the presence of the parties to the case.

By Mr. Hanford: The same objection.

Q. Did you do anything then in reference to getting any recommendations?

A. Mr. Codding asked me if I could get a letter of recommendation, and I told him yes Dennis would do it.

By Mr. Stuart: The same objection.

A. Mr. Codding called up Dennis and asked Dennis if he would write a letter recommending me, and Dennis told him yes, and I went down to Dennis' office.

Q. You say Dennis had known you all your life?

A. Dennis has known me ever since—— I guess he knew me in 1877, the next year after I came there, knew me when I run the place on Shawnee Street, a kind of a sporty place.

Q. Did Dennis know you were a crook? A. Why, yes, sir.

By Mr. Hanford: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

By Mr. German: I wish you would identify that please as Government's Exhibit No. 43.

Q. Now, Sadie, I show you Government's Exhibit No. 43, did you ever see that before?

A. That is the letter that I went to Dennis and carried back to Lawyer Codding that I was all right. Yes, sir.

By Mr. German: We offer this in evidence as Government's Exhibit No. 43.

By Mr. Stuart: No objection.

Q. Sadie, you say you have quit your meanness and are trying to live a straight life now, are you?

A. I have throwed up my hands at this crooked stuff, it is too rough.

Q. When you testified when you were on the witness stand in Muskogee in the Receivership case, how long were you on the witness stand, do you remember about how long?

A. No, sir, I don't.

Q. Were you on the witness stand more than one day?

A. Oh, I wasn't on there no one day.

Q. You wasn't on there any one day, were you?

A. No, sir, not a whole day, I don't think so.

Q. Weren't you on the witness stand one day or the part of one day, and two or three days after that you were recalled for a further short examination?

A. The next day or so, I think so.

By Mr. Hanford: Objected to as irrelevant, incompetent, and immaterial, and leading.

Q. At the time that you testified there you—did you get to relate all the facts and circumstances that you knew about this—about your work for Page and Bartlett?

A. No, sir, not all of it, some things I am telling now——

Q. A great deal of it you were not asked about?

A. Weren't asked about, no, sir.

By Mr. Stuart: We object to that as leading, and move to strike the answer.

Q. Were you asked about all the things that you knew?

By Mr. Hanford: The same objection.

A. All that I knew?

Q. Yes, at Muskogee, when you testified there?

A. No, sir, not all that I knew.

Q. Judge Stuart in his cross examination of you read to you from a portion of your testimony taken at Muskogee, page 147 of the printed transcript, and among other questions he asked you this referring to Granny Letcher: "Q. Where did she live in January, 1885," and you answered that she moved up there, lived on Seneca. Then he read to you this question: "Q. That is opposite George .... Barn," and ask you if you didn't answer that by making this statement: "A. Yes, then she moved on the corner of Third and Seneca." Is that what you testified in Muskogee?

A. That is what I testified yes, sir.

Q. Well, is it or is it not a fact that after Granny had lived on 217 Seneca Street a while, that she did move to the corner of Third and Seneca?

A. She did move there and she did move from there on Shawnee Street again.

Q. Then back to 217 Seneca?

A. Yes, sir, then back to Seneca Street.

Q. Sadie, you stated that you didn't know old man Seth?

A. A white man?

Q. You say that you didn't know him?

A. I didn't know him.

Q. I will ask you if you knew of a family living west of Granny Letcher's there on Seneca in the adjacent house, did you know that family? A. I didn't.

Q. How? A. I didn't as they were white people.

Q. And what was their nationality?

A. I think they were Germans, I think pretty near all the white people in that neighborhood were Germans.

Q. What kind of a building was that west of Granny's house?

A. I don't believe I can describe that building west of Granny's house.

Q. You don't know whether it was stone or frame?

A. No, I can describe the one that she lived in and the one east.

Q. That was an old German man?

A. They were all German people in that neighborhood there.

Q. But when you were out at Denver on first trip, trip out there to Fort Logan and Denver, you say you came in touch with Mr. Roach and with Captain White inquiring as to where Minnie was? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did you happen to go to Mr. Roach?

A. Why, Mrs.—— Old lady Lamb told me about them out at the Fort.

Q. Is that where you got in touch with Captain White?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You had gone to Mrs. Roach?

A. Yes, sir, he was stoping the next door.

Q. Did Mrs. Hamilton know the Roaches and the Whites?

A. Yes, sir, she knew them.

Q. Had she said anything to you about them?

A. No, sir.

Q. What had Mrs. Hamilton done out there on your first trip to Denver and Fort Logan, which aided you in locating Minnie?

By Mr. Stuart: We object to that because it assumes that Mrs. Hamilton had done something.

A. What had she done? She told me that they left there in ninety-eight, but she didn't know where Minnie went to; no, she didn't know.

By Mr. Stuart: We object to that because it is not responsive.

Q. Mrs. Hamilton, you say, told you when Minnie had left Fort Logan? A. She told me that, yes.

Q. What year did she tell you that Minnie left there?

A. Told me that Minnie left there in ninety-eight.

Q. In ninety-eight? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You stated, Sadie, that after you heard from Mr. Bartlett and sometime—well, it was after you had been to Seattle and had found Minnie and after you had gone on your western tour trying to find the Tommies, and had gotten back to Tulsa and had quit your work for Mr. Bartlett, that you went to your lawyer here in Tulsa, C. S. Walker, and told him about Fred Cook watching you?

A. Yes, sir, that was quite a bi though after that, after I got back.

Q. That was, I believe you say, the time that you went to Mr. Walker, was on the day that you first went to Mr. Page.

A. Before I went to Mr. Page, that same day though, I went to Mr. Walker first.

Q. On that same day you went to Mr. Page? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then, you saw Mr. Walker. Now, then, did you tell Mr. Walker substantially all the facts with reference to what you had done up to that time in connection with this matter. this Atkins matter.

By Mr. Hanford: Objected to as irrelevant, incompetent, and immaterial, hearsay, and calls for a statement not made in the presence of any of the parties of this litigation, and is self-serving.

A. I did.

Q. Later on you saw Mr. Walker again, I believe?

A. That was the next day—— No, that same evening about half past—it must have been about I guess a quarter to five, I guess, when I came back down there I guess.

Q. You told him what had occurred?

By Mr. Hanford: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and leading.

A. Told him I got a job.

Q. Then, you saw Mr. Walker, you say, again after you had been working for Mr. Page quite a while and along about the first of November?

By Mr. Hanford: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial and leading.

A. I saw Mr. Walker the next morning after I had—the morning I made the contract, carried him down to the bank to make a copy of it.

Q. Now, I want to get to the time that you went away to Leavenworth at Mr. Page's suggestion as you call it getting you out of Tulsa, about the time that you got the two hundred dollar check?

A. The two hundred dollar check to——

Q. I didn't hear you?

A. The time I seen him about the two hundred dollar check that I was to leave on?

Q. Yes? A. It was Judge Williams.

Q. Did you talk to Mr. Walker along about that time about what you had done?

By Mr. Stuart: We object to that as a repetition and not proper redirect examination.

A. I had talked to Mr. Walker, you know, about going up to steal Minnie and Nancy, but when I got the two hundred dollar check, I didn't talk to Mr. Walker, I talked to Judge Williams about that.

Q. I see. When, in reference to the time that you went to Nowata, in your efforts to steal Nancy, was it that you had a talk with Mr. Walker?

By Mr. Stuart: The same objection.

A. When I got back from Nowata, I had a talk with Mr. Walker, but before that——

Q. You had talked with him?

A. I had talked with him September—about September 10th, when Frank Long and I was to go up and find this grave and get Dennis.

Q. Did you have a talk with Mr. Walker then?

A. I had a talk with Mr. Walker then, yes, sir.

Q. Did you tell him what you were going to do?

A. Not exactly what I was going to do. In October I saw him again.

Q. Did you tell him then what you were going to do?

A. Yes, sir, I told him I was going to get a deed from Minnie unbeknowns to Hanford, and he asked me was I going to testify in the case, and I told him no. I told him—— He asked me who the deed was to be signed to and I told him Bill Creekmore, and he said Judge Allen was going to be there and sit in the case and I never went.

Q. You came over to Kansas City?

A. I came to Kansas City, no I never went to Leavenworth.

Q. Did you tell him then so far as the facts were concerned substantially the same things that you have related here on the witness stand about that? A. I did.

> By Mr. Hanford: I can't get objections in before the answer comes. I object to that question and move to strike the answer on the ground that the question is incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial and calls for a statement not made in the presence of any parties to the suit, is leading and improper redirect examination.

Q. Sadie, when you were at Aunt Kate Logan's on the first trip you made to Leavenworth after you had been employed by Mr. Page, on the occasion when you say that you—that Kate signed a statement for Mr. Long, how did Kate sign that statement?

A. Well, Albert had to sign it for her, he put her hand on the pen, but Albert, I think, signed the name.

Q. You think she held the pen while Albert signed the name?

A. Yes, sir. She couldn't write, she was too sick, and Albert Smith signed the name.

Q. You say you saw Mr. Hanford in Mr. Page's office after your contract with Mr. Page?

A. Yes, sir, saw him the first morning.

Q. The first morning?

A. Yes, sir, that was June 20th, the first time I saw him there.

Q. What day was that?

A. That was June 20th, the first morning, Thursday morning, June 20th.

Q. Do you mean August 20th?

A. Yes, sir, August 20th, when I made the contract, I saw him that day.

Q. Did you see him after that time?

A. I saw him about a month or better, after Dennis was hired. Dennis was hired Tuesday, September 22nd, I think, and I saw Mr. Hanford about five [] or a week later than that in the office.

Q. Do you get any other checks from Mr. Page or Mr Josey, or the Gem Oil Company other than the two hundred dollar check and the fifty dollar check that you told about?

A. Yes, sir, oh yes, sir.

Q. What other checks did you get?

A. The first check that I got was August 20th, fifty dollar check on the First National Bank.

Q. August 20th? A. About August 20th, yes, sir.

Q. 1914?

A. 1914. The second I got from Mr. Page was about September 9th, between the 7th and 8th of September, I got another check from Mr. Page, fifty dollars, that is cashed at the First National Bank, along in there some place about the first part of September when Mr. Long and I was to go to the grave—go to get Dennis. Then I got a check, I think it was Wednesday October 7th, from Mr. Page, when I was to go to steal Nancy, that was for thirty-five dollars. I got that from the Central National, I think that is in the Central National.

Q. That you think you cashed that in the Central National?

A. At the Exchange National I mean, thirty-five dollars, I got a check from Mr. Page between the last week in October and the first four or five days in November, fifty dollars and cashed it at the Central National Bank, Mr. Page's bank; then I got the two hundred dollar check and cashed it at the Exchange National.

Q. Those checks were all on account of expenses or payments to you on your contract?

A. Yes, sir, but you didn't ask me about the witnesses.

Q. What was said, if anything, about paying the witnesses?

A. Why, Mr. Page said that Frank Long was to pay the witnesses not me, Frank Long would do the paying.

Q. And referring to the time that you were in Seattle in December, 1914, you say you didn't see Minnie before she made her confession to Mr. Montgomery?

A. No, sir, I didn't see her before, no, sir.

Q. When was it, with reference to her confession, that you wrote the little note which Judge Stuart offered in evidence here?

A. She made the confession on Friday, I think, and I wrote that note on a Saturday morning, Saturday morning about seven-thirty, I think it was.

Q. You sent it to her by a messenger boy?

A. Yes, sir, messenger boy.

Q. What did that messenger boy say to you when he came back?

> By Mr. Stuart: I object to that because it is hearsay.
>
> By Mr. Hanford: The same objection, and on the further ground that it is a self serving declaration and relates to a conversation not in the presence of the parties, and as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

A. The boy said when he came back that he gave it to Minnie ahd Minnie's husband taken it away from her before she could read it.

Q. Sadie, after you had made your confession to the government, where did you first live or stay?

A. Before I made it or afterwards?

Q. After you made it? A. I stayed here at 1615 Waldron.

Q. Here in Kansas City? A. Here in Kansas City.

Q. You stated on cross examination about being bothered with some detectives here in Kansas City, did you know any of those detectives?

A. No, sir, I didn't, not a one of them. They called my name but I never had seen any of them before.

Q. What did they claim their names was?

A. One of them was named Bloosse, and the other one was Steele.

Q. Do you know Ed Eagan?

A. Yes, sir, I know him, I know Ed Egan.

Q. Who is he?

A. Ed Egan is a little private detective in Tulsa.

Q. Did he ever come to see you after your confession to the government? A. Yes, sir, Ed Egan came to me.

Q. Was that in Kansas City or in Leavenworth?

A. That was in Leavenworth.

Q. When was that?

A. Ed Egan came to me January 2nd, 1915, in Leavenworth, Kansas.

Q. Where there?

A. At Mrs. Yokum's, 705 Shawnee, Leavenworth.

Q. When did he talk to you about it?

A. He talked to me about—— Told me he had an angel oil man on his string a ten thousand dollar deal.

Q. Did he give you the name of that angel?

A. No, sir, he said angel oil man, and he said I have told him that you know that Henry Carter is the son of Minnie. I said, well he ain't. I said Adis Carter is Henry's mother. He said, I know it but I told the man that you know it that Henry is Minnie's son and I will give you $5,000.00 to swear that he is, not next week will you get it, not tomorrow but today. I said, Ed I have talked. He said, you ain't made a damned thing but your statement.

Q. He said what?

A. Ed said, you ain't made a damned thing but a statement. I hadn't been to court then. And I told him I had somebody calling to see me and I would talk to him later. That was in the morning when he first came about eight o'clock. At noon he came back again and that was about the same conversation again at noon, and I had an appointment with him for four o'clock in the evening.

Q. What if anything did he say about Mr. Page?

A. He asked me about what was the trouble——

> Mr. Hanford: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial and hearsay; calls for a statement not made in the presence of Mr. Page.

A. He didn't tell me he was working for Mr. Page but he said here Sadie—he told me the Uncle Sam Company, oil company, he said what do you care about who wins the case so you get the money? He said Mr. Page is all right. I said, yes I know it but I am not going to the penitentiary for Charles Page and I have talked and I am going to still stick to it. So I didn't go to meet him any more because we run out of town under him. Mr. Robinson had taken me and Ed Egan had six detectives on me there. Can I make this further statement?

Q. Yes.

A. Now, I didn't run off because I was afraid Ed could buy me but I was afraid I would get killed, too many detectives following me.

Q. Did you go to Colorado? A. Colorado?

Q. Yes, after your confession to the government?

A. No, sir, I never been to Colorado any more. I never did go there.

Q. I thought after your confession to the government when these detectives were trailing you that you went to Colorado.

A. Oh yes, sir, when I was running off I went to Colorado.

Q. About when was it you went there?

A. I must have went in August, I know I went there in August.

Q. 1915?

A. 1915, and stayed till the middle part of September.

Q. Now you say these detectives whose names you have given here who visited you here in Kansas City did they follow you out to Colorado?

A. They followed me there and found me in Pueblo.

Q. What did you leave Kansas City for?

A. You see I got scared here.

Q. What were you scared of?

A. I was afraid they would kill me, too much money offered for me to turn up this deal: anybody would kill you for it.

Q. Did you make any complaint when you were in Leavenworth after you had made your confession, did you make any complaint when you were in Leavenworth to the city authorities about detectives following you?

A. I did. I went to the city hall.

Q. What was done as a result of that?

A. That was a colored fellow——

Mr. Stuart: We object to that as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

Mr. Hanford: The same objection. And hearsay.

A. I went to them and told them.

Q. I don't care what you told them, was anybody arrested over it?

A. No, sir, they told me to get a warrant out for the fellow, his name was Charlie Anderson, he was in there too. I had them bring him in there. And I told him if he followed me any more—he had been following me about three days and I made complaint about Egan——

Mr. Stuart: I made a motion to strike that as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial and not binding upon any of the parties in the suit.

Mr. Hanford: The same objection.

Q. When did you first learn that Mr. Bartlett had a ranch out in Colorado?

A. When I was in Pueblo, no I learned that when we were coming back from Denver because he said he was going out to his son's place. I didn't know it was his place. He said his son's place and sent me a deed to Leavenworth from there.

Q. Sadie, in your testimony yesterday you told Mr. Blakeney, as I remember it, or Judge Stuart I am not sure which, that that—that the secret between you and Minnie which you were not going to tell if it was ever told would benefit Mr. Page. A. Benefit him?

Q. Yes, what did you mean by that statement?

A. I meant by that statement, I meant it would benefit him in a way so he would stay out of this case forever. That is the way I meant it would benefit him if I would tell him. I didn't mean that it would do him any good.

(Brief recess.)

Recross Examination by Mr. Bell (appearing by agreement of counsel for Mr. Blakeney):

Q. Sadie, I want to ask you this question: You said that if you told a secred that Mr. Page would be out of this case forever? A. If I told the secret?

Q. Yes? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you tell that secret? A. No, I won't.

Q. Why won't you tell it?

A. It incriminates myself and Minnie Atkins and I am not going to tell that secret to anybody.

Q. You are immune from any prosecution in this case, are you not?

A. Yes, sir, but not that. That is not any of the Government's business and it ain't none of Mr. Page's business; that is mine, you won't pull that out of me.

Q. How does Mr. Page become connected with it if it is none of the business of Mr. Page?

A. Well, I say I won't tell it.

Q. And you refuse to tell it? A. I refuse to tell it.

Q. The reason that you refuse to tell it is because that you are afraid of being prosecuted?

A. All I am going to say I have said.

Q. You can answer that yes or no.

A. It will incriminate myself—nothing more.

Q. That is the reason that you refuse to tell it?

A. I am not going to tell it.

By Mr. Stuart: Make her answer the question.

A. Yes.

Recross Examination by Mr. Hanford.

Q. Sadie, will you please let me see those immunity papers that Judge Stuart requested you to bring back this morning, and which the Examiner instructed you to bring with you this morning? A. Want me to answer, Mr. Hanford?

Q. Yes?

A. I didn't find them, and when I came this morning I told the Examiner that they were not lost, I would bring them at noon.

Q. Answer the question, will you?

A. I haven't got them, but I will sure positively see that you get them, I will look for them and sure bring them to you, they are not destroyed, I know they are not, they can't be because I just had them here you know.

Q. Where did you take them to, Sadie? A. To my home.

Q. Did you leave them there?

A. Yes, sir, at home, and I got a lot of papers and writing——

Q. Who did you give them to?

A. I put them away myself, I don't give my papers to anybody and I will bring you my papers, they are not lost, they are there some place, I looked for them last night and this morning.

Q. Sadie, where did you put the papers?

A. Well, I put them in my room somewhere, do you want to go out there?

Q. Where did you put the papers, Sadie?

A. You just give me five minutes until I get myself together again and I will answer you nicely, Mr. Hanford.

Q. Sadie, that doesn't require five minutes ~~for you~~ to tell me where you put the papers?

A. I don't take five minutes for me to think of that, but it will require five minutes for me to get myself together.

> By Mr. German: I would like for the record to show that about three or four questions back, when Mr. Hanford asked the witness a question with reference to where she put the papers, that Judge Stuart stated in the hearing of the witness, "Make her answer," and that the witness—— That it angered the witness, and that the witness looked at Judge Stuart and said: "You can't make me."

Q. Let me ask you this question. What is the matter, Sadie?

A. I don't feel right good right now, Mr. Hanford, not toward you. I will answer you like a woman ought to.

(Brief recess.)

Q. Now, Sadie, where did you put the papers?

A. They are in my room, Mr. Hanford.

Q. In your room at your house?

A. They are not out of my room.

Q. You are sure of that?

A. I am sure of that, and to show you I will take you back to my house at noon and let you see me until I find them.

Q. You are willing to have somebody to go with you?

A. Somebody, you or Judge Stuart, or Mr. Long or somebody can go with me out to my house, 707 East 11th Street, right from this room here and go with me direct to where I stop at until I search and find those papers, I am willing to do that; any three of you gentlemen may go with me.

Q. Sadie, how long did you hunt for them?

A. Well, I didn't hunt for them a great long while, Mr. Hanford, I looked in places where they should have been; I got papers strewed around several places in my trunk, which you will see if you go out there; I will treat you as a gentleman if you go with me and I will let you see me hunt thoroughly for them and they will be found.

> By Mr. Hanford: Then, with the consent of the witness, I will ask the Examiner to designate some person to go with the witness and search for the immunity paper as she calls it and have them brought into Court as soon as they are found if the Examiner will designate one of the deputy marshal's of this district, we will agree to stand the expenses for his services.

Q. Sadie, are you sure that you took your papers home?

A. Oh, yes, sir, I didn't leave them anywhere.

Q. Did you give them to anybody else?

A. No, you didn't ask me to leave them here and I carried them back. They are out there, nobody here has got them and I rather you with the marshal would go and could see and know for yourself. You go with the marshal too.

Recross Examination by Mr. Stuart.

Q. Sadie, you took that book home with you, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir, I left them there.

Q. What time was that, Sadie?

A. That was at dinner, forenoon, wasn't it, when I showed them?

Q. I don't remember?

A. I carried them back at dinner time and when you asked me for them after dinner and I told you I had left them home——

Q. Now, Sadie, you had them in your little——

A. Pocket book.

Q. When you came in? A. When I came in.

Q. And when you went back, didn't you take them in your little portmanteau? A. Yes, sir, took them out.

Q. When you took them out where did you place them?

A. The same place, Judge, I may have placed them in my trunk; I got a lot of little papers tied up.

Q. Now, Sadie, after you left the stand, did anybody ask you to lend them these papers?

A. No, sir, Judge, not a soul had their hands on my papers except as you had them here.

Q. Not a soul?

A. Not a soul, Judge. They are in my house, Judge, not outside.

Q. Now, listen, you remember I asked you to produce them this morning, didn't I?

A. You did, Judge, and I told you that I would bring them.

Q. Did you look for them?

A. I looked for them last night.

Q. And you couldn't find them?

A. I won't say that I made a thorough look for them last night, but this morning.

Q. You knew, Sadie, that I expected them this morning too?

A. Yes, Judge, and I knew this too, that I didn't find them, you would give me a chance, they are not lost.

Q. But Sadie, how do I know that you lost them?

A. They are not lost, Judge.

Q. I understand that, but why was it now that you couldn't put your hands on them and bring them to us?

A. Judge, they are not lost, I can go there and hunt for this immunity paper in my trunk and I think I can find it.

Q. What I wanted to ask you is this: You knew that I wanted them, didn't you? A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. And didn't you search for them this morning?

A. I searched for them this morning.

Q. You made a thorough search?

A. I won't swear that I made a thorough, a positive thorough search.

Q. A pretty good search? A. A good search.

Q. And you couldn't find those papers?

> By Mr. German: I object to this question on the ground that it is incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and unnecessarily encumbering the record. If, upon going to the home, the paper is not found, then this examination would be proper.

A. Will you go and stay with me until I find them, Judge? I am willing for you to stay with me in the house, I don't mean until I run out doors but in the house.

Q. Sadie, all I ask you is to tell me this, if we can get this down we won't have any trouble about it. You went down home with the papers?

A. I went home with the papers in the street car.

Q. And you put them somewhere?

A. In the trunk or some place.

Q. You knew I wanted them this morning?

A. You asked me for them and I told you I would bring them this morning.

Q. I ask for them?

A. And Mr. Oenick asked for them.

Q. And you haven't found them yet?

A. I didn't find them yet, no, sir.

By Mr. German: In view of the insinuations of this examination, I suggest to the Examiner that we suspent further taking of this testimony until the Deputy United States Marshal can go with the witness, and one of counsel for the defendants and one of counsel for the Government, to the home of the witness until she searches for that paper.

Recross Examination by Mr. Hanford.

Q. Just one more question, Sadie. Who was at your house when you got home?

A. Nobody but Will James, my husband. That ain't my house, but my daughter's. My daughter Eva Homes, my son-in-law, Jesse Homes, that is where they live, and my husband, Will James.

Q. Was anybody else there?

A. Nobody else has been to my house.

By Mr. Stuart: Now, your honor, I want to make this suggestion: The United States Marshal for this District is Mr. William Sheldon. I would be glad for your honor to call him in and let him designate a deputy.

And thereupon, at the request of counsel and by agreement of the witness, Sadie James, a Deputy United States Marshal is directed to go with the witness Sadie James to locate the paper in question, and to report at one-thirty o'clock.

A*dh* thereupon, SADIE JAMES being recalled, and further testified as follows:

Cross Examination by Mr. Hanford.

Q. Sadie, did you bring—did you bring the immunity paper that you went home to find? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that the paper that you have in front of you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Let me see it?

A. That is it with the exception of this note that was in it.

Redirect Examination by Mr. German.

Q. You don't mean to state that the note is a part of the immunity paper?

A. No, sir, this note was wrapped up in that, the note that I wrote to Minnie.

Q. Sadie, where did you find this so called immunity paper at your home?

A. I found it in the next room under the dresser on the floor, I have got a stack of tablets, three or four tablets about this long and this wide, just cheap writing tablets that I keep for writing purposes, and I found it in one of those books.

Q. Was the note which you referred to a copy of the note or the note that you wrote to Minnie Atkins when you were in Seattle, December, 1914, and which copy of the note you had before the Examiner yesterday morning at the same time that you brought the so called immunity paper here, with you then, was it with the immunity paper?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you found it at your home a while ago?

A. Yes, sir, wrapped up together.

Recross Examination by Mr. Hanford.

Q. Sadie, you keep those tablets with a book with one of these records?

A. I haven't got no record book, I got no papers with a record book.

> By Mr. German: I would like for the record to show that counsel pointed to and referred to a copy of the printed transcript of record in this case that was filed in the Circuit Court of Appeals on appeal from an order appointing the Receiver.

Q. You have read that part of that printed record, have you not? A. I have never seen no record.

Q. Never seen one?

A. Never have, no, haven't even looked at it since you all have been in here.

Q. You have copies of the statements that you have given at different times?

A. No, I haven't copies of the different statements I have given, I don't keep no copies, I don't need no copies of statements that I give.

Q. Now, Sadie, on redirect examination, you said that Mr. Buell and Mr. Robinson found you in Leavenworth?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When was that?

A. That was about three or four days before Thanksgiving, I think, in 1914. Three or four days I think before Thanksgiving.

Q. You recall that distinctly?

A. Yes, three or four days before Thanksgiving.

Q. And where did they find you then?

A. They found me at 705 Shawnee Street, at Mrs. Yokum's.

Q. You were staying there at that time?

A. Yes, that is where I was stopping.

Q. And you stopped there for some time after that?

A. After that, yes, sir.

Q. After they found you there, when did you go to Kansas City?

A. Oh, it must have been pretty near a week or more, a little better than a week I guess before I came down here after that.

Q. Wasn't it December 4th? A. Oh, no, no.

Q. You saw Mr. Montgomery the first time in Kansas City, didn't you?

A. The day that he issued this paper was the first time I ever saw him.

Q. And that was December 4th?

A. Yes, whatever date it is, the first day, and the first time I had ever saw Mr. Montgomery was that day, that morning.

Q. Did you go to Kansas City with Mr. Buell and Mr. Robinson?

A. No, when they came back to look for me at Leavenworth I wasn't there, they might have come back to look for me, I don't know whether they did or not, but I left Leavenworth and came to Kansas City, and they found me down here. Mr. Montgomery and Mr. Robinson found me down here.

Q. Then after they found you in Leavenworth, did they tell you that they were going to bring Mr. Montgomery?

A. No, they didn't tell me they were going to bring him, but Mr. Buell told me—I told Mr. Buell, I am sick of the case and tired of running from the law, and I want to get out of it;

he said he would send some Government officer to me but he didn't tell me who.

Q. Didn't say who?

A. No, sir, he never told me who.

Q. Now, you said that Granny Letcher lived on Seneca Street between third and fourth?

A. Yes, at one time she did. She moved over on Seneca first between Second and Third, 217, and then moved to—on right down a block west on Seneca between Third and Fourth and stayed there a while.

Q. How long was that after she moved to 217?

A. Well, that was a few years after that, that must have been—she moved up on Seneca in the fall of eighty-five, and I think that must have been about——

Q. Sadie, how do you fix that date?

A. The fall of eighty-five?

Q. Yes?

A. Because I was still working for Dr. Brock and I taken Granny something to eat down on Cherokee Street where she was living at; that was my home.

Q. You were still working for Dr. Brock?

A. Still working for Dr. Brock and my people lived pretty near a mile from town and I stayed down at Granny's when I wasn't working you know.

Q. Then, when did you go to work for the Doctor?

A. In May 1885.

Q. Didn't you go to work for Dr. Brock in the winter of eighty-five?

A. No, I had been working for Dr. Brock—In the winter of eighty-five, I had been working for him from May on up until June 20th, in there sometime when the house burned, and I was still there a year and a month before that.

Q. And then you went to work for Dr. Brock from the—

A. Yes, sir.

Q. From—— A. Out in West Los Animos, Colorado.

Q. Now, Sadie, when you came back from the west, how long after that did you get a job with Dr. Brock?

A. I came back in March.

Q. In March?

A. Yes, sir, I didn't go to work until about May, that would have been about two months, I guess.

Q. What did you do between March and May?

A. Just working around in town, washing and helping my parents; my parents lived there too and I stayed there a part of the time and with Granny, I didn't have any job.

Q. You stayed part of the time with your parents?

A. Not very much, I had a step-father and him and I didn't get along good, no, sir.

Q. Now, Sadie, you stated that you testified at the Receivership hearing in Feburary; I want to ask you if you didn't testify there according to the testimony as recorded on Page 134 of the record in that case, you were asked this question on cross examination: "Q. Where were you in the Summer of eighty-six? and your answer was: Working for Dr. Brock until his place burned down"; is that right?

A. That was until June, yes, sir, until June.

Q. Just answer if you didn't—— A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then you were asked "You were working for Dr. Brock in the summer of eighty-six," and answered, "I went to work for Dr. Brock along about the winter of 1885 and worked for Dr. Brock until about September 1886". Didn't you answer that?

A. Well, if I said that it is wrong, because the house burned down in June, Mr. Hanford.

Q. And then you were asked "Didn't you state that you went to work for Dr. Brock in the winter of 1885"?

A. I didn't. If I said so, I didn't, because I went to work in May.

Q. Now, when did Granny Letcher live on Delaware Street?

A. Lived on Delaware—— We moved off of Fourth and Choctaw about the spring 1880, we stayed on Cherokee about a year I guess. We moved from there down on Delaware Street between Seventh and Broadway, stayed there just about three or four months, the house was not very large; we moved right back from there down to 215 Cherokee Street again, right in the same yard to our old place that we just had moved from.

Q. Now when did Granny live on Shawnee Street?

A. Granny lived on Shawnee Street along about—it must have been about ninety, she didn't move all of her things off of Seneca Street; she moved right back right across an alley and run a restaurant there, run a restaurant on Shawnee between Second and Third on Shawnee.

A. Between Second and Third I think on the south side, I am not positive now; they had a restaurant there about the winter of 1889 and three or four months I guess they ran that restaurant; or was it that late? I don't know whether it was that late or not, I think it was a little earlier than that that Granny had that restaurant there; I think it was the winter of eighty-eight or eighty-nine, one or the other that she moved there on Shawnee and had that restaurant.

Q. What part of the block?

A. Between Second and Third.

Q. About the middle of the block?

A. Yes, sir, in there somewhere, but I don't remember because I didn't go there but a very few times; I don't think I ever went there but once or twice while they had that restaurant.

Q. Now, how long did she live there on Shawnee Street?

By Mr. Allen: Now, we object to that as having been gone over fully in the cross examination of this witness. Of course, we have no way to keep counsel from asking all of these questions but I want to suggest that I think the matter was fully gone into on cross examination of this witness by both him and Judge Stuart and Mr. Blakeney.

By Mr. Hanford: You are thinking about the redirect examination.

Q. How long did she live there?

A. She didn't move all her things; she was at the restaurant herself, her and Uncle Jim.

Q. Now, Sadie when was you married?

A. In eighty-seven—No, I will take that back, in eighty-six.

Q. In eighty-six? A. Yes, in eighty-six.

Q. When did you leave Leavenworth after you were married?

A. I left there in the fall of 1889, not to stay away though. I came here and went back once a week and sometimes twice a week, and sometimes maybe it would be a month before I could go back.

Q. Then, you were married just after you quit Dr. Brock's? A. Married in September.

Q. 1886? A. 1886.

Q. And you had a house where?

A. Oh, I never had no house then, I never went to housekeeping until along in October, 1888.

Q. You stated you lived some place? A. Who?

Q. Roomed, did you say?

A. Yes, when I went to the Planters Hotel, after Brock's burned down I didn't have no home.

Q. You stated that after you married, you lived some place? A. With whom?

Q. With your husband, I suppose?

A. Oh, no, I never did live with that nigger a day, and there is a man sitting there that knows it, never did live with him a day.

Q. When were you married next?

A. Married in about five or six years after that.

Q. Five or six years? A. Yes.

Q. And you left Leavenworth about 1889?

A. Eighty-nine, but not to stay, I went back to Granny's again and stayed after I came down here.

Q. Then were you at Granny's along in ninety-one and nintey-two?

A. Backwards and forward, yes, up to Granny's, yes from this town. I was only running around here and I ran backward and forward. I had business at Granny's you see.

Q. Granny was then living on Seneca Street?

A. On Seneca Street, yes.

Q. After you moved back from Shawnee Street, was she on Seneca Street all the time? A. All the time, yes.

Q. All the time? A. Yes.

Q. How long did you say you were away from Leavenworth after you left in 1889?

A. How long was I away from there?

Q. Yes?

A. I came down in September—about the first of October and stayed down here about three or four weeks and I went back up there and from that time up until—for the first four or five months I was down here, I was up there every week or two weeks you know.

Q. While she was living on Seneca Street?

A. Yes, from the time I went back up there.

Q. When did you go back up there? A. To Leavenworth?

Q. Yes?

A. I didn't just leave there, I went there and stayed about two months at the house, that was in the spring of ninety, 1890, I went there and stayed two months in the house.

Q. Then, where did you go?

A. I came back down here, I didn't have no house, I went to house-keeping.

Q. How long did you stay down here?

A. I lived here until 1899 and then I went to Oklahoma.

Q. Then, when you lived down here from ninety until 1899, did you go back to Leavenworth any more?

A. Oh, yes, my mother lived there, Mr. Hanford, sure?

Q. Did you go back to see Granny any more?

A. Oh, yes, she was sick two or three years before she died and I went to see her near up to the time she did die.

Q. Did you see her in 1899? A. Yes, I saw her then.

Q. Where was she living then?

A. Still living on Seneca.

Q. Then she never did move away from Seneca until 1899 until she died?

A. No, not to stay away from Seneca, no; she died on Seneca at 217.

Q. So she lived on Seneca Street in 1890? A. Yes.

Q. Ninety-one? A. Clear up until she died.

Q. Ninety-two, ninety-three, ninety-four, ninety-five, ninety-six, ninety-seven, and ninety-eight?

A. As far as I know. Of course, when I would go back up there, there is where she would be.

Q. Didn't you go back to see her?

A. Yes, but sometimes it would be some little time before I would go back.

Q. How long?

A. Well, the longest I would be away from there would be about three months, not any longer than three months, I don't think. I want to correct myself in one place. In May, 1897, I left and went down to the Cherokee payment and was gone until November; there is a few months in ninety-seven there that I didn't see her because I was in Oklahoma from May ninety seven until November ninety-seven I didn't see her.

Q. Now, Sadie, you testified in Muskogee that Minnie visited you in 1895 and 1896? A. Yes.

Q. When did you first tell the parties with whom you talked about this case that fact?

A. When did I first tell them?

Q. Yes?

A. I don't know as I ever talked to them people there, these people, but I guess I told Mr. Montgomery.

Q. You didn't tell Mr. Montgomery when you told him—

A. Yes, I must have told Judge Montgomery that when I made my confession.

Q. Well, he didn't put it in that first confession?

A. Well, I don't see why he didn't.

Q. You told him that, did you?

A. Yes, sir, I told him that very evening.

Q. About Minnie having visited you in 1896 and 1896?

A. Yes, sir, I told him about those little children, yes, sir.

Q. He had a short hand reporter to take down what you said? A. What I said? Yes.

Q. Now, Sadie, you stated that while you were on the stand at Muskogee that you didn't testify to everything that you have testified to here? A. No, sir, I didn't.

Q. But what you did testify to was what you recollected at that time?

A. I say, I didn't, because if I said Granny lived on Cherokee Street in 1885, she certainly didn't do that.

Q. In 1885?

A. No, she didn't. I mean she did live on Cherokee Street in 1885.

Q. You want that changed at this time?

A. Why, it will have to be changed, because she didn't; lived on Seneca Street in 1885. Lived on Cherokee Street in 1885.

Q. Well, answer my question. You want that changed?

A. That is what I am saying now.

Q. Well, now, otherwise, your testimony as to the facts were what you recalled at that time?

A. You read them over to me and then I will know, because like this is a mistake there might be others there, because she didn't live there.

Q. Otherwise, what you testified to then is correct?

A. You read them over to me and I will know.

Q. You know what you testified to. don't you Sadie?

A. Yes, some things, but if you got that there——

Q. Well, now, let's see. Sadie, what time did you send that telegram for Mr. Bartlett at Seattle, on Saturday night after you saw Captain McNab and I at Minnie's house?

A. It was not no night, it was afternoon.

Q. In the afternoon?

A. I guess that must have been; I wouldn't say the hour, about four o'clock, maybe, it was early in the afternoon I think.

Q. But you are sure you saw Minnie at her house that night? A. Yes, I saw her.

Q. That same night? A. Yes, I saw her that night.

Q. You said you didn't go to Sargeant Everman's house?

A. Who is Sargeant Everman, I didn't even know him.

Q. And you didn't go to Captain McNab's house that night?

A. Oh, no, I didn't even go in the Fort that night, I was afraid, I went on back to town, no.

Q. How many soldiers did you say that you knew Minnie went with?

A. I didn't say that I knew she went with any; I am telling—never did see her, but she called two names, a man named Oliver, I never did see him and a man named Peterkin, I never did see him until last winter; I never did see her with soldiers that I knew who they were.

Q. Did Minnie stay with you in 1896, I believe you say that she went to the house?

A. I did, she came there two days.

Q. Did she stay with you?

A. No, I said she came there two days with me straight, but she didn't sleep there not a night, not in ninety-six.

Q. I will ask you if on the Receivership hearing you were not asked this question, reading from Page 139, it was on account of your having been so friendly with her in Leavenworth that she wanted you to visit her, and that you answered, hadn't she stayed with me in Kansas City in 1895 and 1896?

A. Now, stayed with me, she came to see me them two days.

Q. Didn't you answer that?

A. I expect I did answer that but she didn't stay there, no, what you call live with me; she was running off, you know she wasn't going to stay no length of time no place.

Q. That is why she didn't stay with you?

A. Yes, she was getting out of the way of the money she had stole.

Q. You say now that Minnie didn't stay with you?

A. Not in ninety-six, no; she came there two days, I heard of her around here for a few days after that.

Q. When was it you said Minnie worked with you at Dr. Brock's?

By Mr. German: I object to this as repetition and unnecessarily encumbering the record.

A. About the middle of September she came there and stayed I guess until about the middle of October. She wasn't there five weeks I know.

Q. Of what year? A. Sir?

Q. What year? A. 1885.

Q. Sadie, when Mr. Robinson took you out to Colorado, did you tell him about these people that were following you?

A. About what people following me?

Q. Those people that you said were following you?

A. Yes, I told him here in Kansas City.

Q. And that is the reason he took you out?

A. You mean when I went out to Pueblo?

Q. Yes?

A. Yes, you mean just here in this last summer?

Q. I mean when you went out to Pueblo to Bartlett's ranch? A. Yes, yes.

Q. He knew about the men following you out there?

A. I told him about them before that, just what he was taking me out there for.

By Mr. Hanford: I ask to have this so called immunity paper marked for identification as Defendant's Exhibit 7.

Q. I will show you defendant's Exhibit No. 7, Sadie, and ask you if that is the paper that Mr. Montgomery brought to you?

A. When I signed the confession that I had made?

Q. Yes?

A. Yes, sir, he gave me that that night, that evening.

By Mr. Hanford: I offer that in evidence. I want to read this into the record: State of Missouri, County of Jackson, ss. Be it known that I, Frank L. Montgomery, United States Probate Attorney, by and with the authority of R. C. Allen, National Attorney of the Creek Nation, have this day granted immunity to Sadie James for the commission of the crime of falsely and fraudulently representing herself as an agent and officer of the United States Government, in that certain transaction or transactions wherein she attempted and did discover one Mary Folk nee Atkins, giving and granting to her full immunity from prosecution for such crime in the representations so made. Done at Kansas City, Missouri, this 4th day of December, 1914, and signed Frank L. Montgomery, United States Attorney. Witness R. C. Adams.

Q. Is that the paper that he gave to you?

A. I have had that ever since, yes; he gave it to me that evening and I have kept that paper hid ever since in my trunk.

Q. You read it, didn't you?

A. Yes, I read it with the understanding for what I did in this case and as passing as a Government officer, that that was what I got the immunity for.

Q. And the way I have read it is the way it was written when it was given to you?

A. When it was given to me, yes, sir. It has not been changed a bit.

Recross Examination by Mr. Stuart.

Q. Sadie, this is the document that you had in your hand, and when you saw certain people afterwards, you told them that the Government had given you immunity, is that it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is the one? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is the paper that you showed them?

A. That is the one I showed Rube Smith, yes, sir.

Q. Did you show it to Dennis Jones?

A. Never showed it to Dennis?

Q. Who else?

A. I showed it to Rube Smith, never did show it to anybody else.

Q. Did you know at the time that this paper was given to you Sadie, that if this was an immunity you understand now, if this was an immunity, you could still be prosecuted for perjury in this case?

A. Yes, sir that is what he told me.

Q. He told you that? A. I still understood that.

Q. Did you know that you could still be prosecuted for conspiracy in this case—the crime of conspiracy?

A. What do you mean by that?

Q. Conspiracy to defraud the Government of the United States or an Indian under the protection of the United States, did you know it protected you from that?

A. All that I had done, I expected this paper to protect me from all that I had done then.

Q. That is it, you expected this paper to protect you from any crime that might be started with reference to what you had done in the Tommy Atkins case, didn't you, in the Tommy Atkins?

A. That might be started after I got this paper?

Q. Yes?

A. No, sir, not after I had started it, what I had done already.

Q. Prior to the paper? A. When I got that paper.

Q. Didn't you expect this paper to protect you against every and any kind of prosecution that might be started for what you had done prior to the time that you got this paper?

A. No, sir, only in this case.

Q. I understand, in the Tommy Atkins case?

A. Anything that I had done in the Tommy Atkins case.

Q. Prior to the time that you got this paper?

A. Prior to the time that I got that paper.

Q. You were to be protected in?

A. Yes, sir, but not afterwards.

Recross Examination by Mr. Bell (Appearing on behalf of Mr. Blakeney by agreement of counsel):

Q. Sadie, when did Granny Letcher, or mother Letcher die?

A. Well, lawyer Bell, I can't tell you just exactly when Granny Letcher died, because I wasn't in Leavenworth when she died.

Q. Do you know what year it was that she died?

A. No, sir, I figure up that Granny died in the summer of ninety-nine or summer of ninety; the summer of ninety-nine or the summer of nineteen hundred is what I mean, because I wasn't there.

Q. Where did your mother and your step-father live?

A. I am not going to tell you that, you will see them later on.

Q. I will ask you the question, where did your mother and step-father live in the summer of 1888 and '89?

A. I refuse to tell you that, Lawyer Bell.

Q. Did they live in Leavenworth?

A. I will refuse to answer that, where my parents lived.

Q. Did you live with them?

A. Did I live with my parents?

Q. Yes? A. In the summer of when?

Q. 1888 and '89.

A. I will not tell you that Lawyer Bell, I have been sitting here for a week telling you where I lived.

Q. I just asked you the question Sadie?

A. You knew me in eighty-eight, and you knew me in eighty nine.

Q. Now, Sadie, I am going to ask you again, where did your mother and step-father live in 1889 in Leavenworth?

A. I will refuse to tell you.

Q. Why do you refuse? A. Well, because I do.

By Lawyer Bell: I think the court should order her to answer that question.

By the Examiner: You will probably have to answer it.

A. I will not tell him where they did live, but what town they did live in.

Q. Where did they live in 1888 and '89?

A. I will tell what town they lived in, they lived in Leavenworth, Kansas.

Q. Leavenworth, Kansas?

A. Yes, sir, in Leavenworth, Kansas.

Q. Where abouts in Leavenworth, Kansas?

A. Now, I will not tell you.

By Mr. Stuart: We want that question certified to the United States Judge, here.

By Mr. German: Go on and answer it, Sadie.

A. Answer it?

By Mr. German: Yes.

A. My folks lived at, in eighty-nine, my mother lived at —on Fifth Street, out on South Fifth in a house they called the rag man's house. You know where that is, right over

Fred Luche's Grocery Store. They have got a grocery store there now; you know where it is, don't you?

Q. When did they move from that place, if you know?

A. My mother moved to Kansas City about ninety-two, I think, or three. I think now, as near as I—I think now it was ninety-two or three, 1892 or '3.

Q. When did your mother die, Sadie?

A. That is it, she is not dead.

Q. If your mother is not dead, Sadie, where is she living at this time? A. Is living in Tulsa, Oklahoma.

Q. In Tulsa, Oklahoma?

A. She is not dead, that is it.

Q. What name does your mother go by now Sadie?

A. I don't know, got two or three names, goes by the name of Bell and two or three other names.

Q. What is her first name? A. Her name is Caroline.

Q. What name did she go by when she lived in Leavenworth in eighty-eight and eighty-nine?

A. She went by two or three names, Lawyer Bell.

Q. Well, tell what they were? A. Some of them?

Q. Tell all you know?

A. Went by the name of Carry Chase, and Carry Harris.

Q. Carry Harris? A. That is all.

Q. What name did your step-father go by?

A. He went by two or three names.

Q. Well, name them? A. He went by the name of Hunt.

Q. What was his first name? A. Charles.

Q. Charles Hunt? A. Yes, sir, and Charles Hopkins.

Q. Where did he work, Sadie, in eighty-eight and eighty-nine?

A. I can't tell you because I didn't stay around my mother's home; I been telling you I was around Granny's.

Q. What is your mother's street number in Tulsa?

A. 504 East Archer.

Q. 504 East Archer? A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. German: I move to strike all the questions and answers pertaining to Sadie's mother and her whereabouts since 1889, on the ground that they are incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial and improper cross examination.

Recross Examination by Mr. Hanford.

Q. Sadie, when did you work for Dave Atchison?

A. I worked for Dave Atchison in the fall of eighty-three and the spring of eighty-four, I think until about the—was it February—I think until February eighty-four.

Q. When did you work for King's?

A. I don't know no Kings. I don't know no family of King's in Leavenworth. You must mean Guyon, don't you?

Q. When did you work at Taggart's?

A. Oh, I was small then, I don't know how old I was, I was small, that was Mrs. Guyon's sister.

Q. Did you ever work for Atwood, an attorney?

A. Yes, I worked for Atwood two or three months I think.

Q. When was that?

A. I think I was between thirteen and fourteen that I worked for Mr. Atwood, I think.

By Mr. Bell: Was that John Atwood or Sam Atwood's wife? Sam Atwood was an old abstracter and had a daughter by the name of Mira.

A. I guess that was the one on Fifth Street; that was in the Rayborn house.

By Mr. Bell: That was Johnny then.

Q. You don't remember any King's?

A. No, I don't remember no Kings.

Q. Did you work for those people in 1885 or 1885?

A. Oh, I worked for them all in between those times. Listen, I didn't work no place long, Mr. Hanford; I didn't have to work long anywhere. Would work two or three months and come over here two or three months. Breck's was the longest that I worked anywhere in the town.

Q. Did you work for any of those in eighty-four or eighty-five? A. Wait a moment now. No, I was sixteen then.

Q. Did you work for Taggarts in eighty-four or eighty-five? A. No.

Q. Did you work for Dave Atchison in eighty-four or five?

A. I worked for Mr. Atchison the early part of eighty-four, I think from the fall of eighty-four.

Q. Did you work for Atwood's in eighty-four or eighty-five?

A. I worked for Mr. Atwood, now, I can't remember whether I worked for Mr. Atwood long in there or not; I wasn't nothing but a girl when I worked for Mr. Atwood.

Q. Did you work for him before or after Atchison?

A. I don't know whether I went there first or not, I think I was about fourteen when I worked for them.

Recross Examination by Mr. Bell (appearing by consent of counsel for Mr. Blakeney):

Q. Did you know Cora Van Tyle? A. Cripple Cora?

Q. No, that is a younger man on Third.

A. Sure, I know Mr. Van Tyle, he run a stable on Delaware.

Q. How is that? A. Van Tyle that run the stable?

Q. Yes, did you know him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Real*ly* well? A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will ask you if he visited your grandmother's quite often during the year eighty-eight and eighty-nine?

A. See, I don't know that. He had the stable then right on the corner of Third and Seneca from Granny's.

Q. Did you ever see him over there? A. No.

Q. Were you real*ly* well acquainted with him?

A. I knew him well when he run the stable on Third Street.

Q. If he had kept company with Minnie Atkins, would you have known it?

A. No, I wouldn't have known it, but he—Mr. Van Tyle?

Q. Yes, Mr. Van Tyle, would you have known it?

By Mr. German: I object to that question on the ground that it is argumentative.

Q. Or did you know it?

A. No, I didn't know it. Couldn't swear that he did, but I would swear that he didn't—won't swear he didn't, I am not going to tell that lie either.

Q. Did you ever see him at Granny Letcher's?

A. No, never in my lifetime, never.

Q. Did you know a woman that stayed at your grandmother's that they called Fainting Mollie?

A. Fainting Mollie?

Q. Yes? A. No, white woman or colored woman?

Q. Well, she had some colored blood in her, but you couldn't tell that she had it. You don't recall that?

A. No, I don't remember anybody—no fainting Mollie, that is somebody they found I reckon. I reckon they have found a lot of fainting Mollie's and things since then.

Q. Did you know Jim Mayo?

A. Called him Uncle all my life, sure.

Q. I believe you said yesterday, after Granny Letcher moved to 217 Seneca Street she never was arrested?

Q. What year was that?

A. Eighty-eight, the fall of eighty-eight and the spring of eighty-nine.

Q. Was there a basement to the house in which Granny Letcher lived in?

A. There was a cellar there, yes, sir, where Granny kept her coal.

Q. You go around the back side and you could go right in?

A. The cellar was in the front part of it and you would go around the back part of the cellar and Uncle Jim used to keep a horse in there.

Q. You were there quite often? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Yes? A. No, sir, who said so?

Q. He was arrested there and the whole house pulled there on one Saturday night, was he not?

> By Mr. German: I object to that as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

Q. What did you say?

A. Raided Uncle Jim for running a crap game there?

Q. I asked you if Jim Mayo was arrested there for running a crap game in the basement of that house?

A. I am at the first of it, Lawyer Bell, right this minute.

Q. When you lived on Fifth Street there?

A. I eat there, Lawyer Bell.

Q. Didn't you know that your grandmother, Jim Mayo, and Fainting Mollie, and Minnie Atkins and several others were arrested there one Saturday night?

A. I will faint if you keep asking me that lie.

Q. I don't want you to faint?

A. I will faint if you keep asking that lie and you know it is one.

Q. Didn't you know at the time they arrested Minnie Atkins she had a child there about a year and a half or two years old? A. A child where?

Q. At your grandmothers'.

A. Lawyer Bell, if Minnie told me that I would knock her down, not been a child in my grandmother's house. Minnie had a child?

By Mr. German: Just answer.

By Mr. Stuart: I ask the Examiner that when she doesn't answer the question categorically to put into the record every word she says.

Q. You knew Mollie Miller?

A. May Miller, a girl that lived with me and Martha Foster?

Q. Martha Miller, yes. A. Yes.

Q. And you and she were chums?

A. Sure we ate our meals at Granny's when she run that place there.

Q. Did you run together?

A. Three years before I left it.

Q. You received company, didn't you?

A. Yes, I received company there and I had most of my men down to Granny's.

By Mr. German: I object to all this line of questioning on the ground that it is irrelevant, incompetent, and immaterial.

Q. Did you know Hiram Lightfoot, a barber down on Fifth Street?

A. Yes, he is dead. Everybody you are speaking of is dead.

Q. I know he is dead. Did you know his wife, Mary Lightfoot? A. No, I don't think I did.

Q. Do you recall, Sadie, in 1888 and '9 Hiram Lightfoot's wife whipping Minnie Atkins about her husband at the corner of John Evans' wood yard at the corner of Seneca and Fourth?

The Witness: Judge, may I walk about two minutes to get myself reconciled to Lawyer Bell's lies.

The Examiner: Sadie, you may walk out a minute. You must answer the questions.

By Mr. German: I want to object to Lawyer Bell examining the witness concerning any matters except such are in—as constitute a cross examination of the matters which I inquired of the witness about that were new matters, if there were any, on redirect examination this morning, for the reason that B. B. Blakeney together with Mr. Bell are representing H. Carter, has been conducting the cross examination on behalf of H. Carter, and I therefore move to strike the cross examination of Lawyer Bell so far conducted this afternoon, and object to his conducting it any further.

By the Examiner: I want to say that Mr. Bell appears now in this case by agreement of counsel had this morning at the request of Mr. Blakeney who is not at this time present at the taking of this testimony.

Q. Did you know Jim Gordon? A. White Jim Gordon?
Q. No, a colored man, a mulatto. A. No.
Q. Did you know a man that run a restaurant on the alley between Seneca and Shawnee Street, at the alley going up to the police station?

By Mr. German: I want to object to this, and will you consider that this objection goes to all your other questions?

By Mr. Bell: Yes, sir.

By Mr. German: The objection being upon the grounds stated just before you asked this question and just before the Examiner's statement.

By Mr. Bell: All right.

A. May I take this back, Jim Gordon? Yes.
Q. You knew him? A. Oh, well.
Q. Did you know John Kellum?
A. Sure I knew John Kellum, had a white wife there, knew him for years, he is dead too. All these you are speaking of is dead.
Q. How long has John Kellum been dead?
A. Been dead quite a while.

Q. Now, was John Kellum and Frank Foster at the home of yourself and Martha Miller in 1888? A. Oh no.
Q. Was George L. Harrison, who lives now in Tulsa, and H. and Foster at your home? A. Is he a negro?
Q. Yes, ma'am.
A. You know we didn't have a nigger in our house, Lawyer Bell, and you know that.

By Mr. German: Sadie, don't argue.

A. We never had a nigger there, you know that.
Q. You didn't have a nigger there?
A. You was there, you know that.
Q. You know Mr. Bell was in your house, wasn't he?
A. Who?
Q. Mr. T. W. Bell? A. You?
Q. Yes? A. In my house on Fifth Street.

Q. On Fifth Street? A. You never was in my house.

Q. Do you recall when Martha Miller's father was sane and in jail? A. Was I there at the time?

Q. Do you recall that?

A. Of course I know, yes, sir.

Q. Don't you know that he was in jail at the time Martha was living up on Fifth Street there? A. Yes, sir; yes, sir.

Q. Don't you know that Mr. Bell appeared in the probate court—— A. I don't know who appeared.

Q. In the interest of his grandmother and aunt?

A. Her mother?

Q. At the time of this trial?

A. I don't know who was for him; I don't knew you was, you could have been.

Q. You didn't know it? A. No.

Q. Didn't you know that I came to the house there and consulted her while you was living with her?

A. No, sir, I don't remember; no, sir. Her mother was living her, no, sir, I don't remember it, no, sir. My goodness!

Witness dismissed.

Mr. German: Your Honor, this is taken up to a point where we are hardly ready to proceed further just now, and we have been agreeable surprised at the progress that we have made. In fact, I want to explain to the Court that when we were planning our order of proof last week, we didn't do so upon the theory that the depositions would not be read, and we have made such progress that we have reached a point where we are not in shape to progress with dispatch unless Your Honor gives us a little time for the consideration * * *

The Court: We will take a recess until 1:30 o'clock P. M.

And thereupon, Court recesses until 1:30 o'clock P. M.

Q. Do you know Nancy Atkins? A. Yes, sir.

Q. About how long have you known her?

A. Oh, ever since we was little girls; little children.

Q. Did you ever live in Leavenworth? A. Never did.

Q. Do you know Harvey and Charlie Harrison?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Whose children are they? A. Minnie's.

Q. When was the first time you ever saw them?

A. About July, 1912, I think.

Q. Had you seen them as little children?

A. Yes, I saw them when we had our '95 payment, when Minnie first came back here.

Q. Where was it you saw them then?

A. Here in Muskogee.

Q. What sized children were they at that time?

A. Oh, just little small children; Harvey might have been two or three years old and Charlie might have been five.

Q. Had you seen Minnie prior to 1895, since she left Carlisle Indian School? A. No, sir, I had not.

Q. After 1895, how long was it until you saw Minnie again?

A. I didn't see her until I saw her at Fort Lawton, Washington.

Q. When? A. That was in June, 1914.

Q. Prior to June, 1914, had you been attempting to find Thomas Atkins or Minnie Atkins for anybody? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you first begin your efforts to do that?

A. Well, I think it was about July, 1912.

Q. Who for? A. I first made a trip for John Hayden.

Q. Did you find Minnie or Thomas? A. No, did not.

Q. Who else did you attempt to find her for?

A. Then a little while after that I started to work for H. U. Bartlett.

Q. In the course of your work did you come in contact with Nancy Atkins?

A. Yes, sir, I did, found Nancy about fifteen miles of Nowata.

Q. When?

A. Well, that, I think was in August, 1912.

Q. Did you have a conversation with her? A. Yes, sir.

Q. About herself? A. Yes, sir.

Q. About Minnie? A. Yes, sir.

Q. State to the Court what she said about herself and about Minnie? A. Well, of course I asked her about——

Mr. Cruce: If the Court please, I don't know what the witness is going to state, but any statement she made would not be competent.

The Court: Yes, I appreciate that as to Minnie and her interests.

Q. Tell the Court what she said about herself, any children she may have had?

A. She said she had had one child, and that it was dead, died when it was born, and that that was all the children she had had.

The Court: Who was she talking about then?

A. Nancy herself.

Q. State to the Court what she stated about Minnie?

Mr. German: Now, Your Honor, I desire that the witness be permitted to give this answer, for the reason that it will appear that she proceeded in her work to find Minnie and to find out about the boy, if there was one named Thomas. And it shows a source of information to this witness which she gained in prosecuting her efforts to find a Thomas or find Minnie, and I think for that reason it is competent.

The Court: Well, so far as what Nancy stated about Minnie, so far as against Minnie's case in this case, it appears to me it would be clearly hearsay.

Mr. German: It would be hearsay as to Minnie, yet, Your Honor, we are charging that Thomas Atkins didn't exist. It occurs to me that any evidence which we may produce from any source, or efforts to find her, and conversations with members of the family in the prosecution of the efforts would be competent evidence.

The Court: I don't see how the effect of this greater or less amount of efforts to find them could cut any figure at all. Now, we have Nancy a part of this case. Anything she said with regard to her interest is competent.

Mr. German: Well, we save an exception. I suppose you rule out the question I just asked.

The Court: Well, I am going to try you out on this proposition, it is before the Court. You have my view.

Q. What did she say about Minnie and her family?

Mr. Hanford: Same objection.

The Court: Objection noted.

Mr. Hanford: If the Court please, I would like to be heard before Your Honor rules.

The Court: Well, I will hear the answer.

A. You mean—— Well, she told me that Minnie had two children living, and told me where they were, one was at Wagoner and one at Coweta.

Q. Did she tell you their names?

A. She told me their names were Charlie and Harvey; she said she had taken care of them quite a time after Minnie had left them.

Q. Did she tell you anything else about Minnie or her off-spring?

A. Told me that Minnie said she had two children dead.

Q. Now, did she tell you anything about Minnie's whereabouts?

A. Said she didn't know where Minnie was, that she thought she was dead.

Q. Did she say where she thought she had died?

A. Thought she had died in a hospital in Kansas City or some place up there.

Q. What was the occasion of your going to see Nancy?

A. Just to see if she knew where Minnie was or knew anything of Thomas Atkins.

Q. What did she say about knowing anything about Thomas Atkins?

A. She said that she didn't know anything about Tommy only that she thought Tommy belonged to her brother and a white woman that he had lived with; she gave me the name of the woman but I don't remember her name.

Q. What was the brother's name?

A. Lee Atkins. She said the mother had died in Buffalo, New York.

Q. Now, do you know Sadie James? A. I do.

Q. Did you have occasion to go to Leavenworth, in your work in an effort to find Minnie or Thomas?

A. Yes, sir, I was there.

Q. Did you ever meet Sadie James there in connection with that work? A. Yes, I met Sadie.

Q. Prior to the time you met Sadie, had you made any investigation in Leavenworth with relation to Minnie?

A. Yes, sir, I had been working there about three or four months.

Q. Why had you been working in Leavenworth?

A. Because I knew Minnie had lived there first, knew where she had gone to.

Q. From school?

A. From school, and I knew that she was there and I was trying to get a trace from there to find her and to find Thomas.

Q. State whether or not you had gone to the Sister's Hospital there and found out anything. A. I did.

Q. What did you find out at the Sister's Hospital?

A. I found that Minnie had been sick there two weeks.

Q. Did you know of Charles Peterkin at that time?

A. Yes.

Q. From whom had you learned of him?

A. From Nancy—Nancy told me that Minnie was living with a man by that name and he was a soldier.

Q. She told you that when?

A. The first time I saw her.

Q. On the occasion that you have told the Court about?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, did you come in contact with Sadie James there in Leavenworth? A. Yes, sir.

Q. About when?

A. Well, I think it was in March or April, 1914.

Q. Up to that time had you been able to find Minnie?

A. I had not.

Q. Or to find as to where she probably was?

A. Well, no; I had some trace of her being at some Fort out in the west.

Q. But you didn't know where it was? A. Not exactly.

Q. Had you the name of any Fort where she probably might be?

A. Yes, sir, I had the name of Fort Wright, Washington, that time.

Q. Did you have Fort Lawton at that time?

A. And Van Couver and Fort Wright, Washington, I think are the names she was at last.

Q. Had you been able to find a boy by the name of Thomas Atkins as the son of Minnie? A. I had not.

Q. When you found Sadie James did you and she have any conversation about this matter?

Q. Tell the Court the conversation.

Mr. Cruce: We object to that.

Mr. Stuart: I hardly think that is admissible, Your Honor, unless it is [ ] corroborate Sadie's statement in the deposition that she did have a conversation with her.

Mr. German: That is one reason, Judge.

Mr. Cruce: Well, would it be competent even then?

Mr. German: Not is not the sole reason.

The Court: So far as the Court knows, Sadie James has no connection yet with this case. I don't know yet what was in her deposition; I don't know what her mission was to Leavenworth, or who employed her, or who she represented, or who she was authorized to seek for if she was authorized to seek for anyone.

Mr. German: Theoretically, Your Honor, it is because the deposition has been introduced. Your Honor probably recalls in a general way the story that she related at the Receivership trial?

The Court: Well, no, rather hazy.

Mr. German: At any rate. Sadie told about Betty coming there and about the conversations in relation to this matter, and who they saw, and what was said, and what was done with relation to Minnie and Thomas.

The Court: Well, now, what is the nature of the fact that you seek to establish by what Sadie said at that time?

Mr. German: That was Sadie's induction into the case. It relates to her being brought in employment in the case, and it is the date of her active work in the case. The point where she starts in her testimony to relate——

The Court: Oh, I will hear what she has to say. Overruled.

Mr. Cruce: We object to that, if the Court please, because it is hearsay testimony.

The Court: Exception noted.

Mr. Cobb: If the Court please, none of the parties will assume to represent in this matter the clients that we represent, and we wish to especially object to this testimony as to what was said as being incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and also hearsay.

Mr. Hanford: Name your clients, please.

Mr. Cobb: We represent Thomas Atkins, known as H. Carter in this case.

The Court: Objection is overruled and exception noted; I don't know what place if any, I will give this in the case but I will hear it.

Q. Alright Betty. What did you and Sadie say?

A. Well, Sadie wanted to know what I was doing up there and of course I told her I was working to find Minnie Atkins and Tommy Atkins—lost Indians that had an allotment down here, and she of course wanted to get in and work an the case.

Said she could find out a lot of things; she had lived there at Leavenworth a long time and knew everyone and thought she would be of great help, and besides she said that she knew a man down there, a negro, a very smart man, who knew a great part of Leavenworth, and we just would go down and talk with him, so she dressed and we went down to Dennis Jones' office and went in and she told Dennis Jones.

Q. Now, who is Dennis Jones?

A. He is a lawyer there—a colored lawyer.

Q. At Leavenworth? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Alright. Now relate that conversation.

A. And I explained to Dennis that Minnie Atkins had lived there with George Hyde, and came from our school and that she had a child allotted with her and had the allotment here, but we couldn't find it and that I had been hunting quite a long while and I couldn't find the party, and then Sadie spoke up and said, we don't think there is any Tommy. I said no, I don't think there is because I can't get any trace of him. And he said if that is what [] want, I could get up the evidence; I can prove that Hell is an ice-box right here; and I can use from bankers down to niggers, anybody. He turned around and called up an old doctor—commenced thinking of the old-timers and he said, what year would he have to be born in, and I said I think he would have to be born in '84 or '85—'84 was when Minnie came from Carlisle. I don't remember the name he called up, but an old doctor, and the doctor was out of town, and he said that is an old doctor that I can prove by him that the boy was born; he called up a druggist and three or four parties and he said before you go any further you had better find out whether or not Minnie is dead, and see whether she is dead or alive; she might come up and confront us and say it is all a lie. And first you had better find Minnie and see whether she is dead or alive.

Q. Did Dennis say anything about knowing Minnie?

A. He didn't know Minnie at all; he knew a Mary Atkins but he didn't know Minnie.

Q. Did he say he didn't know Minnie?

A. Said he didn't know Minnie.

Q. Did you have any discussion there about producing a boy who should be Thomas? A. No, I don't think so, no.

Q. While you were there, did anybody else come in?

A. Yes.

Q. Who? A. Ben Porter and Jim Swift.

Q. Who are they?

A. Ben Porter is a Creek Indian; belongs here in Muskogee—old Chief Porter's nephew; and Jim Swift is a Cherokee who lives here at Muskogee.

Q. Did they live here at Muskogee or in this part of the country at that time?

A. No, I think they were both living in Kansas City at the time.

Q. How did they come to be at Leavenworth?

A. I met them up there and they were well acquainted with parties over at the Fort, and I got them to go over there with me to find them.

Q. You say they came to the office? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Of Dennis at that time? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did they come in where you were?

A. They were in the next room and the door was open, and when Dennis Jones seen the boys in there he was a little worried about it; and Sadie told him that it was all right, that they were both Indians, and that they were with me, and that they were perfectly safe, and they came in and talked to me.

Q. Was H. U. Bartlett mentioned when Sadie got into the case?

A. She wanted to work and I thought she would be good help, and I went home and called up Mr. Bartlett and told him I wanted him to come up and employ her and he did.

Q. Where? A. Kansas City.

Q. Where did Sadie meet him?

A. She met him at the Stratford Hotel.

Q. At Kansas City? A. Kansas City.

Q. What was she doing?

A. Well, she was to help me locate Minnie and Thomas Atkins.

Q. Now, did you talk to Rube Smith there in Leavenworth? A. I saw Rube Smith one time.

Q. Where? A. Down at Martha Jones'.

Q. When did you first meet him?

A. That afternoon about four or five o'clock.

Q. Who was with you? A. Sadie.

Q. State whether or not Dennis had talked to Rube Smith up in the office?

A. Well, I don't know, I am not sure that he did. He called up some one but I don't know for sure.

Q. Did you have any conversation with Rube Smith when you met him? A. He talked some.

Q. In relation to Minnie and Thomas Atkins? A. Yes.

Q. Relate the conversation.

Mr. Cruce: If the Court please, on behalf of Minnie Atkins and Mr. Page, defendants in this case, I object.

The Court: Well, now, you are getting a lot of conversations in here now, that appear to me are very questionable indeed as to its competency.

Mr. German: Doubtless it would appear so under the circumstances. However, it is extremely material. Here we have really the beginning of what we conceive to be the fabrication of the existence of the Thomas Atkins, and we are starting out where it was conceived.

The Court: Well, note your objection and exception. I will hear it a little while longer.

Mr. Cobb: I join in that objection and exception.

Mr. Stuart: I understood if anybody made any objection it went to everybody.

The Court: Yes, it goes to the three interests, the three, the Page and the Minnie Atkins interests and the Henry Carter interest. The objection is noted and overruled and exception noted.

Mr. Cruce: I understand that there is no contention at this time that Mr. Page or Minnie Atkins had any connection with this.

The Court: Nothing has appeared to that effect so far as the Court knows.

Q. Did Sadie claim to know Minnie?
A. I don't remember that she did.
Q. You say you had a conversation with Rube, there relating to Minnie and Thomas? A. Yes.
Q. Relate it.

Mr. Hanford: Objection.

A. Well, I told him I was hunting Minnie Atkins and told him she had lived at George Hyde's. He said he had worked next door to George Hyde about the time, during those years, but that he didn't remember an Indian girl that was working there. He didn't remember anything but a colored girl that was working there.

The Court: Who was this with? Rube Smith?

Mr. German: Yes, sir.

Q. What did he say about knowing Minnie?
A. He didn't know Minnie.
Q. Did he say he didn't? A. He said he didn't.
Q. What further conversation was had with Rube?
A. That is all I remember. We only had just a short conversation.
Q. Now, did you meet Rube and Dennis after that there?
A. No, sir.
Q. That, you say, was in the spring of 1814? A. Yes, sir.
Q. After that, were you in Tulsa?

A. I came to Tulsa, I went back and forward several different times.

Q. Were you working on this matter between the time you came in contact with Dennis and Rube there at that time and the time that you took a trip to Seattle?

A. Yes, sir, all the time.

Q. During that—— Did you talk with Dennis or Rube?

A. No.

Q. Did you talk with Sadie? A. Oh, quite a lot.

Q. State whether or not you and Sadie were working together on the matter? A. We were.

Q. Had you taken any trips prior to the time you took a trip to Seattle in search of Minnie after you found Dennis and Rube?

A. Yes, I was in Leavenworth a number of times and at Kansas City, and I was over at St. Joe, here in Muskogee and several different places.

Q. Had you been able to find Thomas or Minnie?

A. I hadn't.

Q. Did you get any definite information of Minnie as to her probable whereabouts?

A. Well, nothing only that she was west with the soldiers at some Fort and had married a soldier, we discovered that.

Q. Now, state whether or not, and at whose instance, if so, you planned to go west and search at the Army Post?

A. I was going for Mr. Bartlett.

Q. About when?

A. Well, it was the last of May, 1914.

Q. Where did Mr. Bartlett live at the time?

A. Sapulpa.

Q. Where did you live at that time? A. Sapulpa.

Q. Was Sadie going with you or not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Just before you went, state whether or not you had any conversation with Frank Long?

A. The evening that I left.

Q. Well, prior to that? A. No, I hadn't.

Q. You didn't have any prior to the evening you left?

A. No, sir.

Q. All right, had you known Frank Long very long before that?

A. Yes, I knew Frank Long, he was with the Government as Field Agent or something of that kind.

Q. At this particular time though, he was not with the Government.

Mr. Cruce: We object. That is a leading question.

A. No, I don't think he was.

Q. Now, what conversation did you have with him, if any, about Minnie? A. Well, Frank Long——

The Court: I didn't get that connection, where was this and when was it?

Mr. German: I will fix that. It isn't clear.

Q. Where was it you had the conversation?

A. At Sapulpa at the Frisco Depot.

Q. When was it?

A. Well, it was the evening that I started toward Seattle, the last of May, 1914.

Q. In 1914? A. 1914.

Q. Now, relate the conversation?

A. And Frank said that he had been talking to Mr. Rogers and he thought that I was going to find Minnie.

Q. Let me interrupt you to find out who Mr. Rogers is?

A. Mr. Rogers is a Cherokee Indian.

Q. Was he or not working with you?

A. Yes, we had been working before that for Mr. Bartlett.

Q. All right, go ahead.

A. And he said that Mr. Long—that he would give me so much more than Mr. Bartlett to find Minnie and turn her to him, so he wanted me to see Long.

Q. Oh, Mr. Rogers is telling you that. I am not asking you about Mr. Rogers' conversation. Get to the conversation with Mr. Long.

A. Then, Mr. Long told me he was working for Mr. Page, for the Gem Oil Company, and that they would pay me more than Mr. Bartlett would to turn Minnie over to them if I found her; and he asked me what Mr. Bartlett had promised me and I told him.

Q. How much? A. A thousand ($1,000.00) dollars.

Q. All right? [A.] And he said I will give you five thousand ($5,000.00) dollars, he says, if you will find Minnie, turn her to me well identified. He says, how does that sound? He says that is much better. Well, I said, well I hated to turn Mr. Bartlett down like that. Then he says you have some trouble and I will help you out of that. And I finally agreed that I would turn Minnie to him well identified for five thousand dollars.

Q. Now, did you have another conversation with him before you left for Seattle?

A. That night at the Frisco Depot in Tulsa.

Q. Relate that conversation.

A. Well, that was just to tell me how to send the telegrams. I was to send the telegrams signed Bill Jones.

Q. In case you found Minnie? A. In case I found Minnie.

Q. Did he tell you how he would reply to you? A. Yes.

Q. How? A. Send them Mrs. Bill Jones.

Q. So, you went to Seattle? A. Yes, sir.

Q. At whose expense? A. Mr. Bartlett's.

Q. Who went with you? A. Sadie.

Q. Did you locate Minnie? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where? A. At Fort Logan, Washington.

Q. As you were enroute to the northwest, did you search for her at other points? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Before you reached Seattle? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where? A. Yes, sir, we stopped at Denver.

Q. All right?

A. And looked up some parties, I don't remember their names.

Q. Well, you needn't relate the details.

A. Then we stopped at Portland, and went over to——

Q. What army post is there?

A. Van Couver across there, went over there. I took Harjo with me over there.

Q. Micco Harjo? A. Yes, sir.

Q. He lived at Portland at the time?

A. Yes, sir, Sadie didn't go with me. Then that night we took a train and went to Seattle.

Q. Now, how did you come to find Minnie there?

A. I talked to a soldier in front of the First National Bank in Seattle on First Avenue.

Q. Did he give you any information which lead to her?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did you go to then? A. Out to the Fort.

Q. Where is the Fort from Seattle?

A. I think it is several miles up the sound.

Q. Fort Logan? A. Fort Logan, yes, sir.

Q. Did you see Minnie? A. I did.

Q. Now, where was Sadie James at this particular time?

A. I think she had gone up to Fort Wright.

Q. At Spokane? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Fort Wright is at Spokane? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Had Sadie found Minnie before you went out to Fort Logan on this occasion you are speaking of?

A. I don't think so.

Q. If she had you didn't know it? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you see Minnie out there? A. I did.

Q. Did you speak to her? A. I did.

Q. Did you have a conversation with her? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where? A. At her house,

Q. Relate that conversation. Tell the conversation you had with her.

Q. Well, I went in and spoke to her, finally told her who I was, and I talked to her and asked her about her family. We talked about our families and all our relation——

Q. Did you talk about the Carlisle School?

A. About Carlisle and Tullehassee and all those things from our girlhood on up.

Q. Did you tell her what you were there for?

A. Not then for a while.

Q. Did you talk with her about her own family?

A. I did.

Q. Her own children? A. I did.

Q. Tell what she said.

A. She told me about her children, about how many was living, and was very anxious to find out what had become of Harvey and Charlie.

Q. Did you tell her about Harvey and Charlie?

A. I did.

Q. What did you tell her?

A. I told her that I saw them about four weeks before; some time before. And that they were well grown boys.

Q. Tell her where they were? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you tell her?

A. That one was at Wagoner, and that one was living at Aunt Rachel Perryman's.

Q. Did she speak of any other children?

A. Two that was dead.

Q. What did she say?

A. Said two were dead; one was dead in Leavenworth, and I think the other one died in Fort Logan, I am not sure.

Q. Did she call any other names? A. She did.

Q. Do you recollect what names she called?

A. No, I don't.

Q. State whether or not she said either one was named Thomas. A. She did not.

Q. Did you ask her about Thomas on the roll?

A. I finally did, yes.

Q. Tell the Court the conversation about that.

A. I finally asked her who Tom was and she said she didn't——

Q. Well, did you tell her about the roll?

A. I told her there was a boy on the rolls with her by the name of Tommy Atkins and she said he is not mine; said he must belong to my brother or my sister, I don't know.

Q. Did she speak of her father Thomas?

A. She said her father was named Thomas but he had been dead too long.

Q. Now, did you tell her what you were there for?

A. I finally told her.

Q. What did you tell her?

A. I told her that we were hunting this Tommy, and hunting her and that there was a chance for her to make some money. And she said that she had been a servant all her life for white people and was still scrubbing the floors for them and would be very glad to make some money.

Mr. Hanford: I object to what she said unless she states what the conversation was.

The Court: I understand that she was proceeding to do that.

Mr. Hanford: She was stating her own conclusion, what was drawn from the conversation.

Q. Go ahead, Betty. A. I forgot where I was.

Q. You were telling about what——

The Court: The last she said was that Minnie said she had been a servant for white [] all her life and working hard, and would like to make some money.

A. Yes. And I told her that all she had to do was to keep still and not tell anyone else that Tommy was not here and she could get some money; that there would be a man there who would give her money to sign a lease on this land.

Q. What did she say?

A. She said she would be glad to do it but didn't want anyone else to know it, especially her husband. She was anxious that he or anyone else should not find it out. And I said don't say anything about my being out there; that she needn't to tell anyone.

Q. Did you communicate with Frank Long? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What name did you use? A. Bill Jones.

Q. In substance, what did you wire him or how did you communicate with him, by telegraph or letter?

A. Telegraphed to him, but I can't remember the words that I used. I just wired him that I had signed Minnie someway. I don't know how I put it.

Q. Did you ask him to come or not?

A. Well, I think I did; I think I wired him to come.

Q. Did you hear from him?

A. I did, I got a telegram right back. He said unless I was sure that he couldn't or wouldn't come, or something, that it was a long way, and that he was a very busy man, and then I wired to him that I had found her and that she was well identified, and to come at once. He wired me that he was coming; would start a certain day; told me what day he was starting.

Q. What name was used—Bill Jones——

A. Bill Jones and Mrs. Bill Jones, was the way I think it was.

Q. Now, did you hear from him after that by wire before he reached Seattle?

A. Well, I think he wired me on the road, I am not sure.

Q. Well, now, did he finally come to Seattle?

A. He came to Seattle.

Q. How long after you had found Minnie?

A. About a week or a little over—a little over a week.

Q. Where was Sadie? A. She was around.

Q. During that time? A. Sadie was around there.

Q. Now, where did you see Mr. Long, if at all, when he got to Seattle?

A. He came to my room at the Wright hotel.

Q. Betty, what were you doing at this time in the matter—state whether it was pursuant to your employment by Mr. Long for Mr. Page?

A. Well, I was telegraphing to Long, was all.

Q. You were carrying out your agreement? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, what conversation did you and Mr. Long have when he came into the Wright hotel?

A. Well, I told him that I had found Minnie, and for him to go out and satisfy himself that it really was Minnie.

Q. Alright. Go on.

A. I called up Kohler—that is the detective there that I had watching Minnie all the time to keep anyone else from going out and getting her——

[Q.] Kohler?

A. Mr. Kohler—I forget his other name; he was with the Burns people at that time, and told him to take Mr. Long out where Minnie lived.

Q. Now, let me ask you. Did you tell Mr. Long what Minnie had said or not? A. I did. I think I did.

Q. Before he went? A. Yes.

Q. But did Mr. Long leave?

A. He left, went with Kohler, and a taxi driver by the name of Ed. Bush.

Q. Did you go with him? A. No, sir.

Q. Did he come back?

A. He came back and came to my room. Sadie and he were there right together.

Q. Well, what did he say?

A. Well, he said something about old Minnie had said that she didn't have a Thomas.

Q. Alright. Tell the conversation.

A. And then he said, but I told her to not say that any more, but he says that is alright, we will have Thomas before we get through; not to worry that this is going to be alright. And Sadie suggested—no, he said, I saw the handwriting on the wall and left. And Sadie says, suppose one was born at a certain time—he said Thomas has got to be living, I think he said, in 1900. I forget what year he said one had to be living in. He said the one dead, we can't use him; and he said, now, girls, that will be alright; just keep quite and don't worry any, that is alright.

Q. Well, did you and Mr. Long do anything, then, in reference to this matter?

A. Well, Mr. Long went back out there and tried to see Minnie and by that time, I think Mr. Hanford, and Captain MacNab and some of them wouldn't let Minnie see anybody —he hadn't got the lease.

Q. When did you first come in contact with Mr. Hanford?

A. Well, this was on Saturday and I think I saw Mr. Hanford on Sunday.

Q. The next day? A. The next day.

Q. After Frank Long came? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where was it that you met him?

A. I met Mr. Hanford at the Reno Grand.

Q. The Reno Grand what? A. Hotel.

Q. Who with? A. Mr. Long.

Q. Was anybody else with them? A. No.

Q. When did you see Minnie again then?

A. I didn't see Minnie anymore, then, until she came down here to Court, I think.

Q. You didn't go out to her house any more, then?

A. No.

Q. Was there any conveyance or lease from Minnie to the Gem Oil Company that you learned of?

A. Not at that time.

Q. Not at that time? A. No, sir.

Q. Did Mr. Long and Mr. Hanford leave Seattle while you were there at that time?

A. They left Monday evening following, I think.

Q. Monday evening. Had Captain MacNab come into this matter in any way?

A. I think he had from what Mr. Long told me.

Q. What did Mr. Long tell you?

A. He told me that Captain MacNab wouldn't let Minnie sign this lease for him and that Mr. Hanford was her attorney; that they thought there was something big in the matter and that they were going to try and hold it up and try and make some money themselves out of it.

Q. Now, do you know what Mr. Hanford and Mr. Long left—why they left Seattle? A. No, I really don't.

Q. Where did they go?

A. They were supposed to go to Oklahoma—Tulsa, Oklahoma.

Q. Did you hear them say where they were going?

A. Well, Mr. Long said that he was going back home.

Q. Did he tell you what for? A. No, he didn't.

Q. Well, did you stay? A. I stayed.

Q. Why did you stay?

A. Because Mr. Long told me down at the depot that he wanted me to go back up there and it was up to me to get that lease by any means that I could get it; that he had made the trip—that he could not possibly fall down—that he was working for the Gem Oil Company, and he was out a lot of expense; that I must go out there and get that lease; that he had feell down, and he said by all means, he said, I will give you six thousand dollars, and he said I will get a deed to the land for you if you will get that lease signed up to the Gem Oil Company, and he said it is up to you. And he turned around to Mr. Kohler, and he said, help her, because I can't lose this lease, and he said I am taking Mr. Hanford, Minnie's attorney, and I can handle him, and I am taking him down there and we will fix this thing all up, and he said you go out there to get that lease.

Q. Did he mention anybody especially for you to see?

A. Well, Captain MacNab.

Q. What had Captain MacNab—how had he to do with it—how had he to do with it?

A. Well, I don't know that, only that he was just a captain there at the Fort.

Q. Do you know whether he had a deed or conveyance—trust deed from Minnie? A. I don't know.

Q. You didn't know about that?

A. No, sir, I didn't know.

Q. They left. Did you see Minnie or Captain MacNab?

A. I saw Captain MacNab, I didn't see Minnie; they had Minnie up at the Fort and no one could see her.

Q. Did you have any conversation with him?

A. I certainly did. I talked to Captain MacNab all one afternoon and went back the next morning and talked with him and he said I had convinced him that Mr. Page was the man——

Mr. Cruce: We object, if the Court please.

The Court: Sustained; I don't care to hear what MacNab said at this particular point.

Q. Now, Betty, did you leave Seattle shortly after that or not? A. I left there on the next Saturday night.

Q. Had Mr. Hanford or Mr. Long returned to Seattle before you left? A. They had not.

Q. Had you heard from either of them? A. I had not.

Q. You say you left there the next Saturday night?

A. No, Friday night.

Q. The next Friday night?

A. The next Friday night, I think; I wouldn't be sure.

Q. You left there about a week after Mr. Long had reached Seattle and about three or four days after he had left and gone back to Tulsa? A. I think so.

Q. He had already gone away from there?

A. I think so.

Q. Where did you go to? A. I came back to Tulsa.

Q. Did anyone come with you?

A. Sadie came as far as, I think, Denver.

Q. At whose expense did you come back?

A. Mr. Bartlett.

Q. Was Mr. Bartlett there? A. He came, yes, sir.

Q. When had he come to Seattle?

A. I think Mr. Bartlett came there Friday morning, I think, and we left that Friday night.

Q. Do you know how Mr. Bartlett came to come there?

A. Sadie wired for him to come.

Q. Do you know whether he saw Minnie of your own personal knowledge while he was there?

A. No, I don't know that.

Q. Did you go out to the Fort with him? A. I did not.

Q. Tell me this: did Minnie live inside the Post, or outside? A. Outside.

Q. Nearby? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was her husband? A. Harry Folk.

Q. What relationship did he bear to the Army?

A. I don't know; I don't know.

Q. Was he in the Army or not?

A. Yes, they told me but I don't remember now.

Q. Now, where did you go to from Seattle?

A. I came back to Tulsa.

Q. Where did you go—who did you see first of all after reaching Tulsa, about this case?

A. I talked to Mr. Page's stenographer, Eberle.

Q. Where?

A. In the Gem Oil Company's office in the First National Bank Building.

Q. Did you see Mr. Page on that occasion?

A. I saw Mr. Page directly after I arrived.

Q. Did you have a conversation with him about the matter? A. I did.

Q. Relate the conversation.

A. Well, Mr. Page came in and was glad to see me and was glad that I had turned the deal to him and things of that kind; and then he said that he had sent me some wires and was sorry that I didn't get them and was a little out of humor that Hanford and Long—the way they had treated me, leaving me out there without any money, and then he asked me what I thought about it—it there was a Tommy, and I told him that he could ask Frank Long.

Q. Alright; go ahead. You told him that he could ask Frank Long? A. Yes.

Q. You didn't answer him as to what you thought?

A. No, because I had had no dealing with Mr. Page. I had not talked with anyone except Frank Long.

Q. And you told him that he could ask Frank Long?

A. I told him that Frank Long was—he said he was responsible for any of Frank Long's contracts, and so on, like that.

Q. He told you that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, did he say anything about the work you had done in Seattle?

A. He said I did awful good work, complimented me on it.

Q. Did he pay you anything there that day?

A. He gave me a check, I think, for $50.00, or a hundred, I don't remember.

Q. At that time where was the lease? Did he say anything about the lease that he was to get?

A. Yes, he told me that day—he complimented me on that lease; said that he had a wire from Captain MacNab, I think, and he said that I had been very convincing, and that he wouldn't have got the lease if it hadn't of been for me, is what he said, I think, as well as I remember.

Q. Betty, you say, that Mr. Page asked you what you thought of whether there was any Tommy Atkins?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. State whether that was the first mention made of the name Thomas Atkins when you entered the office in the conversation? A. That was the first.

Q. And what did you say?

A. I said that he could ask Frank Long.

Q. Then what did he say?

A. He said, well, that doesn't make any difference; it is alright. We will have Tommy fixed up alright. Something like that—I don't remember the words he said.

Q. But that was the substance?

A. That was the substance—that it would be alright. He gave me to understand that we would have no trouble about the lease; it would be alright. I supposed I would get my money; I didn't know.

Q. Now, did you know where Frank Long was at that time? A. No, I didn't.

Q. When did you reach Tulsa? Tell me when you reached Tulsa on that occasion.

A. Well, I think I reached Tulsa—can't be sure about those dates.

Q. About how long after you left Seattle?

A. Well, it was about a week. I think I got there the next Thursday morning. I think it took most a week because I stayed in Denver one day.

Q. Did you know where Mr. Hanford was at that time?

A. I do not.

Q. What did you do in connection with this matter after that conversation?

A. I didn't do anything much. Oh, I did too; not very much, though.

Q. Were you still working for Mr. Page?

A. Well, no, I wasn't doing any work; I was just around the office, trying to get my pay for what I had done.

Q. What about Mr. Bartlett?

A. I didn't have anything to do with Mr. Bartlett any more after I left him, in Denver, I think.

Q. Oh, you left him in Denver when you and Sadie and him were enroute for Tulsa?

A. I left him and Sadie in Denver. I didn't see him any more.

Q. You came on to Tulsa?

A. I came on home. I didn't see Sadie any more for several weeks, quite a while.

Q. State whether or not Mr. Bartlett had terminated your employment with him? A. He had.

Q. And you were around Tulsa doing work on this case?

A. Well, yes; I wasn't really working either.

Mr. Stuart: Now, she didn't say that. I object to that because it is leading.

Mr. German: All right, I will withdraw the question.

Mr. Stuart: She was trying to get her money.

Q. Trying to get her money out of Bartlett?

A. Charlie Page.

Q. Did you finally get a settlement?

A. Finally got a settlement.

Q. Now, do you remember the fact of Sadie James having been employed by Page?

A. Well, no, I don't remember how Sadie did really get in.

Q. I am not asking you that. Do you remember the fact that she did get in? A. Yes, I knew that.

Q. Did you settle with Mr. Page before or after she got in?

A. I settled with Mr. Page quite a while after Sadie got in.

Q. Had Mr. Page said anything to you about Sadie, before Sadie was employed by Mr. Page?

A. Well, I think that he did, I am not sure; He was wanting some one to get up this evidence—to get up proof of Tommy Atkins birth, and he said he had to have some one to do it.

Q. Do you remember the fact of Minnie Atkins coming to Sapulpa and testifying? A. I remember that she did, yes.

Q. You were there when she testified? A. I was not.

Q. Where were you? A. I was at home.

Q. Where? A. In Sapulpa.

Q. So, you were in the City of Sapulpa?

A. I was in the city.

Q. Did you see Minnie? A. I did not.

Q. Did you have any conversation with Mr. Page about Minnie on that occasion? A. Not that day, no.

Q. Did you the day before?

A. I think I did—— Yes, the day before she was a witness at Sapulpa.

Q. Relate that conversation?

A. I talked to him in Tulsa.

Q. Oh, it was in Tulsa you talked to him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you talk to him about Minnie?

A. Yes, he wanted me to go out to his house and see Minnie.

Q. All right, what else did he say about it?

A. Well, he wanted me to go out there and talk to her. Seemed to be a little worried about her making a good witness. And Mr. Rogers told him that I wasn't going; and he told me to go down there and wait at the Main Street Station and he would call me, and he wanted me to come out there and see Minnie; but I didn't go.

Q. You didn't go? A. No.

Q. After she had testified at Sapulpa in July, did you learn what she had testified to about Tommy from anybody?

A. I did from Mr. Rogers.

Q. Did you learn it from Mr. Long or Mr. Page?

A. Well, no.

Q. Did you talk to them about what she had testified to?

A. Well, I talked to Mr. Josey and Mr. Long; they stopped by the house the evening after the trial.

Q. Did they talk to you about Minnie and what she had testified to? A. Yes.

Q. What did they say about it?

A. Well, I don't remember just what they said; but Mr. Rogers told them she had swore a lie on the stand and that she would get caught, something about the Hospital; he says, we have been to the hospital and know what that record shows up there; and he says, why didn't you tell us? And he says we wasn't telling you. I don't remember what the conversation was, it was something about that but Mr. Rogers had heard her conversation—heard her evidence.

Q. Now, did you after that talk with Mr. Page or Mr. Long about Sadie James? A. Yes, I think I did.

Q. Relate the conversation?

A. I don't remember what the conversation was.

Q. Did you talk with them about the production of evidence of the birth of Thomas Atkins?

A. I think that I told them that Sadie could get up the evidence, I am not sure about that.

Q. Did you tell them about Dennis Jones?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Or Rube Smith? A. No.

Q. But you did tell them about Sadie?

A. I think I did, I wouldn't be sure that I did.

Q. Now, do you remember of Sadie having a conversation with you a day or so before she was employed by Mr. Page?

A. Yes, she came to see me and wanted me to try to get her in to help get up this evidence; wanted me to speak to Mr. Charlie Page for her.

Q. Now, what had Mr. Page said to you about getting Sadie?

A. Well, I don't remember that he said anything about getting Sadie, only that he wanted some one to get up this evidence.

Q. Had you had anything to do with the Sisters Hospital story?

A. He made some remark about the day he heard from Mr. Hanford, said that Hanford sent him a wire, and made the remark that Thomas Atkins was a girl, something about the Hospital being a fake, I don't remember the conversation. I just remember there was something about it, but I don't remember what it was.

Q. Now, was that before he had employed Sadie?

A. I don't know, I don't know just when he employed Sadie.

Q. Well, you remember the fact of his employing her?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know what date it was? A. No.

Q. But you know about him having employed her?

A. Yes.

Mr. German: We would like to have Exhibit No. 14 from the Receivership files.

Q. Bettie, did you finally have a settlement with Mr. Page? A. I did.

Q. At the time was there any written paper, any paper signed? A. Yes, sir.

Q. By you? A. There was.

Q. I will ask you if this is it, which I will now read: "Tulsa, Oklahoma, October 21, 1914. Receipt is hereby acknowledged of Gem Oil Company of the sum of two thousand dollars, being the amount which C. H. Rogers and myself were to receive from Gem Oil Company for services rendered as hereinafter set forth; of which amount I acknowlege receipt of five hundred fifty dollars in cash, the remaining portion of the said two thousand dollars being paid me by delivery of warranty deed executed by Chas. Page, conveying to me certain residence property in Sand Springs, Oklahoma, receipt of which warranty deed is hereby acknowledged; said two thousand dollars being payment in full for all claims, interests, or demands whatsoever nature I have in oil and gas mine leases executed in favor of Gem Oil Company by Minnie Folk, et al, covering the southwest quarter of northwest quarter of Section Four; the southwest quarter of northeast quarter, and Lot two of Section five, and Lot Four of Section Four, all in Township Eighteen north, Range Seven east, and also payment in full for all services rendered Gem Oil Company and Chas. Page and R. A. Josey, and for work done and for information furnished in connection with said lease; and in consideration of the above sum of money and in consideration of the delivery to me of the real estate covered in the above mentioned deed, I hereby release Gem Oil Company, Chas. Page and R. A. Josey from any and all obligations in said lease, and from the payment of any further sum of money." That is the instrument, is it? A. I think so.

Q. Now, where was that prepared?
A. In the Gem Oil Company's office.
Q. Did that end your connection with the case?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. For Mr. Page? A. Certainly did.

Cross Examination by Mr. Stuart.

Q. Your name is Betty Mann? A. Yes, sir.
Q. Betty Mann.

Mr. Stuart: Your Honor, before I commence, in order that the record may be kept perfectly safe, the Court will understand that we are objecting to all this evidence on the ground that the proof has not yet been made, that no evidence was taken before the Dawes Commission.

The Court: That objection may be noted as going to this witness or all the evidence?

Mr. Stuart: To all the evidence.

The Court: The objection may go to all this evidence.

Q. How old are you, Mrs. Mann? A. About forty nine.
Q. About forty nine. Have you ever been convicted of a crime? A. Yes, sir.
Q. What were you convicted of? A. Forgery.
Q. Forgery. In what court, Mrs. Mann?
A. Tulsa County.
Q. Tulsa County. How long ago since you were convicted? A. Oh, 1912, I think.
Q. 1912? A. I am not sure.
Q. Now, Mrs. Mann, you were originally employed by Mr. Bartlett in this Atkins matter, wasn't you? A. Yes.
Q. Now, you were present when a deed was forged from Minnie Atkins to Bartlett, wasn't you?
A. I was present in the bank when there was a deed signed.
Q. Well, you were present in the room, in the next room, wasn't you? A. No, I was in the bank.
Q. I can't understand you? A. In the bank.
Q. You were in the bank? A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was it signed in the bank? A. Yes, sir.
Q. Who signed Minnie Atkins name to that deed?
A. A woman by the name of Minnie Atkins.
Q. A woman by the name of Minnie Atkins?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Who found her?
A. Micco Harjo and a couple of negroes up at Kansas City.

Q. How much did you get for getting that deed?

A. I got a hundred dollars and my expenses.

Q. To get that deed? A. To make that trip.

Q. Yes, you knew and Harjo knew, you all knew that you were putting up a forgery at that time, didn't you?

A. No, sir.

Q. When did you first find out that that was a forgery?

A. I don't know. A woman by the name of Minnie Atkins signed it.

Q. You knew that wasn't the Minnie in this case, didn't you? A. Yes, sir, I certainly did.

Q. You knew that wasn't the girl you went to school with at Carlisle? A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. What did this Minnie Atkins claim; did she claim she ever lived down here?

A. I don't remember, I didn't talk to her very much.

Q. Did you ask her whether she was an Indian or not?

A. I didn't have much talk with her.

Q. Well, you had some talk?

A. Yes, Harjo and Bartlett's son brought her up and asked if that was the Minnie Atkins that I knew; and I said that she wasn't the Minnie Atkins I went to school with.

Q. Then, what did Mr. Bartlett's son do?

A. He telephoned his father and said I wouldn't identify her as the woman I went to school with.

Q. Then, what did they do?

A. His father told him to take a deed from that woman and not to pay out too much money.

Q. When did you first find out that that deed was a forgery? A. Well, I don't know for certain.

Q. She claimed to be the Minnie Atkins, the mother of Thomas Atkins?

A. Why, I don't know about that, she said she was Minnie Atkins, and they had some proof there that she was.

Q. You didn't know that that deed had been admitted to be a forgery? A. Why, I think they proved that since.

Q. Now, did you have anything to do with forging that deed from Thomas Atkins to Mr. Bartlett? A. I did not.

Q. You knew that had been done too, did you know?

A. I heard of it.

Q. Where was that done?

A. Well, I don't know. Mr. Bartlett brought one down here at Muskogee.

Q. Brought Tommy? A. I think so.

Q. What kind of a looking Tommy was he?

A. I couldn't describe him.

Q. Describe him to the Court as well as you can?

A. I don't remember as much what he looked like; he was a medium sized boy.

Q. Looked like an Indian?

A. Yes, sir, looked like an Indian.

Q. Showed up pretty well? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, he got that deed from Tommy Atkins?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that one has also turned out to be a forgery?

A. I don't know about that.

Q. Now, when you started on this mission up north, Mrs. Mann, you started up there to find Minnie Atkins, didn't you?

A. I did.

Q. This land down here had been found to be valuable?

A. Well, no it wasn't very valuable at the time.

Q. But they thought it was good property for oil?

A. I don't know, Mr. Bartlett said it wasn't worth over five thousand dollars.

Q. Well, how much did he pay you to hunt up Minnie Atkins?

A. Oh, he didn't pay much. My expenses wasn't very much.

Q. But what, in money, did he pay you?

A. Oh, I couldn't tell that.

Q. Well, as near as you can, you know about what you got? A. I don't know what he paid me.

Q. Well, let's get at it in some way, did he pay you as much as five thousand dollars? A. I should say not.

Q. Did he pay you as much as two thousand dollars?

A. Mr. Bartlett never gave anyone two thousand dollars in his life.

Q. He aint that kind of a man? A. I should say not.

Q. Well, anyhow, he paid you?

A. Mr. Bartlett paid my expenses.

Q. He started you on this mission?

A. He did and he would count up and give me twenty five cents for a meal and twenty five cents for a bed; when I had to send the little girl to school I could get fifteen or twenty dollars out of him to pay the tuition sometimes.

Q. How much did he pay this woman who signed that deed? A. I don't know.

Q. You started out to find Minnie, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Started out for Mr. Bartlett to find Minnie?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And on the road, did you take Sadie? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You and Sadie joined hands, didn't you, to find her?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did Mr. Bartlett agree to pay Sadie anything?

A. Well, I don't remember about that.

Q. Was Mr. Bartlett along? A. No.

Q. He came pretty soon afterwards?

A. Oh, I think we was there two weeks.

Q. Well, he did come? A. Yes, he did come.

Q. You know that he had employed Sadie? A. Yes.

Q. To go with you? A. Yes.

Q. So, you and Sadie went out representing Mr. Bartlett to find Minnie Atkins? A. Yes.

Q. Wasn't hunting Tommy at all, didn't have any concern of Tommy at the time you left?

A. Why, we had been trying to find him if there was any Tommy.

Q. But you had failed? A. Yes.

Q. And you had started out to find Minnie? A. Yes.

Q. Now, you had known Minnie as a girl, hadn't you? A. Yes.

Q. You had known her down in this country? A. Yes.

Q. You had known her at Carlisle? A. Yes.

Q. You had seen her sister Nancy? A. Yes.

Q. You had seen others of her kin? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Minnie, so far as you knew, had absolutely disappeared from the earth? A. Yes, Minnie was gone.

Q. None of her kin had trace of her? A. No, sir.

Q. You couldn't find from any of them where that Indian girl had gone? A. No, sir.

Q. She had been gone all of these years and none of them knew anything about her? A. They sure didn't.

Q. Now, then, you started up there with Sadie and you and Sadie double crossed Mr. Bartlett after you got up there?

A. Well, I rather think we did.

Q. In other words when you got up there you and Sadie made up your minds that Bartlett wasn't paying enough for Minnie and there wasn't enough money in it for you, and you would go to somebody else? A. That is a fact.

Q. Now, Betty you was in this case for money?

A. Well, I was trying to get it.

Q. And you were in it for the dollars and cents?

A. That is what I was trying to get.

Q. And when you got up there and saw Minnie Atkins you recognized her? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did she recognize you? A. No, sir, she didn't.

Q. Now, you had been to school with her how long?

A. Oh, I don't remember, I think we was a year and a half at Tullehassee.

Q. How long did she know you down in this country?

A. Well, we saw one another off and on once and a while when we were little folks.

Q. For years? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You knew her as soon as you saw her? A. Yes, sir.

Q. But she didn't know you? A. She didn't know me.

Q. You made yourself known? A. Yes.

Q. And you talked a little about Tullehassee? A. Yes.

Q. You talked about your Carlisle days and your school days together, and you talked over old acquaintances, didn't you, while you were there? A. Yes.

Q. And you asked her about Tullehassee, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And she said to you, I haven't any Tommy, and you said to her, Minnie, keep quiet on that, didn't you?

A. Yes, I said that.

Q. You said, Minnie, don't you tell that; didn't you, because there is money in it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then, the first thing you did after you met this girl you had known was to persuade her to practice a fraud, wasn't it? A. Well, kind of, yes.

Q. And you went up there and persuaded her to tell a falsehood for money, didn't you?

A. She didn't need much persuading, very much.

Q. Well, I understand that is your position in it, and I have no doubt you think that; but as a matter of fact the first thing you did was to offer her money to tell a lie?

A. No, I didn't tell her that. I just told her to keep still.

Q. You told her not to say there wasn't a Tommy?

A. Yes, I said that.

Q. And you told her if she would suppress the truth, she would get money, didn't you? A. Yes.

Q. You and Sadie traveled around then through the country considerable, didn't you; you and Sadie went around from place to place? A. Where was that?

Q. After you got out there? A. Seattle?

Q. Yes? A. No.

Q. Did you just put up at the Hotel and stay there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Sadie became the first lieutenant?

A. I guess she did.

Q. The general manager?

A. She was kind of managing.

Q. And you were sitting back in the hotel and receiving reports from her from time to time, wasn't you?

A. Well, I don't know.

Q. Well, she did come to see you?

A. Oh, yes, she was there every day trying to find out if my man from Oklahoma was there yet. That is what was worrying Sadie.

Q. Sadie said she could make a Tommy? A. Yes.

Q. Yes, she could build up one at that time? A. Yes.

Q. Wouldn't be any trouble for her to make a Tommy and if you stayed out there and went through the matters— You saw Captain MacNab? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Captain MacNab wouldn't let Minnie sign this Page Lease, would he? A. No.

Q. And the reason he wouldn't do it was that he was trying to protect Minnie's interest? A. I think so.

Q. He thought that the Page interests, or the Long interests, hadn't offered enough money for it, and his idea was that it was a large thing and he was going to get the most money for Minnie; isn't that true?

Mr. German: May it please the Court, I object on the ground that we were precluded from having the conversation with Captain MacNab on counsels objection.

The Court: That testimony was admitted. There was certain conversations of Captain MacNab that were inquired about that the Court excluded.

Mr. German: Yes, sir, and that concerned the negotiations, or rather the conversations between the witness and Captain MacNab relating to the very matter that counsel is asking about as I remember.

The Court: Well, if counsel wants to open that up, that opens the field for you.

Mr. Stuart: No, your Honor, I don't care anything about it, except this: To permit this witness to state that Captain MacNab stated to her that Minnie shouldn't sign that deed. Now, I have a right to state what Captain MacNab said in relation to that statement.

The Court: You may ask her.

Mr. German: We except.

Q. Now, didn't Captain MacNab say the reason he wouldn't let Minnie sign that deed, that he thought it was worth more, and he was going to investigate?

A. Yes, Captain MacNab said this after I had talked to him a long time, he says: "I see a chance that we can make some more money out of this", and he said "I am not going to let Minnie sign this." He told me he had been down to Fort Reno and he knew something of the oil country, and he says: "I think we can get some money out of it and I want to get some myself."

Q. Do you mean to say he said he wanted to make something himself? A. He certainly said that.

Q. Did you know he was trustee at the time?

A. I did not. I knew he was a Captain.

Q. You knew he was a captain of the Army?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, Betty, after you left there, you came on down to Tulsa didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You came on down to Tulsa. Did Sadie stay?

A. I left Sadie at Denver.

Q. Going which way, coming back or going?

A. I don't know, I quit her at the depot.

Q. Were you going out? A. I was coming this way.

Q. Was Sadie coming too?

A. She and H. U. Bartlett and me made the trip from Seattle to Denver and at the depot I left.

Q. When you and Sadie and Mr. Bartlett got to Denver, did Mr. Bartlett know then that you and Sadie had double crossed him? A. Why, I think he did.

Q. Did he still want to retain Sadie's services?

A. He seemed to.

Q. Did you then quit Mr. Bartlett? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And came on home? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, when you went up to Leavenworth, you say you saw Dennis Jones? A. I did.

Q. Dennis said that he had never known a Minnie Atkins?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Rube Smith said he had never known a Minnie Atkins? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, I want to ask you this: Didn't Sadie James tell you time and again that she never knew Minnie Atkins?

A. Well, I don't think she did.

Q. Didn't she tell you she didn't know her?

A. Well, no, I can't tell you that she did.

Q. What did she say about that?

A. She said she had lived in Leavenworth and knew everybody there, and I don't remember whether she said she didn't or did.

Q. She didn't claim to you that she had ever known Minnie Atkins? A. I don't think she did.

Q. She told you——

A. The fact of it is, I can't remember of but one person in Leavenworth or around there that told me they ever knew the Minnie Atkins or Indian Minnie. There was a Mary Atkins, but not the girl that worked for George Hyde.

Q. As a matter of fact, when you went to Leavenworth, the best information you could get was that there never was an Indian Minnie there? A. Yes, that is about what I got.

Q. And you reported that no Indian Minnie ever lived in Leavenworth? A. That I knew she had lived there.

Q. But you couldn't get any information?

A. Not at the time.

Q. Everybody said she had never lived there? A. Yes.

Q. Who else did you go to see—— Who else told you she never lived there? A. I can't recall the names.

Q. You can't recall? A. No, I saw too many people.

Q. You saw a good many people. And you say that Dennis said he could prove that hell was on ice?

A. No, that hell was an ice box.

Q. And you say Dennis said that he could prove that—what was it, that Hell was on ice, or something?

A. No, that Hell was an ice-box.

Q. That was Hell was an ice-box? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he said that he could prove that all the way from bankers down to niggers? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is the sort of reputation he gave his town, did he? Did Rube Smith make any remark of that kind?

A. No, I don't remember; Rube didn't have much to say.

Q. Rube didn't have much to say? A. No, sir.

Q. Well, you fell down on your information there; you didn't get any information there satisfactory?

A. I did afterwards.

Q. Well, on that trip? A. No, I didn't then.

Q. And you came on back home?

A. No, I came on over to Kansas City.

Q. Now, Mrs. Mann, I will ask you—Mr. Long, when he employed you, and Mr. Page, when he employed you and paid you, they never told you at any time to get anybody to swear a lie, did they, Mrs. Mann?

A. Well, they tried to get me to go to Fort Worth—I mean Leavenworth, to establish Tommy's birth; they didn't come out and say they wanted me to get someone to swear lies or anything of that kind.

Q. They tried to get you to establish his birth? A. Yes.

Q. But they didn't try to get you to go and get any perjured testimony, did they? A. No, they didn't do that.

Q. When you went to find Minnie, they asked you to find a real Minnie? A. Yes, sir, well identified.

Q. And told you not to bring any Minnie at all unless you knew it was the real Minnie?

Q. That was what Frank Long said; said to find Minnie Atkins well identified. He never said get anybody else or anything of that kind.

Q. But he never at any time tried to get you to get anybody to do any false swearing in the case, did he Betty?

A. No, I won't say that.

Q. You wouldn't say that. And they paid you for your services and you compromised, I know that.

A. Yes, I compromised.

Q. But they paid you for your services and that service you did for them was to go to Seattle and find the real Minnie Atkins, wasn't it? A. Yes, sir.

Cross Examination by Mr. Hanford.

Q. Betty, when you were out at Seattle, you say you saw Minnie? A. I did.

Q. Where did you see her? A. Seen her at her house.

Q. Seen her at her house? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see her more than once?

A. No, I only had one conversation with her. Well, I saw her twice but I only had one conversation with her.

Q. You saw her twice? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you see her the first time?

A. Sitting on her porch.

Q. You had no conversation with her at that time?

A. No, sir.

Q. You just walked up the walk above her house and saw her sitting there and you identified her as Minnie Atkins, did you?

A. Yes, sir, I thought she was—I am pretty positive that she was the right one.

Q. That is about a half or three quarters of a block from the sidewalk, is it not, from her house?

A. Oh, I don't remember how far it is.

Q. It is down the hill, below the sidewalk, away, isn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And after you saw her sitting there, you went back to town, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did you know where she lived?

A. There was one of the soldier boys that told me; showed me the house.

Q. Showed you house? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Betty, the next day you say saw her again?

A. The next morning I think it was.

Q. The next morning? What day was it you saw her sitting on the porch? A. Well, I don't know what day it was.

Q. What day did you arrive out there?

A. I don't know the date of the month but I think it was on about Thursday, I am not sure.

Q. You think you arrived in Seattle?

A. Yes, sir, I wouldn't be sure; I don't remember.

Q. You arrived the same day that Sadie did, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember how many days after you arrived there that you saw her sitting on the porch?

A. It was the same evening.

Q. The same evening. Where was Sadie?

A. I don't know; Sadie had gone away.

Q. Sadie had gone away. Then the next day, you went out there and saw her again, did you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where was Sadie that day?

A. Well, I think Sadie had gone to Spokane, or Fort Wright, they called it.

Q. You know where she had gone?

A. Only what she told me.

Q. Only what she told you?

A. I know that she was away, that is all.

Q. So you saw Minnie before Sadie ever did see her, is that right? A. I think so.

Q. Before she ever found her, is that a fact?

A. Well, if she had found her, I didn't know it; not to my knowledge.

Q. Then you talked to Minnie before Sadie ever did talk to her, didn't you?

A. I don't know; I suppose so. I didn't know when Sadie talked to her.

Q. Didn't Minnie tell you that she had seen Sadie?

A. She did not.

Q. But you saw her in her own house?

A. Yes, sir, in her own house.

Q. How long were you there? A. About an hour.

Q. Have a long conversation?

A. Oh, I don't know; it might have been two hours—I don't remember.

Q. Well, it was an hour or two—you had a visit?

A. Quite a little while.

Q. You sat right down and visited with her?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In her own house? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Betty, will you describe that house?

The Court: Why is that material to go into that description? Let's not get any detail in here that is unnecessary.

Mr. Hanford: If Your Honor please, we contend and will show that Betty Mann had no conversation with Minnie Atkins.

The Court: Alright.

Mr. Hanford: And for that purpose it is cross examination.

The Court: Alright.

Q. Will you describe that house, Betty?

The Court: It is your contention that she never visited the house at all?

Mr. Hanford: Absolutely.

A. Well, I can't describe the house.

Q. Do you remember anything about the house?

A. Well, no, I remember only that there was a big porch on it—quite a porch.

Q. Quite a porch on the outside?

A. Yes, I don't know what way it faced because I was turned around up there and I don't know whether it was north or east.

Q. Do you remember how far you had to go down the hall before you got in the house?

A. You don't have to go down no hall to get in the house.

Q. Well, do you remember how long it was?

A. No, I don't.

Q. How large a room were you in when you visited Minnie?

A. Well, I didn't go in the room to visit Minnie.

Q. Where did you talk to her? In the hall?

A. On the porch.

Q. On the porch? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What do you mean when you said you went into the house, then? A. Well, I didn't go into the house.

Q. You went to see Captain MacNab while you were out there, did you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You testified before on cross examination on the Receivership hearing in this case, did you not?

A. I testified before in something, I don't remember what it was.

Q. Betty, when you saw Frank Long out there, did you tell him about your conversation with Minnie?

A. Yes, I think—why sure I did.

Q. You told him what she said?

A. Yes, I told him what she said; I think I did, I am not sure that I did. I wouldn't be sure about that; I don't know whether I talked to him before he went out there or afterwards.

Q. But you did tell him that you had seen Minnie and talked to her? A. I sure did.

Q. And that was at the hotel where you stayed?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you told him what she had told you?

A. Yes, sir, and he told me not to tell—to tell everybody that I hadn't seen Minnie Atkins because he said that they would claim that I had framed her up, and for me to not tell anyone else, deny ever having seen Minnie while I was there, and I did so afterwards.

Q. When you returned to Tulsa did you tell Mr. Josey that you had talked with Minnie?

A. I don't think—think that I told him that I did not.

Q. You told him that you did not?

A. I think that is what I told him because I had——

Q. Did you tell Captain MacNab that you had talked with Minnie? A. I don't remember that I did.

Q. Did you tell him that you had not talked wth Minnie?

A. I don't know that I told him anything about it.

Q. Betty, isn't it a fact that you told Frank Long when you saw him out there that you had not talked with Minnie because you were afraid to talk with her, that you didn't try to see her and talk to her because you were afraid that Mr. Bartlett would then suspect you of being the one of double-crossing him? A. I should say I did not.

Q. You didn't tell him that? A. No, indeed, I didn't.

Q. Didn't you tell Mr. Josey that same thing when you came back to Tulsa? A. No, I didn't.

Q. When you saw Captain MacNab at his house, didn't you tell him that you didn't see Minnie and talk to Minnie, and that you had come to ask him if she was the Minnie Atkins?

A. Well, I should say I didn't.

Q. Didn't you tell him that you had come out there to identify her but that you had not been able to see her and talk to her, and that you wanted to see him to make sure that she was Minnie Atkins? A. No, sir, I didn't.

Q. Before you went back to Tulsa?

A. No, sir, I didn't. I went out there to see Captain MacNab but to persuade him to let Minnie sign the lease for Frank Long.

Q. I will ask you, Betty, if on re-cross examination, at the Receivership hearing in this case here and in this Court, on the 27th day of February, 1915, when you were recalled for further cross examination, if you didn't testify as follows —reading from the transcript of the record of that proceeding at page 231—just one preliminary question. What time of the day, was it that you went to Minnie's house as you say?

A. Along in the morning, I don't remember what hour.

Q. I will ask you, following my previous question, if you didn't testify as follows: "Question: I will ask you if you didn't state to Mr. Page in his office at Tulsa when you returned from Seattle, in substance, that you saw Minnie Atkins sitting on her porch, that you recognized her and knew it was her. That you didn't go and talk to her because you were afraid that Mr. Bartlett, or somebody, would think that you had turned him and that you never spoke to her while you were out in Seattle." To which you answered, "No, sir, I didn't tell him that I hadn't talked to her." Is that your testimony?

A. I don't remember what my testimony was, now.

Q. And further, "Question. I will ask you if you didn't make the same statement to Mr. Josey at approximately the same time." "Answer". "Yes sir, I did." Did you so testify at that time and that place?

A. I don't remember what my testimony was before.

Q. And further, "Question. I will now ask you further if you didn't make the same statement to Mr. Long at some time during those first few days? Answer. I think I did." Did you so testify at that time and place?

A. I can't remember what my testimony was at that time.

Q. Which is right? Did you tell Mr. Long of your conversation or did you tell him that you had not talked to Minnie Atkins?

A. I did tell—I told Mr. Long on the start that I had not talked to Minnie but I afterward told him that I had, and he told me not to tell anyone else that I had talked to Minnie; just to deny that because they would say that I had framed her up, and not to tell anyone else that I had talked to her, and therefore, I told Mr. Page and Mr. Josey when I came back that I didn't talk to her. I remember that.

Q. I will further ask you if at the same time and at the same place, if you didn't testify as follows, reading question from page 231 of the record, "Question. When did you see her the next time? Answer. The next day. Question. Where? A. In the house; in her home." Did you so testify at that time?

A. I don't know; I might have. I could have been in her home whether it was on the porch or not, it was at her home.

Q. Then, you mean to say that you talked to her for approximately two hours and you did not go in the house?

A. I talked to Minnie on the porch—on her porch.

Q. What time of day was that?

A. Well, it was in the morning; I don't know what hour.

Q. How early?

A. Well, I just can't tell you how early it was; along in the morning, though.

Q. Don't you know what time you got up and went out there? A. No, sir, it is too long back.

Q. How long did it take you to get out there?

A. I don't know; maybe ten or fifteen minutes, maybe thirty.

Q. You went out on the street car, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir, I sure did.

Q. It is a long ride, isn't it? A. Yes, sir, a long ride.

Q. And didn't it take you about an hour to make that trip? A. Well, I don't know; it might.

Q. Didn't it take you exactly an hour and ten minutes?

A. I didn't time myself, Mr. Hanford, and I couldn't possibly tell you.

Q. Betty, after you had this settlement with Mr. Page, when was the next time that you got into this case? Who employed you next?

A. Oh, I can't remember now; I would have to study that up. I think Mr. Wrightsman, I am not sure.

Q. Mr. Wrightsman? A. I wouldn't [] sure about it now.

Q. Mr. Wrightsman was a partner of Mr. Nixon's, wasn't he? A. No, I don't think they were partners?

A. He wanted to find Tommy Atkins.

Q. And you found one, didn't you?

A. No, I didn't find one.

Q. Did he find one?

A. They found one somewhere south.

Q. And you tried to help them put him over?

A. No, I just went out and got all the evidence I could find where anybody would say he was Tommy, and so on.

Q. You knew he wasn't Tommy Atkins, though?

A. Well, I didn't think he was the right one; he might have been Tommy Atkins but I didn't think he was the right Tommy.

Q. You knew he wasn't?

A. No, I didn't know who he was.

Q. You was just collecting evidence to support him? Who was he? A. I can't tell you that, I don't know.

Q. You was paid for that? A. Yes, I was paid.

Q. That is all you was after—just the money, wasn't it?

A. Well, I was trying to make some money like all the balance of you.

Q. And you were willing to get evidence for that Tommy as well as any other? A. Just as well.

Q. After your conviction you testified to, were you released on bond? Weren't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who went on your bond?

A. Mr. George Evans for one man, and Tony Clark for another.

Q. Is that the same bond that is still up? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Never been changed? A. No sir.

Cross Examination by Mr. Maxey.

Q. Mrs. Mann, your first employment by Mr. Bartlett was in 1912 when you got that deed at Lawrence, Kansas?

A. Yes, that was the first I worked for Bartlett.

Q. Now, how long after that until you were employed again or did you remain in his employ continuously?

A. Well, I don't remember; there was quite a while though, something like about a year, I think, that I didn't do anything for him.

Q. After you got that deed, it rested for something like a year? A. I think so.

Q. Now, isn't it a fact, Mrs. Mann, your next employment was when that suit was filed in Sapulpa by Nancy Atkins against Bartlett, and the Gypsy Oil Company?

A. Well, I don't remember. I think that we—I went to Kansas City before that. I know that Bartlett wired to me while I was in Kansas City to come by Nowata and bring Minnie down—Nancy, rather, down to Sapulpa.

Q. And you did bring her down? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And she testified while she was there, didn't she?

A. I think she did.

Q. That was after the suit was brought?

A. Well, probably was, I don't remember about that.

Q. The suit was filed on July 23rd, 1913?

A. Well, that might be; I don't remember about that.

Q. It was the time she testified up in McDougal and Lytle's office, wasn't it?

A. Well, I didn't hear her, I don't know; I knew she was there to testify for Mr. Bartlett for something but I don't know where.

Q. Now, you was employed to look up Tommy after the trial of that case, wasn't it, by Mr. Page or Mr. Long?

A. Well, I don't know when that trial was; I don't remember.

Q. The trial was on the 26th of the February, 1914; commenced on the 26th of February, 1914.

A. Well, I had been working for Mr. Bartlett before that because along the first of January——

Q. Yes, you commenced working for Mr. Bartlett the second time, after this suit was brought when you brought Nancy down there?

A. Yes, but I was working for Mr. Bartlett before I brought down there, I had taken Harvey and Mr. Whitehead and Edward Bartlett, and Mr. Rodgers, we all went to Wichita, and to Kansas City, and was up there, something like two weeks, I think, and then I think that Mr. Bartlett wired that he wanted Nancy down there, and I came on back home and brought Harvey—he was very near of age. I think his birthday was the 19th of February, and I got—came by and got Nancy and brought her down there for a witness or something; I don't know just what that was.

Q. Now, when was it? You remember when the trial was, don't you?

A. Well, I don't believe that I do. I don't believe I do.

Q. You was there, wasn't you?

A. I don't believe I was there.

Q. Wasn't you in the courtroom when the trial was going on? A. What trial? I don't remember.

Q. The trial between Nancy Atkins and H. U. Bartlett and the Gypsy Oil Company at Sapulpa?

A. I might have been, I don't remember.

Q. Don't you remember that you was brought in there during the trial and that Mr. Gresham, a witness from Lawrence, Kansas, identified you? A. Yes, I remember that.

Q. You was there, then, wasn't you?

A. Yes, I remember that.

Q. Now, was it after that that you started on your trip west to hunt up Minnie?

A. Yes, it was way long up in the summer.

Q. In the summer afterwards? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember the month?

A. I think it was the last of May.

Q. The last of May after the trial was had at Sapulpa, in February? A. Yes.

Cross Examination by Mr. Cobb.

Q. This Tommy Atkins, from whom a lease was taken to Nixon that you referred to a moment ago, where was he located?

A. I think—I am not sure, I don't know only what Mr. Nixon told me.

Q. Wasn't he located in Texas?

A. He told me at Sweetwater, Texas. I just got his word for it.

Q. Sweetwater, Texas; you don't know for yourself?

A. I don't.

Q. Did you see him?

A. I have seen him several times since.

Q. Where did you see him? A. At Tulsa.

Q. Where does he live now? A. I don't know.

Q. Did you see him around Tulsa frequently?

A. Not for the last three or four months.

Q. Do you know of him going by any other name?

A. I do not.

Q. I wish you would describe the appearance of this party. A. Oh, I can't describe people.

Q. Is he—what was his color?

A. Oh, he was of dark complexion, I think.

Q. Look like an Indian, or a mulatto negro?

A. Looked like he might be an Indian.

Q. Might be an Indian. About what would he weigh?

A. Oh, I just couldn't tell. I don't know about just looking at anyone—about what they weigh.

Mr. Cobb: I will ask the stenographer to mark this photograph as defendant H Carter's exhibit A-1.

Q. I present you a photograph marked ad H. Carter's exhibit A-1, and ask you if that is the Tommy Atkins—photograph of the Tommy Atkins referred to in your examination a while ago? A. What was the question, please?

Q. Is that a photograph of the party referred to a while ago that made the Wrightsman and Nixon lease? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is a photograph of him? A. That is him.

Mr. Cobb: We will offer this now, or later on either.

The Court: Just as you choose.

Mr. Cobb: We offer defendant H. Carter's Exhibit A-1.

The Court: Which this witness says is a photograph of the Tommy Atkins which made the Wrightsman and Nixon lease. It may be admitted.

A. I don't know that he made the lease; they had him there.

The Court: Well, he is identified with that lease?

Mr. Cobb: That is all.

Mr. Hanford: I would like to ask counsel for the Government, if they will admit that the transcript of the Receivership proceeding as far as the testimony of Betty Mann is concerned, that she was cross examined by me as I have read into the record in my question.

Mr. German: I make this suggestion; that we have a mutual agreement that that transcript as to the record of any witness who either of us desire, and may be entitled to use, is a correct transcription of the testimony taken at the Receivership hearing.

Mr. Hanford: Not necessarily the evidence but that the part quoted from is according to the way it is quoted.

Mr. German: I make this proposition; that we agree that that transcript as printed and held in your hand or any copy of it is a true transcription of the testimony of any witness whose testimony it purports to contain. Then if you want to introduce testimony, if we want to introduce testimony of a witness, if it is admissible we can.

Mr. Hanford: I want to save the introducing of this record if it is not necessary.

The Court: I understand it is admitted that this transcript in the Receivership case correctly states the evidence taken in that case and that it is not necessary to put the stenographer on the stand.

Mr. Hanford: What I would like to get at, is, if they admit that the witness testified as I read at that time and place.

Mr. German: I think that is so but there might be a little discrepency in the reading.

Mr. Stuart: Your Honor, I ask that it be understood that that portion that we read the questions and answers be introduced in the case.

The Court: I see no trouble about that if that proof is correctly read and I presume it is.

Mr. German: Now, Your Honor, we don't consent—in other words, they have not begun to introduce their proof. If they want to introduce that as their evidence when they reach it, I will say now that I will agree that you read it correctly.

Mr. Hanford: That is exactly what I am doing, Mr. German, offering it in evidence to save producing the stenographer, to save putting the record in the case.

The Court: Let's see if I understand you. You have interrogated this witness with regard to certain portions of that Receivership transcript. At the time you interrogated the witness, I assumed that you were laying a predicate to introduce some testimony here in that transcript different from what the testimony had been on the stand.

Mr. Hanford: Yes, sir.

The Court: I apprehend there is no serious objection. I think probably you had better indicate the portion of the record that you want to offer as a part of her cross examination, or impeaching her examination.

Mr. Hanford: I will then offer in evidence at this time, pages 231 and 232 of the printed transcript of record in the Receivership hearing of this case.

The Court: That is sufficiently identified; it may be admitted.

Q. Bettie, would you know Minnie Atkins now if you would see her? A. I would know her.
Q. Is she in the Court room?
A. I haven't looked. Yes, sir, there she sits.
Q. Point her out? A. There she is.

Mr. German: Will you stand up Minnie? Is that her?

A. That is her.
Q. Betty, did you have any conversation with Nancy Atins at or after the trial that Judge Maxey asked you about in the Brady Hotel at Tulsa? A. Yes, sir.
Q. Where in that hotel?
A. I don't remember the room, Mr. German, but we were stopping at the hotel.
Q. Did the conversation relate to Tommy? A Yes, sir.
Q. Tell the conversation exactly what it was?
A. Well, Nancy was laying there and says, "Bettie, what a fool we have been;" she says: "Why didn't we let me claim that child and make some money, and we wouldn't have hunted up Minnie;" says, "I could have been Tommy's mother just as well and we could have had a lot of money now."
Q. Betty, at the time you and Mr. Long had the first conversation about your employment by Mr. Page at Sapulpa, what was said about your conviction, if anything, about the trouble you were in?
A. Why, Mr. Long said that he knew that I had trouble and that he was——well, had a good deal of influence and so did Fred Cook and Mr. Page, and they would help me out of my trouble and would pay me more than Mr. Bartlett.
Q. Did Mr. Long know at that time that you were working for Mr. Bartlett? A. Yes, he knew it.
Q. Were you out on bond at that time? A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did Mr. Page or Mr. Long have anything to do with the making of bond for you? A. None whatever.
Q. They didn't make one for you? A. No, sir.
Q. When were you to respond to the Court on that bond?
A. Whenever they called me.
Q. Did they have anything to do or claim to have anything to do with the failure of the Court to call you up?
A. Not that I know of, I don't think so.

Q. Did Mr. Page have any conversation with you about that matter? A. Yes, several times.

Q. Several times? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the conversation?

A. Well, he would say every day that Frank must get busy and get that fixed up.

Q. What fixed up?

A Get my case fixed up, disposed of.

Q. Now, when was it he had any conversation of that kind?

A. Well, I can't tell the date of it, Mr. German.

Q. Before or after you went to Seattle?

A. After I came back from Seattle; I never did talk with Mr. Page untiil I got back; never had talked with him.

Q. How long had you lived in Tulsa?

A. Oh, ever since Tulsa started.

Q. Where was that conviction of yours?

A. Tulsa County, Tulsa.

Q. What court? A. Superior.

Q. What were you convicted of? A. Forgery.

Q. Was there anything in the newspapers about that at the time? A. Oh, yes, the news papers were full of it.

The Court: What forgery case was that? That wasn't the Thomas Atkins?

A. No, that was——

The Court: Or the Minnie Atkins suit?

A. No.

Q. It wasn't the Minnie Atkins deed taken at Lawrence, Kansas? A. No.

Q. Nor anything connected with the Atkins case?

A. No. I don't remember the name now.

Q. Now, at Seattle when you first went out, you say the house of Minnie having been pointed out to you by a soldier, you went past her house but didn't go in and see her the first time? A. No, sir.

Q. Why didn't you go in and see her?

A. Well, I don't know why.

Q. Was there anyone around the house?

A. Well, just as I come back past the house there was a man came in.

Q. Where was Minnie?

A. Sitting on the porch rocking.

Q. How far from the house were you?

A. Well, I couldn't tell the distance, there was a path running up from the street car, what I would call the front of the house; I don't know which direction.

Q. It was the next day you went out there and went in the house? A. Next morning.

Q. What kind of a house is that, frame or brick?

A. Oh, it is a frame.

Q. One or two story? A. Just one story.

Q. How many rooms?

A. I couldn't tell you, I wasn't in the house.

Q. Where were you about the house? A. On the porch.

Q. Oh, that is where you talked with Minnie?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that porch on the front, or on the side or in the rear? A. Well, I would call it the front.

Q. Well, are the streets well marked there? A. No, sir.

Q. Any pavement?

A. No, just side walk and runs up out of board.

Q. Now, in that conversation I wish you would state whether the matter of drawing of money at the 1895 payment was talked about by you or Minnie?

A. Minnie told me that she drew some money that didn't belong——

Mr. Stuart: Now, your Honor, that is not proper redirect examination. He didn't bring that out the first time.

The Court: Well, this is redirect now, anything that Minnie stated she may answer.

Mr. Stuart: Well, your Honor will give us the right to cross.

The Court: Sure.

Q. You say she said she had drawn for somebody that wasn't entitled?

A. Yes, had drawn for somebody that wasn't entitled to it, and that she was afraid of the Government; that was the reason she had never wrote back and never come back to see her children.

Q. And that was the reason she hadn't written back or come back to see her children? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did she call any name?

A. Well, I don't think she did, she might have told me, it has been a good while back and I can't remember all these things.

Q. Did she say how many she had drawn for?

A. No, sir, I think she told me she drew for her sister, I am not sure, I wouldn't be sure of that.

Q. Now, you say that Mr. Long told you in the conversation he had with you after he had been out to the house and come back, and while you were at the hotel, not to tell anybody you had talked to Minnie?

A. Yes, sir, he certainly did.

Q. And after Mr. Long had gone, you had some conversation with Captain MacNab? A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. Now, where was Captain MacNab's house?

A. Well, it was out at the Fort.

Q. Inside of the Fort Grounds?

A. Yes, sir, several buildings around there, had their names on there, I asked some one where to find Captain MacNab and Lieutenant McCombs, and they told me their name would be on the house.

Q. Where was this house of Captain MacNab's with reference to the main entrance to the Fort Grounds?

A. Well, I don't know that I can tell you, Mr. German.

Q. Was it far away?

A. Well, not so very far; might have been a couple of blocks, I wouldn't say.

Q. And where was Minnie's house with reference to the entrance to the grounds?

A. Well, it was over the other way.

Q. On the outside? A. Yes, sir.

Q. About how far away?

A. Well, I don't know, it could have been a quarter of a mile, I couldn't tell you about those distances.

Q. Were there other houses in the same block?

A. Yes, sir, there were other houses there.

Q. What did Captain MacNab say to you, if anything, about what Minnie had said to him?

> Mr. Stuart: Your Honor, we object to that, because your Honor knows that I limited my questions to what Captain MacNab said about not letting Minnie make this lease.
>
> The Court: She may answer.
>
> Mr. Stuart: We save an exception.

A. I don't remember that he said anything.

Q. Did he say anything about having talked with Minnie?

A. Well, I think that he did, I wouldn't be sure.

Q. Did he say anything about what he had been able to get Minnie to say, or what the result of the conversation was?

A. No, he didn't tell me that.

Q. Did he express any view on the question as to whether Minnie had such a child?

> Mr. Stuart: Oh, that is a conclusion, your Honor.

The Court: Well, that would only be so far as Captain MacNab's statement.

Q. Did he state whether he had talked with Minnie?

A. Yes, he had talked to Minnie.

Q. Now, you testified in response to Judge Stuart's question that he said something about getting money out of this himself?

A. Well, he did. And I said to him that I thought the sooner Minnie signed the lease the better it would be; and he said he rather thought so too, "and I think I will have Minnie sign the lease, since you have talked to me, to Charlie Page."

Q. How long were you in conversation with him?

A. Oh, I don't know, a long while, I stayed there all the afternoon and part of the morning; they had dinner while I was there.

Q. Did you have any conversation relating to whether Minnie probably owned the land?

A. Well, I don't know just what I said.

Q. Did he attempt to tell you what Minnie may have said, talk to you about Minnie's case?

A. I don't think that he did. If he did, I don't remember it.

Q. Did he say anything about there being anything wrong, or anything along that line?

A. Well, no, I don't remember that he did—— Oh, he thought there was something wrong, he said he thought it was worth more money; that he knew a little something about the oil country down here; and I think three thousand dollars was what they offered her.

Q. Did he say anything about Tommy or Thomas?

A. Well, now, I don't remember that he did.

Q. After you came back to Tulsa, did you have any conversation with Mr. Page or Mr. Long or Rube Smith and Dennis Jones? A. I don't think that I did.

Q. Did you know of their having employed Rube and Dennis? A. I don't think that I did.

Q. You didn't know it? A. Not that I remember.

Q. Now, you say that you talked with Mr. Page quite a lot about evidence at Leavenworth?

A. Yes, sir, I talked to him so much that I can't remember all that was said.

Q. About evidence. About what period of time would you say was covered by the different conversations you had with him with reference to Leavenworth testimony?

A. Well, we started talking about it after Minnie had been on the stand the first time.

Q. When?

A. At Sapulpa. I don't know when that was, but it was after that.

Q. Well, about what period of time was covered by these different conversation I mean—— How long after that testimony before you had your first conversation?

A. Oh, I think the next day we talked about it.

Q. Then, how soon again did you talk with him?

A. That is it might have been the day after that. I think the next time he called me up and said for me to come over, and said Hanford had gone up to Leavenworth and had found out something about Minnie swearing wrongfully, and about the Hospital record, and said that something had to be done about it; that might have been two or three days after.

Q. Well, were you up to see him frequently?

A. Yes, almost every day.

Q. What for?

A. Trying to get my money, trying to get a settlement with him.

Q. On those occasions, did he talk to you about producing any evidence for him?

A. Why, he wanted to take up the evidence or proof of Tommy's birth; it had to be done he said.

Q. Did he say where he wanted it established?

A. No, he didn't say.

Q. Did he say at what city? A. No.

Q. Did or not he tell you——

A. Well, he wanted me to go up there and see what I could find out; and I told him I couldn't go; and he said he had a nigger woman that would go; and I said to get his nigger.

Q. Did you tell why you wouldn't go?

A. I told him I couldn't find anything before when I was there.

Q. During those conversations what was said about the question as to whether there was a Thomas if anything?

A. It was just generally understood that there wasn't; I can't remember the words that were spoken, but that was the impression.

Q. In the conversation between you and Mr. Page?

A. Always.

Q. How? A. Always.

Q. And he told you that there was a negro that he could get? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know who that negro was?

A. No, I didn't, but I think he did tell me afterwards that it was Sadie.

Mr. German: That is all.

Cross Examination by Mr. Stuart.

Q. You say Minnie said something about drawing money?

A. Yes.

Q. She did tell you that it was not her father that she drew for, didn't she?

A. Well, I don't remember who—— What she told me about who she drew for.

Q. Didn't you testify when I asked you before, that she said that her father had been dead many years and that it wasn't her father?

A. Well, they was talking about the allotment. She said he had been dead too long, didn't say many years, she said too long.

Q. She didn't tell you who she had drawn for?

A. I don't remember, she said she had drawn for several

Q. Just said she had drawn the money? A. Yes, sir.

Q. After you got through with that conversation did you talk to her any further about it?

A. Why, I talked to her quite a lot.

Q. Talked to her quite a lot. When you came back to this country, Betty, and entered on this other engagement for Wrightsman, this Tommy that you were going to send up for him you kept at your house, didn't you, a good while?

A. Tommy?

Q. Yes? A. No, sir.

Q. Didn't you keep somebody at your house that you claimed to be Tommy Atkins?

A. Well, I should say I did not.

Q. You should say you did not?

A. I certainly did not.

Q. Did you ever meet a Tommy that you was going to show up and have a talk with him? A. Never did.

Q. This one you have a picture of, did you see him?

A. I have seen him several times. I met the Tommy that Mr. Nixon had in his office.

Q. You saw that Tommy? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is the one you were going to get the allotment for?

A. I don't know, I wasn't trying to get it, I was helping get all the evidence I could.

Q. For this same Tommy that this is a picture of?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Stuart: That is all.

Redirect Examination by Mr. German.

Q. You found out that wasn't a genuine Tommy?

A. I certainly did.

Mr. Stuart: You didn't quit it for that reason, did you Minnie?

The Court: Any further questions? Stand aside.

(Witness dismissed.)

Mr. German: Your Honor, we desire to ask counsel if they will agree that the transcript of depositions taken at Leavenworth in October, 1914—we all have copies of them—taken by Mr. Page or on his behalf for use in the State Court in the case of——

Mr. Stuart: Well, Mr. German, one of you gentlemen spoke to me about that, and if that is correct, we will make no objection to your not having the stenographer.

Mr. German: Yes, sir. You are not admitting that it is competent but it is identified?

Mr. Stuart: That it is identified.

The Court: You are merely admitting now that this is a correct transcript of those depositions.

Mr. Stuart: Yes, sir.

Mr. German: In the case of Minnie Folk, formerly Minnie Atkins, et al., plaintiff, vs. Nancy Atkins, et al., defendant, No. 3772, District Court of Creek County.

Mr. German: Now, we would like to discharge Mr. Tharp, who was the notary public who took that.

The Court: The notary that was called, gentlemen, to establish these depositions they desire to discharge now.

Mr. Stuart: Your Honor, we are not willing to discharge Mr. Tharp.

Mr. German: Mr. Tharp is court reporter of the District Court at Leavenworth and he says that Court convenes Monday and that he is needed there and it will be——

Mr. Stuart: Well, we will agree that he can go.

The Court: All right, Mr. Tharp may be discharged from further attendance as a witness.

And thereupon, ALICE M. ROBERTSON, was recalled for further direct examination, and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Pinson.

Q. Miss Robertson, you were on the stand a few days ago in this case, were you not? A. I was.

Q. What official position, if any, have you held here in this city?

A. I was United States Inspector, School Supervisor for the Creek Nation from July 20, 1900, to January 8, 1905. After that I was United States Postmaster from 1905 to May 18, 1913.

Q. I call your attention to your testimony of a few days ago, that upon going to Seattle to attempt to identify Minnie Atkins, you were first treated by the Commandant with courtesy and respect, is that true?

A. First, until I said Minnie Atkins, and then he was preturbed.

Q. Was there any further conversation there that seemed to have any effect on his treatment of you?

A. I don't remember until I was asked whether I knew Mr. Chas. Page.

Q. What did you reply?

A. That I did not know him personally.

Q. Was there any further conversation along that line?

A. I said I knew him by reputation but I didn't like him.

Q. From that time, what was the manner of the Commandant toward you?

A. I was persona non grata in that place immediately.

Q. What became of you at that time?

A. A little lieutenant stepped up and wanted to know what business it was of mine and what I wanted.

Mr. Stuart: If the Court please, we object to this testimony. It is immaterial.

The Court: I can't see the relevancy of it.

Mr. German: If the Court please, the testimony of two other witnesses, one in the form of deposition, and the other orally, is to the effect that they were not permitted to see Minnie unless they represented certain interests, and were not permitted to have free intercourse there at that time.

The Court: I suppose then the testimony of Miss Robertson will be that she was not permitted to see Minnie. She has testified she saw her very briefly.

Mr. Pinson: I propose to ask one further question.

Mr. Cruce: Note our exception.

The Court: Exception noted.

Q. After you were at Captain McNab's quarters and Minnie was present, you testified on your former examination that there was some question or suggestion made to you by Minnie—made by you to Minnie which was objected to by her counsel, will you state what that was?

A. I was not allowed to say to Minnie anything that bore upon her life previous to her visit to my house in 1895. Everything after that time was objected to.

Q. Do you remember the occasion of your mentioning something in regard to Tommy? A. I do.

Q. What was that?

A. I had been a witness in having known so many of the Creek people, I had been a witness in a number of cases in which so much definiteness of detail had been required of me that I said, and called attention of the lawyer who was noticing all that I said—because I didn't want to be considered as doing anything under-handed; I said, now Minnie you know you will have to prove when and where this boy died, and her lawyer said then, "Don't answer that." And he said to me, "You must not trouble her with such questions as that."

Mr. Pinson: That is all.

Cross Examination by Mr. Stuart.

Q. Miss Robertson, when you got up there to investigate, you found that this girl, Minnie Atkins, had been in the soldiers service and in the Army service ever since she left here?

A. I know that only by hearsay, but I am not allowed to testify.

Q. Yes, you can, the Judge controls that.

The Court: You may answer the question.

Q. You learned up there that she had been in the Government service all these years, didn't you? A. No, sir.

Q. You learned that she was a soldier's wife, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you were talking to a soldier, what was his name, that soldier you were talking to? A. The Commandant?

Q. Yes? A. His name was Wilson, I think.

Q. He was the head of the whole thing at the Fort? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you were talking to him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he told you when you spoke about Minnie Atkins and Chas. Page, he became cool toward you? A. He did.

Q. And didn't talk any more?

A. He simply told the Orderly to take me over to Captain MacNab's quarters.

Q. And you could talk to Captain MacNab, is that right, he sent you over there to talk to Captain MacNab?

A. Sent me there to wait.

Q. To talk to Captain MacNab, that is what you went there for? A. I am not definite upon that point.

Redirect Examination by Mr. Pinson.

Q. Have you seen Minnie recently, Miss Robertson?

A. Day before yesterday.

Q. Did you see her in the Court room, can you identify her? A. Sitting right over there.

Mr. Pinson: Will you stand up please.

Mr. Stuart: What is the use in her standing up when she has been identified?

The Court: Well, she may sit down.

The Witness: Your Honor, may I make one little statement?

The Court: With regard to your testimony?

The Witness: With reference to the soldiers of the United States. That I show reverence to all of them, that I always do to every one who wears a United States uniform.

(Witness dismissed.)

And thereupon, J. B. WHITE was called as a witness for and on behalf of the Government, and having been first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. German.

Q. What is your name? A. J. B. White?

Q. Where do you live, Mr. White? A. Coweta, Oklahoma.

Q. Mr. White, were you in Sapulpa, Oklahoma, in the District Court in July, 1914, when Minnie Atkins was there?

A. I was.

Q. State whether or not she testified? A. She did.

Q. Who was she produced as a witness for?

A. Witness for Mr. Page.

Q. Who examined her on the witness stand?

A. Rice and Lyons.

Q. Who were they representing? A. Mr. Page.

Q. Who else examined her? A. McGraw.

Q. Who was he representing?

A. The Gypsy Oil Company.

Q. Was Mr. Hanford there? A. Who?

Q. Mr. Hanford? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he examine her? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was Mr. Gresham there?

A. Mr. Gresham and Judge Rosser and I don't remember whether Judge Maxey was there or not.

Q. The men you have named are lawyers? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was Mr. Gresham representing?

A. He was representing at that time myself, Dr. Carter, Selzer and Fowler.

Q. You were defending under the Nancy Atkins side of the case? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, did Minnie testify there with relation to Tommy Atkins? A. She did.

Q. What did she say as to her children?

A. How is that?

Q. What did she say as to what children she had had?

A. She said that she had had four children.

Q. Did she say where they were born?

A. She said that the first one, Thomas Atkins, was born in Leavenworth.

Q. Did she say at what place? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where?

A. Said it was born in the Sisters Hospital.

Q. Did she say whether she had had any other children at Leavenworth? A. She said only had one.

Q. Where did she say the other three were born?

A. Fort Logan, Colorado.

Q. Was she asked as to who she had worked for at Leavenworth? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did she answer? A. Yes, she did.

Q. Who did she say she first worked for there?

A. She went to work for Mr. Hyde.

Q. Did she state who she had worked for next after that?

A. Mr. Grodevant.

Q. Did she say who she had worked for after that?

A. First Lieutenant—— I declare I don't believe I can call his name.

Q. To refresh your memory, was it Stafford?

A. Stafford, yes, sir.

Q. Did she say when she had given birth to Thomas, with reference to when she went to work for Hyde?

A. Yes, she had worked three months for Mr. Hyde; she stayed at Grodevants for a year and six months, and went then to work for Lieutenant—went to this lieutenant and worked there something like a year or a little over and she had to quit on being heavy with child and went to the hospital.

Q. And gave birth to Thomas? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did she or not give the name of the father of Thomas as claimed by her?

A. She did not to my hearing. I heard her refuse to do it.

Q. State whether or not she gave testimony as to the names of the other three children? A. She did.

Q. What names did she say they had?

A. The second one was a girl, and I won't be certain what she called her. The two next ones were both boys, named Charlie and Harvey Harrison.

Q. Did she say what became of the girl? A. She died.

Q. Did she say what became of the boys, Charlie and Harvey?

A. Why, she brought them back here to the Territory in 1895 I believe.

Q. Did she say what had become of Tommy that was born in the Sisters Hospital?

A. She said she left him when he was about six months old, that she got a woman to take care of him and keep him. That after she left Fort Logan, Colorado, and went to Michigan, I believe it was, she got a letter from this lady stating that he was dead.

Q. Did she say anything about whether she had seen him since she left Leavenworth?

A. Never had saw him since she left him when he was about six months old.

Cross Examination by Mr. Stuart.

Q. What connection have you got with the Nancy Atkins claim? A. I am one of the first ones that obtained a lease.

Q. You then have got an interest in sustaining the Nancy Atkins claim? A. I have.

Q. And you are claiming that Nancy was the mother of the real Tommy? A. I do.

Q. That is your claim. You were present and heard this testimony? A. How is that?

Q. You were present and heard this testimony? A. I was.

Q. Remember it with great distinctness? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did she say she had a boy named Tommy?

A. She did.

Q. And that boy was born at Granny Letcher's?

A. No, sir. Afterwards when she had the examination in the lawyer's office, she said she had the child at Granny Letcher's.

Q. But when you heard her first she said that she had the child at an old colored woman's?

A. That was her second testimony.

Redirect Examination by Mr. German.

Q. Now, this second testimony, when was it, where was that given?

A. Taken, if I am not mistaken, and I don't think I am, in Rice & Lyons office.

Q. In Tulsa?

A. Mr. German, I am not positive whether it was in Tulsa or Sapulpa.

Q. When was it taken?

A. This first testimony was taken along in the summer following the trial we had at Sapulpa.

Q. You had a trial in January, 1914?

A. February I think.

Q. That was before Minnie was found?

A. Yes, sir. Then that summer following, Minnie was brought in and her first testimony was taken.

Q. In open court?

A. Yes, sir. Then after she gave a deposition along in the fall sometime.

Q. In Rice and Lyons office?

A. Yes, sir, in Rice and Lyons office.

Q. Now, it was the second—— Then, two or three months after her testimony at Sapulpa that she gave the second testimony? A. Must have been.

Q. That you refer to? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When she stated that the child was born at Granny Letcher's? A. Yes, sir.

> Mr. German: Now, Your Honor, we will not go more into that Tulsa testimony because we didn't intend to prove it at this time.

Cross Examination by Mr. Hanford.

Q. Mr. White, you testified that Minnie Atkins was asked the name of the father of Thomas Atkins and refused to disclose it. Isn't it true that she was asked this and it was objected to on the ground that she had previously testified that the child was not legitimate and the court sustained the objection on the ground that that was a privileged question and that she didn't have to answer?

A. Why, there was quite a quarrel over that, Mr. Hanford.

Q. Wasn't that the ruling?

Mr. German: I object to the question; the witness stated she declined to tell the father.

The Court: She is on cross examination.

Q. I asked if that wasn't a fact?
A. I say there was quite a quarrel over the answer and one of her attorneys advised her not to answer it and made some statement to the court that it was an illegitimate child and didn't want her to name the father of it, and the objection was sustained.
Q. That is the facts the way you remember it?
A. Yes, sir, that is the way I remember it.

(Witness dismissed.)

The Court: This deposition that was taken some two or three months after this open court hearing, was that in this same case?

Mr. German: We expect to prove exactly what that was.

Mr. Cruce: This testimony was taken in the District Court?

Mr. German: Yes, sir.

The Court: If it becomes necessary, we can know exactly what that testimony was.

Mr. German: Yes, we will be glad to introduce a copy, Your Honor, but we thought this would be the simplest way, and we will be glad to file a copy.

The Court: I don't mean the whole thing.

Mr. Stuart: Well, we will see, Your Honor.

Mr. German: Your Honor, with reference to that Sapulpa testimony, I would like to explain that George Reeves, who was the Court Reporter who took it, is very ill in the hospital at Tulsa.

The Court: That is all right now; it is perfectly competent that this witness to testify what was said there, and there seems so far to be no controversy about it, and until there is we will not take up the time.

And thereupon, J. B. WHITE was recalled for further direct examination, and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. German.

Q. Following the giving of the testimony by Minnie at Sapulpa in the summer of 1914, did you have occasion to go to Leavenworth? A. I did.

Q. With reference to what she had testified to?

A. In a few days after the hearing up there.

Q. What did you go up there to investigate?

A. I went up there to investigate if she was in the hospital.

Q. The Sisters Hospital?

A. Yes, sir, and see if the child was born in the hospital.

Q. Did you go there? A. Yes, sir.

Q. To the hospital? A. I did.

Q. Were you in the Court room this morning when the records were introduced from the hospital? A. Yes, sir.

Q. State whether or not you examined those records?

A. Beg pardon?

Q. State whether or not you examined those records?

A. I did.

Q. Did you learn whether anybody else had been there?

The Court: I guess there is no controversy about that. You mean other people inquiring?

Mr. German: Yes, I am trying to fix the time only. We expect to introduce evidence to show that Mr. Hanford and Minnie Atkins went there.

The Court: If they had been there and somebody told this witness they had been there, which he can't testify to.

Mr. German: Well, I think that is true.

Q. Did you find out there, Mr. White, whether Minnie had been in the hospital in the '80's?

A. There was a Minnie Peterkin been in the hospital two weeks.

The Court: Now, that is all a part of the record, I take it, and I take it that that is not controverted and doubtlessly will not be so far as the record stands, but it will be a question of what it shows.

Witness dismissed.

Mr. German: Your Honor, we now offer in evidence Government's Exhibit A-83, the contract between Charles Page and Dennis Jones, dated September 23rd, 1914. Do you deny the execution of this—the original contract between Dennis Jones and Mr. Page?

Mr. Hanford: No doubt about the execution of the contract.

The Court: It may be admitted.

Mr. German: We now offer in evidence as Government's Exhibit A-84, the original letter from Mr. Hanford to Mr. Peterkin, dated November 23rd, 1914. I call Your Honor's attention to the fact that when we were taking Mr. Peterkin's deposition at Boston, a copy of the letter appearing in the transcript—printed transcript was used with the understanding that the original would be used in lieu of that copy.

The Court: Alright, it may be admitted.

Mr. Cruce: We reserve the right to make objection to it.

The Court: You may object now and for the purposes of the present record, it will be overruled and I give you your exceptions.

Mr. Cruce: Alright.

Mr. German: We offer the deposition of William A. Cranston, taken before Mr. Penick, appearing in his transcription of depositions beginning on page 1610.

WILLIAM A. CRANSTON being called as witness on behalf of the United States, sworn, and under oath, testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Allen.

Q. Please state your name? A. William A. Cranston.

Q. Age? A. Twenty-seven.

Q. Your place of residence? A. Leavenworth.

Q. Mr. Cranston, are you connected with your father in the livery business in this city? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where is your barn located?

A. 320 and 322 Cherokee.

Q. Have you with you the books of original entry showing to whom you furnished a team and to whom a charge was made in 1914? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that the book that you have in your hand? A. It is.

Q. I wish you would turn to the date of September 12th, 1914, and state what entries are contained on that date in the book that you now have?

By Mr. Blakeney: Do you mean by that to read the entries?

By Mr. Allen: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Blakeney: We object as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and not properly identified.

By Mr. Hanford: The same objection.

By Mr. Allen: Gentlemen, do you insist upon the introduction of this entire book into the record?

By Mr. Blakeney: We don't think any of it is competent.

Q. Did you make—— I refer now to the entry showing the furnishing of a team for S. D. Long, did you make that entry?

By Mr. Hanford: Objected to as leading.

Q. Who made that entry in that book?
A. I made the entry.
Q. Are all the entries appearing in that book as of the date of September 12th, 1914, in your handwriting?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Is the book that you now have in your hand the book of original entry in which entries are made showing to whom teams were furnished and to whom they were charged?

By Mr. Blakeney: We object as asking for a conclusion.

A. Yes, sir.
Q. On what page of this book do those entries appear?
A. I can't tell you on what page, these pages are not numbered.
Q. The dates come in consecutive order in that book?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Have you any independent recollection of that transaction? A. No, I have not.

By Mr. Allen: We now offer in evidence the book identified by the witness, and particularly the page thereof, showing the date of September 12th, 1914.

By Mr. Hanford: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and not properly identified.

By Mr. Blakeney: You are not attempting to offer that book are you?

By Mr. Allen: I am going to have to if you don't—

By Mr. Blakeney: I object to the offer of any book as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and can serve no possible purpose except to encumber the record, we object to it.

Q. What is your custom with reference to keeping the record of teams that go out of your barn?

A. Well, the custom is——

By Mr. Blakeney: We object as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

A. Well, the custom is if we know the man's name we enter his name on the book, whether the rig was called for or delivered, the time out, time in, the name of the horse and the kind of a rig and the amount of the charge.

Q. Your record shows those entries as to the team charged to F. B. Long? A. Will it show it?

Q. Does it show it? A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Hanford: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

Q. Was that your rule to make such entries at the time this entry was made?

By Mr. Blakeney: We object as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and as leading.

By Mr. Hanford: The same objection.

A. Yes.

Q. When was this entry made with reference to the time of the transaction, the time the team was furnished?

A. You mean the time of day?

Q. The same day or——

A. The entry was made the same day, the same date.

By Mr. Allen: Is there any objection to the witness reading the entry?

By Mr. Blakeney: I have no objection to any particular item that you desire to introduce, I have no objection to that form of introducing it, I object to the evidence as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and not properly identified.

Mr. Hanford: The same objection and agreement as to the portion of the record to be introduced.

Q. Will you please read the entry referred to?

Mr. Blakeney: We object for the same reason as stated in the last——

Mr. Hanford: The same reason, same objection.

A. Under date of September 12th, 1914, Frank B. Long of Tulsa, Oklahoma, time out, 3:30 P. M. Time of return, 6:30; name of the horse was Madge; buggy; and then this here remark column, Gem Oil Company, amount two dollars; that Gem Oil Company is in that—probably Mr. Long is——

Mr. Hanford: I object to any statement of the witness as not responsive to the question.

Mr. Blakeney: We object for the same.

A. It was probably put in there to identify him; he might have been a stranger to us.

Q. Have you any other entries of that book showing that any team was charged to either Mr. Long, or the Gem Oil Company, during the year 1914?

Mr. Hanford: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and indefinite.

A. I don't know whether there is any others in there or not.

Q. Have you made any examination of your records to determine that fact? A. Well, partly; yes.

Q. How far? A. Well, through the month of September.

Q. That is the only entry appearing during the month of September? A. That is the only one I can find.

Witness dismissed.

Mr. German: We offer the deposition of O. Giacomini, taken before Mr. Penick, appearing in his transcription, beginning on page 1615.

And thereupon, O. GIACOMINI, being called on behalf of the United States, sworn, and under oath, testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Allen.

Q. Please state your name, age and residence.

A. O. Giacomini; 56 years old; National Hotel, corner of Cherokee and Fourth.

Q. Leavenworth, Kansas? A. Leavenworth, Kansas.

Q. Are you the proprietor of the National Hotel?

A. I am.

Q. How long have you been proprietor of that hotel?

A. Well, practically thirty years.

Q. Does the hotel keep a register in which guests stopping at the hotel register? A. We do.

Q. Have you such a register for the year 1914?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you that register with you?

A. Yes, sir, there it is.

Q. I wish you would look at the date of Sunday, August

23rd, 1914, and see whether or not on that day, F. B. Long registered at your hotel.

Mr. Hanford: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and leading.

Mr. Blakeney: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is the custom as to the registering of guests stopping here at your hotel, and was the custom at that time?

Mr. Hanford: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

Mr. Blakeney: Objected to for the same reason.

A. The custom is that all guests that come to the hotel, and apply for rooms, are registered on that book when they are assigned to the rooms.

Q. And have you before you now, the register showing Sunday, August 23rd, 1914, and showing the guests who registered on that day? A. I have.

Mr. Allen: We offer in evidence the page of the register identified by the witness, showing the names and addresses of guests of the hotel who registered at the hotel August 23rd, 1914.

Mr. Hanford: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and not sufficiently identified.

Mr. Blakeney: We object for the same reason.

Mr. Allen: Now, will you waive the introduction of the book and let the witness read the entry?

Mr. Blakeney: We don't object to the form of the offer.

Mr. Hanford: We agree that the entry may be read into the record in lieu of the introduction of the entire book, or page, without waiving our objection as to the relevancy of the item.

Q. You may read that entry, Mr. Giacomini, the Frank Long entry.

A. Sunday, August 23, 1914, shows the name of Frank B. Long; do you wish the address?

Q. Yes, sir, the whole address.

A. From Kokomo, Indiana, I presume it is.

Mr. Blakeney: We object to any supposition.

Q. Kokomo, Indiana?

A. Assigned to room 3, and paid.

Q. Are you familiar with the signature of Frank B. Long?

A. Well, not familiar enough to be certain on it, that I would say that that is his, or not his signature.

Q. State when he registered in your hotel as shown by this register, how many names were registered on Sunday, August 23rd, 1914, and where his manes appears in the list?

> Mr. Hanford: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial; and also as to the form of the question. The witness has not stated that he registered.
>
> Mr. Blakeney: I object for the same reason.

A. The page of the 23rd of August, 1914, registers twenty-two names, I think, and he is registered at the foot of the page, almost; only two names being registered after his. Mr. Long is——

Q. I will ask you to turn to the page of the same register showing the registering of names under date of Tuesday, August 25th, 1914, and ask you how many guests registered at your hotel on that day?

> Mr. Hanford: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.
>
> Mr. Blakeney: We object for the same reason.

A. Twenty-three names are registered on that date.

Q. You are now referring to the same register just identified by you?

A. The same register under date of August, 23rd, 1914.

> Mr. Allen: We offer the page of the Register showing the guests registering on Tuesday, August 24th, 1914, and particularly the names of Mrs. F. E. Mann and daughter, the address being Sapulpa, Oklahoma, and room assignment, number 5.
>
> Mr. Hanford: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.
>
> Mr. Blakeney: We object particularly to the general offer of the registrations of that date as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and not pertinent in any way to the case, and we object to the particular offer because it is incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and not properly identified.
>
> Mr. Hanford: The same objection.
>
> Mr. Allen: Is there any objection to the witness reading this entry instead of introducing the book?
>
> Mr. Blakeney: No objection to the form of the introduction at all.

Mr. Hanford: We consent that the offer may be read into the record without waiving our objection to the testimony.

Q. You may read the entry.

Q. Mrs. F. E. Mann and daughter of Sapulpa, Oklahoma, assigned to room 5, on August 25, 1914.

Q. You have already testified to the number of guests registering on that day; will you please state where this entry appears in among those names?

Mr. Blakeney: We object as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial. We object for the further reason that they have offered the whole page of registration and the whole registration for the day, and it shows itself without the conclusion of the witness.

Mr. Hanford: The same objection.

A. The party is registered on the ninth line of the day's registration.

Mr. Allen: Answering the objection of Mr. Blakeney and Mr. Hanford, I desire to say in the record in view of the agreement of counsel——

Mr. Hanford: I object to any statement of counsel as argument.

Mr. Allen: That these names may be read, I withdraw the record of the entire page; that is also true of the page showing the name Frank B. Long.

Mr. Blakeney: We move now to strike out the entry read by the witness, Mrs. F. E. Mann and daughter, as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and not properly identified.

Mr. Allen: I do of course offer the entry read by the witness.

Cross Examination by Mr. Hanford.

Q. Mr. Giacomini, you say you have been proprietor of the National Hotel for about thirty years?

A. I will correct that; I have been connected with the hotel for about thirty years.

Q. Since what year? A. Since 1885.

Q. What month of 1885? A. About October, 1885.

Q. You state that you were connected with the hotel—what was the name of the firm that was then proprietor of the hotel? A. Mella and Giacomini.

Q. How long did that firm continue?

Mr. German: We object to this as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial and improper cross examination.

Mr. Hanford: I will withdraw that question.

Q. Were there any other Giacominis in Leavenworth at that time that you came here?

Mr. German: We object to that for the reasons stated before, to the other question.

A. There were.

Q. What business were they engaged in?

Mr. German: The same objection.

A. Mostly in the restaurant and hotel business.

Q. Were they members of your family? A. They were.

Mr. German: The same objection.

Q. They ere different branches—that is, they were different families? A. No, the same family.

Q. The same family, but I mean different households?

Mr. German: We make the same objection.

A. Well, some were and some were not.

Q. What was the place known or called Giacomini's at the time you came here?

Mr. German: We object to that for the same reason.

Q. Was that a restaurant?

Mr. German: The same objection.

A. It was a restaurant, also with rooms, called the Delmonico hotel and restaurant; that was what they called the Giacomini's place.

Q. You have no independent recollection of Mr. Long, or anyone else making that entry in the book, which you have just read, have you? A. No, sir.

Q. Have you any recollection as to the other entry on August 25th?

A. None whatever except what is on the book—that I see.

Mr. German: We want to offer another item that we overlooked at the start, Mr. Blakeney, if you rather cross examine after that.

Mr. Blakeney: Alright.

Redirect Examination by Mr. Allen.

Q. I will ask you to turn to the entry of August 21, 1914, and ask you to state whether or not that is the same register from which you read the names a few minutes ago?

Mr. Hanford: Mr. Allen, is this a part of the direct examination?

Mr. Allen: Yes.

Mr. Hanford: I agree that the witness may be called for further direct examination.

A. Names or name?

Q. That is the same register that you referred to a little while ago? A. The same register.

Q. I will ask you to turn to the date August 21, 1914; state whether or not F. B. Long registered at your hotel on that date.

Mr. Hanford: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and leading. The witness has not stated whether he knows or not.

Mr. Blakeney: We object to the question as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and to the competent, of the withess and asking for a conclusion.

Q. Does that page of the record show the names of all the—state whether or not it shows the names of all guests registering at your hotel on August 21, 1914.

Mr. Blakeney: We object as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and to the competency of the witness.

Mr. Hanford: The same objection.

A. It does; shows the names of the guests staying at the hotel that day.

Mr. Allen: We offer in evidence the hotel register identified by the witness and particularly the names of —about which the witness has testified.

Mr. Blakeney: We object as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, and not properly identified.

Mr. Hanford: Do I understand that you offer this whole register, Judge Allen?

Mr. Allen: I will unless—I want now, to offer that register in order that the Court might see the names, unless it can be admitted that the name of Frank B. Long appearing on August 23rd, and the name of F. B. Long appearing on August 21, were with the post-office address given, was written by Mr. Long; if you will agree to that, I will not offer the register.

Mr. Blakeney: I won't agree to it.

Mr. Hanford: In view of my objection as to the competency, relevancy, and materiality of the testimony, I don't care to make any agreement relating to the item referred to.

Mr. Allen: I want the register identified and marked.

Mr. Hanford: That is objected to on the ground that it is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, and not sufficiently identified.

Mr. Allen: I am not introducing it; I ask that it be marked for identification as Government's Exhibit.

Mr. Hanford: Mr. Long is not present but I feel reasonably sure that is his signature; sufficiently so, that I can agree that he wrote it.

Mr. Allen: You do so? Agree?

Mr. Hanford: Yes.

Mr. Allen: That applies to both the entries showing the name of Long and the address of Kokomo, Indiana?

Mr. Hanford: Yes, sir.

Mr. Allen: In view of the admission of counsel, I withdraw the request for the identification of the register referred to.

Recross Examination by Mr. Hanford.

Q. Mr. Giacomini, do you know Mr. Long?
A I know him by sight, yes, sir.
Q. Do you know where he comes from?
A. Not exactly, except from what he registers.
Q. You know his home now is in Tulsa, Oklahoma?
A. Only from where he registers from.

Q. Do you know where his home was, prior to Tulsa, Oklahoma? A. I do not; he might have told me, but I do not.

Q. He has not told you that his home was Kokomo, Indiana, prior to Tulsa, Oklahoma? A. Not to my knowledge.

Cross Examination by Mr. Blakeney.

Q. I started to ask you, I believe, about the Delmonico; you said some Mr. Giacomini ran the Delmonico—is that you?
A. No, sir.

Mr. German: I object to that, to that question on the ground that it is incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and improper cross examination. If the answer had been given before I made the objection, I move to strike the answer for the same reason.

Q. Who did run this restaurant, the Delmonico restaurant?

Mr. German: The same objection.

A. Why, Thomas Giacomini and Antonio Giacomini, two uncles of mine.

Q. When was that restaurant started, if you know?

Mr. German: The same objection.

A. Perhaps in the early seventy's.

Q. You came into the hotel business, you say, in about 1865?

Mr. German: The same objection.

A. I did.

Q. You remember who was the other employes in the hotel at that time?

Mr. German: The same objection.

A. What do you mean by employes, Mr. Blakeney?

Q. Well, porter and——

A. That is a pretty hard question.

Q. You are not sure that you remember?

A. That is a pretty hard question; I can't remember that.

Q. Were you giving it your personal attention at that time?

Mr. German: The same objection.

A. I did.

Q. Was Dennis working there at the hotel when you came?

Mr. Allen: We object for the same reason. Mr. Blakeney, may it be agreed that we may have the same objections to each and every one of your questions upon the ground that they are improper cross examination, incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial?

Mr. Blakeney: Yes, sir. I think so, as this is the last one.

A. Not that I know of.

Q. Did you know what business Mr. Long was engaged in?

A. Not the first time I met him; not since. Afterwards.

Q. Did you know in August of 1914? A. I can't tell.

Q. What business did you learn he was engaged in; was he engaged in the oil business?

A. You mean later on, or at the time?

Q. Yes, later on.

A. Later on, I understood that he was in the oil business.

Witness dismissed.

Mr. German: We offer the deposition of Martha Jones, taken before Mr. Penick, appearing in his transcript, beginning on page 1633.

And thereupon MARTHA JONES being called on behalf of the United States, sworn and under oath, testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. German.

Q. What is your name? A. Martha Jones.

Q. Where do you live, Martha?

A. I live in the rear of Cherokee street, in the rear of 309 Cherokee.

Q. Leavenworth, Kansas? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you been living there?

A. Close on to 6 years now.

Q. What age are you?

A. I guess I am about fifty-two or fifty-three—somewhere along about there, I don't know correctly.

Q. Do you know a woman by the name of Sadie James?

A. Well, yes, I know her by Hopkins—Sadie Hopkins; we always called her that. I knew her mother.

Q. How long have you known Sadie?

A. Oh, I have known her since she was a girl; about 11 or 12 years old, I guess, when I first knew her.

Q. Did you see Sadie in August, 1914?

A. Well, I don't just know the date, but I know I saw her; she lived not far from me down there on Second, about two or three years ago—two years anyway—I haven't saw her——

Q. When was the last time when you ever saw her?

A. Well, I don't remember the date because I forget but I know it was the fall or summer about two years ago; she came there one evening, her and——

Mr. Hanford: Now, I ask to object to all this testimony as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

Mr. German: Certainly.

Q. On that occasion, how long was Sadie at your house?

A. Why, she came there in the evening feeling sick and bad, and laid on the lounge all night, and the next day she left for Kansas City; at least she said she was going home.

Q. Was she sober or drunk?

A. Well, I should say that she was drinking; she was sick at the stomach and threw up; that is all I knew about it. I never knew her to drink and didn't know she did drink.

Q. She was sick at the stomach?

A. Sick at the stomach and threw up and had a headache the next morning. I made her some coffee.

Q. Who came to you her house that evening with her?

A. This Irene was the only one I saw. I was in the yard, and they knocked and they came in.

Q. Irene Vinson?

A. I didn't know her name; never saw her before.

Q. Same girl who has just testified before you did?

A. Yes, I had saw her but wasn't acquainted with her.

Q. Do you know Rube Smith? A. Yes, sir.

Q. A colored man here in town? A. Yes, sir.

Q. He came to you house that evening or the next morning that Sadie left? A. I think it was the next morning.

Q. Did he see Sadie? A. He did, yes, sir.

Q. Talk with her? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where? A. The next room, down stairs.

Q. Did you over-hear her conversation?

A. No, sir, I was about my work and he went in, and I never heard [] came in at all.

Q. He came in the front way or the back way?

A. He came in the side gate.

Mr. Hanford: My general objection goes to this question.

Mr. German: Certainly; no use to repeat it.

Q. Did any white man come there to see Sadie while she was there on that occasion?

A. Well, the evening she came, it was early about five o'clock—it wasn't dark—and there was some gentleman, I don't know who it was, talked with her; he called her, or at least she went out and talked with him—out in the alley there—and I don't know what was said, or who it was.

Q. He was a white man? A. Yes, some gentleman.

Q. Where did he approach your house? In the front or the rear?

A. Well, it is in the rear it sits on the alley way. There was a side gate through a vacant lot but this is closed up now.

Q. Was it open at that time?

A. No, sir, I always kept it closed.

Q. What gate did Rube come in?

A. He came in the side gate; I don't know which way he came in—up the alley or down the alley—but he talked with her there a little while.

Q. Did he go in your house on that occasion?

A. No, sir, never came in at all.

Q. Did you see him any more?

A. No, sir, never saw him.

Q. But you have not seen Sadie since?

A. I haven't saw her. I have asked about her several times but it seems like——

Mr. Blakeney: We object.

Q. Did Sadie ever stay all night at your house before or after that? A. No, sir.

Q. And that is the only time that she ever stayed all night at your house? A. That is the only time, yes.

Cross Examination by Mr. Hanford.

Q. Martha, who lives at your house beside yourself?

A. No, one.

Q. That is your home? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is your occupation?

A. Oh, I work; wash and iron, and cook, I have been cooking around places that used to be run here.

Q. Cooking and washing and ironing?

A. Yes, that is always what I have done.

Q. Do you rent rooms? [A.] No, sir, I have none to rent; only got two little rooms.

Q. You don't allow people to go to your house and remain there, do you? A. No, sir.

Q. You don't allow women to entertain men there?

A. I wouldn't have let Sadie, but I had known her a long time, and I supposed she had confidence in me that I would care for her, and I didn't know she was sick there. I hardly ever let anybody come down to my place; I am there alone.

Q. What I want to get at—I will ask you the direct question. Your home is perfectly respectable, is it?

A. Why, yes.

Q. And you are a perfectly respectable woman?

A. I try to live that way.

Cross Examination by Mr. Blakeney.

Q. You saw this girl Irene that just finished testifying, come with Sadie that night, or afternoon?

A. Did I see her?

Q. Did you say she did come with Sadie?

A. Yes, yes, I think she did; I think it is the same girl —I am sure it is. She introduced her to me.

Q. You knew her then, did you?

A. That is the first time I saw her to know her.

Q. She is a colored girl is she?

A. Yes, sir, I think she is the same girl.

Q. And you are a colored woman?

A. Yes, sir, I guess I am.

Recross Examination by Mr. Hanford.

Q. Is that the only time that Rube Smith came to your house and saw Sadie?

A. Oh, I think so; I don't remember ever him being there, that I know of. He has been there and asked about her since and I have asked him; seems like he said she had gone away. I never paid much attention to people; so many of them asking me questions.

Q. That was long about that time?

A. Well, it was afterwards; she came again I think; she went away that next evening.

Q. That was after she went to Kansas City? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Within a few days after that time? A. Yes, sir.

Witness dismissed.

Q. Did you see her in the month of August, or September, 1914? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Hanford: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

Q. Where?

Mr. Hanford: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

A. Well, she came to my house.
Q. In Leavenworth? A. Yes, sir.
Q. Are you living now where you were then?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What was her condition as to being sober, or——

Mr. Hanford: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

A. Oh, well, she was sober alright, but she had been drinking a great deal.
Q. She had been drinking?
A. She could walk straight.
Q. She could walk straight? A. Yes, sir.
Q. How could you tell that she had been drinking, Irene?

Mr. Hanford: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial. I wish my objection to go to all of this testimony.

Mr. German: Alright.

Q. You say she had been drinking?
A. Yes, sir, she had been drinking.
Q. Now, did she show that she had been drinking; what did she do?
A. Well, you know when a person is drinking, they talk loud—talk, you know, and after we got where we were going at, she was awful sick, you know.
Q. Where did you go at?
A. Went down to Miss Martha's.
Q. Miss Martha who?
A. Well, I never did know her last name.
Q. Where did she live?
A. Lived back down her- on Cherokee, on some alley; I don't know the name of the place, but if I would have to go there, I would know where it is.
Q. Is that same woman now, that is out in the other room? A. Yes, sir. Jones, I believe it is.

Q. Martha Jones? A. Yes, sir.

Q. About when was this, that you saw Sadie?

A. About when was it?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, it was about 1914. Well, it has been over a year now, but I don't know the date but I know it was in September; something like that, because it had been a little bit cold. It had been about a year and a half ago.

Q. You say you and she went from your house to Martha's?

A. Well, we stopped at another place before we went down there.

Q. Where did you stop?

A. We stopped on Seneca street; 230 Seneca.

Q. Did you pass by the National Hotel; did you, in going from your house down to Martha's?

A. Well, when we went to go from 230 Seneca, we went to Fourth and Delaware and turned down, going to Miss Martha's.

Q. Did you see anybody at Fourth and Delaware to talk to?

A. Well, a real tall white fellow; she knew him—wasn't too drunk that she didn't know him.

Q. Did she have any conversation with him?

A. Yes, sir, she did.

Q. What was said there?

Mr. Hanford: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and calling for hearsay testimony —a conversation not made in the presence of any of the parties of this suit.

Q. I will ask you another question first. Was that a white man or a colored man?

A. A white fellow it was, yes, sir.

Q. Did she make any statement as to who he was?

Mr. Hanford: Objected to as hearsay, incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that—when was it that she made that statement? While you were with him there?

Mr. Blakeney: We object as leading?

Q. Or elsewhere?

Mr. Blakeney: We object as leading and suggestive.

Mr. German: Well, I will withdraw that question.

Q. Where was it that she made this statement as to who he was?

A. On Fourth and Delaware; pretty near to the National Hotel.

Q. Where was this white man when she made that statement?

Mr. Hanford: The same objection.

A. Well, he was talking to her.

Q. Now, what was the statement she made?

Mr. Hanford: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and calling for hearsay testimony, and a conversation not made in the presence of any of the parties to the suit.

Mr. Blakeney: We join in that objection and assign the same.

A. She says to me, she said, this is my lawyer from Tulsa—just like that. So he said, well, I will see you later on; I have got to go to the hotel for something, and I don't know whether she saw him or not.

Q. Would you know that man if you should see him again?

A. No, sir, I wouldn't. I wouldn't know him if I would see him again.

Q. Did he or not have glasses on?

A. Well, I can't say that either; I didn't *o*ay that much attention.

Q. Where did you and Sadie go, then?

A. We went to Miss Martha's house.

Q. When you got to Miss Martha's, what occurred—what took place?

Mr. Hanford: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

A. Well, what took place? Why, she sat down, and Miss Martha said, Sadie, I will wash your face, and so she washed her face.

Mr. Blakeney: I move to strike out what Miss Martha said and did.

Mr. Hanford: I move to strike on the ground that it is hearsay and not responsive to the question.

Q. Did Sadie do anything?

A. No, she started to pulling off her shoes.

Q. What did you do, then?

A. Well, I sat there a while, and then left.

Mr. Hanford: No cross examination.

Mr. German: We offer the deposition of Clara Kirk, taken before Mr. Penick, appearing in his transcription of depositions, beginning on page 292, and when recalled, beginning on page 319.

Q. Did you correspond with her regularly?

A. Oh, yes, regularly.

Q. She would write you at Portland? A. Yes.

Q. Do you know a colored woman by the name of Sadie James? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you first know her?

A. Well, I can't exactly say the date, but I think it was after the 8th of July, I think sometime near the 12th, between the 12th and 16th, I can't exactly swear to the time.

Q. What year? A. 1914, I think.

Q. Summer before last?

A. Yes, summer before last, that is right.

A. I know a Mr. Bartlett, yes, sir.

Q. Were was it you met them?

A. They came to my house.

A. Yes, sir, Minnie Folk.

Q. Folk? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did you happen to see her?

A. I went to Seattle to see her.

Q. At whose instance?

A. At Mr. Bartlett's and also Sadie James. Well, Sadie James did the talking for Mr. Bartlett. Mr. Bartlett asked me if I would go to Seattle to see her.

Q. Did he tell you why he wanted you to go to see her?

A. Well, nothing only to see if I could have a talk with her and if they could have a talk with her.

Q. Did they learn anything from you as to your acquaintance with Minnie? A. As to my acquaintance of the——

Q. Of the facts of your acquaintance with her?

A. Minnie informed them of that before they came.

By Mr. Blakeney: We object to that and move to strike it.

Q. Did they say anything to you of Minnie having spoken of you?

A. They said Minnie gave them my address for Sadie to call in Portland at my house and she would find Minnie there and she would be treated square and fair by me.

Q. That Sadie would find who at your house?

A. Minnie Folk at my house. Minnie gave that instructions.

By Mr. Hanford: We object to the question and move to strike the answer on the ground that it is incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and hearsay.

By Mr. Blakeney: We move to strike out the answer on the ground that it is irrelevant, is hearsay and immaterial.

Q. State whether you were expecting Minnie to visit you about that time?

A. I was expecting Minnie on the 8th day of July, 1914. She wrote she would be there then to see me.

By Mr. Blakeney: I object to what Minnie wrote, it is not the best evidence, move to strike the answer.

Q. Have you the letter that Minnie wrote you?

A. No, sir.

Q. You did receive the letter?

A. Yes, sir, I have plenty of proof that I did receive such a letter.

Q. What did you do with it?

A. I don't know, just threw it away, I guess, I don't know.

Q. You stated that Minnie had instructed them that they would find her at your home here? A. Yes.

By Mr. Blakeney: We object to that as incompetent, and hearsay.

Q. How do you know that Minnie had so told them?

A. They had my address and they asked me if Minnie Folk was at my house when they came to the door, they expected to find her there.

By Mr. Blakeney: I move to strike out that that they expected to find her there as a conclusion.

Q. What do you say that they expected to find her there?

By Mr. Blakeney: We object as leading, suggestive and incompetent.

A. What is it?

Q. Why do you say they expected to find her at your house?

By Mr. Blakeney: We object and repeat the objection.

A. Because she gave them my name, street number and address, and said if they didn't find her at her house they would find her there.

By Mr. Blakeney: Move to strike that out.

Q. How do you know that? A. They told me.

By Mr. Hanford: We move to strike it out on the ground that it is hearsay.

Q. Did they, or not, make any arrangements for you to go to Seattle to see Minnie?

A. Mr. Bartlett asked me if I could go to Seattle and see Minnie, if I thought they would let Minnie see me.

By Mr. Blakeney: I move to strike the statement as hearsay, incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

Q. You say you thought—— What was it you said you thought about Minnie?

A. They asked me if I thought I could go to see Minnie and talk to her, and I said I didn't see any reason why they should put me out, or why I couldn't have a right to see Minnie.

By Mr. Blakeney: I want to object to any conversation of this witness with Bartlett or Sadie James, as hearsay, incompetent, and ask that the objection be considered as against all this class of evidence offered by this witness.

Q. What did you tell them as to what you thought about that?

A. I said: "Minnie and I were always good friends," and I told them I could talk to Minnie if anyone could.

Q. Did you go to Seattle then? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How came you to go?

A. Well, Mr. Bartlett asked me if I could go that evening.

Q. What did you tell him?

A. I told him I could, I could if my husband would let me.

Q. State whether you did go? A. I did go to Seattle.

Q. Who else went, if anyone?

A. Well, Sadie James went to Seattle on the same train that I did.

Q. State what you did when you got to Seattle in reference to Minnie Folk?

A. Well, I got out to Minnie's I think about nine thirty that morning and I called to her from away under the hill and she answered me and I came up there and we visited all day and she told me she had to go to the Post right after lunch and she left me there alone and she went to the Post, and Mr. Folk came down after she was gone, because she told him I was there and he came down and visited with me, and in the meantime while she was gone Sadie James came out there, and we were all there—met there and talked waiting for Minnie to come back; and finally Harry said he didn't think she was coming back—— Harry Folk, and I said: "Sadie James is going to town and I am going as she goes, so I won't go alone." I wanted to stay and talk to Minnie, I had gotten her suit case; and as I came back out I got off the car at the station, and I seen Minnie break and run down towards me and she snatched my suit case out of my hand and broke and run off way up the hill with my suit case and I said: "What does this mean, Minnie" and she said: "I just want to help you." I didn't go in the house at all after she did. I just took my little girl to go up the hill——

Q. Your little girl? A. Yes, sir, my foster child.

Q. You had taken her with you?

A. Yes, sir, and I got into the house and that man Hanford was there, and he jumped up and she introduced me to him and he started in to abusing me, and he abused me and told me I was traveling with a negro wench and I was lowering myself, and I said—asked him what business he had calling me down over traveling with anybody; and I told him my father fought for the negro, as you call her, and I will treat a negro right as long as they treat me right, and he told me "you better get out and go back to Portland where you belong." They took my suit case toward the kitchen and I thought they fully intended to hold me up from all appearances.

By Mr. Blakeney: I move to strike out what she thought was intended as merely an expression of malice and a conclusion of the witness.

Q. Tell just what was said and done?

A. When Hanford first spoke to me, he said: "I understand you accompanied a negro down town this afternoon," and I said: "I don't know that I accompanied her, we both went down on the same car together," and he asked me if I didn't think a whole lot of myself traveling with a negro. I told him my father fought for negroes to free them; and he said: "I think you had better beat it back to Portland where you belong, Mrs. Kirk, and I turned around to Minnie, I said "Minnie, you couldn't be mistreated in my house as I have been treated here." I got on the porch and Minnie came out to me, because Minnie liked me and I liked Minnie as far as friends and acquaintances as far as I know of her——

By Mr. Blakeney: We move to strike out all that about getting out on the porch as hearsay and immaterial.

Q. Let me ask you a question, Mrs. Kirk? Did you leave the room after the conversation with Mr. Hanford?

A. Well, I went on to the porch, that was all.

Q. Who went out there besides you?

A. Minnie followed me out.

Q. But what was said and done out there?

A. I said: "Well, good-by Minnie," and Hanford stamped his foot and called for Minnie to come in there.

Q. Then, what occurred?

A. Why, she ran in like a little whipped child.

By Mr. Blakeney: We move to strike out the answer like a whipped child.

A. Well, she did, she looked scared to death.

By Mr. Blakeney: We insist that you take down her response to my objection.

By Mr. German: I do too.

Q. Did Minnie hurry back into the room or go in deliberately? A. She did, she run back into the room.

Q. Well, then was there anything else said? What next occurred? A. I went to town.

Q. Did you see Minnie any more on that occasion while you were in Seattle? A. No, I never saw Minnie any more.

Q. Where did you go from town, where did you go when you went to town? A. I went to the O. R. & N. Depot.

Q. Did you see any of those parties whom you have named? A. Yes, sir, Hanford came down there.

Q. How long was that after you had been at Minnie's home?

A. I left Minnie's home I think about seven-twenty, and this was twenty minutes to eleven—twenty or twenty five minutes to eleven.

Q. Seven thirty in the morning or evening? A. Evening.

Q. What occurred at the station?

A. Well, he walked up to me and he wanted to know, he said: "Say, have you got any money," and I said: "Well, I don't know as that is any of your business." Well, he said: "I say again, have you got any money?" and I said: "Now, here, this has gone far enough, you got no business asking me if I got money," and he then began to abuse me again for traveling with a negro wench and I asked him if he saw the negro wench there—"is she in my company here," and he said he was going to pinch her that night and her sister and me if I didn't get out of town.

Q. Is that all that was said?

A. I think that is practically all. He stood and abused me over Sadie James a while—negro wench—and then he went away.

Q. And then did you get out of Seattle that night?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say that Sadie went on the same car that you did when you first went out to see Minnie? A. Yes, sir.

Q. State whether or not Sadie was on the train from Portland to Seattle with you as you went to Seattle?

A. Yes, she was on the train.

Q. State whether or not Sadie was out at the Fort?

A. What is that?

Q. In the afternoon?

A. Yes, well, she wasn't out at the Fort, she was out at Minnie's home.

Q. She was at Minnie's home?

A. Yes, I think she got there about one-ten, one-twenty, something like that in the afternoon.

Q. What time of day had you gone?

A. I think I got there about nine-thirty in the morning.

Q. Did Sadie go to Minnie's home—— Oh, I believe you said she was, and Mr. Folk and yourself? A. Yes.

Q. Stayed at Minnie's home?

A. Fully two hours waiting for Minnie to come back.

Q. When Minnie did come, was Sadie there?

A. Minnie never came until after we left.

Q. Was Sadie out there any more that day?

A. No, not that I know of.

Q. State whether Sadie was at the station when Mr. Hanford got there?

A. I never saw Sadie from a quarter to nine, or nine o'clock on. After that I never saw her any more.

Q. You mean in the evening?

A. Yes, in the evening.

Cross Examination by Mr. Blakeney.

Q. Who was it you say that insulted you there in the station? A. Mr. Hanford.

Q. Do you like Hanford? A. Well, I hardly think I do.

Q. What is your feeling toward him?

A. Well, I feel that he treated me wrong, I wasn't there for any bad purposes and he treated me wrong.

Q. Is that all the feeling you have about it?

A. Well, I feel that a man wouldn't do such a thing to a woman unless he had a just cause, he shouldn't do it anyhow, and talk to me as he did talk to me.

Q. You have expressed a good deal of resentment against Mr. Hanford, haven't you?

A. I have my opinion of Mr. Hanford.

Q. Your feeling is very bitter, is it? A. Yes, I——

Q. You say it is?

A. Yes, sir, it is. My own personal feeling never influenced me in any way. His own speech to me and his own conduct against me personally myself.

Q. Made you very bitter? A. He treated me ridiculous.

Q. What time did you get to Minnie's house that morning? A. Nine-thirty, sometime about nine-thirty.

Q. You left Portland for Seattle in the night time or day?

A. I don't know exactly, sometime near eleven o'clock, around eleven.

Q. At night? A. At night I think.

Q. You rode practically from eleven to day light in getting to Seattle?

A. I think we got in there about seven.

Q. Did you take a sleeper? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who paid for your ticket?

A. I don't know who paid for my ticket.

Q. Who paid for your reservation and berth?

A. I can't say.

Q. Who handed you your ticket and reservation?

A. Sadie James handed me my ticket, yes, I believe she handed me my ticket.

Q. Were you in a compartment or just a berth?

A. I had one berth and she had one.

Q. Where was her berth in reference to yours?

A. Across the train.

Q. Across the isle? A. Across the isle, yes.

Q. You got in about seven o'clock, and where did you go to?

A. I went to the hotel and got me breakfast at a restaurant.

Q. What hotel? A. I can't say as to that.

Q. Did you take breakfast with Sadie?

A. No, sir. My baby and I took breakfast alone in some cafe.

Q. In some cafe? A. Yes, sir.

Q. After breakfast where did you go?

A. We went to that waiting station there going out to the Fort.

Q. You went to the Traction Company waiting station?

A. I don't know, only the station where we take the car to the Fort is all I know.

Whereupon, by agreement of counsel, the witness being examined is withdrawn from the witness stand in order to examine another witness.

And thereupon CLARA KIRK being recalled for further examination, testified as follows:

By Mr. Blakeney.

Q. Did you see either Mr. Bartlett or Sadie there?

A. Yes, Sadie came to the waiting station.

Q. Had you any arrangement with Sadie by which you were to meet there?

A. Well, nothing any further than I was to go out on the car that morning.

Q. You had fixed about the time that you would leave?

A. No, I went to lunch, you see, and when I came back she was——

Q. You went to breakfast? A. Yes, I went to breakfast.

Q. And she went to breakfast?

A. I don't know where she went but when I got there she was there.

Q. She was there? A. Yes.

Q. You both took the car and went out to Fort Lawton?

A. No, we didn't go to Fort Lawton; we went to Minnie's place.

Q. Practically at the Fort?

A. No, quite a way from the Fort; I never saw no Fort.

Q. Then you went to the station on the Fort Lawton line, where you got off to go to Minnie's house? A. Yes.

Q. Who paid your fare? A. I paid my own.

Q. Did you pay Sadie's? A. No, sir.

Q. When you got off at the station, did Sadie get off?

A. She got off but she never went with me.

Q. You don't know what she did? A. No, not after that.

Q. You spoke to her after you got off?

A. We walked a little ways together.

Q. What did you say?

A. I don't know—we were just talking—it had been quite a while.

Q. Sadie had fully informed you what her reasons were for wanting to talk to Minnie, hadn't she?

A. No, sir, I don't know yet.

Q. You don't know what she wanted to see Minnie for?

A. No, sir, I don't know yet.

Q. You don't know whether Mr. Hanford was trying to protect Minnie against burglar, now?

A. Well, I don't consider myself a burglar; Minnie knows me well enough to know I ain't no burglar.

Q. You don't know what Sadie and Bartlett wanted to see Minnie about?

A. Nothing further than that they wanted an interview with her.

Q. They didn't want it in your presence, did they?

A. They didn't say whether they did or not.

Q. What was said when you left Sadie and left for Minnie's house? You didn't have any understanding as to why Minnie was to come up or not?

A. Yes, I was to let Sadie know if I found Minnie.

Q. How were you to let her know? A. By telephone.

Q. She told you where to telephone?

A. I don't know, I believe it was the Comfort Hotel, or something—Comfort, or something.

Q. In the town of Seattle? A. Yes.

Q. When you left Minnie—when you left Sadie, you had agreed that you would go on up to Minnie and if you found Minnie that you would telephone Sadie at some hotel, which you think was the Comfort in Seattle, that you had found Minnie?

A. Well, that Minnie was home and if I was visiting with Minnie; that was the report that I was to give.

Q. Did Sadie tell you that she was going back to Seattle? A. Going back when?

Q. Well, as——

A. No, she didn't tell me where she was going—when she left us there at the car you mean?

Q. Yes. A. No, she didn't tell me.

Q. Then you didn't know whether you would catch her at the Comfort Hotel or not?

A. No, she told me to call up there.

Q. That is as definite as you want to make that understanding that you had with her?

A. She told me to call up there and they would tell me whether she was there or not.

Q. You knew she wasn't there? A. No, when I——

Q. You knew she was out near Minnie's house?

A. No, when I called up, I got her.

Q. You did? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you went up to Minnie's house you saw her on the porch? A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. And you visited there practically all the forenoon?

A. Yes, sir, until after the lunch hour.

Q. You ate lunch with Minnie? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Folk came in during the time you were visiting?

A. Mr. Folk?

Q. Yes? A. No, sir.

Q. He didn't come to lunch? A. No, sir.

Q. You had your little girl with you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How old is she? A. She is past five now.

Q. Had you mentioned the fact to Minnie that you knew Bartlett or Sadie James?

A. No, sir, that was never brought in the subject whatever towards any business turn.

Q. You just made a personal visit?

A. A personal visit.

Q. Minnie didn't know so far as you knew Sadie James and Bartlett were in Seattle? A. No.

Q. Did she tell you they were in Seattle?

A. I believe she told me they had been there.

Q. And you changed the subject and didn't discuss any one of those parties with Minnie?

A. We didn't discuss it, no, because she didn't seem to want to discuss it herself.

Q. And you did not?

A. I couldn't very well draw her on because I wasn't into the case far enough.

Q. You didn't make any attempt to draw her on?

A. That was my orders—to make no attempt to draw her on.

Q. Please answer the question. When you discovered that Minnie was not disposed to discuss Bartlett or Sadie James, you didn't press that subject further? A. No, sir.

Q. And your visit was just one of the usual visits you had during your acquaintance?

A. Yes, sir, you would have thought it was just the same.

Q. In no way did you impart to Minnie that you had come up with Sadie James? A. No.

Q. You hadn't imparted that you had come up with Bartlett? A. No

Q. Minnie did tell you that she was going to get some money?

A. Yes, she told me that she was going to get $5000.00, I think the 28th or 29th of the month.

Q. Told you she was going to get it from some land of her son Tommy, or Thomas, did she?

A. No, she always tells me it was his father's estate.

Q. Told you it was from her father's estate?

A. She always tells me it was her father's estate.

Q. Told you that there? A. She always told me that.

Q. You told me down stairs in the corridor this morning, that she said she had one boy named Thomas.

A. No, sir, I didn't.

Q. Didn't you tell me in the parlor of the hotel at Portland Minnie had a son that was very wealthy and she was going to get $5000.00 from him? A. No, sir.

Q. You tell me anything in that respect?

A. I told you that she said her father's estate, she was going to get $5000.00 off of it, and she had a son that would be awful wealthy some day.

Q. Did you mention the father's estate this morning?

A. I can't tell you whether I did or not. I say always, eight or nine years, Minnie has always told me it was her father's estate.

Q. During eight or nine years you had several conversations with Minnie and she told you——

A. That she would be well-to-do some time.

Q. Would get some money from her father's estate?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. She didn't however, mention either her son or father that day?

A. Yes, sir, she mentioned her boy but she just said that she was getting $5000.00 off of the estate. I can't say definitely, exactly what she was getting the $5000.00 off, but she was to get it the 28th or 29th of the month.

Q. And because she heard her say something about the father's estate before——

A. I thought that was what she was trying to make me think she was getting, from her father's estate.

Q. What did she say about the rich friends?

A. That is all she said.

Q. Did she mention——

Mr. German: I object.

Q. A friend that had a rich estate?

A. She mentioned one friend—Charlie, I think——Harvey or Charlie, or something like that.

Q. How long, now, after lunch was it before Minnie left?

A. Just as quick as she could leave.

Q. What had just been stated or said by either of you before Minnie left?

A. I can't say as to that.

Q. I will ask you this now, if you can give us the substance of the conversation that you had just proceeding Minnie's departure? A. I can't say as to that.

Q. She told you she was going to the Post?

A. She told me she was going to the Post, that is all I remember.

Q. She went over to the Post, or went away, and stayed all afternoon?

A. Well, I never seen her any more until seven o'clock; I saw her get off the car and run across to the store in the afternoon when we took the car to Seattle.

Q. About seven o'clock that evening you saw Minnie?

A. Her husband went toward the Post walking; Minnie saw him and they talked a second, and she broke and run to the store.

Q. You say broke and run—you mean that she actually run? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did she see you? A. I can't say as to that.

Q. You were exposed to her view?

A. We were standing there waiting for the car; we took the car that she got off of.

Q. She got off the car at the same point you got on?

A. No, she got off the car at the bottom of the hill, at the stores somewhere, and we took it at the station.

Q. How far did she leave the car from the place you took it?

A. I judge it was about two blocks, something like that.

Q. Her husband met her there?

A. We all came down toward the station together, he walked toward the Post.

Q. Her husband discussed with you during the time that you were there, this land matter? A. No, sir.

Q. Bartlett? A. No, sir.

Q. Sadie James? A. He was talking to her.

Q. About what?

A. Just visiting; just talking along about other subjects—this subject wasn't ever mentioned between them.

Q. Then you went on back to Seattle, did you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you hear Sadie tell Folk there that she was en-route to British Columbia and just stopped over there to see Minnie a few hours? A. No, sir, I don't think I did.

Q. Did either of you state that you would go up together?
A. No, sir.

Q. Was any suggestion that you were acting together in going? A. No, sir.

Q. You went on back to Seattle, you say, at seven o'clock?

A. No, I went back that afternoon about three o'clock, three or half past three.

Q. Then what did you do after you got to Seattle?

A. I went to the hotel.

Q. What hotel?

A. I can't tell you the name of the hotel.

Q. How did you happen to find the hotel?

A. Well, we went there from the train.

Q. Who was that?

A. Baby and I, and Sadie. I followed her—I don't know anything about Seattle.

Q. You and Sadie, and the baby, went to the hotel?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you register there?

A. I can't say as to that; I never——

Q. Did you see Bartlett? A. No, sir.

Q. What did you do when you got to the hotel?

A. I went up to my room and washed and combed my hair, and fixed the baby up.

Q. Whose room? A. I went up to a room got for me.

Q. Who got it?

A. I can't tell you whether she got it or I got it.

Q. After fixing up, what did you do?

A. I went to the cafe and got my breakfast.

Q. I was talking about the afternoon?

A. Going from the train?

Q. You said about three o'clock in the afternoon, you went down and took a car, didn't you, to Seattle—street car, when you saw Harry Folk come and speak to his wife and his wife run over to the Exchange, where did you go to?

A. I went down town.

Q. How did you go? A. Went on the car.

Q. You mean down to Seattle—down town in Seattle?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you do when you got down town?

A. I went to the hotel and got my suit case.

Q. Was that the time you went up to your room and cleaned up? A. No, sir.

Q. That you did in the morning? A. In the morning.

Q. You got your suitcase? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You had left your suitcase at the hotel that morning?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you do after you got your suitcase?

A. I went back out to Minnie's.

Q. You took the street car and went on out? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You got off the street car at the same station that you had gotten on? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Carrying your grip? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you stepped off you saw Minnie?

A. Not when I stepped off I didn't see Minnie.

Q. How long were you there before you saw Minnie?

A. I started up the hill and she broke and run to me.

Q. How far was Minnie's residence from the station?

A. I can't say as to that; I judge a block and three quarters, or a block and a half, something like that.

Q. You had gone a little ways up the hill and Minnie came running down? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did she run that time? A. She run, yes, sir.

Q. She actually ran, did she? A. Yes, sir.

Q. She took your grip?

A. She grabbed my grip out of my hands.

Q. And took it entirely from you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And she turned and started running back up the hill?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And she actually ran again up the hill?

A. Well, I guess——

Q. I don't want you to guess, I want you to know the facts. Is that true?

A. Well, she run up the hill.

Q. We sometimes use the word run up, meaning walking up very fast.

A. I think that is the best she could do, walk very fast.

Q. That is all she ever did, just walk fast, when you used the term running, is that right? A. Yes.

Q. Then, when you—you couldn't keep up with her, I believe? A. No, sir, I couldn't.

Q. Did the little girl keep up? A. No, sir.

Q. After Minnie got to the house, what did she do? Wait for you or go right on? A. No, she went right on.

Q. Carrying your grip?

A. Took it to the kitchen door and set it down.

Q. Took it to the kitchen door? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did you go on in? A. Yes, sir.

Q. She left the door open for you?

A. The door was already open.

Q. And you and the little girl walked in?

A. Yes, sir, we didn't walk in; we just stepped to the door and that is when this man here started in on me.

Q. What man? A. Hanford.

Q. I have noticed in this examination that you insist on calling him Hanford instead of Mr. Hanford; is that the way you address gentlemen?

A. That is always the way I speak about him.

Q. You speak about him as Hanford because you dislike him? A. This man Hanford, isn't that alright?

Q. You do that as a term of disrespect for him?

A. I can't help that.

Q. As a term of disrespect for him. You saw this man Hanford there then, what did he do?

A. Sitting there in the chair?

Q. What did you do when you saw him?

A. When he started in on me, I stopped; stood right at the door.

Q. You kind of jumped back when you saw him?

A. Who? Me?

Q. Yes. A. Indeed I didn't.

Q. What did you do? A. I tried to hold my own.

Q. When you first saw him?

A. I received an introduction to him.

Q. Minnie came up and introduced him? A. Yes.

Q. What did Minnie say?

A. She said, it was her friend Mrs. Kirk from Portland, Oregon, Mr. Hanford. Said I was from Portland, Oregon.

Q. What did Mr. Hanford say?

A. That is when he started in on me.

Q. Not what he started in, what did he do? Let us determine whether he started or not; give us the words, can you?

Mr. German: Tell what he said, as clearly as you can, Mrs. Kirk.

A. Well, he said to me, I understand that you accompanied a nigger to town this afternoon, and I said what is that; and he said, I understand you accompanied a nigger to town this afternoon. And I said, not exactly; we went in on the same car. He said, you didn't accompany her on the car? I said, we both went in on the same car and he went on—I can't exactly word it as he worded it; anyhow, that I was lowering myself accompanying a negro, and I said, no, my father fought for the niggers, as you call them.

Q. You regarded it with some pride to be running around with Sadie James, didn't you? A. No, sir.

Q. Is that exactly his words, now?

Mr. German: Answer as best as you can, Mrs. Kirk; give as near as you can his words.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was there in that statement that he made that gave you such offense?

A. It was the tone of his voice and the actions that he had toward me in saying it.

Q. Did he not say to you, the first thing that was stated, you went to town this morning, or this afternoon, with a nigger named Sadie James, didn't you? Didn't he ask you the question, if you had gone?

A. The first question he asked me?

Q. Yes. A. No, sir; no, sir.

Q. Did he say that Sadie James had gone to town with you and paid your fare that morning? A. No, sir.

Q. Well, what was the next thing he said then?

A. He wanted to know if Sadie James didn't bring me to Seattle, and I said my husband put me on the train at Portland; I said I came here—I said my husband put me on the train in Portland and he said, you don't mean to say that Sadie James came on the train with you? And I said my husband put me on the train in Portland.

Q. From this you saw that he was trying to protect Minnie from Sadie James and her influence, didn't you?

A. I couldn't gather anything of the kind. I wouldn't think he was trying to protect Minnie; I could see he was mad.

Q. He was speaking in an angry tone, was he?

A. Yes, sir, he was.

Q. Well, now, what next occurred?

A. Well, he told me to go home where I belonged.

Q. What did you then say?

A. I said, well, Minnie, I will go back to Portland; I wouldn't let you be treated like this in my house by a man like that—just the words I said. I said no man could treat me——

Q. Was that in the room or after you got on the porch?

A. Said that in the room.

Q. What did you say after you got on the porch?

A. I told Minnie, you had better look out with a man of caliber like that—you better look out; just the words I told her; he isn't much.

Q. You were angry?

A. I was disgusted, I guess I was.

Q. You were just at the fighting pitch, were you?

A. I guess I was.

Q. You would have given ten dolars to have gotten him out of that house? A. I would have give twenty.

Mr. German: I object to that as argument and move to strike it.

Mr. Hanford: I object to that on the ground that it is an improper question put to this witness.

Q. You say you would have given twenty dollars to get him out alone where you could have settled this matter with him?

Mr. German: Same objection.

Mr. Hanford: Same objection.

A. Yes, sir, I would give twenty dollars and I would give it today.

Q. Right today your feelings are bitter toward him and you would give twenty dollars to get him out and settle this matter with him?

A. To make him know how to treat a lady.

Mr. German: I object for the same reason.

Q. You feel that way sort of, toward me, don't you since this examination?

A. Yes, sir; if you hadn't had any breakfast like I haven't had, you would be too.

Q. Then the next thing you saw Mr. Hanford at the station?

A. I saw Hanford at the station.

Q. O. & W. station at Seattle?

A. O. R. & N., isn't it, that big depot, whatever it is.

Q. He came up and spoke to you there?

A. He came up and asked me if I had any money; didn't lift his hat or speak to me—address me.

Q. He walked up to you and asked you if you had a ticket home? A. He never said a ticket, no, sir.

Q. Didn't mention the word ticket? A. No, sir.

Q. He asked you if you had any money? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you say?

A. I said, well, now, I think that is going a little too far. Then he demanded to know if I had any money.

Q. Then what did you say?

A. I told him I would show him if he didn't get out and attend to his business.

Q. Then what did he say?

A. Then he went on to tell me how low I was getting to travel with a nigger.

Q. Then when you told him the pride that you felt, that your father had fought for the nigger——

A. That wasn't when I told him that.

Q. You told him that before, did you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Up at the house? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What else did you tell him there? A. Not much more

Q. What did you tell him?

A. I told [] he had better get away and let me alone or I would see that he did do it.

A. Yes, finally.

Q. Were you angry then? A. Well, I think I was.

Q. Did he say anything about if you didn't have a ticket or money to go back to Portland he would buy you a ticket?

A. Why, he said he thought maybe that black wench would ditch me, that is the words he used; he thought maybe that black wench would ditch me.

Q. And if she did——

A. He didn't say anything about giving me any money.

Q. Said he would get you a ticket back?

A. No, sir, he didn't.

Q. What did he say after he said the black wench might ditch you? Didn't you know from the conversation he had there with you, that he came there to ask you, and did ask you, whether or not you had a ticket to get home, and if you didn't he would furnish you a ticket?

A. No sir, he never intimated once that he would give me money to go home on; he came up and demanded to know if I had any money. He asked it twice and the last time, it was in a demanding tone, and I told him my husband wasn't in the habit of starting me out without return money.

A. Callis County, Washington Territory.

Q. Did you go to Washington with your parents?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long did you live there?

Q. At that particular place that you first stopped at when you got to Washington, how long did you stay there?

A. Well, I moved there in '85 and moved away in '92.

Q. Were you married there? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who did you marry? A. Albert Dray.

Q. How long did the marriage relationship between you and Mr. Dray continue? A. Eleven years and a half.

Q. Did he die? A. He was killed.

Q. Where were you living when he [] killed?

A. Kalama, Washington.

Q. How long did you live at Kalama after your husband died? A. After my husband died?

Q. Yes ma'am. A. Three years.

Q. What were you doing there in that three years?

A. Running a restaurant part of the time, and part of the time working in restaurants.

Q. Were you married there again? A. Yes, sir.

Cross Examination by Mr. Hanford.

Q. Mrs. Kirk, you haven't had your breakfast and you are tired, and I won't ask you only a few questions. If your antagonism toward me was due to a misunderstanding, you will be willing to admit it, wouldn't you?

A. No, I would never forgive you; that is emphatic.

Q. If you were mistaken? A. I wasn't mistaken.

Q. You didn't understand my question; I said if you were. A. Well, I am not.

Q. If wrong in anything and found it out you would admit it, wouldn't you?

Mr. German: I object on the ground that it is argumentive, calling for a conclusion of the witness, and an improper question.

Q. If you found out that you were mistaken in the opinion you formed of any one, or their actions, you would admit it, wouldn't you?

Mr. German: I object for the same reason.

Q. Whether or not you would forgive them or not, you would admit it wouldn't you?

Mr. German: I object to that for the same reason.

A. I never get mad at anybody with a prejudice against them until I have a right, and I have seen it with my own eyes, and whenever I get that prejudice it never leaves me; it grows and grows and grows.

Q. You didn't even have your coffee, this morning, did you? A. I consider that my business.

Mr. German: Answer the question.

Mr. Hanford: I withdraw it.

A. I will answer any question that is sensible.

Q. You have no objections to answering my questions relating to the matters that you just testified to about?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. You say you will answer any questions.

A. If you will ask any business questions, I will answer it in a business way.

Q. The matters you just testified about on direct, you will answer, won't you?

Mr. German: Mrs. Kirk, it is necessary for you to answer any question that he asks.

A. He didn't have to ask me if I had my coffee.

Mr. Hanford: I object to his instructing the witness on the stand.

Mr. Blakeney: I think it is apparent here that it is necessary for the United States District Attorney to make this witness answer the questions.

Mr. Hanford: I object to all this talk in the presence of the witness; it only appears to aggravate her present state and makes it difficult to examine her properly.

Q. Mrs. Kirk, you have no objections to answering my questions that are material to the matters that you just testified to, have you?

A. If you will ask a business question, I will answer it.

Q. Well, I don't know what you call business question.

Mr. Allen: We object that question and insist that the gentleman be required to ask the question.

Q. But I will ask it just the same; do you remember about the day you came up to Seattle, Mrs. Kirk? It was early in the month of July, wasn't it?

A. No, it was sometime near the middle because Minnie was to be at my house the 8th of July, and it was sometime near the 12th or 16th that Bartlett and Sadie called—sometime near that. I am not sure but it was near the 16th or 20th that I went to Seattle.

Q. Had you invited Minnie to your home in Portland at the time she came? A. Minnie never came.

Q. At the time she was to come? A. Yes, sir.

Q. At the first instance had you written her to visit you?

A. What is it?

Q. At the first instance? A. At my home.

Q. Had you met Mr. Bartlett? A. No, sir.

Q. Or Sadie James prior to that time? A. No, sir.

Q. Then you met them first after the 8th of July?

A. Met them the day before I was at Minnie's—the first time I ever saw them before in my life—the day before.

Q. Had you met anybody that had talked to you about Minnie? A. No, sir.

Q. Or her visit to you? A. No, sir.

Q. When you arrived at Seattle on that morning, you went to the hotel in the taxi cab, did you not?

A. I don't know but I believe we did though.

Q. You and Sadie and the little girl?

A. I don't know; we were going to take a taxi cab, I believe we did

Q. And the name of the hotel was the Wright hotel, wasn't it—Wright?

A. I wouldn't swear to it because it wouldn't be safe for me to swear to what the name of the hotel was.

Q. There was a hotel in the middle of the block of First Avenue?

A. I can't swear to that; Seattle was all strange to me.

Q. When you [] back into town in the afternoon to get your grip, Sadie went to the hotel with you while you got your grip and then saw you to the car when you were going back to the Post, didn't she?

A. We walked down toward the car and I think she was getting a car there herself, yes, she was talking a car from there herself.

Q. Then, when you got out to the Post, Minnie came down from the house—came herself down the path and met you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And took your grip? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you led the little girl by the hand up the path?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Minnie was talking quite excitedly, wasn't she?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And quite loud, as she does when she gets excited, wasn't she? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And didn't she talk about why she got off the car and ran on back to meet Harry?

A. No, sir, not to my remembrance.

Q. Didn't she tell you that Harry had motioned to her to get off?

A. No, I saw him do that—I saw him do that; she didn't tell me anything of the kind, I saw him do that.

Q. Didn't he tell you when she got back there that what he wanted her for was to tell her that Sadie James had been to the house? A. No, I don't know that she did.

Q. Do you remember whether or not Minnie's conversation going up the path——

A. She didn't talk to me—she didn't talk to me.

Q. You didn't understand me—you just said she was talking quite excitedly.

A. I asked her—I said to her, Minnie what does all this mean—you running down to me; Oh, nothing, I just thought I would help you, that is all, she said. She said that in a loud tone.

Q. Didn't say anything about Sadie at that time?

A. No, sir.

Q. You came up to the steps of the house and Minnie porceeded you and started toward the bed room with your grips, didn't she?

A. No, sir, she took my grips to the kitchen.

Q. Well, you had to go through the kitchen to go to the bed room, do you not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. The bed room is a side room off of the kitchen?

A. My suit case never went to the bed room, it went to the kitchen.

Q. Minnie got as far as the kitchen door with it and put it down? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was just as you got in the room with the girl?

A. As I got to the front porch, Minnie set my suit case down by the door that led into the kitchen.

Q. Are you quite sure that you were not clear in the room?

Q. No, I wasn't in the door yet when I seen Minnie set my grip down.

Q. Well, I was sitting by a table in a corner of the room, wasn't I? A. No, kind of center of the room by the table.

Q. Don't you remember after lunch Minnie slipped a table over to the corner after the table was cleared?

A. No, sir, the table wasn't setting there.

Q. I was sitting beside the table, wasn't I? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you turned around and saw me sitting there, didn't you?

A. I never turned around, simply Minnie stopped me and introduced me as I went into the door.

Q. She said Mrs. Kirk, this is Mr. Hanford?

A. No, sir; she said, Mr. Hanford, meet my friend Mrs. Kirk from Portland, Oregon.

Q. And you took a chair then, facing me?

A. I had never taken a chair.

Q. Didn't you sit down?

A. I think I went and sat down on a couch right facing you, some sort of a——

Q. The couch is near the door, isn't it?

A. No, it is not near the door, it is by the wall away from the door. Minnie told me to take off my wrap, and I said no, and after you started in on me, I said I would wait a minute.

Q. You had the little girl with you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And I said how do you do, to the little girl, didn't I?

A. No, sir, you didn't.

Q. Didn't I take the little girl by the hand?

A. No, sir, you didn't.

Q. And ask her how she liked traveling on the train?

A. No, sir, you didn't.

Q. And I asked you then if you had had a pleasant trip from Portland? A. No, sir, you didn't.

Q. And didn't you say, what business is that of yours?

A. No, sir, I didn't.

Q. And didn't I tell you I was just trying to say something pleasant to make conversation? A. No, sir.

Q. And then, didn't I ask you if you came from Portland all alone? A. Well, I can't say as to that.

Q. And you told me that was none of my business?

A. No, sir, you asked me who came to the train with me in Portland, and I said my husband.

Q. Wasn't that later on in the conversation? A. No, no.

Q. And then, I asked you if you didn't come up with Sadie James, a colored woman? A. No, I don't think you did.

Q. And you told me, you said to me, what if I did, isn't that alright—that my father fought for the niggers?

A. No, sir, when you called her a black nigger wench, I said, now hold on here; I am not much of a lover of niggers, as you call them, but my father fought to free them, but a nigger is alright that stays in her place.

Q. Did I say anything about niggers?

A. Yes, sir, you did. You called Sadie a black nigger wench right there—you did.

Q. And then, Mrs. Kirk, didn't you stand up and tell Minnie that you objected to being jumped and asked questions the minute you got in the house, and asked me who I was—if I was some detective, or something, to be talking to you like that?

A. Oh, no indeed, I didn't think you were any detective, no indeed.

Q. And didn't you say, if you have any objections to me being here with Minnie who I have known for years, that I will just take my grip and go back home?

A. Yes, after you told me to go didn't I turn around to Minnie and said, Minnie have ever I harmed a hair on your head; and I said no, I never did and never will.

Q. Yes, you said that. And didn't I then say, Mrs. Kirk, I think that is the best thing you can do?

A. No, you told me to get back to Portland where I belonged.

Q. Didn't you say you wouldn't go unless Minnie wanted it, and Minnie said, Clara, I am sorry?

A. No, Minnie said, Clara, that is too bad; that was ignorance—she never opened her mouth—she was afraid to speak.

Q. And didn't you take your suit case and go out on the porch and Minnie followed you?

A. Out on the porch, yes, sir.

Q. And you turned to Minnie and told her that she had better be careful if you were her, you wouldn't have anything to do with a man like that?

A. Yes, sir, I did. I told her, Minnie, be careful, for a man to speak to a woman like you spoke to me would never treat you fair and square; a man with no more breeding than to talk to me like you talked to me here in this house, would never treat you square.

Q. And then you went to the car? A. Yes, sir.

A. And went back to town? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And instead of waiting at the hotel until train time, you went down and waited a long time at the depot?

A. I went to the depot and checked my suit case at the little fruit stand in the depot, and got my little girl and ice cream cone, and struck out and hunted and hunted for a restaurant and found nothing but a Chinese restaurant, to get some supper, and went back to the station and got my baby some ice cream cones, and went out and walked, and went back to the station, and that is when you came to me.

Q. And I came in and sat down on the bench beside you and asked you, Mrs. Kirk, have you got any money, didn't I?

A. You never sat down on the bench at all until afterward.

Q. I guess you are right—I stood up for a while.

A. You stood up, I am pretty sure, all the time.

Q. Yes, and you said, what business is that of yours?

Q. And I said I wanted to be sure that you had the money to get back to Portland because I was afraid—because you didn't stay with Minnie that Sadie James would ditch you, and leave you to your own resources?

A. That nigger wench would ditch me.

Q. Well, isn't that the statement?

A. No, you didn't bring that word, I am afraid, in once in there. No, you didn't say that since you left Minnie you would not have fare to go back to Portland. You came up to me and said, have you got any money; and I said——

Q. That is going a little too far?

A. Yes, that is going a little too far. You demanded to know whether I had any money and I said I would show you whether I got any money or not in a muinte if you will get out and let me alone, and then you turned on Sadie.

Q. Didn't I tell you, Mrs. Kirk, you don't know what this case is; that other people will come to you about Minnie and for you to be careful and look out for them?

A. No, sir, you never told me anything of the kind.

Q. And to keep out of it?

A. No, sir, you never told me anything of the kind.

Q. That they might impose upon your friendship with Minnie? A. No, sir.

Q. And to be on the lookout?

A. Emphatically no, you didn't tell me anything of the kind.

Q. Now, stop and think if there wasn't some discussion.

A. No, sir, you told me, you are lowering yourself and I was pretty low to be traveling in that wench's company, and you were going to pinch her, her sister, and also me, if I didn't get out of town; and I said I would like to see you pinch me for anything I had done or said.

Q. And didn't I tell you that I just wanted to be sure; if you were alright, I had nothing further to say, and left you?

A. No, sir, you never once pretended that you were the least bit uneasy about my ticket back, or welfare.

Q. Mrs. Kirk, what did you think I asked if you had any money for? Did you think I wanted to take it?

A. Well, I don't know.

Q. Going back to the time that you were there with Minnie in the morning?

A. I know if I had been in my home town and you asked me that what you would get.

Q. I am not asking you that—just answer my question and we will get through in a minute. Mrs. Kirk, getting back to the time that you were in the house with Minnie in the morning, you say she didn't want to discuss matters of this case, and you didn't attempt to talk to her about it?

A. I never did in my life try to pull anything put of Minnie about her business. She has told me a whole lot about her business.

Q. Wasn't this one subject brought up when you were talking to her, and didn't you tell her to be sure it was with the right people and that was all?

A. Yes, sir, I said Minnie be sure you are with the right folks before you make a move; don't sign your name to a paper of any kind until you know you are right. I said, get you a good lawyer and know you are right.

Q. And that is all you said to her?

A. That is all I said.

Q. Just that sort of advice? A. Yes, sir.

Redirect Examination by Mr. German.

Q. Mrs. Kirk, how did it happen that you didn't get your breakfast this morning?

A. I never eat any breakfast in the world; if you fellows don't leave my breakfast out now——

Q. All you said on that subject has been in jest, hasn't it?

A. Yes, but when I am here for business I want to talk business and go home.

Q. The court at Muskogee can't see you, so I am going to ask you this question. Are you a white woman? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You spoke of Minnie having stated to you something about expecting money from her father's estate; tell us when.

A. Well, she used to tell me her father was wealthy. You know Minnie will tell you one thing—he knows it as well as I do.

Q. Who is he?

A. Mr. Hanford. And she will tell you one thing and in an hour, turn around and tell you another one crossing it. She used to tell me that she had money.

Q. What did she say about her father?

A. That was Indian blood in him and she was going to have money off the Government for her father.

Q. Did she tell you where this money might come from?

A. Well, the Government, through her Indian people.

Q. Did she say anything about her father's name having been on the roll—that had anything to do with her getting any of his money?

Mr. Blakeney: We object—very leading, argumentative, and suggestive.

A. No, I can't remember that just exactly.

Q. Do you recall when it was that she told you things along the lines that you have stated?

A. Oh, at different times in the last eight or nine years, at different times that we have talked.

Q. When was it that she talked of her son—any estate of her son?

A. Oh, it is ten years ago—you see, I had two little boys; she used to think so much of my boy, so much like her boy ten years ago.

Q. Where are your boys now?

A. On South Air, North Dakota; I have two here now. She used to admire my boy and talk much about her boy; I have seen his picture, myself.

Q. Did she tell you his name?

A. Either Charlie or Harvey, I forget which it was. I wouldn't——

Q. When she spoke of her son having an estate—having some property—what son was she speaking of?

A. This one was all she ever owned to me, you know.

Q. Charlie, or Harvey?

A. This one is all she ever owned to me, whatever his name is.

Q. Down at the depot there in Seattle when Mr. Hanford was talking with you, do you remember whether he spoke of a ticket for you? A. Ticket for me?

A. Yes. A. No, sir, he never spoke of no ticket for me.

Q. He just talked about whether you had some money?

A. Just asked me whether I had some money.

Q. And told you and that nigger wench had better get out of town?

A. Yes, told me he was going to pinch the two of them —Sadie and her sister, and me, if I didn't leave the town.

Q. What about her sister?

A. He told me her sister was running—I won't tell you what kind of a house he called it to me.

Q. Of ill-fame?

A. Yes, sir, but he didn't call it that to me.

Q. Pick-pocket or something?

A. No, sir, he told me she was a fast one and run a bad place.

Q. Where? A. In Seattle.

Q. Had you ever heard of that before? A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know her sister? A. No, sir.

Q. When you spoke a while ago like settling with the gentleman here, Mr. Blakeney who was examining you—the Examiner didn't get your smile; did you or not say that for fun? A. With him?

Q. Yes. A. Oh, I didn't mean anything towards him.

Recross Examination by Mr. Blakeney.

Q. When Mr. Hanford said something about pinching this woman, you understood what he meant by that?

A. Yes, sir, arrest them.

Q. You understood that word pinching then?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you ever pinched? A. I should say I wasn't.

Q. How did you understand that term?

A. I guess I heard it about fifty times a day.

Q. In your life, it is a common expression?

A. No, sir, not in my life but my business, I have lots of roomers and living in a boarding house they don't use any thing else but pinch, and that is an expression that he used to me.

Recross Examination by Mr. Hanford.

Q. Mrs. Kirk, when Minnie told you about her father, didn't she tell you that he was a prominent man among the Indians, or had been, rather? A. No.

Q. And didn't she tell you he raised hogs and fancy horses, and had a good deal of property?

A. No, I asked her why don't you send for your boy and give him a mother's love and she said no, my father can give him more than ever I could do.

Q. She didn't say anything about his having lots and lots of horses and hogs?

A. He had his Indian share and that is where she claimed she was going to get hers from; I never remember hearing anything about race horses, or anything of that kind.

Redirect Examination by Mr. German.

Q. Mrs. Kirk, do you or not, lead a respectable life?

A. I do.

Q. Have you ever lead any other kind? A. No, sir.

Recross Examination by Mr. Blakeney.

Q. Why did you hesitate to answer that last question, Mrs. Kirk? A. Why.

Q. Yes. A. Well, I don't know.

Witness dismissed.

Mr. German: We offer in evidence, the testimony given by the deposition of Dennis Jones, at Leavenworth, Kansas, on October, 1914, in the case of Minnie Folk, formerly Minnie Atkins, and others, plaintiffs, against Nancy Atkins, and others, defendants, No. 3772, he having testified there on behalf of the plaintiff.

The Court: If there is no objection, it will be admitted.

Mr. Cobb: The defendant H. Carter objects as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

The Court: Overruled; exception noted.

Mr. German: Your honor, I desire to state the purpose of the testimony of Mr. Whites, by which he stated —in which he stated what Minnie Atkins testified at Sapulpa, and the purpose of offering this deposition of Dennis Jones. We are offering that proof for the purpose of showing, and in support of our theory and contention that the defendants Minnie Folk, Page, and their associates—that group, fabricated a case, and we expect them to follow with proof of the fact that it was a fabrication, the proof being coupled with the proof already introduced relating to that question.

The Court: Now, this testimony was taken in a case as between Page on the one side and Nancy Atkins on the other?

Mr. German: Yes, sir.

The Court: Is that the case out of which the order grew which permitted Page to go on and exploit the property?

Mr. Maxey: No, that was a subsequent case that they brought against Nancy.

The Court: Is that the entire——

Mr. German: No, sir, there are a few pages of it that are Dennis Jones' testimony.

Mr. Stuart: Your Honor, I would like to make that objection so as to enlighten the Court. Minnie Atkins was not a party to that suit——

Mr. German: Yes, she was.

Mr. Stuart: But she never was served.

Mr. Maxey: This is her suit that she brought against Nancy.

Mr. Cruce: Your Honor, on behalf of Page, we object to the introduction of that testimony, because it is incompetent.

Mr. German: And we are offering this testimony of Dennis Jones as testimony produced by the plaintiff in that case to support their theory.

The Court: In which Minnie Atkins and Page were parties plaintiff?

Mr. German: Parties plaintiff.

The Court: Now, designate the pages of that record which you offer.

Mr. German: Without reading it into the record now?

The Court: If it is not long, you may read it now.

Mr. German: Apparently from the index page here, it will cover 31 pages; it extends in this group of depositions which I hold in my hand from page 34 to page 65.

Mr. Stuart: Well, Your Honor, of course your Honor has indicated that the oral testimony may largely be selected by counsel but this matter—in this particular matter now, I think the Court ought to direct the order, because here is a large deposition going into the evidence here, and he says that he is going to prove that this evidence he is putting in there was procured by Page and his confederates in order to fabricate a case. It is not the ordinary case.

The Court: Well, this is offered now as evidence which Page as plaintiff introduced in a case involving a collateral question and kindred question in another suit. He seeks to introduce that evidence—the purpose of introducing it, he says, is to show the Government's intention that the Tommy Atkins phase is a fabrication.

Mr. Stuart: You are not introducing it, then, now for the primary purpose of showing that this evidence of Dennis Jones was to show it by Page and these people?

The Court: The point he makes is that it is offered by Page in his case in support of his contention.

Mr. Stuart: Well, if that is the case, we don't object on those grounds.

Mr. Cruce: Well, Judge, on any grounds; unless—this witness is presumed to have told the truth there.

You can bring Dennis Jones here and prove anything that will bind Page—any instructions that Page gave him on the outside, but any testimony given is not equivalent to the——

The Court: Well, you may save your exceptions, gentlemen.

Mr. Hanford: I will like to state an objection, if it please Your Honor, different from that of associate counsel. I would like to object to the evidence on the ground that it is introduced to show a purported fabrication of the case by the Page interests and that on the further ground that the fabrication of the case by them is not material in this or anything done after all this time. It is not relevant to the proposition as to whether or not Thomas Atkins ever existed or ever to the question of whether or not they notice. Anything that they might have done after they had notice is not material at all and does not show anything in regard to his enrollment——

The Court: Well, save your exceptions; it will be admitted.

Mr. German: Shall we read that or just file a copy of it?

The Court: File a copy of it now. Indicate the pages of that transcript which will go into the record, as the Dennis Jones testimony under the present offer.

Mr. German: Yes, sir. It will be pages 34 to 64 inclusive. Now we offer for like reasons and like purposes, the deposition given on the same occasion on the same case wherein Dennis Jones' deposition was given, the testimony of Rube Smith, whose name is given here as R. J. Smith, which begins on page 351 of the copy which I hold in my hand, and extends to the conclusion of the deposition.

Mr. Cruce: Objected to as incompetent.

The Court: The same objection, I suppose, on the part of each counsel; the same ruling by the Court and exceptions noted.

Mr. German: Likewise, we offer for the same purpose and for the same reason, the deposition of Walted Banks, given in the same case as the deposition of Dennis Jones above referred to, which appears in the certified copy beginning on page 80 and ending on page 115.

Mr. Cruce: The same objection.

The Court: The record may show the same objection on the part of counsel, and the same ruling and exceptions noted.

Mr. German: We offer the deposition of Samuel Nash, given in the same case as the deposition of Dennis Jones, and on the same occasion, and we offer it for the same purpose.

The Court: Now, you will eventually offer that entire bunch?

Mr. German: No, sir, it is the last one.

The Court: Admitted over the same objection and ruling, and exceptions noted.

A. Yes, had a few words with her, yes, sir.

Q. Along in 1884, '85 and '86 can you state whether or not from the appearance of Minnie she was carry a child?

Mr. Lytle: Same objection to that.

Mr. Rosser: Same objection.

Mr. Greenslade: Same objection.

A. (No answer.)

A. Well, at that time I would take Granny Letcher to be about 34 years old.

A. Well, during the time she was there, her and the child were there together.

Q. How long was that?

Q. Do you know whether or not Minnie left Leavenworth after the child was born? A. Yes, sir.

Q. About how old was the child when Minnie left Leavenworth?

A. Well, I do not know just; I could not tell exactly, the child was a couple of years old, she hung around Granny's there quite a little while after the child was born.

Q. You may state whether or not Minnie lived at Granny Letcher's all the time or whether she was there sometimes, and other places in the City?

A. Well, that I could not say; I have seen her there quite often; she stayed there and lived around. I have seen her at the table eating, seen her in the wash tub, helped to wash, and I just supposed she lived there.

Q. Did you see Minnie again after she left when the child was about two years old, before you saw her here in the last year? A. No, sir.

Q. After Minnie left when the child was about two years old, did you see that child any more?

A. Did I see that child any more?

Q. Yes. A. Oh, yes.

Q. Where did the child stay?

A. The child staid with Granny Letcher.

Q. About how long did the child stay around Letcher's that you saw it?

A. Several years, ten or twelve years, may be longer.

Q. Is Granny Letcher living or dead? A. She is dead.

Q. Do you remember about when she died?

A. Well, she died after the Spanich American War. Granny Letcher died after the close of the Spanish American War sometime, I can tell you why, if you want me to.

Q. Would you say she died about 1900?

A. About that time; I was going to tell why——

Q. How long before she died was it that you lost sight of the child? A. How long before Granny died?

Mr. Lytle: I object to the question as leading and suggestive.

Q. At the time of Granny's death, you may state whether or not the child was still living at her house?

A. Still there, still, I think at Granny's death.

Q. At Granny's death?

A. Yes, that is my recollection; I am pretty sure about that.

Q. What was the appearance of this child as to being light or dark?

A. It was a light complexioned child; very bright little boy.

Q. What was the condition of its hair as to being——

A. Good hair, almost straight.

Q. At any rate it was not kinky?

A. Oh, no, no, no it was between a light boy and dark complexioned; red features, good hair, and his features were good.

Q. When you say "good" hair, what do you mean?

A. Straight hair.

Q. Do you remember any other boys that were at Granny Letcher's when Tommy was a small boy?

A. Her son, Granny's son, "Jim" was there, and there was a boy there they called "Walter."

Q. Walter Nash?

A. Sam was—was the one armed boy. She raised Sam.

Q. Sam Nash was a one armed boy? A. Yes.

Q. And Walter Banks had two arms? A. Two arms.

Q. He is her son? A. Yes, Jim was there her son.

Q. Jim is dead now? A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember a physicial here by the name of McCormick?

Mr. Rosser: I object to the question as leading.

A. Yes, I know Dr. McCormick.

Q. You may state whether or not he resided in Leavenworth in 1884 and 1885 and 1886?

A. Yes, and 10 or 15 years prior to that time.

Q. He is dead now, is he not? A. Yes.

Q. Do you know what physician attended Minnie at the time the child was born? A. No, sir.

Mr. Rosser: I move to strike the testimony with reference to the physician as not tending to prove or disprove any issue in this case; and because it is impertinent.

Mr. Lytle: I make the same motion.

Q. While Tommy was a boy around Leavenworth did you have any children?

A. I raised a boy; I never had any of my own.

Q. What was the boy's name you raised? A. Robert.

Q. Did you live anywhere near the Letcher place?

A. Oh, about four blocks.

Q. You may state whether or not this Tommie sometimes associated with your boy?

A. I seen him playing with my boy.

Q. When he was about how old?

A. Oh, probably 10 or 11 years old, twelve may be. That is he was about the age when I noticed him paying around with my boy.

Mr. Rice: That is all.

Cross Examination by Mr. Lytle (?) (Rosser).

Q. You say you are 50 years old?

A. The 9th day of next month I will be 58 if I stay on earth that long.

Q. In 1884, '83, '84, '85 and '86 you were portering at the National Hotel? A. No, the Continental.

Q. What year did you go to work for them?

A. About 1880—'79 or '80.

Q. When did you quit working for the hotel?

A. Along somewheres about '86 or '87, along in there.

A. Might have been later; I do not know just when I quit; I worked for them about six years—five or six years.

Q. And went to work in '79 or '80; you do not remember the exact date?

A. '79 or '80. I got married on the 30th day of October, 1880, and I was working at the Continental Hotel at that time, and I had been working there for some time.

Q. And you worked there for some time afterward?

A. Yes.

Q. Was your wife employed there too.

A. No, my wife never hit a lick for anybody but me.

Q. How is that?

A. My wife never hit a lick for anybody but me.

Q. How is that?

A. A kind of a tough resort, a place where men and women resorted for immoral purposes.

Q. Yes, a place where men and women resorted for immoral purposes; do you know how many women stayed in that house? A. Besides Mrs. Letcher and Minnie?

Q. Yes?

A. No, there was always two or three women there, two or three, sometimes more than that; and then again may be you would not see them; some one around there all the time.

Q. Did Minnie stay there all the time?

A. Most of the time; she was there when she was pregnant, and after the birth of the child, and stayed around there when the child toddled around and crawled pulling two chairs.

Q. Before she became pregnant did she stay there most of the time?

A. Well, I do not know where she stayed. I found out —I have heard where she worked at anyway.

Q. I am not asking you what you found out.

A. I could not tell.

Q. You did not see her yourself?

A. The first time I ever saw Minnie in my life was at Granny Letcher's.

Q. The first time you ever saw Minnie she was at Granny Letcher's? A. Yes.

Q. That you think was about 1884? A. About that time.

Q. And at that time she was pregnant?

A. No, well that time I guess she must have been the first time I ever seen her, but it developed and developed until it became noticeable.

Q. But the first time you saw her she must have been pregnant judging what took place? A. Yes, sir.

Q. The child was born at the Letcher woman's and you were not present then? A. No, I know nothing about that.

Q. Didn't you state that the woman stayed there at the Letcher woman's with her child until it was two years old?

A. Something like that, yes.

Q. Do you know exactly when she left there?

A. No, not—I know about the time she left there.

Q. You do not know personally where she went?

A. No, not; I do not know where she went but I know what I found out afterwards.

Q. Well, that is all rumor, of course; and when was the last time you saw this child you spoke of?

A. Well, it must be probably twelve or fourteen years ago.

Q. You have been here in the city all the time you say for the last 50 years?

A. This has been my home, yes, I was out in Colorado in 1871 to 1876 living in Denver.

Q. Living in Denver, Colorado from 1871 to 1786?

A. From 1871 to 1876 or 1877.

Q. You have not lived anywhere since that time?

A. Right here in Leavenworth; I have been right here and since 1892, practicing law.

Q. Since 1892? A. Yes.

Q. What became of this child? A. I do not know.

Q. You do not know? A. No, I wish I did.

Q. You are a colored man?

A. Well, my grandfather was an Indian full blood.

Q. Your grandfather?

A. My grandfather on my father's side was a full blood Indian.

Q. Well, you are——

A. Identified with the colored race.

Q. You live and associate with the colored race?

A. Oh, yes, of course.

Q. You say this child was associated with the one you were raising? A. Why sure, he was as good as he was.

Q. The other children Granny Letcher was raising associated with your child?

A. Yes, and I associated with them; played ball with her son Jim Mayo around the house, her son was captain of the team and we would all meet there to make arrangements to play ball.

Q. At her place? A. Yes.

Q. You did associate with her family a good deal at that time? A. Why sure.

Mr. Rice: I object to the question as indefinite and uncertain.

A. We just knew her as old Granny Letcher, and would go there any time we got ready; she would treat us all well.

Q. And Minnie left there and you never saw her until a few days ago?

Mr. Lytle: That is all.

Redirect Examination by Mr. Rice.

Q. I take it that you are about 58 years now?

Mr. Lytle: No, now.

Q. Now? A. Next birthday.

Q. Then in 1884 and 1885 you were——

A. About 28 to 30 years old.

Q. You played on the base ball team at that time?

A. Yes, played ball.

Q. Now who was captain of the base ball team?

A. Jim Mayo, Mrs. Letcher's son.

Q. Jim Mayo, Mrs. Letcher's son; and during that period you were around the Letcher house and it was during that period that Minnie gave birth to that child?

A. Yes, we were playing ball at that time whenever I could get away from my work I would go up there.

Mr. Rice: That is all.

Cross Examination by Mr. Greenslade.

Q. Dennis, what was Minnie's occupation from about 1880 to 1885? A. From 1880 to 1885?

Q. Yes.

A. I cannot tell; I have heard she worked for Banker

Hyde out here in South Leavenworth for a little while, two or three months may be?

Q. During the time you knew her she was boarding at the Letcher house?

A. Right when I first knew her she was at the Letcher house.

Q. How long did she stay there?

A. A couple of years, about that time.

Q. What was her reputation at that time?

A. Oh, she was running around on the street; street woman.

Q. You mean a prostitute?

A. Well, if you call it that. I would not like to say.

Q. Well, a common prostitute?

A. Well, not not a common prostitute, because we had houses where they were not like hers, but regulated by the police department.

Q. Her reputation was that of a sporting woman?

A. She would run around about.

Q. Did she associate with colored or white?

A. At Mrs. Letcher's she associated with most anybody that would come there; white women were just the same as colored women, anybody that wanted to meet her.

Q. And other women stayed there at the same house off and on? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And at that time white and colored?

A. I would not say white; about all I think was white men.

Q. And other colored men would stay there?

A. Yes, I have seen also colored men there.

Q. Were there other people besides her there?

A. Yes, Walter Banks was there, and Sam Nash and Jim Mayo.

Q. They were illegitimate children? A. I don't know.

Q. You did know their parents? A. No.

Q. They were not the children of Mrs. Letcher?

A. Jim was.

Q. The other two were not? A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. You were not present when Tommie was born?

A. No, sir.

Q. Don't know who the attending physician was?

A. No.

Q. Don't know who the mid-wife was? A. No, sir.

Q. How do you know Tommie was Minnie's child?

A. By seeing her nourishing and cherishing and nursing it around after she had been in a family way to my knowledge; the child was born there, and she took care of this child, and naturally I thought it was her child.

Q. You didn't talk with her?

A. Just "How do you do" and "Good Morning" and "Where is Jim," "Where is Sam"?

Q. Who was Tommie's father?

A. I do not know; I know he was hers.

Q. Was he reputed to be a white or colored man?

Mr. Rice: I object to the question as improper cross.

A. Well, I have heard it both ways.

Q. Dennis, how old was this boy Tommie when you last saw him?

A. Well, he was between probably twelve or fourteen years old.

Q. Twelve or fourteen years old?

A. May be older, along there.

Q. Did he remain all the time that you knew him at this Letcher house? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who supported him?

A. That is I never seen him anywheres else. I never seen him except I seen him there in and out around the building there.

Q. Who supported him?

A. I could not tell you that; Granny Letcher, I guess; she was a very good woman with children.

Q. Did he go to school in this town?

A. I think he did; I cannot be sure of that; I think he went to the primary grade; I wont be positive.

Q. Did you ever know of him doing any work here?

A. No.

Q. As a boy, where did he go when he left here?

A. I wish I knew, I do not.

Q. How old a boy is this Rob Jones?

A. Rob is 30 past.

Q. How old was he when he left Leavenworth?

A. Rob has been gone away from here about eight years.

Q. Rob has been gone away from here about eight years?

A. Yes, he went away from here eight years ago.

Q. How does his age compare with those other boys?

A. They are near the same aged boys; almost the same age.

Q. Relative to the time Rob left Leavenworth when did Tommie leave Leavenworth?

A. Well, it was after that; quite a while after that.

Q. You mean Tommie left Leavenworth quite a while after?

A. Quite awhile before Rob; my boy left quite awhile after.

Q. Do you know the exact time he left? A. My boy?

Q. No, Tommie? A. No, I do not.

Q. How do you know he left?

A. Just missed him, didn't see him around any more.

Q. To your knowledge had that boy Tommie ever been out of Leavenworth until the time you missed him entirely?

A. Not to my knowledge, Mr. Greenslade.

Q. After Minnie left Leavenworth did she ever come back to see the boy at all.

A. If she did I did not see her.

Q. Where is Rob Jones now?

A. He is in Washington, D. C.; that is he was the last I heard from him.

Q. What is he doing?

A. Portering, table waiting for some kind of a roof garden club there.

Mr. Rice: I object to the question as improper cross examination.

Q. Dennis, when did you last hear that Tommie Atkins was alive?

Mr. Rice: I object to the question as improper cross examination. If counsel insists on the witness answering that question the witness will be considered his witness.

A. I never did hear anything about it after he left here.

Q. Never heard anything about him?

A. Not until here a few weeks ago.

Q. Here a few weeks ago did you hear he was alive or dead?

Mr. Rice: I object to the question as improper cross examination and I ask that the answer be considered the answer of the witness of the defendant, The Gypsy Oil Company.

A. I heard he was dead?

Q. You heard he was dead? A. Yes.

Q. Where did you hear that he died? A. Chicago.

Q. Chicago?

Mr. Rice: Same objection and same request as to the last question asked.

Q. Did you hear at that time whether or not he was married.

Mr. Rice: Same objection and same request as to the answer.

A. Well, now I never heard that; I got a letter from a party telling me that he was dead.

Q. You say you got a letter from a party telling you that he was dead? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is the only information you have.

A. Yes, but that information was got——

Q. That is hearsay evidence and of course it might as well be stricken out.

Mr. Rice: It may be left in, that is all right.

Recross Examination by Mr. Lytle.

Q. Did I understand you correctly to say you saw this boy that was called Tommie 12 or 14 years ago?

A. I judge that was about that length of time.

Q. You saw him after the death of Mrs. Letcher?

A. I saw Tommie before just during the Spanish American War; that was in 1898—along about there.

Q. Did I understand you to say you saw him after the death of Mrs. Letcher?

A. Granny Letcher died in 1900, I seen the boy in 1898 or 1899.

Q. So your testimony now is?

A. And always has been.

Q. I am just saying that your testimony now is that for at least a year prior to the death of Mrs. Letcher you had not seen this boy?

A. Why the best of my judgment would be that; it might be more or less.

Q. So far as you know he was swallowed right up.

A. I do not know where he was.

Q. You were well acquainted with the family?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Visited there frequently? A. Yes, quite often.

Q. You say that this boy was a white boy?

A. Complexioned yes.

Q. White complexioned with straight hair? A. Yes.

Q. Black? A. Yes.

Q. Black hair?

A. Well, dark, it was not red, yellow or anything like that; it was dark hair.

Q. It was dark brown or black?

A. It was as dark as this, (indicating) may be darker.

Q. It was dark brown?

A. May be darker than this; it was between a black and a brown.

Q. And during the time that you knew Minnie here in Leavenworth she went under the name of Minnie Atkins?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And so far as you know, she never had any other name?

A. No, when I first saw her I did not know whether her name was Atkins, or not; I found out later.

Q. When did you find out her name was Atkins?

A. I will tell you about that; she went to the colored church at on 6th and Pottawatomie with a colored man and the other darkies wanted to know why he would bring a white to a black church, so I among others began to inquire about her name and whether that was her husband, or not.

Q. Just a moment. Was that before of after the birth of Tommie?

A. That was after the birth of Tommie; and there was where I found out her name was Minnie Atkins.

Q. Why did you then say that the boy's name was Tommie Atkins that was born at Mrs. Letcher's?

A. They all called him Tommie Atkins; I did not know whether that was her husband or not, I began to ask about her and what her name was and that is when I found out her name was Atkins.

Q. About how old was this Tommie when you first saw him? A. He was a baby.

Q. Well, about how old?

A. May be two or three months, may be four months; may be six months.

Q. That you are not able to state now within a period of six months as to when he was born?

A. Well, I said for two or three months. May be longer; within two to six months when I first knew about it. That has been a long time ago.

Q. Hadn't you been at the Letcher home during that period from two to six months? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You had been? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You saw Minnie every time you went there?

A. No, sir, I didn't intend to say any such thing and I do not know that I did. And I do not now say so. I might have been there 50 times and didn't see her.

Q. You are not able to state now whether you went there and saw Minnie 50 times or one time covering that period?

A. I did state it; I did.

Q. But you now say you could have been there 50 times and not have seen her?

A. That is what I mean; I might have done that and then might not.

Q. In fact the circumstances at the time didn't impress this upon your mind very firmly?

A. I didn't go there to see Minnie; I was just scouring around; and I talked and played base ball; and if she was there I seen her; she might have been in a room upstairs in the house with the baby boy before I seen her, and I not know about it. I remember about the time I seen her and the kid.

Mr. Lytle: That is all.

Redirect Examination by Mr. Rice.

Q. I believe in your testimony by Mr. Rosser, I think it was, you stated you did see Tom after Granny Letcher's death. Now, if you did make that statement do you wish to correct it?

A. That I saw Tommie after Granny Letcher died?

Q. Yes.

A. I didn't say that; I said I saw Tommie between 1888 and 1889, and Granny Letcher died in 1900.

Q. In answer to the question you mean 1898 or 1899?

A. Yes—the Spanish American War.

Mr. Lytle: I object to him prompting the witness.

A. Well, I meant 1898 or 1899.

Q. Now in order to get the record clear, you say Tommie shortly before the Spanish American War, about 1898 or 1899? A. Along in there somewhere.

Q. And Granny Letcher died in 1900.

A. Yes.

Q. Now Mr. Lytle asked you how you knew that Minnie Atkins was named Atkins and you have testified about some church affair you questioned about her. Did you question her?

A. No, we asked; I do not know just how we got—we were all just trying to find out and I heard she was working for Banker Hyde out there; and that is how we found out.

Q. Did you find out at that time what her blood was?

A. They called her "Indian Minnie" before I found out she worked at Hydes.

Q. Did you find out at that time where her home was? Where she was from?

A. No, no, I never found where she was from.

Q. Did you learn what Indian blood was in her. A. No.

Mr. Rice: That is all.

Cross Examination by Mr. Rosser.

Q. You say you began practicing law in 1892? A. Yes.

Q. Where was your office, Mr. Smith?

A. I was with W. B. Townsend on 5th street, in the Hunt Building.

Q. On the ground floor or up stairs? A. Up stairs.

Q. And where was that with reference to Granny Letcher's place?

A. Let's see, about four and a half or five blocks.

Q. About four and a half or five blocks; and where was it —did you pass her place in going to and from home?

A. No, sir, I never did do that.

Q. You never did that? A. No.

Q. When you began the practice of law you went to your office regularly, did you?

A. Well, I do not know that I did.

Q. Not very regular about that?

A. Oh, as often as I felt like it—felt disposed; I did other work after I began the practice of law; you see I didn't have all the money I wanted to buy books and things and I did other work.

Q. You say you think the child went to school some time?

A. I don't know; no I did not; that aint my statement; I said I did not remember whether her children attended school or not.

Q. I understood you to say the child went to school.

A. I think possibly he may have gone to the primary grade.

Q. You are just guessing; you do not know anything about that?

A. No, just my view. All children should go to school, and probably he went.

Q. That is true. The woman Minnie attended colored church? A. I saw her there one time.

Q. One night? A. One time.

Q. That was after Tommie was born? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you made some question about home she came to be there with your pastor?

A. No I never said anything about that.

Q. You said there was somebody got up—what was it?

A. I said there was a commotion among the colored people—not a commotion either, but they were all curious to know who she was and why a colored man would bring a white woman to church.

Q. A colored man—did a colored man bring her there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was that colored man.

A. I do not know; I could not say who the colored man was; if I ever knew, I do not know now.

Q. You made some investigation as to whom she was?

A. Yes, as to who she was.

Q. Is the Banker living now? A. I do not know.

Q. You do not know? A. No, sir.

Q. He was living here at that time; during the time you made the investigation?

A. Yes, he was living here 30 years ago.

Q. How is that?

A. He was living here 30 years—up to 30 years ago, since then—I do not think it has been 30 years years since he was here; I do not know just when Banker Hyde left here—it has not been that long.

Q. You do not know where he moved?

A. Except what I have heard, back to Massachusetts somewhere.

Q. What was the relative age of those boys and the other —of this boy and the other children they had at Granny Letcher's?

A. Oh, I do not know. Jim was older and Sam was older.

Q. I did not understand?

A. Jim was older and Sam was older. I think he and Walter must be near the same age.

Q. Whose child was Walter?

A. I do not know; they called him "Walter Banks," I do not know whose he was.

Q. Was he born there? A. I do not know.

Q. You do not know about that—when did you first see him? A. Oh, seen him there at Granny's.

Q. When did you first see him with reference to the time you first saw Tommie?

A. I think he was there about the same time and I have seen him, oh, many, many, many times in going there.

Q. Who seemed to be his mother; who was in charge of him? A. Granny Letcher.

Q. Was she his mother? A. I do not know.

Q. You do not know? A. No, I do not know.

Q. Never heard who was his mother?

A. No I never heard who was his mother—anything about his mother; if I ever heard anything about his mother I do not know it.

Q. That was the Banks boy's? A. Yes, Walter Banks.

Q. Walter Banks? A. Yes.

Q. And the other was named Mayo? A. Jim Mayo.

Q. Who was his mother? A. Granny.

Q. She was his mother? A. Yes.

Q. And the other—what was his name? A. Sam Nash?

Q. Who was his mother? A. I never did know.

Q. You never heard that? A. No, sir.

Q. How much older was Nash, if any, than Tommie?

A. Sam is now 46 or 48 probably—45 or 46.

Q. He was a good chunk of a boy?

A. Yes, sir, small for his age; he is not very large now.

Q. When did you first get acquainted with Mrs. Letcher?

A. Probably here in 45 or 46 years ago.

Q. Forty-five or 46 years ago. You got acquainted with her soon after you came here yourself? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And before any of these children were at her house?

A. Jim was there; Jim was born.

Q. Jim was there when you first got acquainted with her?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. See Nash?

A. I do not think Nash was there—I might—I do not think Nash was there.

Q. Do you remember when he first came there? A. No.

Q. You never saw who brought or who had charge of him? A. No, sir, I could not say that.

Q. Granny Letcher never told you? A. No.

Mr. Rosser: That is all.

Recross Examination by Mr. Lytle.

Q. About how old was this boy Tommie at the time Minnie went to the colored church?

A. Oh, I do not know; I could not tell you that.

Q. Well, was he a year old?

A. I have said I do not know, and I would not try to guess it out.

Q. Was he as much as two years old?

A. He may have been six months old; he may not have been over a day—and he——

Q. And he might have been a year?

A. Minnie went to church after Tommie was born and Minnie left here a couple of years after the birth of the child.

Q. But you could not—it didn't impress it this strongly enough on your mind so you are able to state what period—in what period that two years of this church episode occurred?

A. No, I never was impressed with it—with none of it.

Mr. Lytle: That is all.

Recross Examination by Mr. Greenslade.

Q. What was the condition of this boy's—Tommie's health?

A. I guess he had good health. Always around playing; I never noticed him being sickly—good health.

Q. Good health up to the time he left?

A. Well I could not say that. I didn't pay that much attention to the boy.

Q. He appeared to be good and stout, healthy?

A. I do not know; I never paid close enough attention to tell whether he was healthy or not. I know he was a boy around about.

Mr. Greenslade: That is all.

R. J. SMITH, of lawful age, being by me first duly examined, cautioned and solemnly sworn to testify the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, deposed and said:

Direct Examination by Mr. Rice.

Q. State your name? A. R. J. Smith.

Mr. Rosser: I object to the testimony of this witness for the reason that he was not sworn and put under the rule at the beginning of the taking of these depositions.

Mr. Lytle: I object to the testimony of this witness for the reason that although he has been present in the courthouse during the entire taking of these depositions, he has not sworn, and was not placed under the rule; and for the further reason that the witnesses who have so far testifed have not been admonished, that they were not to discuss with any person excepting the attorneys in the case the evidence which had been adduced while they were on the stand.

Mr. Greenslade: We make the same objection and the further objection to the testimony of this witness because it does not appear he is a party or attorney to the suit; and to the evidence of former witnesses with whom he has conversed about the testimony which they should give in this case.

Mr. Lytle: We adopt the exception and objection by Mr. Greenslade.

Q. Rube, were you in the room when any testimony was given in the taking of these depositions?

A. Not in this room.

Q. Were you in any room in the courthouse when any testimony was given there? A. No, sir.

A. Since the fall of 1861.

Q. What kind of business are you engaged?

A. My business is handling real estate; I am deputy sheriff at the present time, have been for four or six years.

Mr. Greenslade: Deputy Sheriff? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Those roads were tributary to Leavenworth?

A. Yes, sir, the central point at that time.

Q. What was the nature of your duties?

A. How is that?

Q. What was the nature of your duties?

Mr. Lytle: I object to the question as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

Mr. Greenslade: I object to the question as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, and not tending to prove any issue in the case.

Mr. Rosser: I object to the question as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

Q. Go ahead. A. I said it.

Q. Which?

A. My duties were to count, rebill and ship stock to any portion of the world that the bills called for.

Mr. Lytle: I move to strike the answer as wholly irrelevant and immaterial to any issue in the case.

Q. Did you have any other business at the time you acted as agent for these various roads?

A. I had a store, a grocery store.

Q. What was the location of the grocery store?

A. 407 Kiowa.

Q. That was next door to your house?

A. Next door to my residence.

Q. In running the store were you there in 1884, 1885 and 1886?

A. Yes, sir, I had my wife and my Uncle and my boy.

Q. To help in the store?

A. Yes, they attended to the store when I was in the office.

Q. During the years I have mentioned were you acquainted with a colored woman called Letcher, sometimes called "Granny Letcher"? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did she reside relative to the location of George Crilly's barn, that is along about 1885 and 1886?

Mr. Lytle: I object for the reason that the witness had not shown that he knows the location of George Crilly's barn.

Q. Go ahead and answer the question.

A. Why she lived at that time at Number 217 Seneca Street, on the south side opposite Crilly's residence.

Q. In Leavenworth? A. In Leavenworth, yes, sir.

Q. Were you during the years, 1884, 1885 and 1886—along in that time acquainted with a girl called "Minnie," or "Indian Minnie," or "Minnie Atkins?"

A. She lived at that time——

Q. Answer the question, were you acquainted with her?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Under what name or names did you know her?

A. Why, her general name was "Indian Minnie."

Q. Did you know her by any other name? A. Atkins.

Q. What kind of looking girl was she as to being light or dark?

A. Oh she seemed to me to be half breed Indian, light.

Q. About what was her age in 1885?

A. Well, that I should judge, my judgment is she was somewhere along about 19 or 20; I do not know.

Q. Where did you first become acquainted with her, as to what place in the United States, was it in Leavenworth?

A. In Leavenworth, yes, sir.

Q. At what place in Leavenworth?

A. Why at Granny Letcher's; Oh I seen her before, but I was not acquainted.

Q. Now, do I understand that you had seen her before you became acquainted with her at Granny Letcher's?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You first really knew her then at Granny Letcher's?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You may state whether or not from her appearance at that time you became acquainted with her at Granny Letcher's she was—you can say whether she was in a family way?

Mr. Lytle: I object to the question as leading and suggestive; and calling for the conclusion of the witness.

Mr. Rosser: I object for the same reasons.

Mr. Greenslade: Same objection.

Q. Answer the question. A. She seemed to me.

Q. What in her appearance indicated that to you?

A. I did not understand what you said.

Q. Read the question. (Question read).

Mr Lytle: I object to the question for the reason that the question pre-supposes that there was something with reference to her appearance that might have indicated that to the witness, which facts are not in evidence.

Q. Read the question please. (Question read).

A. A man of my age at that time of a family should know when he sees a woman that is pregnant, he would notice her.

Mr. Lytle: I object to the answer and move that it be stricken as not responsive to the question asked.

Q. Do you know whether or not subsequently to the time you saw her in a family way she gave birth to a child?

A. She did, she had a child there at Letchers.

Q. Just a minute; now where was that child born?

A. At Mrs. Letcher's.

Q. About how long after you first saw her at Mrs. Letcher's was the child born?

A. I think it was somewhere along in 1885.

Q. As to months from the time you first saw her at Mrs. Letcher's in a family way how many months until the child was born?

A. Oh, that was, when I noticed that that was probably a couple of months.

Q. How long after the child was born did you see it?

A. You mean after the child was born?

Q. Yes?

A. Oh, probably a week or ten days, something like that.

Q. Where did you see it? A. At Mrs. Letcher's.

Q. What doctors, if any, attended the birth of this child?

Mr. Lytle: I object to the question as leading and suggestive.

Q. You may answer? A. Why——

Q. Just answer that question?

A. Dr. McCormack, I think.

Q. Was there any woman at Letcher's at that time who aided in the birth of the child besides Mrs. Letcher?

A. There was an old lady there by the name of Aunt Betsy.

Q. What if anything was Aunt Betsey's business?

A. She was a granny, I think that is what she was called.

Q. What we call a mid-wife?

A. Yes, she may be termed that.

Q. What was the appearance of the child when you saw it as to being light or dark? A. Light.

Q. You may state whether or not you saw the mother after the child was born?

A. Yes, I saw her after the child was born.

Q. You may state whether or not you saw the child with her from time to time?

A. Yes, I think I noticed her having the child in her arms there, probably may be two or three different times I was there.

Q. Do you remember whether or not Minnie Atkins subsequently and right after the birth of the child left that Letcher place?

A. I know I missed her from there and I never saw her.

Q. You at that time were engaged in the grocery business? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were there any business relations between you and Mrs. Letcher relative to the purchasing or selling of groceries?

Mr. Rosser: I object to that as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

Mr. Greenslade: Same objection.

Mr. Lytle: I take it that is preliminary.

Mr. Rice: Yes.

A. Why, she traded there with me same as other people, as Judge Hood—I guess 150 people traded there at my store; I didn't have no piece of one.

Mr. Rosser: Had what?

A. I didn't have no piece of a store.

Mr. Rosser: A full grown one?

A. A full grown one, plenty of it too.

Q. In making deliveries during the time you have mentioned who delivered groceries to the Letcher house from time to time?

A. Some times I would go, sometimes my uncle.

Q. Was this baby a boy or girl? A. Boy.

Q. What was he called? A. Tommie.

Q. And how old was Tommie when the mother, Minnie, passed out of your view?

A. Oh, he must have been in the neighborhood of a year and a half, may be, might have been two years old—along there; I would not be positive; I didn't keep any dates.

Q. After the mother passed out of your view did you ever see the baby again around there?

A. Yes, the boy got to be quite a good sized boy.

Q. After the mother went away where did the boy stay?

A. He stayed around the old Lady Letcher's.

The witness was here withdrawn a few minutes to permit the taking of Mrs. Dillman's testimony, after which the examination was resumed as follows:

Q. You may state after the mother went the boy passed out of your view? A. Yes.

Q. About how old was the boy when you last remember seeing him?

A. Oh, I could not say that, the best of my judgment probably he was six or seven, may be eight, I could not be positive, I do not know.

Q. Where was he living after the mother left?

A. The boy?

Q. Yes?

A. Why he was there when I seen him; he was living at Letcher's.

Q. What was his appearance when he was along six or seven or eight years old as to being light or dark?

A. Light colored.

Q. What was his hair? A Hair was dark.

Q. Was his hair curly, kinky or straight. A. No.

Q. What was it? A. Straight.

Q. And his hair was dark, you say? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you seen this Minnie Atkins of whom you have spoken in the last few weeks? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that the same woman you knew in 1884 and 1885?

A. Yes, sir, same Minnie Atkins.

Q. After Minnie left and passed out of your view did you ever see her again until you saw her lately?

A. I did not see her no more until I seen her here, and I hadn't thought any more about it.

Q. Did you ever see him again after he was about that age? A. I do not remember ever seeing him.

Q. So far as you now know your best recollection is you have not seen him since he was about six or seven or eight years old? A. I do not think I have.

Q. Do you remember whether or not there were any other boys living at Granny Letcher's house when that boy was a little fellow? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did they call this light boy, Minnie Atkin's son?

A. Which boy?

Q. Minnie's boy, what did they call him?

A. They called him Tommie.

Q. When Tommie was a little boy were there any other boys living at Granny Letcher's?

A. There was two boys there bigger than him.

Q. Who were they? A. Sam Nash.

Q. Sam Nash was a one armed boy? A. Yes.

Q. Did the old lady have a son who was there too?

A. Yes, his name was Jim, Jim Mayo.

Q. Jim Mayo?

A. That is what they called him; I do not know how he got the name.

Q. Now, who was the oldest of those three, Walter, Sam and Jim?

Q. Was Jim the oldest of that bunch?

A. The old lady's son; oh, he was a man.

Q. Then, who came next; who was the older, Walter or Sam? A. Sam was the next.

Q. How much older would you say Walter was than Tommie, if any? A. I could not say.

Q. One or two or three years?

A. But there was a difference in their age; this Walter, why he was a little boy running around there before Tommie appeared.

Q. Do you know whether Granny Letcher is still living?

A. She is dead.

Q. Do you know whether Jim Mayo is still living?

A. He is dead.

Q. When did he die? A. Granny Letcher died in 1900.

Q. When did Jim die?

A. Some months after that, I guess three of four.

Q. The mother died first?

A. Yes, that is my recollection she died first.

Q. Do you know whether—how long Minnie stayed at Granny Letcher's after the child was born?

A. I didn't just get that question.

Q. Do you know [] long Minnie stayed at Granny Letcher's after the child was born?

A. Well, possibly she was there a year; may be a little over. I could not say, may be two.

Q. Now, when you say that do you mean that she remained at Granny Letcher's for a year or that she remained in Leavenworth—in the vicinity for a year?

A. No I mean that she passed away; I do not know where she went.

Q. I see. You don't know when she left Granny Letcher's house?

A. No, I don't know nothing about when she left.

Q. That is all.

Q. How did you come to talk to Dennis Jones about the case? A. How did I?

Q. Yes?

A. I saw it in the paper and then after that we talked about the matter.

Q. What did you see in the paper?

A. About, I believe you were one of the gentlemen—I guess that you were here seeking——

Q. I was not here?

A. Well, some of them, I do not know it was some gentlemen that wanted to find something about the lawyer; I read something in the paper, I do not remember.

Q. That was about a month ago, was it?

A. I guess so, may be a little later than that?

Q. Shortly after that time you talked to Dennis Jones about it? A. Yes.

Q. How did you happen to talk to him about it?

A. Just noticed it in the paper, and I knew it had reference to Indian Minnie.

Q. What were you and Dennis talking about?

A. Just naturally just like you see an article in the paper, and we spoke of it and it passed off.

Q. What time did you see Dennis?

A. I do not know what time I did see him.

Q. You do not know what time you did see him? A. No.

A. Just what I seen in the paper, that is all there was to it.

Q. Were you talking with anybody else about this case?

A. Why, yes.

Q. Whom were you talking to?

A. Why several people; I was asking them about this case.

A. Yes, sir, I asked him if he knew her.

Q. Who else?

Q. Did you ever talk to George Crilly about it? A. Yes.

Q. Talked about it? A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever talk to Dick Nichols? A. No.

Q. Ever talk to Louis Brown? A. No.

Q. Did you ever talk to William Grape? A. Yes.

Q. Why did you talk to these people about this case?

A. Why did I?

Q. Yes? A. Why, I had a right to.

Q. I understand you had a right to.

Mr. Rice: Answer the reason why.

A. Oh, well I knew those people down around that house because I had seen them there; and Mr. Long asked me if I knew any people that had been around that house.

Q. And after Mr. Long asked you that, then you talked to these other people?

A. I asked the people myself; he didn't ask me that.

Q. Why were you—how were you interested in finding people that knew about the case?

A. How were I interested in finding people that knew about this case?

Q. Yes?

A. Just the same as any other man in business.

Q. Did Mr. Long ask you to find some people who were interested?

A. He asked me if I knew of any and I told him I did.

Q. You then saw these other people for him.

A. I went to these people and asked them because I knew they knew her.

Q. Did Mr. Long pay you anything for that?

A. I do not work for nothing.

Q. Did he pay you anything for that?

A. I am like all business men.

Q. Then you mean to say he did pay you for your services? A. Why, I expect he will; I do not know.

Q. Did you make a contract with him?

A. No, I haven't any contract.

Q. But you had an understanding he was to pay you for your services? A. Why of course.

Q. How much was Mr. Long to pay you for your services in finding these witnesses.

A. I do not know. I didn't ask him; I might go and get it now; I didn't ask the question.

Q. But he promised to pay you?

A. I told him, I said "I want pay for my time, services," he said "All right, that is all right."

Q. Now how long ago was that you had that talk with him? A. I could not say just exactly.

A. I talked to her this much; I told her that they wanted her over at the courthouse over the phone.

Q. You told her they wanted her at the court house?

A. Yes.

Q. Why did you tell her that?

A. Because Mr. Long asked me to call her up.

Q. You were asking her to come over here as a witness in the case? A. No, sir.

Q. Told her they wanted her is all?

A. Wanted her at the courthouse.

Q. Did you talk to her before that?

Q. You did not know she knew anything about it?

A. No, sir.

Q. For the last few weeks have you been working for Mr. Long in this matter? A. Yes.

Q. Do you know what connection Mr. Long has with this case? A. I do not.

Q. You do not. During the last two or three days you know that testimony has been taken in this case, do you not?

A. Yes.

Q. During the last day or two. During which time testimony has been taken you have been here at the courthouse, have you not? A. That is my business to be here.

Q. And you have been staying out in the courtroom near the room where this testimony has been taken, have you not?

A. I have been staying out there in the clerk's office, or standing around the grating.

Q. And during this time you have been talking to witnesses who have been testifying before and after they have testified? A. Not at all, no.

Q. Well, did you at all? A. What is that?

Q. Talk to witnesses? A. I told you who I talked to.

Q. Just answer my question.

A. Well, I am going to; I am going to be fair with you.

Q. During the last day or two during the time which testimony has been taken in this case in this room, and in the courtroom you have been in the adjoining room talking to witnesses, have you not?

A. Not all your witnesses.

Q. Have you talked to any of them during that time in those places? A. I have.

Q. You have. Did you ever talk to them both before and after they have testified? A. Not about the case.

Q. I didn't ask that? A. Oh, yes, I talked to them.

Q. In other words you have assisted Mr. Long during the last two or three days in getting the witnesses here, and in obtaining the witnesses who should testify, have you not?

A. I told you I did.

Q. You did. Did you talk to Dennis Jones about this case since the first conversation you had with him?

A. About the case?

Q. Yes?

A. No, he is right here the same as I am; he could see what was going on the same as I could.

Q. Were you ever talking to him?

A. Not concerning the case as I know. Nothing particularly about the case.

Q. Were you talking to him at all at any time about about the witnesses? A. No.

Q. Have you talked to him at any time about getting witnesses in this case? A. No, that is Mr. Long's business.

Q. That is Mr. Long's business? A. Yes.

Q. And you have assisted Mr. Long? A. Certainly.

Q. You do not know anything about that.

A. Not one thing.

Q. Don't you know that Dennis Jones has been talking to some of these witnesses about this case?

A. Not in my presence?

Q. I didn't ask you if it was in your presence, I asked you if you knew that? A. No, I know that.

Q. All right, say so then.

A. I am just trying to give you the truth, that is all.

Q. Before the time Mr. Long first talked to you about this case about getting witnesses did you remember about Minnie?

A. What is the question?

Q. Did you have any recollection of Minnie Atkins?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. You did?

A. Yes, that is after I seen the newspaper article.

Q. After you saw the newspaper article, then you remembered Minnie? A. Yes, I remembered Minnie Atkins.

Q. Before that time you didn't remember her at all?

A. Well, yes, I knew her.

Q. But you had forgotten her?

A. There was nothing to refresh my mind, nothing to bring it up to me.

Q. Is it part of your duties as deputy sheriff to help people obtain witnesses?

Mr. Rice: I object to the question as improper cross examination.

Q. Read the question. A. Is it part of my duty?

Q. Yes? A. I am free to do as I please.

Q. Just answer the question; is is part of your duty as deputy sheriff?

A. No, not part of my duty, but as a man.

Q. As deputy sheriff do you devote all of your time to county business? A. Not all of my time.

Q. How much of your time? A. I could not say that.

A. I do not know how much time I devote.

Q. How many arrests have you made in the last month?

A. That I could not tell you.

Q. Have you made any? A. Yes.

Q. How many? A. I do not know.

Q. As many as fifty? A. No.

Q. Have you served any summons in the last month?

A. No, none at all.

Q. Have you served any processes out of the sheriff's office in the last month?

A. As a matter of fact you devote only a very small part of your time to the work of Deputy Sheriff?

Mr. Rice: I object to the question as improper cross examination.

A. Why, I devote whatever time—whenever the sheriff calls me to go.

Q. Where was it you first talked to Frank Long about this case? A. Well, it was Leavenworth.

Q. In Leavenworth?

A. Either Leavenworth or Kansas City.

A. In this case?

Q. On business concerning this case?

A. I am in Kansas City sometimes five or six times a week.

Q. Did you see Minnie Atkins when you were down?

A. Minnie Atkins—I seen her right here.

Q. Did you see her in Kansas City?

A. I didn't meet her in Kansas City.

Q. Why did you go to Kansas City to see Mr. Long?

A. Because he called me up and wanted to see me.

Q. What did he was to see you about?

A. Private business.

Mr. Rice: I object to the question as improper cross examination.

Q. That is the only answer you can make?

A. That is private business.

Q. That is the only answer you would like to make?

A. That is all I am going to answer.

Q. All right. Has he paid you any money for your expenses in connection with the work in this case?

Mr. Rice: I object to the question as improper cross examination.

A. That is another private business.

Mr. Rice: You may answer the question.

Q. That is another answer you are not willing to make to that question. Read the question (question read).

A. Why, he paid my railroad fare to Kansas City and expenses I had when he called me down, of course.

Q. And how much other money has he paid you?

A. I think Mr. Long give me $10.00 once, I mean for expense that I had.

Q. That is all that he has paid you, is it?

A. I do not think he has—I think another time he gave me $5.

Q. And $15 is the total amount of money that he paid you? A. Yes, sir, he paid me that.

Q. Have you been employed by any other person than Frank Long to work in this case? A. No.

Q. Have you made any effort to find Thomas Atkins?

A. Have I made any effort?

Q. Yes? A. Why, no.

Q. Have you made any inquiries concerning his whereabouts?

A. Well, I simply asked some people here if they knew him, but nobody seemed to know anything about him.

Q. How old was Thomas Atkins when you last saw him?

A. Oh, I guess he was perhaps six or eight years old.

Q. Six or eight years old? A. Yes sir.

Q. Where was he living then? A. Who?

Q. Tommie Atkins?

A. Why, the last I knew him he was living on Seneca street.

Q. Do you know what became of him?

A. No, sir, I don't.

Q. At that time all of these facts about which you have testified made no particular impression upon your mind, did they? A. No.

Q. You were not interested in Tommie Atkins?

A. No more than I am now.

Q. You were not employed then to find out about him, were you?

A. No, why, I suppose we are all friendly in this matter, at least I am.

Q. Did you ever talk to Mrs. Letcher about this child?

A. Who?

Q. Mrs. Letcher? A. She has talked to me about it.

Q. Did she tell you what became of Thomas? A. No, sir.

Q. Were you sworn when the testimony started here?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. As a witness? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What day was that? A. I didn't understand.

Q. Were you sworn as a witness when we first started taking testimony here two days ago?

A. No, the first time I have been sworn——

Q. Was today when you commenced here giving your testimony? A. Yes.

Q. And were you present in the courtroom when the testimony started in this case here in Leavenworth?

A. No, sir, I have not been present; I have not heard a witness testify. That is all.

Cross Examination by Mr. Lytle.

Q. You were in the court building?

A. I was in the building.

Q. Yes? A. I was in the building.

Q. You were in the building when we were taking evidence in this case? A. I was in the court building.

Q. You were running a grocery store here in Leavenworth when?

A. I run a grocery store from 1884 up until 1893.

Q. In what period of those years was it when this child was born?

A. Well, now the best of my recollection it was either the latter part of '85 or '86.

Q. It might have been 1887 or 1888? A. Oh, no.

Q. How do you fix one of those years in preference to any other year? A. How is that?

Q. How do you fix one of those years in preference to any other year?

A. Simply my own mind; I have no record of it. That is my best judgment.

Q. It didn't create any special impression on your mind at the time did it? A. Well——

Q. You were not interested in the child? A. No.

Q. Nor in the mother?

A. No, I was—there was one thing that will refresh my memory. She at one time lived on Cherokee street and then she moved to Seneca street.

Q. That is Mrs. Letcher, you are speaking of? A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember about that occurrence?

A. Yes, from the time I would have to go there.

Q. But there was not anything that specially fixed this on your attention at the time was there?

A. Just simply——

Q. On the past occurrences, the same as the other occurrences here in Leavenworth?

A. Yes, and I fixed that time in my mind; that was about the time, in those years.

Q. You have not had it called to your attention within a period of 28 or 29 years?

A. Well, I would not say that, because I could not tell about anything—about how often I have spoken of it.

Q. You didn't have any cause to speak of after Minnie left, and after the child left, until you seen this circumstance in the paper, did you? A. No.

Q. So that for a period of anywheres from 25 to 28 or 29 years this matter had not been brought to your attention?

A. No, not lately.

Q. Not until just lately?

Q. And you say there was a child born to this woman at Granny Letcher's? A. Yes, sir.

Q. To refresh your recollection was the child not born at the Sister's Hospital here in Leavenworth?

A. Well, not of this woman I am speaking of.

Q. Not of this woman you are speaking of?

A. Not—yes, it could have been born in the hospital; I mean she could have been taken to the hospital at night when the child was born and be brought back in the next two or three days after that.

Q. You did see her in the next two or three days after?

A. No, I said not very long.

Q. How soon did you see the child after it was born?

A. How soon did I see the child?

Q. Yes?

A. I think probably five or six days, probably.

Q. Five or six days, and then you saw the mother from then on about how often?

A. The only way I knew her she had that child there; and old Lady Letcher said that Minnie had a baby; she is the one told me.

Q. Oh, that is the only way you knew her?

A. I saw I knew she was going to have one, that if I thought she was.

Q. And then Granny Letcher told you that she had had one? A. Had it, yes.

Q. And sometime after that you saw it?

A. I think it was four or five or six days, I could not exactly say.

Q. How often did you visit this Letcher house?

A. Every time I had an order there me or my uncle would take it.

Q. And how often would they call you?

A. Just when it was my turn to go; I could not tell certain.

Q. Do you mean as often as once a week or once a month?

A. Oh, no, it was sometimes—that wagon would go there twice a day.

Q. The wagon would go there twice a day?

A. Yes, indeed.

Q. And you think you went about half of the time the wagon went?

A. Oh, I do not know as I went half; I have been there twice a day sure.

Q. How?

A. I know I have been twice a day with the wagon.

Q. But you are now unable to say how many times you went with the wagon?

A I could not say that, no, not if I was going to be shot.

Q. Of course your business was just simply to take the groceries and deliver them and get away?

A. If I didn't want to stand there and talk; business men generally talk.

Q. And this continued after the birth of the child up until Granny Letcher died; or until you quit the grocery business?

A. What?

Q. Why did you quit going there?

A. Oh, yes, she traded there right along.

Q. She traded at your store and the goods were delivered until sometimes, that is about the time of the birth of the boy?

A. Yes.

Q. And this continued up until the time of Granny's death or until you quit the grocery business?

A. My uncle would go and I would go.

Q. How, how long did Minnie remain at Granny Letcher's? A. I do not know unless it was about——

Q. Well, do you know anything about it? How long she remained there? A. Well——

Q. Of your own knowledge—not what someone told you, but of your own knowledge do you know anything about it?

A. Well, if you want me to answer that question——

Q. I do, I do, I do want you to answer that question.

A. If you will just give me a second I will answer it, please? About a year and a half.

Q. About a year and a half; do you know when she left?

A. I saw about; I do not know, mind, the day she left; I could not tell you that.

Q. Well, your best judgment now is that she remained there about a year and a half? A. I——

Q. Is it? A. I think so.

Q. How long did she remain in Leavenworth??

A. Who, Minnie?

Q. Yes? A. From the time I knew her?

Q. Yes?

A. I think my best recollection about Minnie, I think she left here probably the latter part of 1886 or the first part of 1887, somewhere along there.

Q. It was not 1893 she left?

A. No she was gone then.

Q. Didn't she leave with the army and go to Fort Logan, Colorado? A. With the army?

Q. Yes, the army people at Fort Leavenworth?

A. No, I do not know; she might have left with a lawyer; I do not know; I do not know; I am telling the truth; I do not know, if I did I would tell you.

Q. You do not know when she left or with whom it was?

A. No sir, I am telling you the truth about the matter.

Q. Consequently you do not know how long she stayed in Leavenworth?

A. I don't know how long she stayed in Leavenworth.

Mr. Rice: I object to the question as misleading.

Q. All right, go ahead.

A. When I first knew Minnie it was along about 1885 I think or the latter part of 1884 to the latter part of 1886 or 1887 I knew no more of Minnie. Now that is all in a nutshell.

Q. Your entire knowledge of her whereabouts was confined to your knowledge of her being at Granny Letcher's?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is all.

Cross Examination by Mr. Rosser.

Q. You say you delivered groceries at Granny Letcher's for how long a time? A. Yes, she traded with me.

Q. How long did you stay in business after this child was born?

A. I was in business in the grocery business up until 1893.

Q. Who else was staying at Granny Letcher's besides these children that you spoke of and Minnie?

A. Why, Jim's wife.

Q. Who?

A. Jim Mayo's wife; this son of old lady Letcher.

Q. And Jim's wife, what was her name?

A. I do not know her name.

Q. What was her name before he married her?

A. Only Mayo, that is all.

Q. Was there anyone else staying there?

A. Oh, there was people in and out; I could not say how many stayed there.

Q. You could not say how many stayed there regularly?

A. Not regularly, no, sir.

Q. About how many?

A. There was three or four, I could not say; sometimes we would see a person there may be this week, may be next week they are gone, and we would see another one.

Q. Well, do you remember anyone staying there a considerable length of time?

A. You mean roomers?

Q. Yes?

A. Well, Jim's wife and Minnie; I do not know the other woman's name, she is dead. They taken her from there I think to the poor house or some place.

Q. That was Walter Banks' mother, was it not?

A. Well, that may be her, yes.

Q. Those are the only females stayed there along about that time, that is, regularly?

A. Yes, that I noticed; there were several there in and out and some white too.

Q. You didn't see all the people that were there?

A. Oh, I did see all the people that were there, but they were running a rooming house, just a rooming house, something like hotels; they are all run on the same plan; you cannot tell what is on the inside of a wall.

Q. You were delivering groceries for several months there and you did not notice any other woman staying there regularly except these you have mentioned?

A. I told you all who I——

Q. You didn't see any except these you have mentioned —you have mentioned all the women you saw staying there regularly during the time you were delivering groceries there?

A. Yes, that I knew.

Q. That you knew? A. Yes.

Q. Well, were you not pretty well acquainted with the colored people around through town at that time?

A. Yes.

Q. You did not know anybody else that stayed there regularly about that time?

A. Well, I do. If you call them by name, I can tell.

Q. Well, but I want your recollection?

A. Well, I have given mine.

Q. You have told all you saw there?

A. Yes, that I can remember now. If you call any name of them that stayed there, and if I know them I will tell you.

Q. I don't know the names, I am not acquainted with them. If there was any one else there at that time staying regularly you do not now remember it?

A. Jim's wife, and this woman that died.

Q. And Granny Letcher?

A. Yes, and another woman stayed there that this man Parker married.

Q. Parker? A. Yes.

Q. What was her name?

A. Mrs. Parker, that is all I know; before he married her I never did know her name, but he married her at the time she was staying there.

Q. How long did she stay there?

A. Well, I could not say that to be positive about it. Like any servant along up within a year may be.

Q. You do not know when two companies of cavalry, 2nd cavalry left the fort over here and went to Fort Logan, do you?

Mr. Rice: I object to the question as improper cross examination.

A. No, sir, I do not.

Q. You do not know that?

A. Because that is a common occurrence soldiers coming and going, unless I was interested in it I would not remember.

Q. You were in the courthouse most of yesterday, were you not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And most all of today? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were in company with Dennis Jones a good deal of yesterday and day before, were you not?

A. Off and on.

Q. And also today?

A. No. Off and on I have been in his company today.

Q. That is what I said. You have been in his company all these three days? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And been here in the courthouse? A. Yes.

Q. You were not sworn until since noon?

A. No, sir, not until I was a while ago.

Q. I think that is all.

Recross Examination by Mr. Greenslade.

Q. Smith, the Mr. Long, Frank Long you testified paid you $15 and who employed you to find some witnesses in this case is the gentleman who is sitting right here in the room today? A. Mr. Long?

Q. That is the same man sitting right by my chair in this room? A. I charged him for my services.

Q. I asked if that is the same man to whom you testified?

A. Yes.

Q. That same man has been in the court room and in the room where testimony has been taken during the last two or three days, has he not?

A. Well, now, I didn't keep trace of it. I could not tell you whether he was in here or in any room.

Q. You have seen him in and about here?

A. Yes, sir.

A. Around about? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you have seen him talking to witnesses in this case, have you not? A. Seen him talking to witnesses?

Q. Yes?

A. Yes, I have seen him talking to witnesses and all you.

Q. What? A. I seen all of you talking to witnesses.

Q. I say you have seen him talking to witnesses outside of the room where the testimony has been taken, have you not?

A. I seen him talking to some people, I could not say which one.

Q. Well, you have seen him talking to some of them?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know whether he is a party to this lawsuit?

A. I do not.

Q. Do you know whether he is an attorney in this lawsuit? A. I do not.

Q. That is all.

Recross Examination by Mr. Rosser.

Q. You say you are a deputy sheriff? A. Yes.

Q. How long have you been deputy sheriff?

A. Six years—four years—no it is part of that this term; I think two years.

Q. You are a colored man?

A. Well, I do not know, I was born this way.

Q. You were born that way? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You call yourself a member of the race that call themselves Africo-Americans? A. (No response).

Q. You are a member of the negro race?

A. Well, I am identified with them—and proud of it.

Q. What is the politics of the sheriff of this county?

Mr. Rice: I object to the question as improper cross examination.

A. I can answer.

Q. He is a democrat? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You work for him in election?

A. And that is I think, the right principle too; I am glad of that because I find them to be gentlemen.

Q. That is all.

(Witness excused).

Signed R. J. SMITH.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 26th day of October, 1914.

CLARK A. THARP,
Notary Public.

My commission expires Nov. 22nd, 1914. (Seal).

Mr. German: That deposition appears beginning on page 200 and ending on page 247.

We offer now, for the same reasons and the purposes as we offered the deposition of Dennis Jones, the deposition of MINNIE ATKINS, taken at Tulsa, Oklahoma, in the office of Rice and Lyons, in the month of November, 1914, and filed in the court—District Court of Creek County on November 17th.

The Court: Now, is it necessary to offer all that deposition?

Mr. German: No, it really is not.

The Court: You must have some little thought for the record here.

Mr. German: Your Honor, I will tell you what we will do; we will pick out the particular questions and answers which we desire to offer, out of this and offer it that way, and in order to do that intelligently, we will wait until Monday morning.

The Court: Alright.

Mr. German: Now, Your Honor, for the same purposes and like reasons, and same reasons we offered the testimony of Dennis Jones and Rube Smith and Walter Banks, we desire to offer some pleadings filed in the District Court of Creek County. Judge Allen is more familiar with them than I am.

Mr. Cruce: Can our exception be recorded as going to them?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Allen: We offer the petition filed in the District Court of Creek County in the case of Minnie Folk, formerly Minnie Atkins, against the unknown heirs and devisees of Thomas Atkins, deceased, No. 3719.

The Court: Admitted.

Mr. Allen: Also offer as Government's Exhibit A-86, the certified copy of an amended petition filed in the case of Minnie Folk and others. against Nancy Atkins, and others, No. 3772, in the District Court of Creek County.

And as Government's Exhibit A-87, certified copy of the petition and intervention filed in the case of Minnie Folk and others, against the unknown heirs of Thomas Atkins, and others, No. 3719, in the District Court of Creek County.

The Court: There will not be time to put on any other oral testimony this afternoon. If you have any further offer of depositions, you may make them.

Mr. German: Let's see; I don't believe we have, Your Honor. Our next witness in the order, according to the way we have arranged it, will testify orally.

And thereupon, court takes a recess in the hearing of this case until 10 o'clock Monday morning, May 7th, 1917.

And thereafter, and on May 7th, 1917, at 10 o'clock A. M., court convened pursuant to adjournment and further proceedings herein were had as follows:

Mr. Blakeney: We have a witness, Your Honor, who has to leave, and we, by agreement of counsel, desire to put him on at this time, and later to insert testimony at the proper place in the record.

Mr. Stuart: Your Honor, with the understanding that we object now for the Page interests and will renew our objection later when it is offered, with a motion also to strike.

The Court: Alright, the record may so show.

And thereupon, R. F. DAVIS, being called on behalf of the defendant Nancy Atkins, sworn and under oath testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Maxey.

Q. State your name, Mr. Davis? A. R. F. Davis.

Q. Where do you live, Mrs. Davis? A. Muskogee.

Q. How long have you lived in Muskogee? A. 15 years.

Q. What is your business?

A. Wholesale grocery business.

Q. I didn't ask you your age? A. 46.

Q. Where did you live prior coming to Muskogee?

A. Wagoner.

Q. How long did you live in Wagoner?

A. I lived there since '88 or '89, until I came here.

Q. What business were you engaged in when you went to Wagoner?

A. I worked in the Davis and Jones Mercantile Company's store.

Q. How long did you work in their store?

A. About 2 years.

Q. Do you know Nancy Atkins, one of the defendants in this case? A. Yes, sir, I did know her.

Q. When did you first become acquainted with her?

A. When I first went to Wagoner, she used to be around the store a good deal; lived right near by.

Q. She was around the store frequently, you say?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. State what you observed, if anything, as to her condition at the time that you worked at the store, with reference to being pregnant or otherwise.

A. I remember at one time while she was around the store that she was in a family way.

Q. Did you see her after she was through with that period? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever see her child?

A. I saw her child with her—that I supposed was her child, afterwards.

Mr. German: We object as to what he supposed, Your Honor.

The Court: Of course, all there is in that is that afterwards he saw a child with her.

Q. How large was the child the last time you saw it?

A. Oh, large enough to walk—walking around.

Q. Mr. Davis, what was the general reputation among the people of Wagoner at that time as to whose child that was.

Mr. German: We object, Your Honor, on the ground that it is hearsay, irrelevant, incompetent, and immaterial.

Mr. Hanford: The same objection.

Mr. Cruce: The same for us.

The Court: He may answer.

Mr. German: We except.

Mr. Cruce: We except.

A. You will have to ask the question again. (Question read.)

The Court: Now, first, this witness of course, cannot answer that unless there was a general reputation in that regard; unless it was generally talked and conceded in the neighborhood, there, that this child was the child of Nancy. If he knows that such existed, then he may state what it was.

A. Well, nearly everybody around there was accused of being the child's father.

Q. Well, whose child was he—the question is who was reputed to be its mother? A. Nancy.

Q. You say you went there in '88 or '89? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What time after you went there, was it that you noticed her in a pregnant condition?

A. Oh, that I can't state. I just remember that was her condition in being around the store but I don't remember how long after I went to Wagoner. I was only there two years and during that time I observed that, and afterwards saw the child.

Q. And how large was the child the last time you saw it?

A. Oh, large enough to walk.

Q. What was the color of the child?

A. Why, light yellow.

Q. How long did Nancy stay around Wagoner?

A. Well, I was there for quite a number of years, she was there so far as I know when I went there.

Q. How long did you live there?

A. I left there fifteen years ago. I don't know that she was there, but I suppose she was.

Q. So, you knew her then for some ten or fifteen years?

A. Well, I don't know as I knew her, I used to see her around there frequently.

Q. Was she ever in a family way more than once?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. Just once. Now, what was the name of this child?

A. I couldn't tell you.

Q. You never knew? A. Never knew.

Q. Never heard it called? A. So far as I can remember.

Q. In those days?

A. Lately I have, I don't know that I heard it called a name in those days.

Q. Was it a boy or girl?

A. My recollection is it was a boy.

Q. Are you positive about that or not?

A. Well, I am quite positive.

Q. When was the first time you ever saw that boy?

A. I couldn't tell you.

Q. How old was it? A. Couldn't tell you that.

Q. What is your best judgment?

A. The first time I saw it?

Q. Yes, sir?

A. Well, I don't remember; I remember Nancy being around there with a child, but I don't remember the first time I saw her or the child.

Q. Well, was she carrying it in her arms or was it walking?

A. I don't remember whether I ever saw her carrying it in her arms or not, probably did, she was in the store every day.

Q. Now, you don't know whose child that was?

A. I don't understand the question.

Q. Do you know whose child that was?

A. I don't know.

Mr. German: No, sir. Well, that is all.

Cross Examination by Mr. Hanford.

Q. Mr. Davis, how long did you say you remained in the Davis & Jones' store? A. About two years.

Q. For about two years? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You went there when the Railroad was building into Wagoner? A. When the Iron Mountain Railroad.

Q. When the Iron Mountain Railroad was building in there. That was eighty nine or ninety?

A. Eighty eight or eighty nine.

Q. As a matter of fact, wasn't it eighty-nine?

A. I am not really positive, I think that it was, but I am not really positive whether it was eighty-eight or eighty-nine.

Q. You say Nancy came to the store about every day while you were there? A. A good many times every day.

Q. And that is where you saw her with this boy?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did the boy ever come to the store?

A. With her, yes, sir, afterwards.

Q. With her. And how would she take him, by the hand?

A. It has been so long ago I don't know that I could be positive she took him by the hand. I remember him after he was old enough to walk.

Q. Do you remember Nancy in the pregnant condition?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long had you been there in the store when you saw Nancy there in that condition? A. I couldn't tell you.

Q. You had been there some time before you saw Nancy there, hadn't you?

A. I had been in the store some time before I saw her come in the store?

Q. Yes?

A. I couldn't tell you, she may have been there the first time I was in the store.

Q. You don't remember? A. No, sir.

Q. Where did you come to Wagoner from?

A. Neosho, Missouri.

Q. You don't know where Nancy lived then before she came to Wagoner? A. No, sir.

Q. Never saw her before she came to the store?

A. No, sir.

Q. How long was she in this condition, or did you just see her once or twice?

A. I suppose I saw her a good many times.

Q. So, you probably saw her covering a good part of the period gestation? A. I should judge so.

Q. How old would you say that boy got to be when she would come to the store there, a good sized boy?

A. So far as my recollection serves me he was able to walk around.

Q. Able to walk around? A. With her.

Q. How old, three or four?

A. I don't think so, I wasn't there that long, I was only there two years.

A. I don't remember him.

Q. An Indian boy over there?

A. I don't remember him.

Q. Did you ever hear that this boy that was with Nancy was anybody else's child? A. No, sir, never did.

Q. Did you hear that that was one of Minnie's children?

A. Never heard it, no, sir.

Q. Do you know what became of the boy?

A. No, sir, never heard.

Q. Never heard anything about him? A. No, sir.

Q. The only thing that you do know is that you saw Nancy in this condition and that you saw her in that condition covering a good part of the nine months' period gestation, and that you later saw her with a boy that she used to bring to the store there, and he was a good sized boy—able to walk, and you don't ever remember seeing him in her arms, but you do remember that he used to come there and walk to the store with her. Is that your testimony? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is all that you can remember now? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you have no knowledge of the absolute fact as to whose boy that was?

A. Other than the fact that it was generally understood to be her child.

Q. I am asking you as to your own personal knowledge, Mr. Davis.

A. Of course, I haven't got any real knowledge regarding the birth of the child.

The Court: That is very clear as to what he relies upon.

Recross Examination by Mr. German.

Q. Do you know of Nancy being convicted of a felony there, and sent to the penitentiary about 1890?

A. Yes, sir, I think I remember something of it. I have a faint recollection.

Q. Was that before or after her pregnancy?

A. I don't know; I can't tell you.

Q. You don't [ ] where that came in?

A. I remember something of her being convicted, something, for some offense but I don't remember whether it was before or afterward.

Redirect Examination by Mr. Maxey.

Q. Mr. Davis, I believe I didn't ask you what your business was?

The Court: Wholesale grocer, he said.

Q. What position do you hold? A. President.
Q. What grocery?

Q. State whether in the summer of 1914, she had occasion to consult you concerning any matter connected with the Thomas Atkins case? A. She did.
Q. Did it or not, involve Mr. Page or the conversation involve Mr. Page, or Mr. Long, or Mr. Bartlett?
A. Yes, sir, all three of them; at least, she consulted with me about matters between her and all three of those men.
Q. All three of them? A. Yes, sir.
Q. Can you fix the time at which this conversation occurred? The first one concerning that matter?
A. I don't believe I can, Mr. German.
Q. Could you by reference to a certain contract between Mr. Page or the Gem Oil Company and Sadie James?
A. I think so.

Q. Did the conversation also involve any statements relating to Thomas Atkins or Minnie Atkins? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Tell the Court what the conversations was; the first one you had concerning that matter.

Mr. Cruce: I object, if the Court please, on behalf of Page, as hearsay and incompetent testimony.

The Court: Why, it seems to me so.

Mr. German: It would apparently, Your Honor, possibly; here is the object, we expect to show by the witness that Sadie came to the witness and discussed her —possibly her contract and work for Mr. Bartlett, and Mr. Page's attitude toward the matter, and that it will then cover a trip of hers to Mr. Page's office, and then back to the witness and what was said between them, and then still another one.

The Court: But all the time being what Sadie said that somebody else, some other of these interested parties had said to her, or a message that they had her to convey?

Mr. German: It would involve what she said to them and what they said to her.

The Court: That is as she told this witness.

Mr. German: Yes, sir, now it occurred in the summer of 1914, at the time of the employment of Sadie by Mr. Page.

The Court: Now, this witness has been permitted to testify that there was a conversation involving these parties at that time; the fact that there was, without detailing what it was. There is now referred to a contract which was entered into and that probably has been offered in evidence already.

Mr. German: Yes, sir.

The Court: Between Mr. Page and Sadie.

Mr. German: Yes, sir.

The Court: But clearly what Sadie said Mr. Page may have said to her, at another place, and she conveyed to this witness, would be hearsay from the mouth of this witness.

Mr. German: Your honor, we have authorities right square in point here.

The Court: Well, I want to hear them. It occurs to me to be clearly hearsay.

Mr. German: Yes, sir. Now, in order that Your Honor, may understand our position, it is this: we expect this witness to relate conversations between himself and Sadie which covered her conversations here, the first conversation, with Minnie Atkins at Seattle; that is, which included some statements made by her—by Minnie to Sadie, also which covered some conversations between Sadie and Mr. Page, and Mr. Long, and the transaction whereby Sadie was employed by Mr. Page, and how it happened that she was employed by Mr. Page. Now, it appears already in the evidence that at the time of these conversations Sadie had no occasion to tell this witness anything but the truth, and since then and in December, 1914, some five or six months after the conversations with this witness, Sadie, according to Sadie's story, came, and to use an expression from our view-point, made a full confession to Mr. Montgomery, the United States Probate Attorney, of all that she knew about this case and about the alleged frame-up. Now, then, she tells on the witness stand the entire story when she entered the case up to the time of her confession to Mr. Montgomery. Then on cross examination counsel show by Said that she is in the—she is receiving $50.00 a month from the Buell interest; they also show by her own testimony that she is a self-confessed crook; they also show by her, that on—that she admitted and she confesses to having attempted to develop a frame-up with reference to the existence of Thomas Atkins, his birth and so forth; in other words, on cross examination of Sadie James and by other circumstances in this case, counsel for defendant have attempted to impeach Sadie James and reflect upon the truth of her story. The object of introducing these statements of Sadie James is to show this, that prior to any time when she had occasion to fabricate, she related to this witness many of the material features of her story testified to on the witness stand. Now, I want to read to Your Honor from a case entitled Diggers vs. The United States.

The Court: I am not going into this matter now. My first impression was it was clearly hearsay. I am not clearly convinced yet that it comes within the rule which counsel contends for. Without taking further time now—I take it Mr. Walker is your only witness.

Mr. German: One other.

The Court: Who is it?

Mr. German: Judge Williams.

The Court: These gentlemen will be here this afternoon. I want, during the noon hour, to examine the Oklahoma authorities and some others. It is going to take considerable time and if I open this up it may open up a good many other matters which will lead to a largely increased record and collateral matters that will confuse matters here. I will not hear further arguments now on it. Just hand me your authorities before I leave the bench. The Oklahoma case and these Tennessee cases and give the United States cases, and I will determine the matter when Court convenes this afternoon. These gentlemen will be in attendance this afternoon; and Mr. Walker may stand aside now. You may proceed with some other witnesses.

Mr. German: Your Honor, we will put on Mrs. Flitner. It is a little out of order. We tried to put her on Friday but she was not in attendance.

And thereupon, Mrs. ANNA RILEY FLITNER, produced and sworn as a witness for and on behalf of the Government, testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Allen.

Q. Please state your name?
A. Mrs. Anna Riley Flitner.

The Court: Now, Mrs. Flitner, you will have to talk up pretty loud so all of these people can hear.

The Witness: Well, I haven't a very loud voice.

Q. Your age and place of residence? A. Forty-eight.
Q. Where do you reside at this time?
A. Well, on a ranch near Graybull, Wyoming.
Q. Where did you live in the eighties?
A. I lived in Leavenworth, Kansas.
Q. What was your profession at that time?
A. I was a teacher.

Q. Do you remember having at one time taught the school in School District No. 53? A. Yes, sir.
Q. Leavenworth County, Kansas? A. Yes, sir.
Q. What was the name of that school?
A. The Brown School.
Q. How long did you teach at the Brown School?
A. Just the one year, seven months, one school year.
Q. What was that year?
A. The fall of 1888 and the spring of 1889.

Q. Do you know Henry Carter, one of the defendants in this case? A. He attended my school at that time, yes.

Q. He was one of your pupils during the school year of 1888 and 1889? A. He was.

Q. Did you know his younger sister, Viola Carter?

A. She also attended school.

Q. How much older was Henry then Viola?

A. Well, as nearly as I can remember he was about two years older, I don't remember the exact age, I think she was six and he was at least eight.

Q. Do you remember the two children very well, do you?

A. Well, I hadn't thought very much of them since they went to school.

Q. Is there anything that causes you to remember them any more than other pupils attending that school?

A. I remember in the spring of 1889, when I was away from the school and had a substitute, that the white children chased them off of the school ground. That was just a little incident that happened at that time.

Q. What was the color of the children?

A. Well, I should say that they were rather mulattos.

Q. With what race—— To what race did they belong and with what race did they associate?

A. Well, really I don't know very much about them.

> The Court: Do you know them to have had negro blood from their appearance; you called them mulattos, I suppose you meant having a portion of negro blood?

A. Well, I supposed that they did, that was just my opinion.

Q. Well, you regarded them as negro children, didn't you? A. Yes, that is the way I looked at them.

Q. Were there any other colored children attending your school? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many others?

A. Well, there were the Hodges and the Bells.

Q. Two other families? A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever teach that school any other times than the year you mention '88-9? A. No, sir.

> Mr. Allen: We have in the Government's exhibit taken at the Receivership hearing, I think, the report signed by this lady as the teacher for that scholastic year.

> The Court: Has she been a witness in the deposition?

> Mr. Allen: No, sir, but the trustee of that district was a witness—the clerk of that district, and we identified it.

The Court: If you have the report—is that the report you contend this witness made?

Mr. Allen: Yes, sir.

The Court: If you have that report you may present it to her and interrogate her with regard to it.

Mr. German: I don't know whether we had that or not.

The Court: Well, let's not take time with that now.

Cross Examination by Mr. Cobb.

Q. This party you speak of as H. Carter, had he ever gone to school before the time he went to you?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. Wasn't he ignorant of any learning at this time?

A. He was in the first grade.

Q. He didn't even know his letters, did he?

A. Well, I wouldn't swear to that because I don't really know.

Q. Well, he was in the primary class, you remember that?

A. Yes, sir, he was in the primary class.

Q. You don't remember whether he knew his figures or knew how to count, do you?

A. I don't remember whether he did when he started or not.

Q. Now, he didn't start to school until after the holidays, did he?

A. I am not positive whether he started before or after the holidays; I am positive that he was there in '89. I am positive he was there in the spring.

Q. In the spring of '89? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you are not positive that he was there before that time?

A. No, sir, because I hadn't thought much about it. There is no incident to fix it in my mind.

Q. Now, you stated that your recollection was that he was about 8 years old at this time? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Upon what do you base your recollection of this matter?

A. Well, the minimum age for school children was about six, and the little girl was at least that old and the little boy was much larger and I should judge at least two years older.

Q. Now, that is the only reason that you have for saying that he was about 8 years old at that time because she was not permitted to go to school until she was six years old?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you judged he was about two years older than she was? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long did you live at Leavenworth prior to '89 when you taught this school? A. About 20 years.

Q. Ma'am? A. About 20 years.

Q. How long did you live there after you taught this school? A. How long after?

Q. Yes.

A. I left there in '97; I would have to stop to think a minute.

The Court: Well, she taught there in '89; that ended the term and she left there in '97.

Q. You left there in '97? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, Mrs. Blickner, is there any way you could be mistaken as to the time you taught this school?

A. No, there is no possible way; I am positive.

Q. How do you fix this date of '88 and '89 as a certainty in your mind?

A. Well, we built a new home in Leavenworth that year and I had a friend who taught in an adjoining district the same year that I taught at the Brown; the following year, we taught in adjoining districts right at the edge of the City of Leavenworth, and that summer she was married, 1890.

Q. I didn't exactly understand that.

A. Well, a friend of mine taught the adjoining district, taught at Springdale, the year I taught at the Brown; the next year she taught an adjoining district and I taught the district right at the edge of Leavenworth, and she taught the next district and was married in May.

Q. At the ned of that term? A. 1890, yes, sir.

Q. In other words, you fix the date of teaching this Brown district 53, as being the year before your friend got married?

A. That is one way, yes, sir.

Q. And your friend was married in May, 1890?

A. '90.

Q. Now, how do you fix the date of this marriage of your friend? Might it not have been in 1891 or '92?

A. No, sir, I went to New York that year and I was not able to attend the wedding.

Q. In other words, did you have a recollection of this date of your friend's marriage in your mind? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And this trip that you made to New York, now, mightn't it have been a year later or a year earlier?

A. No, sir, I am just positive of it.

Q. That is your best recollection that it was in 1890?

A. Yes, I had a letter from her a short time ago——

The Court: Well, now, you needn't state anything about that letter. You have cross examined this witness sufficiently along the line to see what she bases it upon.

Mr. Cobb: That is all.

(Witness dismissed.)

And thereupon, RUSH GREENSLADE was called, sworn as a witness for and on behalf of the Government, and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Allen.

Q. You may state your name, age, and place of residence?
A. Rush Greenslade, thirty-two, Tulsa, Oklahoma.
Q. Are you a practicing attorney? A. Yes, sir.
Q. At this time attorney for the Gypsy Oil Company?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Greenslade, in 1914, did your company make an investigation in connection with the Thomas Atkins Allotment? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the object of that investigation?

A. Well, ultimately, of course to establish our title to the leasehold if we could upon that land.

Q. Did you make any search throughout the country for Thomas Atkins at that time? A. Yes, sir.

Q. State whether or not Dennis Jones was engaged by you to assist in making that search? A. Who?

Q. Dennis Jones, of Leavenworth, Kansas?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is he a lawyer, colored lawyer of Leavenworth, Kansas? A. He so holds himself out.

Q. I hand you Government's Exhibit A-88, and ask you to state what that is?

A. That is a contract between the Gypsy Oil Company and Dennis Jones.

Mr. Allen: We now offer in evidence a contract between Dennis Jones and the Gypsy Oil Company, marked Government's Exhibit A-88.

The Court: What does that tend to prove in this case? I don't quite see?

Mr. Allen: Sadie James testified in her testimony about going from Tulsa to Leavenworth, and about going to Mr. Page in Tulsa and telling him that she could hire Dennis Jones, but that Dennis at that time was engaged for the Gypsy Oil Company and it would be harder to get him than it would Rube Smith, but that he was a co-worker of hers and she could get him, and she testified——

The Court: On the point to prove just the fact that there was a contract between Dennis Jones and this Company?

Mr. Allen: Yes, sir.

The Court: There has been no objections, but I merely want to keep out of this record anything except that whin will thrown some light.

Mr. Allen: There is a representation in the contract that he can locate the living Thomas Atkins.

The Court: I don't think the contract between Dennis Jones and this Company has any place in this case. As to the contents of it, I don't think that is material.

Mr. Stuart: We don't object to this contract, just let him have it go in subject to cross examination.

The Court: If you gentlemen don't object, it may go in. I don't see its relevancy but it may go in.

Mr. Allen: Its relevancy will be apparent later on in this case.

Q. I now hand you Government's Exhibit A-89, and ask you what it is?

A. That is a letter from Dennis Jones to the Gypsy Oil Company. It is addressed to Mr. Crawley, Vice President of the Gypsy Oil Company.

Mr. Allen: We offer in evidence Government's Exhibit A-89.

Mr. Cobb: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

The Court: Overruled.

Mr. Cobb: Exception.

Q. I hand you Government's Exhibit A-90, and ask you what that is?

A. That is a letter from Dennis Jones addressed to Mr. Crawley of the Gypsy Oil Company.

Mr. Allen: We offer in evidence, Government's Exhibit A-90.

Mr. Cobb: Same objection.

The Court: It may be admitted. Exception noted.

Q. Mr. Greenslade, subsequent to the employment of Dennis Jones, did you go with him in search of a living Thomas Atkins? A. I did.

Q. Where did you go?

A. Washington, D. C., and New York City.

Q. Where else? A. That is all that I went with him.

Q. Do you know whether he went to Chicago and other places?

Mr. Cruce: We object to this testimony because it is immaterial, Your Honor.

The Court: Yes, it would only be hearsay anyhow.

Q. Well, was your company paying the expenses of Dennis Jones for making various trips over the country, which he made?

A. We paid his expenses to Washington, D. C., and to New York City in accordance with that contract. I don't know of any other expenses that we paid.

Q. You were unable to find Thomas, were you?

Mr. Cruce: We object as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

The Court: Sustained.

Q. Were you able to find Thomas Atkins?

Mr. Cruce: We object for the same reason.

The Court: Sustained.

Mr. Allen: You may take the witness.

Cross Examination by Mr. Stuart.

Q. Mr. Greenslade, at the time this contract was made, the deed which your company got from Mr. Bartlett, that is you claimed under Mr. Bartlett didn't you at the time you made this contract?

A. We claimed by a lease from Mr. Bartlett, yes, sir.

Q. By a lease from Mr. Bartlett? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you had found at that time that the purported deed from Minnie Atkins to Bartlett was a forgery, hadn't you? Found it out at that time?

A. We had no—we had suspicions of it.

Q. Had suspicions? A. We didn't know that.

Q. You suspected that deed was a forgery?

A. We didn't know that.

Q. You knew it had been adjudged to be a forgery, hadn't it? A. It hadn't been adjudged within my knowledge.

Q. Hadn't on August 3rd?

A. Don't think it has ever been adjudged to be a forgery.

Q. Don't you know it was in the case of Nancy Atkins and so forth, and was found so—think about it.

A. My recollection is, Judge Stuart, that question was not involved in the case; I might be mistaken.

Q. You were an attorney in it?

A. No, sir, the case was tried before I became connected with the term.

Q. Mr. Diggs of your firm appeared?

A. Mr. McGraw appeared in the case.

Q. Any how, you got suspicious about the title from Minnie, didn't you?

A. Well, I think the Company had had suspicions for some time.

Q. Well, you can answer that. You got suspicious, and then you wanted to find Tommy, the son, didn't you? If you could?

A. Judge, we were searching for both Minnie and Tommy. I wouldn't be sure whether that contract was made after Minnie had been discovered or not, but I think it was.

Q. Yes, it—— A. I think it was.

Q. This contract was after you discovered that Minnie was in existence. A. I think so.

Q. And if Bartlett's title from Minnie proved bad, the title from Tommy, if he was alive, would prove superior to Minnie's? A. Yes, sir, absolutely.

Q. And that is what you were hunting for, isn't it?

A. Absolutely.

Mr. Stuart: I state, Your Honor, that Mr. Greenslade, might be needed on another matter.

Cross Examination by Mr. Maxey.

Q. Mr. Greenslade, this investigation that you started to find Tommy Atkins and Minnie Atkins was after the trial of the case between Nancy Atkins and H. U. Bartlett, and the Gypsy Oil Company, in the District Court at Sapulpa?

A. Yes, sir.

Witness dismissed.

And thereupon, court takes adjournment until 2 o'clock P. M.

And thereafter, court having convened pursuant to adjournment, further proceedings were had as follows:

The Court: In relation to the evidence offered this morning, to which objection was offered, and upon [] the Court did not rule before the noon hour, without having, of course, read the record so far as Sadie James' testimony is concerned, I understand from the statement of counsel that on the cross examination, it was shown that the cross examination brought out by counsel for defendant, that Sadie James is now employed by some interest in this case; that she was so employed at the time that her deposition was taken, and that at the time that she gave the testimony with regard to which it is now offered to show that she made similar statements in 1914, at a time prior to this case, and at a time prior to the arising of this controversy. The question is then, whether or not now, in view of what was brought out on that cross examination, a person not Sadie James, but another to whom she made certain statement, may relate the statement which she made at that time, offered by the complainant in this case on the theory that being consistent with her statement now, and made at a time before this controversy arose, in view of impeachment growing out of cross examination, these statements may be testified to by a third party in corroboration of what she now states. As counsel suggests, I find no direct federal authorities on the subject. In relation to this class of evidence, Greenleaf has this to say (reads from authority).

Here is a case very like the Tennessee case that was read this morning, where the witness in a personal injury case was cross examined with relation as to whether or not she had been paid to come there and testify, and various other matters relating to her being there as a witness; and in view of that cross examination, the Court there [] that it was competent for the plaintiff to show by the testimony of a third person that this witness, long before the case came up, had made certain statement consistent with that made upon the stand.

Now, the only question here is, assuming that Sadie James' cross examination was what counsel conceived it to have been, and assuming that that cross examination showed that at the time she made her deposition she was employed by an interested party in the case, and that there were reasons existing which might have impelled her to color her testimony, whether or not merely because that is brought out on cross examination and not shown by independent statement, this witness may not now be interrogated in regard to her consistent statement made at a time before this controversy arose.

I am inclined to think that the evidence is competent, and that it is one of the exceptions to the rule, and conclude that after considering the matter, and will so rule, and give you your exceptions.

Mr. German: Your Honor, we will recall Mr. Walker presently. Just now we want to take up another matter. We offer the deposition taken by the defendant, Folk, Page and others in that group, of Edward Charles Fritsche, taken before Mr. Penick; for the same purpose and same reason that we offer the deposition of Dennis Jones taken in the suit pending in the District Court of Creek County, which I stated into the record; beginning on page 1889.

Mr. Cruce: Counsel having stated the purpose for which they offer it, we object because it is incompetent.

The Court: Objection overruled and exception noted.

Mr. German: Call Mr. Fritsche.

The Court: Is this the same witness whose deposition was offered?

Mr. German: Yes, sir.

The Court: You are not going to cover the same ground that the deposition covers?

Mr. German: No, sir.

Mr. Cruce: We would like to add to our objection the fact that the witness is present and the deposition in no event would be competent.

The Court: I will reserve a ruling on that and determine that later.

Mr. German: Your Honor remembers that we offered the deposition for the sole purpose of supporting our contention that defendant Folk and that group have fabricated a case of the birth and life of Thomas Atkins.

Mr. Stuart: If Your Honor please, I would like to make this objection, that we took this man's deposition.

The Court: That is what I thought, that is my understanding, if the witness is here why not interrogate him?

Mr. German: Well, we are offering the deposition to show that they produced proof by this witness—introduced testimony which we charge is fabricated. We are showing that they produced the witness.

The Court: What do you propose to interrogate this witness about now?

Mr. German: With reference to giving that testimony and the circumstances under which he gave it, and what he now has to say.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Cruce: Note our exception.

And thereupon EDWARD CHARLES FRITSCHE being called on behalf of the defendant sworn and under oath testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Stuart.

Q. What is your name? A. Edward Charles Fritsche.
Q. Where do you live, Mr. Fritsche?
A. Leavenworth, Kansas.
Q. How long have you lived in Leavenworth, Kansas?
A. Fifty-one years past.
Q. How old are you now?
A. I will be fifty-two in April, born April '64.
Q. What has been your business in Leavenworth?
A. I am a druggist.
Q. Are you a graduate of pharmacy? A. I am.
Q. When did you graduate in pharmacy?
A. March 13th, 1885.
Q. Have you got any papers in reference to your graduation with you? A. Yes, sir.
Q. Would you let me have them, please?

Mr. Stuart: Please identify this as defendant's Exhibit No. 8.

Q. State to the examiner what the paper is?
A. It is a notification of the dean of the faculty notifying me of the fact that I passed satisfactory examination in pharmacy, materia medica, etc.

Mr. Stuart: We offer this in connection with witness' testimony.

Mr. German: We object to this as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

Mr. Stuart: St. Louis, Missouri.

Mr. German: I further object to it on the ground that it has not been sufficiently identified and its authenticity sufficiently proven.

Mr. Stuart: In view of the latter objection I will ask the additional question.

Q. How did you receive this? In the due course of mail? By hand or how?

A. Through the mail from the dean of the faculty, Professor J. M. Good of the College of Pharmacy.

Q. What place? A. St. Louis, Missouri.

Q. This paper notified you that a graduate in pharmacy would be conferred on you on the 18th of March, 1885? Now Mr. Fritsche with whom had you worked prior to the time you went to St. Louis to study pharmacy?

A. For Theodore Ergersdorf and Adolph Lange.

Q. When did you work for Lange first?

A. For Lange first?

Q. In what year? A. Yes. October, 1880.

Q. Did you work for him after that? A. Yes.

Q. What year? A. 1885.

Q. What time in 1885 did you go to work for Lange?

A. About the summer months, during the summer months.

Q. Did you know a girl there at that time known as Indian Minnie? A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. Where did you see her during the summer of '85?

A. On the street, in the drug store. Waited on her a number of times and at Mother Letcher's on lower Seneca Street.

Q. You say you saw her at Mother Letcher's?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did she have a baby?

Mr. German: I object to the question as leading.

Q. Answer it. A. She did.

Q. Where was she when you saw her with a baby?

Mr. German: I object to that question as assuming that the person referred to had a baby.

Q. Where did you see her with the baby?

A. In Granny Letcher's home.

Q. What was she doing with the baby?

Mr. German: I object to that question for the same reason.

A. Why I saw the baby several times. It was nursing.

Q. Nursing. How old was the baby when you saw it?

Mr. German: Same objection.

A. A few days or a week, or two weeks.

Q. Or two weeks?

A. Yes, sir. Different times I saw it.

Q. How old was the baby when you saw it the first time, in your judgment?

A. Oh, I don't think the baby was over three or four days old, probably a week.

Q. Did you know this Indian Minnie?

A. Well, I knew her, yes.

Q. What kind of a looking girl was she, Mr. Fritsche? Describe her as near as you can.

A. Well, she was what I considered a rather prepossessing woman.

Mr. German: I move to strike the answer because it states a conclusion, an opinion of the witness and is not responsive to the question.

Q. What kind of hair did she have?

A. She had dark hair of Indian type, black.

Q. How did she wear her hair, Mr. Fritsche, if you remember generally? A. In those days it was combed flat.

Q. How do you mean by combing flat? Explain it now.

A. Down like this is now. I call it like this is now. She was of olive complexion, dark eyes and prominent cheek bones and characteristic features of an Indian maiden and very plump figure.

Q. A prepossessing woman? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. German: I object to the question as leading.

Cross Examination by Mr. Blakeney.

Q. I want to ask a question as evidence really in chief in behalf of my client. About how tall was Minnie?

A. How tall?

Q. Yes? A. Oh, I should judge five foot six or seven.

Q. Five foot six or seven? A. Yes.

Q. About what weight was she?

A. Well, now, about a hundred and thirty-five or forty-five pounds.

Q. How often could you say and feel certain that you were stating it within the limit did you see Minnie?

A. How often?

Q. Yes?

A. Oh, frequentely. She came to the store there, and I waited on her.

Q. Did she ever bring anybody with her to the drug store that you remember? A. Bring any what?

Q. Anybody with her?

A. Well, there was a character that she walked the streets with, a forturne teller, so-called. She assumed the title of fortune teller.

Q. You saw these two come into the drug store did you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How frequently would you say that you saw them?

A. Oh, the fortune teller was almost a daily frequenter She was edicted to a habit.

Q. You say she was edicted to a habit? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And how frequently would you see the two together?

A. Well, now, that is hard to answer, Your Honor, but frequently though.

Q. Several times at least? A. Oh, yes, yes, sir.

Q. How often can you say you saw her at Granny Letcher's? A. Well I've seen her there a number of times.

Q. What were you doing at Granny Letcher's?

A. Why, I visited at Granny Letcher's occasionally. Sometimes I delivered medicines there—and some days—— Young sporting blood I would drop in there.

Q. When was the last time that you saw Minnie?

A. Oh, after her confinement. It was some weeks later. She suddenly disappeared and I saw her no more afterwards.

Q. Some weeks later did you say?

A. I should judge a few weeks. It was a long time now. I know she disappeared from here. Lots of the young fellows wanted to know what became of Indian Minnie and no one seemed to know.

Q. Did you ever see the child after that? A. After that?

Q. Yes, or after Minnie disappeared?

A. Yes, sir, I saw the child later.

Q. How long did you see the child after that?

A. Oh, probably to the age of six or seven years. Eight years probably, not later than that.

Q. What was the child known by? A. Tommy Atkins.

Q. Where did you see the child?

A. In a house of prostitution.

Q. What house? A. Ella Abbitts.

Q. Where was Ella Abbitts' place?

A. At Third and Cherokee Streets at one time. At another time she was on Broadway and Delaware Streets.

Q. How frequently did you see the child there?

A. Oh only a few times.

Q. Had you seen the child before that at any place?

A. Only as an infant.

Q. You saw the child as an infant and then you saw it as a child called Tommy Atkins? A. Yes.

Q. At Ella Abbitts? A. Yes.

Q. Some several years later? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You didn't see the child or hear its name mentioned in the interim between that period of time?

A. Well, they said it was Ella Abbitts' child—Indian Minnie's child.

Q. You heard that when you saw the child at Ella Abbitts'?

A. Well, I heard the child was in town. Indian Minnie's child was here, but I hadn't seen the child excepting at this house several times.

Q. Had you heard about the child from time to time during the whole period of time?

A. Well, I can't say that I did, not being interested.

Cross Examination by Mr. German.

Q. Mr. Fritsche, how long have you lived in Leavenworth? A. Since April 13th, 1864.

Q. You went away to school did you?

A. College of Pharmacy.

Q. How long were you in school there? A. Two years.

Q. At St. Louis? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What two years?

A. Well, 1813 when I graduated and '12—later part of '11 and '12, bringing it into March, 1813.

Q. That is when you graduated? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When were you born? A. April 13th, 1864.

Q. Well, you graduated—— You were in school two years, you say? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you are not mistaken about the year that you were there?

A. No, that proves it there 1885 there when I graduated.

Q. Oh, instead of 1813? A. Yes, sir, '85.

Q. I see.

A. 1813 is when I went to school, yes, sir, and I graduated in March, '85.

Mr. Blakeney: 1813?

A. Sure.

Q. If you want to put it that way it is all right, Mr. Fritsche? A. The drinks are on me boys, '85.

Q. Mr. Fritsche you say the drinks are on you?

A. Yes, sir, '85.

Q. You were in the drug business here quite a while?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when they closed the joints here you went out of business and into bankruptcy?

A. That is rather a unkind way to put it though. I went out of business.

Q. I asked you if you didn't go into bankruptcy?

A. No, sir, I didn't.

Q. You went out of business, then, at that time?

A. I went out of the business, unfortunately.

Q. You had a Government license to sell whiskey, too, before you went out of business, didn't you?

Mr. Blakeney: We object as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

Q. Here in Leavenworth?
A. That question I can explain to you, if you will allow me.
Q. Did you not have such a license?

Mr. Blakeney: Answer and then explain, if you want to.

A. I did; now, I will explain.

Mr. Blakeney: Make any explanation you want to. I want to show that the witness said that he wanted to answer, and make the explanation, and when he started to make an explanation, Judge Allen interrupted——

Mr. Allen: He answered our question.

Mr. Blakeney: He said with an explanation. I ask the commissioner, now, to state to the witness that he can make his explanation.

The Examiner: Mr. Witness, you will answer questions propounded to you and when you are through testifying, then you may make any further explanation you desire.

Q. You had that license for seventeen years, didn't you?
A. For seventeen?
Q. Yes, sir. A. Yes, sir.
Q. Longer, too, didn't you? A. Longer, too.
Q. Here at Leavenworth, Kansas? A. Yes, sir.
Q. Kansas has been a prohibition state ever since before you went into the drug business, hasn't it?
Q. How long before I went into the drug business?
Q. Yes?
A. How long have we had prohibition? Thirty years.
Q. How long have you had prohibition in this state, I asked you?
A. Twenty-nine, or thirty years—somewhere along there—I am not positive as to the year.
Q. Now, you say you worked for Mr. Lange before you graduated? A. Yes, sir.
Q. In his drug store? A. Yes, sir.
Q. And that you worked for him in 1880? A. Yes, sir.
Q. How long did you work for him in 1880?
A. Until I went to school.
Q. Well, how long? A. About two years.

Q. In 1880? A. In 1880.

Q. What are you referring to?

A. To when I worked for Lange.

Q. What are you looking at now? What is it you took out of your pocket and are looking at? A. I worked for——

Q. I am not asking you to read it? What is that paper you are taking out of your pocket, and looking at?

A. This paper?

Q. Yes. A. That is a memorandum.

Q. Where did you get it? A. I figured it out myself.

Q. When? A. Last night.

Q. At home? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And wrote it down there? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was present? A. This copy——

Q. I am asking you who was present when you made this card at home last night?

A. Well, I made another card and recopied this.

Q. From the other copy? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you copy it?

A. This morning; off of this one original that I made last night at my house.

Q. Who was there?

A. I don't know; no one was there. My wife was at home, but wasn't where I was working.

Q. Anybody else? A. Daughter-in-law was there.

Q. Anyone else? A. That is all I know of.

Q. Who had been to your house last night before you made that memorandum? A. I don't know now.

Q. Had Mr. Bond been there—Mr. Lee Bond? A. No, sir.

Q. Mr. Frank Long? A. No, sir.

Q. You know both of them? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Neither one had been there? A. No, sir.

Q. You had seen them yesterday? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Both of them, and talked to them? A. Yes, sir.

Q. This morning—where did you copy the thing you now hold—from the other?

A. Copied it in Mr. McNaughton's office.

Q. Who is he?

A. He is one of the firm of Bond, McNaughton, and Dohrn.

Q. Why didn't you say in Mr. Bond's office?

A. It wasn't in Mr. Bond's office. Mr. Bond's office is in front, isn't it?

Q. I asked you why you didn't say in Mr. Bond's office?

A. There are three offices as I understand it; Bond, McNaughton, and Dohrn—three rooms there, I understand it.

Q. You know he is one of the attorneys in this case, don't you? A. Mr. Bond?

Q. Mr. Bond. A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, why didn't you bring the memorandum that you made last night instead of copying it off?

A. I have two; if you doubt my integrity, I will give you both and you glance them over.

Q. I am asking you why you didn't do that?

A. Because the other one was partly obliterated, and my eye-sight isn't the best.

Q. Where did you get the data that you put on there?

A. From papers and my memory.

Q. Now, is there anything on that paper about Indian Minnie? A. I will read it to you.

Q. Is there anything on there about Indian Minnie?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Let's see that, will you?

A. Gladly; refreshing my memory, if questions was asked. There is nothing there to hide.

Mr. German: Mr. German, I wish you would mark that, please, as Government's Exhibit 46.

Q. Mr. Fritsche, I have had this marked as Government's Exhibit No. 46, I wish you would read that, please, sir. Out loud, now.

A. Worked for Eggersdorff December first, 1879, age 15 years; worked for Eggersdorff until October, 1880, then for Lange until 1883, then went to college where I graduated March 13th, 1885. April of 1885, I worked for a short while for Eggersdorff; then back to Lange until December 11, 1886, when I went in business for myself. Molly Peters, fortune teller, Page, Hanford, Oil wells. Mr. Long, Judge Stuart, Ella Abbott, Third and Cherokee, Broadway and Delaware, Indian Minnie, Minnie Atkins, Tommy Atkins, Mrs. Letcher, Granny, Jim Mayo, Olive.

Q. Then comes the mark that the Examiner put on there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Marking it as an Exhibit? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did you get the card on which you wrote this?

A. Just the adjoining offices up there—the Board of Education rooms; the same building where Mr. Bond's and McNaughton's office is.

Q. Do you want to hold this card while I examine you?

A. No, the data—my memory sometimes gets the best of me on names, but I can answer it.

Q. You don't remember names well?

A. Not unless there is some reason I should remember them. I have been under a severe nervous strain of late.

Q. What is the cause of your nervous strain?

A. I have had considerable reverses—lost my business; lost $7,200.00 three months ago today.

Q. That is when you went out of business?

A. I was forced out of business.

Q. Now, Mr. Fritsche, you say you knew an Indian woman in the '80's? A. In eighty-five.

Q. '85? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you know an Indian woman at any other time in the '80's? A. At any other time?

Q. Yes, sir. A. No, sir.

Q. You never did? A. No.

Q. She is the first Indian you ever saw, isn't she?

A. No, sir.

Q. Where had you ever seen an Indian before that?

A. Quite a number of Indians in Leavenworth in the early days; in the '70's and '60's.

Q. In the '60's? A. The later '60's and early '70's.

Q. You remember seeing them? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How old were you when you saw the first Indian you ever saw? A. About five years of age.

Q. About five years of age? A. Yes, sir.

Q. It made a distinct impression on you?

A. It certainly did.

Q. Now, these Indians would live around Leavenworth?

A. I wouldn't say lived, no, sir.

Q. Lots of them?

A. Some Indians—I wouldn't say lots. Some Indians were here until the early '70's.

Q. And there never was another Indian around here until when—when was the next time there was an Indian around Leavenworth? A. I can't recall; I don't know.

Q. Well, there was two or three or four; maybe a dozen Indians and around here all the time?

A. Yes, a few Indians here all the times in the early days, but the reason I remember this particularly, when I was about 5 years of age, I was picked up by an Indian woman.

Q. I didn't ask you that.

Mr. Stuart: We object to the manner of examination of attorney as unfair and improper. The attorney refuses and the Examiner also refuses to permit the witness to make an explanation of his answer.

Mr. Blakeney: I want to join in that objection.

The Examiner: The Examiner has not refused permission of the witness to make any explanation he desired. The statement was made by the Examiner that while counsel was examining the witness, he should answer the questions and then an opportunity would be afforded him to make any explanation he desired.

Mr. Blakeney: I would like to have this—that the opportunity ought to be given as a part of the same answer, and not leave the answer inaccurate.

The Examiner: I have no authority to require counsel to stop questioning the witness, or permit him to make explanations. I do say, so far as the Examiner—so far as he is concerned—the witness will be allowed to make explanation at a time before he leaves the witness stand.

Q. Mr. Fritsche, you say you worked for Eggersdorff?
A. Eggersdorff.
Q. How many times?
A. A short time as an apprentice, and then Mr. Eggersdorff sold out to Adolf Lange, and I finished my apprenticeship with Adolf Lange and went to college.
Q. When did you commence working for Eggersdorff?

Mr. Blakeney: I would like to interpose the objection that witness was about to give another time when he worked, when he was interrupted by another question.

A. 1879.
Q. What date in that year? A. I think it was December.
Q. What time in December? A. The first of December.
Q. First of December. How old were you then?
A. Fifteen years.
Q. And how long did you work for him?
A. Until he sold out to Adolf Lange.
Q. When? A. In October, '80.
Q. October, 1880; and then you worked for Lange until when?
A. Until I got ready to go to the college of Pharmacy.
Q. When was that? A. '83.
Q. Lange's place is right where his predecessor's place was, isn't it? A. Yes, sir.
Q. And you saw this Indian woman before you went to college, didn't you? A. No, sir.
Q. Sure of that, are you? A. Sure of that.
Q. How old were you when you went to college?
A. Well, 18 or 19.
Q. 18 or 19 years old? A. Yes.
Q. Where was Granny Letcher living then, when you went to college?

A. Down on Seneca, between Second and Third, on the south side.

Q. Right in front of Crilly's barn, was it?

A. No, Crilly's barn was on the opposite side of the street, if I remember correctly.

Q. Well, I say right in front of Crilly's barn?

A. Well, you could call it front, yes, sir.

Q. How long had she been living there, prior to the time that you went off to college? A. Well, I don't know.

Q. You had been there frequently, hadn't you? A. Yes.

Q. Went there lots and lots of times?

A. I went there a few times.

Q. Just before and after you went off to college?

A. I had been there a few times; a number of times.

Q. Both before and after you went to college?

A. Not before college.

Q. You didn't go there before you went to college?

A. Well, I might have delivered packages there; that is all. Not in the light that you wish to put it.

Q. Did you actually go there, or did you not?

A. I have been to Madam Letcher's, or Mother Letcher's, or Granny Letcher's——

Q. What is her name?

A. Granny, is all I have known her by.

Q. Did you say Mattie a while ago? A. No, sir, I didn't.

Q. You had been there before you went to college?

A. I just gave an answer to that.

Q. It was '83 when you went to college?

A. I don't believe I did.

Q. You were 18 or 19 years old?

A. I was at school, then, in '83.

Q. Well, you went to school in '83, didn't you?

A. Up to March.

Q. March, '83; where?

A. St. Louis; graduated in March.

Q. Graduated in March, '83, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir, in March, '83, and went to Granny Letcher's house in '85.

Q. '85? A. Yes.

Q. How long after you graduated, was it, until you were in Granny Letcher's house?

A. Well, that was when I worked for Mr. Lange.

Q. You didn't answer my question. A. It was in '85.

A. How long after you graduated was it, that you were in Granny Letcher's house?

A. It was the summer month; July, August, and along there—as well as I can recall it, now.

Q. You graduated in March? A. March.

Q. In 1883? A. And came up here.

Q. And came up here? A. And worked in April.

Q. Worked in April? A. Started in April.

Q. Started in April. Then, you were in Granny's house that summer? A. That summer.

Q. That summer? A. '85.

Q. 1885? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You went into business for yourself when?

A. December.

Q. What year? A. '87, I believe.

Q. December, '87; where?

A. On Broadway and Shawnee, Leavenworth, Kansas.

Q. What day in December?

A. What day it was—I believe it was December 11, about 5 P. M.

Q. You think it was about 5 in the afternoon?

A. Yes, sir; I bought a store out.

Q. You bought a store out? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, what year was that? A. '87.

Q. '87. How long did you work for Mr. Lange after you got out of college, before you went into business for yourself?

A. Well, now, let's see; it was 1887—a short period from about June, July, or thereabout, until December.

Q. From about June or July, until December?

A. Yes, sir, as near as I can recollect now.

Q. So about five months, four or five months?

A. I believe that is it.

Q. Had you worked for Mr. Lange before that, except when—except prior to the time when you went to college?

A. Only as an apprentice.

Q. Well, I say, had you worked for Mr. Lange before the time you have mentioned, except*ed* when you worked for him before you went to college?

A. I only worked for him when he bought out Mr. Eggersdorff; finished a little apprenticeship with him, and went to St. Louis, and upon my return from graduation, I worked a short time.

Q. A short time—four or five months?

A. Yes, sir; something like that.

Q. And you went into business for yourself?

A. For myself, yes, sir.

Q. Now, you say, you went into business for yourself in 1887, is that right? A. I believe that is right.

Q. Well, don't you know when you went into business?

A. That is right.

Q. That is correct, is it? A. Yes, sir, that is correct.

Q. What day in December did you go into business for yourself?

A. As near as I can recollect, December 11th, at 5 P. M.

Q. Now, you say you worked for Mr. Lange, after you returned from college, before you went into business for yourself, for about four or five months?

A. As near as I can recall, yes.

Q. Now, let's see. Where was that place of business when you went into business, with reference to Mr. Lange's place of business? A. Where was my place of business?

Q. Yes?

A. Four blocks west of Mr. Lange's corner.

Q. Four block's west? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say before you went into business for yourself, and while you were clerking at Lange's, that Indian Minnie would come there?

A. Indian Minnie traded there at Lange's store, yes, sir.

Q. What would she buy?

A. Just ordinary run of drugs—toilet articles; I don't remember what she bought.

Q. Do you remember any particular thing that she ever bought?

A. No, that is a hard question to answer after 25 or 30 years.

Q. Wasn't anything peculiar about the purchases that she made, was there?

A. No, sir; if she was a—addicted to narcotics, I would remember it.

Q. She was not? A. She was not.

Q. Did she buy any particular kind of toilet articles?

A. She was strong on German cologne; stunk around a block, and she would sometimes pour all of a bottle of that on her, right in the rtreet.

Q. You used to take her a bottle of it, sometimes, didn't you? A. No sir, I didn't.

Q. You don't remember about her buying any sarsaparilla of any sort; she didn't buy anything of that sort regularly? A. I have no knowledge of it.

Q. Well, you have known of it?

A. I didn't sell it to her that I knew of it.

Q. You would have known of it if she bought anything like that regularly?

A. I would have known it if I sold sarsaparilla.

Q. She didn't buy any blackberry compound, with any regularlity? A. Indian Minnie?

Q. Yes? A. No.

Q. So far as you know, didn't buy anything like that at all? A. Not Indian Minnie.

Q. Now, this fortune teller, that you spoke of; what is her name? A. I will think of that in a little while.

Q. Well, it has not been three hours since you wrote it down on the card. A. That is true.

Q. I have got that card now, haven't I?

A. Yes, sir; say, my memorandum.

Q. But you wrote it down last night, out at home, on a piece of paper, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir, Mollie Peters, I think.

Q. Now, you are satisfied about it as, to what it was aren't you? A. I am, yes, sir.

Q. What do you think it is?

A. I can't think, now; I will think of it before long.

Q. Who is the man who owns this—the oil wells—the property here in litigation—what is his name? A. Mr. Page.

Q. How did you find that out?

A. Through the newspapers, and at the barber shop. I asked Mr. Bond—several ways.

Q. And he told you. Now what connection is there between your knowledge and Indian Minnie and your having knowledge of Mr. Page being the owner of this oil well?

A. I don't quite understand your question.

Mr. German: Please read him the question.

(Question read.)

A. What connection? Simply the fact that I was detained Sunday here as a witness in this case, and I asked what case, and they said Mr. Page and the Government, and if I knew this Indian Minnie, and I said yes, and Judge asked me to come up to his office—Judge Bond.

Q. What have these oil wells got to do with it?

A. With what?

Q. With your knowledge of Indian Minnie?

A. That I was a witness on this case.

Q. You went so far as to write down on this card, the name Page owner of wells, didn't you? A. Yes.

Q. You didn't want to forget that, did you? A. No.

Q. And you wrote down the name of Mr. Long, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You wrote down—— A. And Mr.——

Q. And wrote down the name of Ella Abbott, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the name Indian Minnie, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the name Minnie Atkins, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the name Tommy Atkins? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the name Mrs. Lesher—Granny, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the name Jim Mayo? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the word, Olive? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You wrote all that down here, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, you were afraid you would forget the complexion of that woman? A. No, sir.

Q. Is that why you wrote the word, olive, down here? A. No, sir.

Q. You weren't afraid of that? A. No, sir.

Q. This piece of paper was for the purpose of refreshing your memory, wasn't it? A. It was.

Q. You used to live at 319 Seneca street, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long did you live there?

A. Oh, up to the time that I was 6 years of age, as near as I can recall, as a child.

Q. From the time that you were six years old until when?

A. From the time I was a baby until six years.

Q. Until you were six?

A. The first six years of my life.

Q. Then where did you live?

A. Called the Continental Hotel, now the Imperial Hotel, opposite the National.

Q. Are you living there now? A. No, sir.

Q. You did live there a while. Did you ever live on Seneca street any more? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How old were you then? A. 20 and 21.

Q. What number did you live at?

A. 319 Seneca street.

Q. How long did you live there that time?

A. About 2 years.

Q. When you were 20 and 21 years of age? A. Yes.

Q. Is that right? A. Probably 22.

Q. Maybe 22? A. Yes.

Q. Now, let's see; just where had you lived before you lived there at that time? A. At what age?

Q. No, where had you lived just before you lived there that time?

A. On North Broadway, if I can recollect right; North Broadway, Miami and Broadway.

Q. Where did you live, just after you lived on Seneca that time?

A. I married and lived on—a little cottage on North Broadway, between Shawnee and Seneca, on the east side.

Q. How far is that from Second and Seneca?

A. Oh, that is six blocks.

Q. West? A. West.

Q. Six blocks west, isn't it? A. West, yes, sir.

Q. When you were living at 219 Seneca, when you were at the age of 21, 20, 22, you knew Granny Letcher, didn't you?

A. Pardon me, 319 Seneca.

Q. 319 Seneca? A. What year?

Q. When you were 20, 21, or 22 years old; during the time that you lived there, you know Granny Letcher?

A. I knew Granny Letcher from the time I was a boy.

Q. You are a white man, aren't you?

A. Yes, sir. Granny Letcher worked for my father.

Q. Where was your father living at that time?

A. Mr. father with another gentleman, owned the Continental Hotel.

Q. And Granny Letcher worked there as a maid?

A. No, more as a roustabout, in the kitchen.

Q. You didn't remember that, then, though, did you?

A. I did, yes, sir.

Q. How old were you then?

A. I lived in the hotel from the time I was 6 until I was 15; father went in the hotel business when I was six, until I went to school when I was 15.

Q. You say you were 15 when you went to school?

A. No, I should say, when I went to Lange's.

Q. You should say when you went to Lange's?

A. Yes, or Eggersdorff's, rather.

Q. Where was Granny living at the time that you went to work for Lange?

A. As I remember, Fourth and Choctaw; an old frame shack that is now removed.

Q. Now, let's see if we can fix with some definiteness, the time when you commenced living on Seneca street the second time. You hadn't married when you commenced living on Seneca the second time? A. No, sir, I had not.

Q. You lived there for two years you think?

A. Two or three years.

Q. Maybe three? A. Possibly.

Q. When did you get married? Give us the day, the month, and the year.

A. Well, I celebrated my silver anniversary November, three years ago.

Q. Then, how long prior to that, was it that you married?

A. Well, November 25, from 1829—I had been married about 28 or 29 years.

Q. Twenty-eight or nine years? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, you mean——

A. Yes, sir. Twenty-nine years, I think, this November.

Q. Don't you know how long you have been married?

A. Not exactly.

Q. You don't? A. I can tell you.

Q. Do you know what year you married in?

A. Yes, not the year but——

Q. Well, give us the year? A. Well, I can in a minute.

Q. Now, wait a minute; let me ask you a question. When was it that you celebrated your silver anniversary?

A. Three years ago last November.

Q. Then what year was that?

A. Well, that would be 1913.

Q. 1913? A. March 25 from that.

Q. That would make you married in '88, wouldn't it?

A. Yes, about '88.

Q. Now, you married about in November of '88, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. November 25th, is that right?

A. No, just what date—it was the day before Thanksgiving day. I could tell you of that by producing my marriage license.

Q. How long had you been in business for yourself when you married?

A. From December until November, eleven months.

Q. Eleven months? A. Yes, sir.

Q. After you married, you were never in Ella Abbott's house, were you? A. No, sir.

Q. You were never in Granny's house? A. No, sir.

Q. Was Ella Abbott a white woman or a colored woman?

A. A white woman.

Q. She ran a bawdy house, didn't she? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Granny Letcher was a negro, wasn't she?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. She ran a bawdy house? A. Yes.

Q. How long was it before you were married, that you saw Tommy at Ella Abbott's house?

A. It must have been several years if I saw her in '85, and I was married about '88.

Q. It was in '85 that you saw Tommy at Ella Abbott's?

A. No, probably '87 or '88.

Q. Maybe '87 or '88?

A. Yes. The kid was probably three or four years old.

Q. Probably three or four years old? A. Yes.

Q. Didn't she say the child was about seven or eight years old when you saw it in Ella Abbott's, a while ago?

A. I didn't say when I saw it there.

Q. Didn't you say it was about that old when you saw it in Ella Abbott's?

A. I didn't say I saw it in Ella Abbott's at the age of 7.

Q. You said it was about five years old, a while ago, when you saw it at Ella Abbott's? A. Some where along there.

Q. You never went back to Ella Abbott's or Granny Letcher's place since you were married?

A. I have been to Ella Abbott's on business.

Q. That is all?

A. Yes, sir. Ella Abbott was within one block of my business at one time and I delivered packages to her and medicines.

Q. You went in Granny Letcher's after you married?

A. No, sir.

Q. Never a single time? A. Never a single time.

Q. Nor were you there on business, were you?

A. Not there on business.

Q. Ella Abbott is now Ella Witt, isn't she? Mrs. Witt? A. I got that from hearsay.

Q. You understand she is the same woman? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You also understand that she is to be a witness in this case, don't you? A. I didn't know so.

Q. Have you been talking with her? A. I have not.

Q. Do you know George Crilly? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you talk to him last about this case, if at all? A. I have talked to no one about this case, sir.

Q. You haven't talked to anybody?

A. Absolutely no one.

Q. No one whatever?

A. Only except to parties who would say what are you doing in town this week, Fritsche, and I never discussed it with any one—the merits or demerits, I never discussed with anyone.

Q. You never told a soul what you knew about this case, did you? A. No, sir.

Q. Not a soul? A. Not that I know of.

Q. How old do you say you are?

A. Born April 13th, 1854; 52 this coming April.

Q. You are a married man now? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have some children? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You didn't tell Lee Bond what you knew about this case, did you?

A. Sure I did. As counsel, he asked me some questions; perfectly naturally.

Q. Did you tell him what you knew?

A. He asked me if I knew this woman, Indian Minnie.

Q. Mr. Fritsche, did you tell him what you knew about this case? A. Why, he asked me questions.

Q. Answer me my question. A. Yes.

Q. You did? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you tell Frank Long what you knew about this case? A. They were together.

Q. They asked you questions, didn't they? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long were you together?

A. Oh, with Mr. Long, only a few minutes,

Q. How long with Lee Bond? A. Probably a half hour.

Q. Where? A. In his office.

Q. How many different times did you talk with Lee Bond about it? A. Sunday and Monday, is all.

Q. This last Sunday and Monday?

A. I was supposed to have gone out on the road and I have been detained here all the week.

Q. Then you talked with him yesterday about it, didn't you?

A. Had to sit here all day, and he said, you stay around —hang around.

Q. You say you didn't talk with him yesterday about it?

A. About this case?

Q. Yes, about what you knew in this case.

A. Well, probably I did; a few questions might have been asked.

Q. You say you are in hard financial circumstances now?

A. Well, my—I am broke. I haven't any money to speak of; my business was taken away from me—sold for three thousand, some hundred dollars, and the creditors, I was told yesterday, get about forty cents on the dollar. I got nothing out of it except the book accounts; it is a long story about my——

Q. How long have you known George Crilly?

A. Oh, I have known George for about 25 years, I should judge.

Q. You talk with him every now and then, don't you?

A. No, sir, I haven't seen Mr. George Crilly to talk with for a year.

Q. In a year? A. Or two years.

Q. Two years? A. No.

Q. How long have you known Lee Bond?

A. Ever since he was a young man—a child, twelve or fifteen.

Q. Great friends, aren't you?

A. Well, we are friendly.

Q. You are quite friendly with him, aren't you?

A. I consider him a good friend of mine; always have—family and all.

Q. You are a closer friend to one of his partners, though, aren't you, than you are to him? A. A closer friend?

Q. Yes. A. No.

Q. You are not? A. No.

Q. No, you say that you used to go to the negro bawdy house of Granny Letcher? A. I have been there.

Q. Lots and lots of times, haven't you?

A. No, I don't know what you call lots and lots of times; I have been there a number of times.

Q. Been there several times? A. Yes.

Q. When did you first commence going there?

A. Why, that was in 1885.

Q. '85; you say you think it was in '85?

A. I said it was in '85.

Q. Actually so? A. Yes, when Indian Minnie was there.

Q. When did you quit going there?

A. Well, after Indian Minnie disappeared.

Q. I see. She was your beau, then—rather you were her beau? A. I don't have to answer that question.

Q. You decline to answer that, do you?

A. Yes, sir; she was no beau of mine, anyway.

Q. You are swearing to that?

A. I will swear she was no beau of mine.

Q. She was no beau of yours? A. Yes.

Q. But you refuse to tell whether you were her beau?

A. I wasn't her beau.

Q. You weren't? A. I was not.

Q. You met her, though, frequently, at this negro bawdy house, didn't you? A. I seen her there several times.

Q. Met her there, did you? A. Yes.

Q. You took her there, sometimes, too, didn't you?

A. No, sir.

Q. Well, how would you know she was there?

A. I would see her there.

Q. Was she living there?

A. Mrs. Letcher was keeping an assignation house, and it was a place where fellows would take their girls. I had nothing to do with Indian Minnie, nor with Mrs. Letcher.

Q. She lived there?

A. She lived there, then. I don't deny, when I wanted a room, I would pay her fifty cents, and get through and get out.

Q. White girls or colored girls?

A. White girls.

Q. Nothing but white girls? A. White girls.

Q. White girls were all you ever knew outside of Indian Minnie?

A. I had nothing to do with Indian Minnie criminally.

Q. I see. You didn't? A. Did not.

Q. Well, who lived in that house when you first commenced going there?

A. Why, Granny Letcher and her stepson, whose name I didn't think of until last night, named Jim Mayo. Indian Minnie was there, and this Granny Letcher rented her rooms for immoral purposes.

Q. Those were the only persons there?

A. That I remember.

Q. You don't recall anybody else being there at the house? A. No.

Q. Not a soul? A. Not that I think of now.

Q. Don't you know there were two other women living there at the same time? A. I don't remember that.

Q. And don't you remember another man living there at the same time?

A. I do not, that was Jim Mayo living there.

Q. Was he grown? A. He was grown.

Q. Did he have a wife? A. I don't know.

Q. If he did you don't know it?

A. I never did see her.

Q. Did he have any children? A. Not that I know of.

Q. Wasn't any children around there, was there?

A. I don't remember seeing any children.

Q. You were there lots and lots of times?

A. Well I was there a few times in the evenings at dark.

Q. Were you ever there in the daytime? A. Yes.

Q. Now the first time that you ever saw Indian Minnie there she was in a pregnant condition, wasn't she?

A. She was pregnant, yes, sir.

Q. She was pregnant? A. Yes, sir.

Q. She was far gone, wasn't she?

A. In a pregnant condition, yes, sir.

Q. It wouldn't be long until she would give birth to a child? A. No, seven or eight months I should think.

Q. Seven or eight months gone? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And finally she was staying there regularly, wasn't she?

A. Well, that was where she was supposed to be staying.

Q. What was your answer?

A. That was where she was supposed to be found, if you wanted to find Indian Minnie in those days.

Q. Anybody that wanted to find her. Well, did anybody go down there to find her in those days? A. I don't know.

Q. Who inquired about Indian Minnie?

A. Oh, Army Officers.

Q. Name some of them?

A. I can't recall their names.

Q. You can't recall the name of a one? A. No.

Q. Who else inquired about her?

A. Oh, some of the little boys around the town that lived here in those days.

Q. Name some of them?

A. That is a pretty hard thing to do now after this many years.

Q. You can't do it? A. No.

Q. White boys? A. White boys.

Q. Some of your friends were they?

A. No, I never confided anything on those things.

Q. Well, they were your associates, were they?

A. Not necessarily.

Q. Were not any of them your associates?

A. No, sir. I did my riding alone.

Q. You never rode with anybody? A. No, sir.

Q. But you had your friends didn't you here in town, besides the women that you would see down there?

A. Had my friends?

Q. Yes, didn't you have some men friends here in town?

A. Certainly.

Q. You weren't married? A. No, sir.

Q. Didn't you have some associates? A. Yes.

Q. Played a little cards, didn't you, now and then?

A. Never played cards.

Q. Drank a little whiskey now and then?

A. I never drank whiskey, beer.

Q. Drank beer? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You would run around with the boys to the dances?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, now, can you name some of your friends?

A. Yes.

Q. Name some of them? A. Albert Trocan.

Q. Is he going to be a witness here? A. I don't know.

Q. Did he ever ask you about Indian Minnie?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Name another one? A. Charles Munn.

Q. Did he ask you about her?

A. I don't remember.

Q. You don't remember it if he did. You can't remember or name anybody who did ask you about her, can you?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now it was what time in the year when you commenced to go to Granny Letchers there on Seneca? A. 1885.

Q. 1885? A. Yes.

Q. Now what occurred in 1888 here in Leavenworth?

A. How is that?

Q. Any particular thing occur here in Leavenworth in 1888 that impressed itself on your mind?

A. I can't recall the fact, unless it was the year that I got married, I am not positive of that now.

Q. You are not sure of it now, but you are able to tell the Court that it was in 1885 that you got that date fixed in your mind, haven't you—that Minnie was at Granny Letcher's pregnant with child? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now you didn't have any particular interest in Indian Minnie did you? A. No.

Q. No particular interest? A. No.

Q. You had no particular interest in the fact that anybody in town had a child prior to the birth of your own children, did you? A. Not particularly interested, no.

Q. Tell me somebody else who had a child in Leavenworth in 1885? A. I can't answer that question.

Q. What is your answer?

A. I can't answer that question.

Q. Tell me somebody who got married in Leavenworth in 1885? A. I can't tell you that?

Q. You don't know? Now lets see, Mr. Fritsche didn't you see Indian Minnie at Granny Letcher's in March 1886?

A. I can't recall it, Your Honor.

Q. You don't remember it? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you see her there in April 1886? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you see her there in January 1887? A. No, sir.

Q. You know you didn't? A. No, sir.

Q. Because you were married then?

A. I don't believe I was married then, I can't remember the exact date.

Q. Well you went around Granny's some didn't you?

A. Well I didn't go there much after Minnie disappeared.

Q. Oh, I see; you only went to Granny's while Minnie was living there did you? A. No I was there before that.

Q. And you went to her house when Minnie was living there, and you never went a day after Minnie left, did you?

A. Yes, I went afterwards.

Q. How long did you continue to go after Minnie left?

A. Oh, I don't know, several times.

Q. Several times?

A. Until I became engaged, and then I quit.

Q. When did you become engaged?

A. About six or eight months before I married.

Q. Now you continued to go to Indian Minnie's until you became engaged, didn't you? A. Granny Letcher's.

Q. Granny Letcher's until you became engaged?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you became engaged six or eight months before you were married, didn't you?

A. I was engaged six or eight months.

Q. Yes, before you were married? A. Yes.

Q. Now you married November 25, 1888, didn't you?

A. 1888 in November, the day before Thanksgiving day, that I don't know.

Q. Then you were going to Granny Letcher's in January 1887, weren't you? A. No, I don't believe I was.

Q. Then you were going there—you weren't going there up to six or eight months before you were married?

A. No, it wasn't '87, wasn't that late.

Q. In 1888 then? A. No not that late.

Q. Then you must have been engaged a long time before you were married?

A. Well, you have taken the family history; I should judge between six and eight months.

Q. You testified a while ago that you continued to go to Granny Letcher's until you were engaged? A. 85 and 86.

Q. 86 comes after 85, doesn't it, and you remember you were there in 85? A. Yes, sir.

Q. So you also know that you were there in 86, to, don't you? A. I say——

Q. You know that from the fact that the year 86 comes after 85, don't you? A. I do.

Q. That is the reason you know it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You went there prior to the year 86, didn't you?

A. Well, I was there a number of times.

Q. Well were you there in December 86?

A. I can't recall it.

Q. Were you there in November? A. I can't recall it.

Q. Were you there in September?

A. I can't recall the dates.

Q. You can't recall that you were there in any part of the month in 86 or 85, can you?

A. No, no particular month, no.

Q. You can't name any particular month that you know you were at Granny Letcher's in 85, can you?

A. Yes, the summer months.

Q. Name them? A. Oh, from July to September.

Q. Now Minnie—that was the first time that you were there, was in July, wasn't it?

A. No, I was in there before that.

Q. How long before?

A. Oh, I don't know; sometimes I would deliver prescriptions up there, probably three or four or five or six a month, I can't tell you exactly.

Q. Now the first time that you were there to see Indian Minnie was in July, wasn't it, that you ever found Minnie there, wasn't it?

A. I said July or August or thereabouts.

Q. The first time, and she was seven or eight months gone; then probably it would be a couple of months until she would have her baby? A. She was in a pregnant condition.

Q. Wasn't it about the first of June or the first of July that you first saw her there?

A. I can't recall it now; I answered it as near as I could.

Q. She was staying there regularly at that time, wasn't she? A. That I don't know.

Q. She was the only woman that you would see there every time that you went there, outside of Granny Letcher, wasn't she? A. Yes, she was about the only one.

Q. But you did always see her there? A. Not always.

Q. Not always? A. No.

Q. You saw her there about the beginning of July 85 and continuing for how long? A. Several months.

Q. How many months?

A. Well I should judge the balance of the year to be safe.

Q. To be safe, the balance of the year?

A. Yes, and she disappeared.

Q. She disappeared then? A. Yes.

Q. And you never did see her again?

A. I never did see her again.

Q. Never at all? 9. No.

Q. Now let me see; how old was that baby the first time that you ever saw it?

A. I answered that question; it was an infant of a few days.

Q. How old? . A. A few days then, or a week.

Q. Four or five days old? A. Yes.

Q. Where was it that you saw it?

A. In Granny Letcher's house.

Q. Where in her house? A. In the bed room.

Q. Which bed room? A. How.

Q. Which bed room?

A. In a bed room, in a bed room occupied by Indian Minnie. Indian Minnie was nursing the child.

Q. Well that was a one story house, wasn't it?

A. No, sir.

Q. Two story house? A. Two story house.

Q. Which bed room in that house was it?

A. I—I——

Q. Why do you hesitate?

A. I don't know after 30 years what particular bed room in the house, Your Honor. It is sufficient that I saw her there in her room.

Q. They had bed rooms downstairs and bed rooms upstairs?

A. Most of the bed rooms for assignation purposes were upstairs.

Q. Was she in one of the bed rooms for assignation purposes?

A. As near as I can remember she was upstairs, I am not so positive on that now.

Q. Was she in the front part or back part?

A. Fore part.

Q. Yes, fore part or back part? A. How?

Q. How many rooms were upstairs? A. I don't know.

Q. One? A. More than one.

Q. Two? A. I don't know that.

Q. Three?

A. I should judge about three or four rooms, a good sized house.

Q. Now were those rooms all in the front part?

A. As I remember the rooms they run in a row, and just a narrow hall, as near as I can recall now.

Q. Allright. Which room was she in?

A. I believe, if I remember correctly, in a front room.

Q. Front room? A. Yes.

Q. Now the front room to the east or to the west?

A. I think to the North.

Q. North? A. Yes.

Q. Well, there were two front rooms weren't there?

A. Yes, north.

Q. Weren't there two front rooms?

A. I don't remember that now that there were two front rooms; as near as I can recollect now it was a house with a narrow hall.

Q. How did you happen to go to see that baby?

A. How did I happen?

Q. Yes? A. Just stopped in.

Q. Stopped in for the purpose of seeing it, did you?

A. I didn't go down there for the purpose of seeing that baby, I went down to that house and Indian Minnie was in the room.

Q. You saw her from the street, didn't you? A. No, sir.

Q. How did you find out she was in the room?

A. Granny Letcher; I said, Where is Indian Minnie, and she said—north, go in there and see, and I saw her in there.

Q. And you went up in the room? A. I went in.

Q. Did you pick that baby up? A. I did not.

Q. Did you know whether it was a boy or girl?

A. Boy.

Q. You could tell it was a boy?

A. Well, she told me it was a boy.

Q. Oh, she told you it was a boy? A. Yes.

Q. About a week old? A. Well, three or four days.

Q. What color was that baby at that time?

A. It was a light color.

Q. Did you see it after that?

A. Probably a week or so later I saw the baby.

Q. Still the same color? A. Yes.

Q. And then you saw it after that?

A. No, that was the last I saw of it. I can recall now, because Minnie made her get-a-way after that.

Q. And took the baby with her—did you hear me?

A. Took the baby with her?

Q. Yes?

A. As to that I don't know, naturally I suppose she did.

Q. You never saw her or the baby any more then?

A. Never saw Indian Minnie.

Q. Never saw her any more? A. I saw the child.

Q. Oh, you saw the child? A. Yes, later.

Q. Where? A. Down in the sporting house.

Mr. Stuart: We object to that because it has been asked fifteen times.

Mr. Blakeney: Counsel went fully over the age of the child.

Q. Did I go fully over the age of the child?

A. You asked me when I saw the child again and I told you at Ella Abbitt's house about what age.

Q. Now you saw this boy at Granny Letcher's house, and who said its name was Tommy? A. Why Skinny Frischman.

Q. Who is he, living or dead? A. He is living.

Q. Here in town?

Mr. Hanford: I want to enter an exception here to the remarks of counsel passed around apparently misconstruing the testimony of the witness. He stated the last time that he saw the child it was six or seven or maybe eight years old, but that he also saw it when it was younger.

Mr. Allen: We ask that the witness be withdrawn from the room before a statement of counsel is made as to what his testimony was.

Mr. Hanford: The record shows what his testimony was.

Mr. Allen: Then it is unnecessary to repeat it.

Q. What was the name of the man that called that boy's name? A. Skinny Frischman.

Q. Was he grown, or was he a boy?

A. He was a boy.

Q. Where did he live?

A. If I remember correctly he lived on Seneca one block north and about a half a block west on the north side of the street.

Q. From here, you mean, where you are now testifying?

A. Yes, this is Shawnee, this street, and this street north is Seneca. He lived right between Fourth and Fifth.

Q. Was he a boy at that time?

A. A boy, I judge, probably 16, he was selling weiner-wurst—Frankfurters.

Q. Where was this that you heard him make that remark?

A. At the foot of the stairs, Third and Cherokee at Ella Abbitt's house.

Q. That was the first time you had ever heard the boy's name, wasn't it? A. Yes. Tommy Atkins.

Q. Yes?

A. He told me that kid up there threw something at him or jumped on his back. What the remark now was I can't recall—it was Indian Minnie's boy.

Q. Oh, I thought you told him his name was Tommy Atkins? A. Tommy Atkins, Indian Minnie's boy.

Q. He told you that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. The first time that you ever heard that boy's name called, wasn't it? A. No, sir, I knew it was——

Q. When did you first find out that that boy was called Tommy?

A. That evening at the foot of the stairs, when I don't know.

Q. When that boy Frischman told you?

A. Yes. He had been upstairs selling weiner-wurst, or something, and he was coming down, and he said that little kid was Indian Minnie's boy, Tommy Atkins.

Q. And that was the first time that you ever heard the name called? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now what age would you say that boy was then?

A. Well, I should judge between six and seven.

Q. Six and seven years old? A. Yes.

Q. You didn't see him then, did you? A. See the boy.

Q. At that time, did you, he was upstairs?

A. No, I didn't see him, only from the head of the stairs to the foot I couldn't identify the boy.

Q. When had you seen him before that?

A. Only as an infant.

Q. When did you see him after that?

A. I haven't seen him.

Q. Never did in your life, did you?

A. Except when he was pointed out to me on the stairway. I say I couldn't identify him then.

Q. The only time then that you ever saw the boy was the one time when you saw him was a little infant about a week old. and when you saw him at the head of that stairs?

A. No, sir, I stated in my testimony that I saw him as an infant about a week or less of age. and then a little later a few weeks old, and then Minnie disappeared.

Q. You saw him from the time he was an infant until Minnie disappeared? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then never saw him anymore except the dim view of him at the head of those stairs? A. That is it.

Mr. Blakeney: I want to move to strike out the witness's testimony in reference to what somebody told him at the foot of the stairs. as incompetent and hearsay, irrelevant and immaterial, referring to the statement that this was Indian Minnie's boy, Thommy Atkins.

Q. Now after Indian Minnie disappeared with the boy I believe you said that you saw Indian Minnie until—oh for about six months after the boy was born?

Mr. Stuart: We object to that question because it assumes that Indian Minnie did disappear with the boy.

Mr. German: Then I will restate it, Judge, if that is your objection to it.

Q. You say that you saw this Indian Minnie around this Letcher place until she disappeared. I believe you stated to make it safe you would say that you saw her there for about six months, I believe you said that, didn't you, from July until the last of the year?

A. Somewhere along there; I don't believe it was six months, no. I didn't make that statement six months.

Q. How long was it then? A. Oh, a few weeks.

Q. A few weeks? A. Yes, I didn't say six months.

Q. How many weeks?

A. Oh, probably three or four weeks, and then she disappeared.

Q. Now you never saw her in your life until about the first of July, and then you never saw her after about four weeks after the child was born?

A. I saw Indian Minnie as I stated in my testimony when she traded there at Lange's drug store and on the street.

Q. Well, wasn't that during the time of her pregnancy?

A. Yes, sure.

Q. That was while she was in that impregnated condition? A. Yes.

Q. Seven or eight months gone, when you first saw her?

A. No, she wasn't that far gone when I first saw her.

Q. Well, then were you mistaken awhile ago?

A. I saw her in a pregnant condition, but not seven months.

Q. How many months?

A. I knew her quite well. She was pregnant. It takes nine months.

Q. Yes, it takes nine months to develop a case?

A. What was it that you want to know.

Q. Now how long was it before that child was born that you first saw Indian Minnie?

A. Oh, it was probably six months.

Q. About six months? A. Yes.

Q. She didn't show the pregnancy at all when you first saw her did she? A. No, sir.

Q. You are sure of that answer? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You remember that distinctly, do you?

A. Any woman can carry a child for the first three or four months and not show it.

Q. I know that, but I am asking you are you sure?

A. I am sure I didn't notice it.

Q. Then she kept coming to the store, and finally this condition showed up? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you kept noticing it until finally the child was born? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now when was it with reference to the first time that you ever saw Minnie how long was it until you first saw her at Granny's?

A. Oh, I can't recall just the exact time when I first saw her at Granny's.

Q. How long was it after you found out who she was that you first saw her at Granny's?

A. I can't answer that question.

Q. She attracted your attention, on sight, didn't she?

A. Probably a few weeks.

Q. Probably a few weeks? A. Yes.

Q. Now how many weeks?

A. Say a month, three weeks, something like that, I don't know just exactly.

Q. Well, you have a recollection about that?

A. Not exactly the data about the exact date of it, the date I saw her or what day I went, I know it was after I waited on her a few times, and saw her, saw her there at Letchers, probably four weeks, or maybe a month.

Q. How long were you working at Lange's after your return from school until you saw Indian Minnie?

A. Very shortly thereafter.

Q. Immediately, wasn't it?

A. I don't remember whether it was a day or a week.

Q. And she was not then in an impregnated condition, so far as you could tell? A. Not from observation.

Q. And it was from six to eight months after that that she had the baby, is that right?

A. Somewhere along there.

Q. Somewhere along there? A. Yes.

Q. Then you saw her—let me see—she would come to the store and you would go to Granny's and you would see her about how often from the time you first saw her until she had the baby? A. I had seen her a number of times.

Q. Quite frequently, didn't you? Who would she come to the store with?

A. Generally alone. Sometimes with this fortune teller.

Q. What was her name?

A. I was trying to recall it, I have been trying to think of that name.

Q. Was it Vina Peterson?

A. She was an old hag, that I remember; she was addicted to blackberry and one dram of opiate. I remember of a quart of blackberry that she bought.

Q. And she would come there very frequently? A. Yes.

Q. Sometimes Minnie would come with her?

A. Sometimes Minnie would come with her.

Q. After the baby was born Minnie would bring the baby to the store with her?

A. No, sir, I never saw her with the baby, I don't believe I did.

Q. She would run around on the streets with the baby, wouldn't she?

A. I never saw her on the streets with the baby.

Q. Now when did you leave school with reference to the date that you got this letter here from the Dean of the faculty, marked Exhibit——

A. The night after the graduation—the morning following the graduation exercises I came to Leavenworth.

Q. And then you commenced to work for Lange right away, did you? A. For Eggersdorff.

Q. How long did you work for him?

A. A very short while, I went to work for Lange.

Q. How?

A. A short while and I then went to work for Lange.

Q. How long did you work for Egglesdorff?

A. Three or four months, and went to work for Mr. Lange in October.

Q. You went to work for Mr. Lange in October?

A. Yes.

Q. Now as I understand you, you never saw that woman after she disappeared? A. No, sir.

Redirect Examination by Mr. Stuart.

Q. You said on direct examination that you saw an Indian here, an Indian infant when you were very young and that something had impressed it on your mind. Will you tell us what it was?

A. Yes, sir. This Indian woman picked me up.

Mr. German: I object to this question on the ground that it is improper re-direct examination.

Mr. Stuart: And improper because the Examiner refused him permission for an explanation when he was testifying.

Mr. German: Then I object to the question on the ground that it is leading and suggestive.

Q. Tell us what impressed it on your mind?

A. Well, I can show you gentlemen, if you will allow me to illustrate. From here I lived right over here and I can find the place——

Mr. German: I object to the witness leaving the witness chair, gesticulating and pointing out of the window, as it can form no part of the record.

The Examiner: Mr. Witness, will you please sit here.

Mr. Blakeney: We object to the Examiner ordering the witness to take his seat, and not permitting the witness to point out from the middle of the room and window the location that he is referring to in his testimony.

The Examiner: The Examiner did not refuse the witness to point out anything, he told the witness to take his seat until the record is made.

A. Well, there was an Indian woman who picked me up right here.

Q. Just stop a minute. This gentlemen can't get it in the record unless you call streets and houses?

A. Well.

Q. Tell him what house it is and what street it is and so, on, he has got to get it in his record.

Mr. German: I make the same objection that I did to the preceeding question.

Q. Now you can do your pointing?

A. I was picked up by an Indian woman when about the age of five in the rear of 319 Seneca Street. It created a commotion among the neighbors. The Indian woman dropped me and ran. I was picked up by my mother and caressed.

Mr. German: That is the end of the story?

A. The end of that.

Mr. German: I move to strike that as not responsive to the question, and as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, and forming no proper part of the re-direct examination.

Q. What house were you born in in this city?

A. What house?

Q. Yes?

A. The house adjoining Granny Letcher's or Mother Letcher's.

Q. What was that house called? A. Well, it was——

Q. Did it have any name?

A. Yes, it was Mr. Feth's home.

Q. Mr. Feth's home? A. Yes.

Q. Did you pursue any studies at that place when you lived there, any kind of studies? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you study Greek? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you study Hebrew? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you study music? A. No, sir.

Q. You didn't study anything while you were there?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now after you moved away from there, did you have any studies—pursue any studies? A. No, sir.

Q. Any music? A. No, sir.

Q. You never did study music? A. No, sir.

Q. When you returned from college after you had your Pharmacist course, you say it was in 1885, as shown by the paper which you introduced here?

A. Yes, sir, when I graduated, you mean?

Q. When you graduated? A. Yes, sir, March 13th.

Q. March 13, 85? A. 85.

Q. And it was after that in the same year that you worked for Lange? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. German: I object to that question as leading and suggestive, and move to strike the answer.

Recross Examination by Mr. German.

Q. You say that when you were a mere child that an Indian woman picked you up and dropped you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Out here? A. Right over here on this block.

Q. That was this same Indian woman?

A. No, no. You put a question to me asking me about the history of the Indians in the early days.

Q. Oh, I see?

A. And I answered the question, and you interrupted me and would not let me continue the story.

Q. How came that Indian woman to be here in town?

A. We had Indian neighbors in those times, quite a number of Indians, in the latter seventies and early eighties.

Recross Examination by Mr. Blakeney.

Q. You started to state or indicated that you desired to explain an answer when you were asked if you had a government license? A. Yes.

Q. To sell liquor? A. I would like to explain that.

Q. I would like for you to make an explanation now.

Mr. German: I object to it because it is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

A. I wished to discontinue the sale of liquors. I had a few particular friends at the store the Fort trade, and I did violate the prohibitory law, I make no denial of it, but last year I made up my mind I was not going to take a revenue license, but the mistake I made I came up here to look for Petrel or the revenue office, and made application for a liquor license, customary to law, about the end of June. Understand me I made application. That would give me right to get my license any time after 30-60 or 90 days as I understand the law. A few days after I made application I decided not to sell any intoxicating liquors, as the State Board of Pharmacy, of which I am a member adopted a stringent resolution to druggists to abstain from the sale of spiritous, vinous or malt liquors, even it is to satisfy the wishes of a physician or a patient. About September of 1915, a revenue man by the name of Mr.——I can't recall the name now,—walked into my store and asked if I was Mr. Fritsche, and I told him I was. He said you haven't taken out your government license. I says, no, nor do I intend to take out one, from the mere fact that I had no intoxicating liquors in my store, and had quit selling intoxicating liquors. He replied, if I remember correctly, I believe, Mr. Fritsche, you are right, I have no evidence of you selling liquor. He said that doesn't excuse you, Mr. Fritsche, you are liable to the United States government in the sum of $25.00 and penalty on the mere fact that you made application to the United States government for a liquor license, and that is a liability that you have to pay. It took me by surprise, and I said, well it is strange that I should take out a license for something that I am not guilty of. No occasion for me taking a license. And then he repeated, you have made application, and you will have to pay. I then paid the $25 and a $1.25 penalty and the license was mailed to me. It is in the legal envelope at home yet. It hasn't been taken out except to look at it, and since then I have made request to Mr. Petrel to reimburse me for the money paid out and Mr. Petrel has sent me some blanks, and shortly before my departure about three weeks ago—four weeks ago—I filled out this blank and mailed it to Mr. Petrel. Since then I have heard nothing further.

Recross Examination by Mr. German.

Q. Now let me ask the witness one question. You were still in the drug business when you made that mistake and made that application for this liquor license, wasn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when was it that you made payment of that fee?

A. It was made, I believe, in September.

Q. This last September?

A. Yes, sir, to the gentleman that called on me.

Q. About eight or nine months ago?

A. September 1915.

Q. About five months ago, wasn't it?

A. Yes, five months ago.

Q. When did your creditors take charge of your stock of goods? A. Three months ago today.

Mr. German: Now, in connection with the cross-examination of this witness, we offer what has been marked as Government's Exhibit No. 46.

Mr. Stuart: We have no objections.

And thereupon the witness is excused until 1:30 o'clock; and adjournment of the taking of the testimony herein is taken until 1:30 o'clock P. M.

And thereafter, and at 1:30 o'clock P. M. further testimony is taken in this case as follows:

JAMES M. ALLEN, being called on behalf of the defendant, being sworn, and under oath, testified as follows:

[Clerk's note: Approved statement of the evidence shows no testimony by this witness at this place.]

And thereupon, EDWARD CHARLES FRITSCHE was called, sworn, and examined as a witness for and on behalf of the Government and testified as follows:

Q. Was the ownership transferred to any other person before you left for school? A. It was.

Q. To whom? A. Adolph Lange.

Q. During that period before you went to school, while you were serving your apprenticeship, did you know an Indian woman at Leavenworth? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What age woman, apparently at that time?

A. In the latter twenty eight or early thirties, I should judge.

Q. That was before you went to school in eighty three? A. Yes, sir.

The Court: Who was this woman?

Mr. Linebaugh: An Indian whom he says appeared to be in the latter twenty eight or early thirties.

The Court: And when was that?

A. In the eighties.

Q. That was before you went to school? A. Yes, sir.

A. For a few months.

Q. After that, where did you go?

A. Then I went to Leavenworth again and worked for Adolph Lange.

Q. Then, about what time was it in 1885 that you went back to Leavenworth and worked again for Adolph Lange?

A. That was when I went from Kansas City, in 1885, in the summer months and worked then until December 11, 1886, when I went in business for myself.

Q. Now, during that summer of 1885, when you first come back to work for Mr. Lange, do you remember the premises known as 217 Seneca Street? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you recall any effort being made to remove the parties then in possession from those premises? A. I do.

Q. What efforts were made that you recall?

A. I beg pardon, sir?

Q. What efforts were made that you recall?

A. Oh, a petition was got up by property owners and presented to the City Counsel for abatement of a nuisance.

Q. Who was occupying that premise at that time?

A. One Lillie White.

Q. Lillie White. I hand you this instrument which is marked for identification as Government's Exhibit 59 (identified as Government's Exhibit 59 in connection with deposition taken) and ask you to state whether or not you now recognize that instrument? A. I do.

Q. Do you recognize that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is it? A. It is a petition drawn——

Mr. Cruce: We object, if the Court please, as incompetent testimony, hearsay, on behalf of Page.

The Court: Well, as to the contents of it, of course it will itself be the best evidence. You referred to it as Exhibit 59——

Mr. German: That Your Honor, was an exhibit introduced before Mr. Penick as Examiner.

The Court: Then it is incorporated in the deposition and is already introduced.

Mr. German: Yes, sir.

Mr. Cruce: Note our exception.

The Court: Exception noted.

Q. What is that, Mr. Fritsche?

A. It is a petition drawn up by property holders and signed by property holders in that vicinity to abate a nuisance.

Q. Is that the petition that you just recall to have been circulated to remove Lillie White from this 217 Seneca street?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you recall now if she was removed from that premise? A. She was.

Q. After her removal, do you remember who occupied that place? A. One Granny Letcher.

Q. Now, when was that petition circulated, Mr. Fritsche, if you remember? A. July.

Q. July when? A. '85.

Q. That was the July that you come back and begun work for Lange? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you recall when it was after the circulation of the petition that Lillie White was removed from that place?

A. Probably thirty days later; as soon as the Council took action.

Q. Now, after Granny Letcher moved into the place, were you there? A. Was I where?

Q. Was you at that place? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When, with reference with when—when were you there, Mr. Fritsche? A. In '85.

Q. Were you there—what time of the year were you there? A. Well, it was when this woman had a baby.

Q. Well, was that in '85 or '86? A. '86.

Q. It was in '86? A. '86.

Q. That was the summer after that petition was circulated? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are positive of that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Sir? A. Yes.

Q. Now, you say a woman had a child there in '86?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What time of the year, was it, in '86, that you saw a woman there with a child?

A. It must have been in the early fall.

Q. The early fall of 1886. Is that right? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, state to the Court whether or not that woman with that child in the fall of 1886, was the same woman that you had seen about Leavenworth before you went to school in 1883. A. Same woman.

Q. It was the same woman. What business was that woman engaged in in 1883? A. What business?

Q. Yes? A. She was a prostitute.

Q. She was a prostitute in 1883? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What business was she engaged in after you returned to Leavenworth? A. Same, only on a cheaper scale.

Mr. Cruce: If the Court please, we object to that testimony as clearly a conclusion; he can tell what this woman was doing but permitting the witness to say that she was engaged as a prostitute one year and in another year that she was engaged as a prostitute on a cheaper scale——

The Court: That probably throws no light on this case, you may go on.

Mr. Cruce: Exception.

Q. Mr. Fritsche, this child that you saw there at Granny

Letcher's, that this woman had in the fall of 1886, how old did it appear to be the first time that you saw it?

A. A few days.

Q. What race did it appear to belong to?

A. Looked like a negro child.

Q. When was the first time that you heard the name Tommy Atkins used? A. When I was——

Mr. Cruce: We object, if the Court please, it is immaterial.

The Court: Overruled.

Mr. Cruce: Exception.

A. Answer?

Q. Yes, answer.

A. When I first gave my—a day or two before I gave my deposition at Leavenworth.

Q. How long before you gave your deposition at Leavenworth? A. Probably twenty-four hours.

Q. About twenty-four hours. Where was it that you heard that name Tommy Atkins? A. In Mr. Bond's office.

Q. Mr. Lee Bond's? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was there?

A. There was another lawyer there whose name I can't recall now.

Q. Do you observe him in the—do you observe him in the courtroom? A. At the end, there, I believe.

Q. Mr. Hanford, the first gentleman, there?

A. I believe that is the gentleman.

Q. Sir? A. I believe it was, yes.

Q. Did they use the name Tommy Atkins to you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is the first time that you ever heard that name used? The first time you ever heard the name called?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that right? A. Yes, sir.

The Court: Answer yes or no so that it can get in the record.

A. Yes, sir, yes sir.

Q. When, Mr. Fritsche, is the first time that you ever heard the surname Atkins used, and in connection with that Indian woman, or this law suit, or any other time in your life. What was the first time you ever heard that surname Atkins used? A. In the office of Lee Bond.

Q. At the same time you heard the name Tommy Atkins? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who used that name at that time?

A. As near as I can recall now, I believe it was Mr. Bond.

Q. It was either Mr. Bond or Mr. Hanford, one of the two? A. One of the two, yes, sir.

Q. Sir? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What day of the week was it that you were in Mr. Bond's office when Mr. Bond and Mr. Hanford were there talking? A. It was on a Sunday afternoon.

Q. Tell the Court the circumstances of your having gone there Sunday afternoon.

A. I was at a matinee, a theatre in Leavenworth——

Mr. Stuart: Talk a little louder.

A. I was at a matinee at the theatre and I was called out by the usher with the request that someone wanted to see me in the lobby and it was Mr. Bond, and I went to Mr. Bond's office.

Q. When you got there who did you find?

A. Found Mr. Bond and this gentleman here.

Q. Mr. Hanford? A. Mr. Hanford.

Q. What did they say to you if anything, Mr. Fritsche, in connection with using the name Minnie Atkins and Tommy Atkins?

Mr. Cruce: We object because it is hearsay testimony.

The Court: Overruled.

Mr. Cruce: Exception.

A. I can't recall the name Minnie Atkins being used by them, Indian Minnie.

Q. Well, what was said with reference to the name Tommy Atkins?

A. Asked if I ever knew of any one by the name Tommy Atkins being the offspring of Indian Minnie.

Q. What, if anything, did they say about the birth, when he was supposed to have been born and where?

A. At Granny Letcher's.

Q. When and where? A. When?

Q. When did they say, if when, when did they say he was supposed to have been born? A. Eighty six.

Q. Eighty six?

A. As near as I can recall now, eighty five or eighty six.

Q. Well, which was it? A. Eighty six I think.

Q. Eighty six. Did you write down anything there in the presence of Mr. Bond and Mr. Hanford?

A. I made some data, some dates there.

Q. You made a memorandum? A. Memorandum.

Q. For what purpose did you make that memorandum?

A. To refresh my memory for the questions the next day when they told me to come down to the Court.

Q. And from that memorandum that you made at that time did you give your deposition the next day?

A. Not the next day, it was a few days later.

Q. Well, a few days later? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you gave it from that memorandum which you then made there in the office, is that right? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, when you were giving your deposition, did you hold that memorandum in your hand?

Mr. Cruce: If the Court please, we object to any more leading questions.

The Court: Let me understand the situation. You have introduced deposition of this man, which as I understand now was taken by the defendant for use in this case, is that true?

Mr. German: Yes, sir.

The Court: Well, now, you have the witness here, you are putting on the case in chief. You have introduced the deposition, you made it your deposition.

Mr. German: We introduced it for the limited purpose which I stated in offering it.

Mr. Stuart: Introduced it for the purpose of knocking it down.

The Court: For what limited purpose now?

Mr. German: For the purpose of showing the support of our contention that the group of defendants whom I named have fabricated evidence.

The Court: Well, I know, but they haven't offered their deposition. That evidence wouldn't be in this case if you hadn't offered it.

Mr. German: That is true.

The Court: Then, why put this witness on the stand until it is offered unless you want to offer it.

Mr. German: We are using it for the purpose of showing that it was in furtherance of their scheme to fabricate a case, and then we are showing——

The Court: Well, all right, go ahead.

Mr. Linebaugh: I withdraw that question, I believe it was objected to as leading.

Q. What did you do with that memorandum, Mr. Fritsche? A. It was taken away from me.

Q. When and where? A. When I gave my deposition.

Q. And where did you have it when you were giving your deposition? A. In the Court room.

Q. Well, about your person? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Whereabouts? A. In my hand.

Q. You had it in your hand? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you give any dates in the deposition that you gave? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did you get the information of the dates that you gave in your deposition?

A. Some of the information I got at home after having time to think of it from Sundays and Mondays, and some of it was suggested.

Q. Now, who suggested it, who made the suggestions to you?

Mr. Cruce: On behalf of Mr. Page we object because it is hearsay testimony.

The Court: I suppose you refer to the meeting in Mr. Bond's office?

Mr. Linebaugh: Yes, sir.

The Court: This witness has testified as to who was there and what was said.

Mr. Cruce: Exception.

Q. Now, I will ask you this question: Where did you get the information as to the date of the birth of the child called Tommy Atkins that you gave in your deposition?

Mr. Cruce: If the Court please, we object to that. He hasn't stated that he received any suggestion as to the date of this child's birth.

The Court: Well, he may answer.

Mr. Cruce: Note our exception.

A. Got it in Mr. Bond's office.

Q. Now, you testified, did you not, in that deposition that Indian Minnie, or Minnie Atkins gave birth to a child named Thomas Atkins at Granny Letcher's in the spring or early summer of 1885? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that correct or were you mistaken?

A. Well, mistaken in what part of the testimony?

Q. As to that part of the testimony?

A. I saw the child and I didn't know it was Tommy Atkins.

Mr. Cruce: If the Court please, we object. They have introduced that deposition as their testimony. They can't at least without stating to the Court that they are honestly surprised introduce this testimony.

The Court: Well, as I understand, it is offered to attempt to support their contention that this is a frabricated case on the part of Atkins and certain of those claiming under her and that this deposition was a part of that scheme of fabrication.

Mr. Cruce: Assuming that what they want to prove is correct with reference to the attorneys, would that connect Mr. Page with it?

The Court: I am not determining who would be bound by it at this stage.

Q. Well, the part of the testimony wherein you said a child was born at Granny Letcher's at 217 Seneca Street in the spring or early summer of 1885, was that correct or were you mistaken?

A. I was correct as far as seeing the child there.

Q. How about the date?

A. I may be mistaken in the date.

Q. Well, I believe you stated, did you not, that Lilly White lived there?

A. Lilly White lived there in 1885 and 1886.

Q. At the time you saw the child there in 1886?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you didn't know it's name?

A. Didn't know its name.

Q. And you never did know that name until it was suggested to you in Mr. Bond's office? A. No, sir.

Q. Mr. Fritsche, after you had given that deposition, did you come to Oklahoma?

A. I come to Oklahoma in March this year.

Q. Who, if anyone, did you talk with before coming to Oklahoma? A. What?

Q. About coming down here, who did you talk to, if anybody?

A. Oh, I spoke to several parties at Leavenworth. Mr. Tom Dailey, Judge Bond——

Q. Judge Lee Bond? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Tom Dailey, who is he?

A. He was a witness in this case.

Q. Well, what did Judge Lee Bond say to you with reference to Oklahoma, and where you should go?

A. I told him that I wanted to come to Oklahoma, either Oklahoma City or Tulsa, and asked Mr. Bond if he would give me a letter to Mr. Page; that I was looking for work.

Q. What did Mr. Bond say?

A. He gave me the letter, rather wrote a letter to Mr. Page.

Q. And what else did Mr. Bond say at that time about other people? A. In what respect?

Q. Did he use the name Sam Nash? A. Yes.

Q. In that conversation?

A. Yes; that Sam Nash was down there working.

Q. Who is Sam Nash?

A. He is a colored fellow that formerly lived at Leavenworth.

Q. A witness in this case for Mr. Page? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he use the name Walter Banks? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you go to Tulsa? A. I did.

Q. Did you see Mr. Page? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what did he say?

A. Why, he apparently was glad to see me and wanted to know what I was doing in Tulsa, and I told him that I was looking for work.

Q. Go ahead.

A. He asked me what I was doing and I told him that I was not doing anything but I expected to go out as a salesman for a Chicago perfume house and he said, well stick around and maybe we could find something for you. I stuck around Tulsa about eight or nine days and one afternoon I was his guest out at his orphanage and I left there at the evening meal and we looked over the grounds and he wired and showed me his park which was illuminated for the first time of the season, and he said I am thinking seriously of putting up a stand right here, and I will build a stand for you Mr. Fritsche, and I told him that I didn't care to go into the peanut business.

Q. Sir?

A. I told him I didn't care about going into that kind of business, frankly; and he said, well, if there is anything else that we can do for you, stick around.

Q. Mr. Fritsche, did you see Mr. Lee Bond, in the Union Station at Kansas City last night? A. I did.

Q. You may state to what he said to you with reference to this case at that time.

A. I left Kansas City Saturday evening to go to St. Joe, to spend the day with my wife and daughter, left St. Joe yesterday evening at 6:45 and got in the Union Station about nine, and I went to get my supper at the Harvey Eating House, and Mr. Bond was in there, sitting some distance away from me and he recognized me and waved his hand and a few minutes later we went in the lobby of the depot and he asked me if I was going to Oklahoma, and I told him yes.

Q. Go ahead.

A. And he supposed that I was subpoened and I told Mr. Bond I didn't care about discussing the case and made the excuse that it was about train time—I was looking every minute for the train master to call the train, and I went to the train to my car.

Q. Go ahead.

A. And when I got into the car, I had about a half of a cigar in my hand, and I went in the smoker and finished my cigar and there were about four or five other gentlemen in there and Mr. Bond came in there and sat beside of me, and we just talked about topics of the day at my old home. That is all the talk Mr. Bond and I had.

Q. Now, did he say anything to you, up in the Station; when you started off, did he call you back and say anything more to you?

A. Oh, yes, I told him that I didn't care about discussing the case and he said, I believe, he said, you haven't got cold feet—they haven't bluffed you, have they?

Q. How is that?

A. He said, I don't suppose you have got cold feet; they haven't bluffed you, have they? And I said I didn't want to discuss the case, and Mr. Bond didn't say anything further about the case.

Q. Mr. Fritsche, did you ever go to Ella Abbott after you were married?

A. I have no recollection of going there.

Q. You did sometimes go there before you were married?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever see a boy, a child, at Ella Abbott's, who was the same child that you had seen as a baby at this Granny Letcher's place?

A. No, that child was too old to be the child that I saw.

Q. In your deposition you identified that child that you saw at Ella Abbott's as the same child that you had seen at Granny Letcher's as the baby. A. Well, I erred.

Q. That was a mistake, was it? A. That was a mistake.

Q. Where did you get the information upon which you based that identification?

A. Well, that was in Bond's office.

Q. Now, this child that you saw at Ella Abbott's—how old was it at the time that you saw it?

A. Oh, 7 or 8 years.

Q. Seven or eight years, and you were married on the 22nd of November, 1887? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you saw that child before you were married?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long before your marriage, do you remember?

A. Oh, probably four, or five, or six months.

Q. Four, or five, or six months. Do you know Dennis Jones at Leavenworth? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have any talk with him before you come down to Tulsa, Oklahoma? A. Possibly, yes.

Q. What did he have to say wth reference to your coming to Tulsa, if anything?

Mr. Cruce: Objected to as hearsay.

The Court: Overruled.

Mr. Cruce: Exceptions.

Q. What did he say?

A. Why, he said that he wished me well and wished that I would strike something down there. He said, you might call on Mr. Page, he might be in line to help you.

Q. Did he say anything about Mr. Page having helped the others? Joe Bailey or Tom Dailey? A. Yes, some.

Q. Sam Nash? A. Yes.

Q. And Walter Bank?

Mr. Cruce: Objected to as incompetent.

The Court: Overruled.

Mr. Cruce: Exceptions.

A. He did.

Q. Mr. Fritsche, when you went up there that Sunday afternoon to Mr. Bond's office, did Mr. Bond pay you any money that day?

A. He paid me for that day, yes, sir.

Q. How much did he pay you that afternoon?

A. Ten dollars.

Q. Ten dollars. And after that were you paid any money?

A. Yes, sir, I was paid, yes, sir, I was in the employ of the State Board of Pharmacy.

Q. How much per day were you paid for your services by Mr. Bond or those associated with him?

A. My earning capacity at that time was ten dollars a day.

Q. They gave you ten dollars a day, did they?

A. Yes, sir.

Cross Examination by Mr. Stuart.

Q. Mr. Fritsche, you did testify in this case up at Leavenwroth, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You told everybody connected with this case that you were testifying to the truth, didn't you? A. Tried to.

Q. Sir? A. I tried to do so.

Q. And you did tell everybody that you were testifying to the truth. How came you to change your testimony in this case? A. Well, I was mistaken in data.

Q. Who convinced you that you were mistaken?

A. Well, the court—the United States Government.

Q. The United States Government convinced you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And how did they convince you? Just tell me how it came about.

A. Well, about three weeks ago I received a letter from my son who resides at Kansas City, Missouri. He said, dear Father—I have the letter with me if you wish to see it.

Q. Well, go ahead; I want to know all about it.

A. Read the letter?

Q. No, just tell it. Go ahead.

A. He said, I am afraid you are in serious trouble, the Government detectives have been here watching my house, and they have had me for three or four hours, trying to locate you. With the parties was Mr. Younkman of Tulsa, Oklahoma; he said now, I read your deposition—your deposition was read to me, and it looks as if you have got your dates badly confused. He said if you have made a mistake, why, you want to rectify it. This detective—Mr. Younkman, has been searching for you for some time. You left your route for the week with Mamma, and you have not lived right up to your route, either a day ahead or a day behind; they followed you to Blackwell, and different towns in Oklahoma, El Reno, and so on; Wichita, Augustus, Kansas, and at Wichita, I received this letter from my son, who requested me to get in touch with Mr. Younkman at once. I wired Mr. Younkman at once.

Q. Who was Mr. Younkman?

A. Oh, he is Mr. Younkman, formerly lived at Leavenworth. Worked in a drug store, then he moved to Tulsa and engaged in the drug business himself. Then he entered the political arena and became a Commissioner of Water Works for Tulsa.

Q. All right, go ahead?

A. And Mr. Younkman was forced to leave his work at Tulsa and accompany these detectives over this search for me. I wired Mr. Younkman what was the trouble. I just received a letter which looked serious from my son and if there was anything wrong I wanted to know it. Mr. Younkman wired back, come to Tulsa at once serious trouble, I will stand by you, or words to that effect. And I left Wichita that evening and was met at the station in Tulsa by Mr. Younkman and one of the gentlemen connected with the Department of Justice and driven immediately after breakfast to Muskogee.

Q. Who was that gentleman from the Department of Justice? A. Mr. Bruff.

Q. All right, go ahead?

A. I was driven in an automobile from Tulsa to Muskogee.

Q. In an auto? A. In an auto.

Q. All right, go ahead?

A. And then I was brought here.

Q. What did they do with you after they got you here?

A. They gave me the third degree.

Q. Gave you the third degree? Just tell now how they gave it?

A. Well, they showed me the error of my testimony.

Q. Go ahead?

A. I could see my mistake there in dates. After thirty years, and not being interested in the case, it was hard to recall the exact data.

Q. Go ahead? Put you under arrest, did they?

A. Threatened to do so.

Q. And did put you under arrest?

A. Well, I was under the care of the Court.

Q. Of whom? A. Of the Court, I should judge.

Q. Well, now, I want you to tell everything that occurred there in detail. Tell everybody that was there and I want you to tell what occurred?

A. Well, then I was taken from Muskogee on the train with Mr. Younkman to Tulsa and from Tulsa we drove to Mr. Younkman's house and I was kept there until train time, and from there I was taken back to the depot and handed a ticket back to Wichita.

Q. Well, when did you change your statement that you made up at Leavenworth?

A. When I came here to Muskogee.

Q. Who took your statement that you gave then?

A. Judge Linebaugh there and——

Q. Who was present when your statement was taken?

A. Mr. Bruff, this gentleman over here.

Q. All right, who else? A. I think that is all.

Q. Mr. Bruff, Mr. Linebaugh, and who else?

A. That is all.

Q. They took a statement from you in writing, did they?

A. No, sir.

Q. Took an oral statement? A. Oral.

Q. Well, what did they tell you they would do with you if you didn't tell the truth?

A. Told me I was up against it.

Q. What do you mean by being up against it, just tell what they said?

A. That I would have to go to jail. Mr. Younkman told me that.

Q. And which one of them was it convinced you that you told a lie at Leavenworth?

A. Beg your pardon I didn't tell no lies.

Q. Well, which is the truth now?

A. What I testified this afternoon.

Q. This is the truth you are testifying now?

A. That is, to the best of my knowledge and belief.

Q. Did anyone tell you at any time there in Leavenworth—— A. How is that?

Q. Did anybody intimidate you at any time to make that statement in Leavenworth?

A. Well, in that way, they asked me the questions.

Q. Who asked the questions?

A. You asked questions and Judge Bond asked questions. After thirty years it was pretty hard to remember data exactly.

Q. Did anybody threaten you in Leavenworth when you gave your testimony there? A. Oh, no.

Q. You were asked to tell the truth?

A. To the best of my recollection and belief at that time.

Q. And you did tell it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You told the Examiner up there that you knew Indian Minnie well, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. This very Indian Minnie; do you know her, this lady over here? That's the lady, isn't it; look at her?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Go ahead, look at her, ain't that the lady?

A. That looks like her.

Q. That is the woman you used to know in Leavenworth?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when she was in Mr. Bond's office, you walked up of your own accord and said, hello Minnie, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Recognized her up there after all these years?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you tell Mr. Linebaugh just now for that the Indian Minnie you knew was twenty-eight or thirty?

A. How old is she now?

Q. Do you say this girl you knew in Leavenworth was twenty-eight or thirty years old when you knew her?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And didn't you tell Mr. Linebaugh that this was not the same Minnie? A. No, sir.

Q. Well, you did testify up there that you knew this Indian Minnie?

A. This is the Indian Minnie I supposed I knew in the early days.

Q. And you said you knew her well at Granny Letcher's?

A. I said when she lived in Leavenworth.

Q. And at Granny Letcher's?

A. When she lived at Granny Letcher's, because I waited on her a hundred times.

Q. Didn't you say she went about from time to time with an old fortune teller? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you knew the fortune teller well? A. No, sir.

Q. You said you waited on her a number of times?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Didn't you see the fortune teller come in every day?

A. Often.

Q. Where did that fortune teller live? A. I don't know.

Q. Don't you know she lived across the street with Granny Letcher? A. No, sir.

Q. In the Crilly House? A. No, sir.

Q. Didn't you say that you saw this boy at Granny Letcher's, this Indian boy? A. The baby.

Q. Indian baby? A. Indian baby.

Q. You didn't say then it was a nigger baby; you swore at Leavenworth that it was an Indian baby and had all the marks of an Indian child?

A. There is very little difference as an infant.

Q. There is a good deal of difference in the truth about it. Now, you are testifying now it was a nigger baby. You testified up yonder it was an Indian baby, didn't you do that?

A. I supposed; it was a baby at its mother's breast.

Q. Wasn't this stated: "What time in 1885 did you work for Lange? A. About the summer months"——

Q. Take that card out of your hand and answer my questions. Just put that away please. I am asking you questions.

The Court: Just put the card up.

Q. I am asking you this: Didn't you so testify: "Q. What time in 1885 did you go to work for Lange? A. About the summer months, during the summer months. Q. Did you know a girl there at that time known as Indian Minnie? A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. Where did you see her during the summer of '85?

A. On the street, in the drug store. Waited on her a number of times, and at Mother Letcher's on lower Seneca Street.

Q. You say you saw her at Mother Letcher's?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did she have a baby? A. Yes, sir. Q. What was she doing with the baby, where did you see her? A. Granny Letcher's house. Q. What was she doing with the baby? A. Why, I saw the baby several times. It was nursing. Q. How old was the baby when you saw it?" Were you mistaken when you swore at Leavenworth that you saw that woman in Granny Letcher's with a baby? A. I was not.

Q. You did see the defendant at Granny Letcher's with a baby? A. I did, it was 1886.

Q. And you say she had a baby with her in 1886 at Granny Letcher's house? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are certain of that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How old was that baby then? A. I judge a few days.

Q. She was in the bed, wasn't she? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Lying in the bed? A. Yes, sir.

Q. With a baby in her arms? A. Nursing.

Q. Nursing in 1886 at Granny Letcher's, now, that is the way of it. You are just as certain about that date, although you said before it was 1885?

A. Well, I can see my error about 1885 since I have seen this petition here.

Q. Is that petition what changed you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is the reason then. But you did see her with a baby in her arms at Granny Letcher's in 1886? A. Yes, sir.

Q. "Q. Did you know this Indian Minnie? A. Well, I knew her yes. Q. What kind of a looking girl was she?" Well, you have already picked her out.

Q. This fortune teller you speak of was addicted to a bad habit, wasn't she?

A. I knew very little about her.

Q. She was addicted to a bad habit?

A. I never sold her any opiate, because I was not a licensed pharmacist.

Q. Well, then, why did you swear to this: "Q. Anybody with her? A. Well, there was a character she used to walk the street with, a fortune teller, so called. She assumed the title of fortune teller. Q. You saw these two come in the drug store, did you? A. Yes, sir. Q. How frequently would you say that you saw them? A. Oh, the fortune teller was almost a daily frequenter. She was addicted to a habit. Q. Did you say she was addicted to a habit? A. Yes, sir. Q. And how frequently would you see the two together? A. Well, now, that is hard to answer, Your Honor, but frequently though. Q. Several times at least? A. Oh, yes. Q. How often can you say you saw her at Granny Letcher's? A. Well, I have seen her there a number of times. Q. What were you doing at Granny Letcher's? A. Why, I visited at Granny Letcher's occasionally. Sometimes I delivered medicine there —and some days—young sporty blood I would drop in there. Q. When was the last time that you saw Minnie? A. Oh, after her confinement. It was some weeks later. She suddenly disappeared and I saw her no more afterwards." Now, is that true? A. That is true.

Q. Absolutely true? A. Yes, sir.

By the Court.

Q. Now, if I understand you, Mr. Witness, that Indian Minnie that you are talking about is the defendant Minnie Atkins, over here now in the courtroom? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You can't be mistaken about that?

A. I hardly think I am mistaken, Judge.

Recross Examination by Mr. Stuart.

Q. That is your letter, isn't it, Mr. Fritsche? Look at that. A. Yes, sir, that is my letter.

Q. Now, I will ask you if this letter was written on the —what date was this letter written on?

A. Shall I read the letter?

Q. Oh, no, just tell the date. Q. January 30th, 1917.

Q. Now, when did you testify up yonder?

A. Well, I believe it was about March, 1916.

Q. March, 1916?

A. Or April—which was it, March or April?

Q. Now, on the 30th day of January of this year, you had not found out you were mistaken about your testimony, had you? A. No.

Q. You were still sticking to it in this letter, weren't you? Now, I will ask you if in this letter you didn't say these words, "Last spring I proved an important witness for you—this is Charles Page in the Indian Minnie case; in fact my deposition was of such nature, dating back in early days when it was proven by my testimony that Indian Minnie had a child, my deposition was of valuable importance on your behalf, and this statement of mine can be verified by your counsel Mr. Lee Bond. I respectfully make application to you for a position." Now, on the 30th day of January of this year, you still thought your testimony was straight, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Linebaugh: Who was that letter addressed to?

Mr. Stuart: Mr. Charles Page.

A. That is part of the letter.

Q. Now, you didn't find that you had made a mistake in your testimony until you heard that detectives were after you, up in Leavenworth, did you?

A. I didn't know they were after me in Leavenworth.

Q. Well, where were they after you—Kansas City?

A. They started from Kansas City, from Oklahoma City, Blackwell——

Q. Well, where did your son say they were after you?

A. The detectives met my son in Kansas City.

Q. Can't you answer my question? I say you didn't learn you had made a mistake until you learned the detectives were after you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then you found out that you had made a mistake?

A. Well, my deposition was read to me here in courtroom.

Q. Who read it to you? A. Judge Linebaugh.

Q. What did they say about you having made a mistake about the case? A. Well, I saw the error there when they read it to me.

Q. You saw it? A. I saw it, yes, sir.

Q. You kept insisting that it was true until the detectives got after you, didn't you?

A. I had no occasion to insist on anything.

Q. Will you just tell me what occurred there?

A. Occurred where?

Q. Between you and Mr. Linebaugh and Mr. Bruff.

A. I stated it.

Q. State the conversation.

A. I did state the conversation.

Q. Well, state it again; I didn't get it. Just what occurred? What he said to you and what you said to him.

The Court: Answer the question again, as to what occurred—where do you refer to, Judge? Here in Muskogee?

Mr. Stuart: Yes, sir, when he came to the District Attorney's office and he read the testimony over.

The Court: You stated that he was given the third degree; that was what you referred to?

Mr. Stuart: Yes, sir.

The Court: Now, what was said in that third degree performance?

A. Why, they read the deposition to me and I saw that I was mistaken in date and I have had very little experience in court and I don't think I ever was in court but two or three times in my life, and the cross questions, they got me rattled, and my nervous strain from financial losses; I was nearly a physical wreck, and when they read this to me, I saw the errors in my testimony which looked really bad.

> The Court: Well, he asked you what was really said and asked you there. The deposition was read to you—what else was said?

A. Well, he said you are just on the road to be punished for perjury, for perjured testimony.

Q. Keep on, tell it all.

A. He said, I want the facts of this case, and I am going to get the facts and the truth and nothing but the truth, and I said, Judge, that is what I want to give you, the truth and nothing but the truth; if I make a mistake, I made a mistake. The deposition was read to me and I saw the error and I told them how I thought it happened. I was just on a verge of nervous breakdown after thirty years of hard work, and I had just lost my business, $14,000.00, and I was financially embarassed and broke, at the advise of my physician I was seeking out door labor, and I was working as assistant state drug inspector for the State Board of Pharmacy for the State of Kansas for four months.

Q. And you was pretty much alarmed when you was in that office, wasn't you? A. Scared.

Q. You were scared? A. Yes, sir.

Cross Examination by Mr. Bond.

Q. You said, Mr. Fritsche, that when you were sent for in the theatre to come to my office that you met Mr. Hanford also, that Sunday afternoon?

A. I believe that is the gentleman, isn't it?

Q. Isn't it a fact that you didn't meet anybody there but me and that I told you that you would have to stay until the last of the week, until Mr. Hanford and Mr. Long got into Leavenworth and would talk to you, because they knew more about the case than I did? A. I think you are right.

Q. So, Mr. Hanford, wasn't there that Sunday?

A. It was on a Monday.

Q. And then you said, did you not, that your work was worth ten dollars a day and I would have to pay you if I would hold you off the road? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And I told you that you should not lose any money?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you tell the Court, now, that I suggested to you the name of Tommy Atkins as the boy that you saw there, that Sunday afternoon? A. It was on Monday.

Q. Well, did you come again Monday, to my office or is it Sunday that you have been testifying to that you were up there? A. I was in your office on a Monday.

Q. Well, let's see; what you said was on Sunday that you was testifying to—Monday, hasn't been spoken of. You say that was on Sunday that I suggested to you that I wanted you to say that you knew a boy by the name of Tommy Atkins?

A. I don't remember now, Judge.

Q. Did I ever suggest to you that you ever swear to anything in this case?

A. You didn't ask about swearing anything in this case.

Q. Did I ever suggest to you that you come before the Commissioner and swear to any facts in this case?

A. I can't remember now.

Q. Now, seeing me in the Station last night—now that you have brought that up, Mr. Fritsche, isn't it a fact, that after I had finished my lunch you were waiting for me just outside the door with your two travelbags on the floor when I got out? A. Not waiting for you, no, sir.

Q. You were standing there, any way, waiting for the train to be called? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you knew that I hadn't come out. Isn't it a fact that the first thing that you said to me was, Lee, I can help you, and I want to talk to you, and I am afraid because I am being followed every minute. Isn't that the first word you said to me?

A. I don't remember it was the first word. I remember saying that to you.

Q. And didn't you tell me that you and your wife were trying to get into communication with me for a week, and wanted to know why I hadn't been in Leavenworth?

A. No, I didn't say that.

Q. Didn't you say that you had been trying to get into communication with me, trying to get word to me but that detectives had been keeping such close watch on you, you couldn't? A. No, I don't remember.

Q. And didn't you say to me that you were under arrest?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And I asked you for what? And you said you didn't know?

A. I said I didn't want to discuss the case with you.

Q. And you said you thought it was for perjury and I asked you how they could arrest you for perjury that they claimed you committed in Kansas? A. That is true.

Q. And didn't you say to me, now, Lee, I never met you here, tonight, and don't say anything about it? A. Yes, sir.
